We will treat the categories of culture in the order in which they first appear in The Chronicles and continue adding topics and information as they are encountered in further reading.

This section of the pages is very much under construction, and will probably be the last to be completed.

Architecture

The Gina'abul have cities. While it may seem inescapable that any culture would need to have them, or at least any space-faring culture would, nothing should be assumed. But it appears that, just as with our own experience, there is compelling advantage to living and working in these clusters of activity. So the Gina'abul had cities and the cities had unique names and characters.

Note the past tense. The Gina'abul with whom Sa'am lived followed the path of their war to this solar system and to our planet after the destruction of the cities that Sa'am knew most intimately. Since Parks' recollections end at a point 2000 years ago, we may not have detailed information from this source about the state of extrasolar societies today.

Parks describes royal cities, and even royal planets, where of course the noble beings lived and from which they administered their realms. Within these cities, as suggested above, the royalty did dwell in palaces.

The pyramid building form was prominent in these places. Pyramids inspire admiration and awe.

Craft

Parks refers to several classes of craft for navigating Dirannas (stargates), conventional spaceflight, and travel around the planet.

Uanna

This illustration by graphic artist D. Cassegrain forms part of the front cover of Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres. It depicts the Gina'abul lord An's monumental mothership, known as "the Uanna", in its historic departure from the Abzu (interior cavity) of the planet Dukù in the Pleiades.

The Uanna was a combination palace and government headquarters, containing also the cloning laboratory in which Sa'am was created, and so many other things that it alone was sufficient to spearhead a war and launch a new civilization in Ti-ama-te, our solar system.

Discernible in this image, and much more clearly visible in its linked wallpaper-sized version on Anton Parks' website, is a fine grid-like texture on the ship's skin. This represents window openings at the scale with which the artist was working.

Iníuma

INÍUMA, lighted.

Not nearly as large as the Uanna, but similar in form, the Infuma are long-haul Gina'abul ships. They travel at very high speeds in space environments, but move slowly when near the ground.

Two images are provided here. Note that when traveling at high speed, exterior lights and windows are masked. When near the ground, various lighted bands, spotlights, and windows are generally seen on their exteriors... although not necessarily so. Sometimes these remain concealed.

The Infuma generate their own interior artificial gravitational fields, vertically aligned.

GIC/RAH © 2007 Gerry Zellin / Anton Parks

GIGIRLAH

The Gigirlah are smaller saucer-shaped craft that can manage spaceflight but are generally used for shorter-range applications. They can make use of Dirannas, and in fact Sa'am and his party came to Uraš in Sa'am's Gigirlah via a Diranna. They are ubiquitous, used by many civilizations.

The central bulge is, as you may imagine, the passenger compartment. This ship exhibits a light halo when in operation.

Tumua

Tumua (TUMU-Á. In Sumerian: "force of the wind". Also TUMU₂-Á: "transport with the wind") are Ama'argi personal craft, indigenous to Uraš.

This original Ama'argi technology (see Races and Ama'argi), developed in the Abzu, was eventually adopted by the Ušumgal-Annunaki when the Ama'argi females joined the colony at Kharsag to form families with the Annunaki, as described in Ádam Genisiš. Eventually these craft could be found scattered over the entire globe, in the hands of high Earthly dignitaries undoubtedly in service to the Gina'abul "gods".

There is a page on the Open SETI website, slightly tongue-in-cheek because of the way the illustration is handled, devoted to The Istanbul Object, an artifact that is kept in the Museum of Archaeology in Istanbul.

In fact, the artifact is according to Parks an excellent rendering in stone of a Tumua, complete with a pilot (whose head has been lost). In many ways the object resembles the famous carving from Palenque shown above.

Although they had an open-cockpit, even moped-like, design, these craft could fly at high altitudes in the atmosphere. Oxygen was provided for the pilot. Notice the device reaching to the pilot's nose in the Palenque image.

TUMUA. A work in progress; a pilot and details to be added. According to Parks, many variations of these craft were in use, so we perhaps have license to experiment. These sport photon rockets.

This craft features an electrostatic attitude control system consisting of eight surfaces on four disks. Varying charges are emitted from these surfaces to achieve any desired combination of pitch, bank, and yaw torques - though these are not intrinsic to flight maneuvers, as this is not an aerodynamic flyer. Overall charge neutrality is maintained via electrodes in the photon cone. (Or cones. Some versions seemed to have a cluster of three cones, slightly diverging.)

This type of apparatus is a sort of "large flying motorcycle", but not made to leave the Earth (or at least its atmosphere). I have the "memory" that it was very fast, but doubtless not as fast as a rocket or an apparatus of that type...

Employing antigravity, this little vessel could stabilize itself in the air and hover in place...

The energy was supplied by a crystal. I remember when Sa'am traveled three times around the planet in several days without stopping, but at the end of the trip he had completely depleted and shattered the crystal that had furnished the energy to the little vessel.

Two more craft figure prominently in Parks' story: Blue Bird and Black Bird, both gifted to Sa'am by the departing Urmah. We have worked closely with Parks to produce absolutely astonishing and beautiful illustrations of these, to be included in the forthcoming The Awakening of the Phoenix, and several images will appear on these pages simultaneously with that publication.

Dress

Parks gives several examples of his lover and mother's dress at various significant times. Here is one:

On the momentous occasion of Mamítu-Nammu's arrival at Ankida to confer on the creation of two new races, the illustrious priestess -- Grand Designer of Life on Uraš (Earth) -- descended with her retinue from her Gigirlah, attired as befits the highest royalty.

Parks:

A magnificent emerald girded her forehead. She wore a skirt embroidered with golden threads, tinted with the royal color of the Amašutum -- the green color scale of the Uga-Muš (People of the Serpent) -- ornamented with the symbol of the two intertwined serpents.

Uga-Muš was the name that the Kadištu had given to the ensemble of Amašutum and to the priestesses who labored far from our home, "for the glory of our race."

War (1)

Karma One: In Volume One as well as Volume Two, you describe a conflict of [galactic] proportions between several extraterrestrial races, in reality two major dispositions, one of masculine polarity and the other feminine: the Ušumgal of royal descent, in fact, who

Please refer to Worlds for information about the places mentioned in this narrative.

This section could have been titled "History." That is because most of the Gina'abul history covered in Parks' work is the history of their war. Or it could have been titled "Gender," because the war was truly a "battle of the sexes."

This may sound odd. War on Earth has been about geopolitics, or it may have seemed to be about religion and ideologies, but this may be because geopolitical groups were divided on religious or ideological lines.

Among the Gina'abul, some subraces are of single gender; hence race wars are also often gender wars.

Ultimately war is always about power, and in the Gina'abul, the genders have their unique powers. Or one could say that gender is a unique source of special powers, and these powers are jealously guarded (by the females) or sought after (by the males).

Why are these powers in the sexes not so obvious on Earth? It would appear that we were not bred to have them. But even here there is the same line of differentiation: cold, power-hungry men, oriented to technology, vs. women who are generally more measured or balanced.

As mentioned earlier, the female Gina'abul (Amašutum) protect themselves from the males by separating themselves from them. That created the tensions that led to bloody conflicts.

Here, loosely extracted and translated from Parks' first book (p. 200 in the 2nd Edition), and slightly clarified via private communication from Anton Parks, is Mamitu-Nammu describing these events to Sa'am:

"You must know that your Kuku [ancestors] are always seen as the first-born among the Gina'abul because they are larger than the Kingú. It is an ancient and futile quarrel between your Kuku and the Kingú, because we all know that the original birthplace of our race is Ušu and that the Ušumgal were created by the great Kingú, the Kingú-Babbar (albino Kingú), in times so distant that they are lost in the egocentric memory of your Kuku.

"Thousands of years ago, we (the female Gina'abul, Amašutum) lived in Urbar'ra (Lyra) with the Sukkal, the Mušgir, the Ušumgal, and some Kingú [see Races] -- the latter forming the royal race of Ušu (Draco), which is the Gina'abul's place of origin. The Ušumgal and the Kingú ruled in these places but were not in the majority. The Mušgir were far more numerous and constituted an ambitious race who wished to make the females sexual objects at their convenience. These reprehensible beings were envious of our physical immortality and the divine force that we possess, so they got it into their heads to dominate us.

"A split occurred over this. The Kingú traitorously abandoned us and returned to the Gina'abul colonies of Ušu (Draco). [This was not completely true. A minority of them went to Te (Aquila), and Mamitu-Nammu was concealing this fact. Her reason is explained in Adam Genesis.]

"The Ušumgal have a horror of the Kingú, their creators, because of this abandonment.

"Once the Kingú left, the Ušumgal joined with the Mušgir, in opposition to us (Amašutum), in a conflict whose "stake" was the domination of males over females and the possession of our feminine power. This war resulted in our being imprisoned by the Mušgir, who forced us to create for them a more docile and submissive female race in order to steal our powers.

As to the Sukkal, they came to the aid of the Amašutum at first, but withdrew when the Amašutum began to employ violent means to protect themselves. Being Kadištu, the Sukkal are unable to participate in conflicts....

But we have gone too far with this violence and numerous among us bitterly regret it. We have responded to repression with repression.... Battling against males, we have not had the hindsight to perceive that we have transformed ourselves into the image of that against which we fought, and of which we had horror. This is doubtless one of the reasons for which your creator (An) has hardly any liking for us."

That remark was key in this story, and also in our human history, because An was creating the race of Anunna and a new race of Mušgir, both of whom later came to our solar system and defeated the Amašutum who had a colony here. That in turn led to our ages-long struggle between patriarchy and remnants of the ancient Goddess religions.

There follows a description of the horrors that were perpetrated on the females in detention centers that were set up by the males. Of particular significance, in view of certain dark practices that persist even in our modern day, of how the males took nourishment from the emotions of the terrified females. Through these means the males attempted to gain immortality and the females' entire body of knowledge.

This and the remainder of Mamitu-Nammu's discussion with Sa'am can be found in Book 1, Le Secret.

The "Great War" to which these events led, which had as its "stake" the domination of males over females and the possession of the feminine power, and which opposed the Ušumgal and the Mušgir against the ancient Amašutum race, had its culmination in the Ubšu'ukkinna (Maia) star system of Mulmul (the Pleiades). This senseless war had no victor. Practically all the Amašutum were annihilated, and virtually all the Ušumgal.

Some Mîmînu and Mušgir survived.

The Kadištu had isolated themselves from the conflict, but at the end of hostilities with the assistance of the Sukkal (see Races), they drove out of Mulmul the last Mušgir recalcitrants. Only the Mîmînu were allowed to remain in Mulmul, under the condition that they respect new decrees. While hardly benevolent, the Mîmînu have always been on the side of the dominant authority. Numerous of them found refuge there in Mulmul

The only Ušumgal survivors of this conflict were Abzu-Abba and his offspring Lahmu and Lahamu (plus Tiamata, considered as an Ušumgal by her liaison with Abzu-Abba). They had been protected and removed from the conflicts, to the system Ubšu'ukkinna in Mulmul, by the Mimínu because they were great cloners, at least the best among the Ušumgal race. They were the last survivors of the royal race of Urbar'ra (Lyra).

Abzu-Abba had cloned Lahmu and Lahamu on the planet Dukù (in Ubšu'ukkinna) with genetic material from the then future queen Tiamata with whom he had illicit relations; that is to say not in conformity with the recent laws of Urbar'ra (Lyra), voted just before the "Great War", that forbade all closeness between the two sexes. Lahmu and Lahamu were considered to have been cloned illegally.

Anshar and Kishar were created subsequently on Dukù. They appropriated for themselves this location/region/venue that belonged to the Amašutum. Subsequently, the Ubšu'ukkinna system and the Duku were assigned to Anshar according to the laws of patriarchy in force among the Gina'abul. Park thinks that An was then created in Anduruna, where the Ushumgal had just established themselves in Margid'da. An also possessed rights in Ubšu'ukkinna; it is the reason the Anunna were created there. Of course the war between the male and female branches of the Gina'abul had not ended. The genealogy chart will help you to understand the lines of descent leading to the personages responsible for its next outbreak.

Continue in the chart for the genealogy of An and Ninmah, creators of the Anunna, and Sa'am and Mamitu-Nammu, creators of the Nungal.

Initiations (1)

Quoting from the Karmapolis [K1] Interview:

"The 'terrestrial' reptilians like the Anunnaki [Anunna who took refuge in our solar system, an important event in Le Secret that will eventually be described in these Notes], or their direct descendants need to absorb the 'base' energy that humans can emit when they have fear, for the simple reason that the terrestrial frequency (KI = 3rd dimension, see Dimensions) is higher on Earth than on the different worlds that they occupy in the galaxy. Don't forget that the Anunna arrived on the Earth by chance. They had great difficulty in adapting to it. Since their arrival on Earth, the Anunna and their consanguine acolytes have never ceased to carry out all sorts of manipulations to lower the frequency of the KI. The dominant caste of the Gina'abul males know nothing of the love that certain humans have integrated. The human being, even as diminished today, thus always represents a danger for this community.

"In Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres, I have explained in length and in depth the role of the woman, more precisely the role of the Gina'abul priestesses in the bosom of the reptilian community and the rapport that they maintain with the Life Designers of which they are a part. I detailed the feminine power that one calls on Earth 'Goddess energy.'

"Various groups of Gina'abul males, like the Mušgir and certain Ušumgal, effectively imprisoned the females to draw from them their power by force and by torture. This created a radical splitting of the Gina'abul that healed itself only when the Gina'abul females integrated with the Kadištu (Life Designers).

"Nevertheless, when some of these priestesses fell in with the Anunna on the Earth, they did not systematically practice with them. Thus we find the episode in the garden of Genesis where Enki (the Serpent), who was at the service of the patriarchal Gina'abul order, met clandestinely the A-DAM, the 'colonized herd' (see Decoder), with the help of these strange females named Lilith. Lilith is in fact allied to the Source (the true God) and it is for this reason that she was 'demonized' by the religious organizations that incarnate the various patriarchal religions of the planet. We note that the gnostic ideology agrees with this, since according to them, the principles of good and evil are inverted on the Earth.

"The episode of the (hidden) initiation of man is not proper to the biblical Genesis but is found on numerous representations the world over, such as shown below on the Codex Borgia, Plate 57."

A "Dark Star" priestess initiates a man into the knowledge of the sacred tree. The notion of "Dark Star" is expressed twice in this figure: first above where one clearly sees a star and its shaded side; second in each hand of the priestess where there appears a star and a jaguar (symbol of night). Note the lunar symbols on the priestess that evoke the sanctified menstrual fluid in the tantric rites of India. Between the two personages are found two serpents who schematicize Idâ and Pingalâ, the two subtle currents of Kundalinî that permit the energy to rise along the vertebral column. As shown in the drawing, the ascension of these subtle currents offers the possibility to attain the world of the stars and the descending movement carries a "little death" figured by the skull placed in the pot or cup that symbolizes the first chakra named Muladhara in Sanscrit ("the place of the root"). (See Decoder.)

Several initiations are described in Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres. In the most difficult and harrowing one -- related to the image above, as well as the title of the book -- Sa'am is given a poison that will surely kill him unless he finds the source of its antidote, which requires him to realize that there is an Emeša language that will decode the information that he needs.

"Look for the tree. Only the light of its trunk can save you. Eat the fruit of the tree. Otherwise the fire will devour you. Quench the fire with the fire."

The elements of the initiation are also illustrated in this Aztec painting. Examine the tree carefully and then think of the experience of Adam and Eve in the "Garden of Eden". What was done there? What was said? Who was the teacher or advocate? Who became irate?

Using his linguistic analytical method and the associations in various ancient languages, Parks demonstrates deep connections between the terms and concepts:

- dark, night, dark being
- mountain, mountain or hill as a place in the heavens or star or planet, burning
- dark stars, dark and burning ones
- ancient dark ones
- trees, dark entities who inhabit stars and possess a certain energy... creative energy that brings life
- Teol* (Maya/Nahuatl name of Divine Creatress) = tree spirit, Christian Holy Spirit, Mother-Goddess, light that shines, light of the star, burning flower
- clear, pure, shining

As a result of successfully undergoing this initiation, Sa'am is able to merge his noble Ušumgal heritage with the knowledge and powers of the Kadištu, and this gives him capabilities far beyond those of his creator, as well as the ability to operate an ancient technology that may be the means by which he was able to share his experiences with Anton Parks in our time.

Examine the images on the page: Tree Goddesses.

Much can be learned from Parks' discussions of these initiations. One of them carries the name Peš. From the Decoder listing for Peš, note the association with the fruit fig among the several sexual connotations of the various homonyms. This was the forbidden fruit of the tree -- the Dark Stars -- in high antiquity!

The Egyptian name for this fruit -- Dabu -- when decomposed as Sumerian phonemes, gives the concept of "powerful energy."

In ancient Egypt, the ficus sycomorus (Sycamore Fig) produced a reddish fruit that grew like wine grapes and was called "the flesh and the sap of the Goddess."

From Le Secret Note 49:

We know that the fig tree was in Egypt the symbol of fecundity. The Egyptians saw in the sycamore fig concentrations of the creative powers of primordial energy with which the Pharaoh was united...

This tree symbolizes the Egyptian goddess Hathor, called the Lady of the Sycamore; the Celestial Cow; the Lady of Life or even the Serpent Lady. To eat of the fruit of the sycamore fig amounted to ingesting the flesh and drinking the blood of the Goddess, that is to say, consuming her fruit.

A similar idea is found in the Kabbalistic doctrine in which it is said that the tree of life emanated from "the heavenly dew" which is the source of resurrection and regeneration.

The Latin traditions claim that the fig tree was considered impure and maleficent because its fruit, the fig, evoked a partially-open vulva (fica in Italian)!

One finds the fig tree as a symbol of the mother Goddess in numerous traditions, such as that of India. It is precisely under a sacred fig tree (ficus religiosa: bodhi/bo tree) that Buddha had the revelation of the true nature of earthly pain and the means of healing humanity from suffering.

The goddess-tree is also present in Italy; it is again she, in the form of a fig tree, who gathered at her feet Romulus and Remus (the future founders of Rome), before the Lupercal cave, and it is under her benevolent shadow that a she-wolf nursed the two babies and saved them from certain death.

The symbolism of this story is eye-popping: the latin term Luma (she-wolf) also means prostitute. In antiquity, the priestesses were assimilated to prostitutes as they transmitted the sacred energy and the royalty of the mother Goddess to future kings and princes. The she-wolf is in fact a prostitute, more precisely a human priestess who sustains the cult of the mother Goddess symbolized by the fig tree. Romulus and Remus had not been nursed by a she-wolf, but rather by a woman at the service of the religion of the Great Goddess!

In Genesis, Chapter 3, Verse 7, when Adam and Eve ate the fruits of the tree of knowledge, they felt compelled to hide themselves behind leaves of the tree of the garden which was none other than the symbolic representation of the fig: "As their eyes were opened and they knew that they were naked, they sewed fig leaves and made loincloths of them."

The Genesis Rabba, in Chapter 15 Part 7, brings some precision to the identity of the fig tree: "From what species of fig is it? The species 'Daughter of Seven,' said Rabbi Avin, 'named thus because it had brought to the world the seven days of mourning.'"

The number 7 possesses a sacred connotation around the world and particularly in Mesopotamia. It is not unrelated to the Pleiades that the Hopi Indians of Arizona call "The Seven Sisters," the constellation that they honor as being the place where the creative divinities reside.

See Decoder for the decompositions of the Sanskrit word Udumbara (a fig tree in India) showing its associations with a Goddess who can empower royalty.

The sycamore represents the cup of anointing oil in the religious offices of the ceremony of the Mahâvrata [great ascetic vows]. But the interesting thing, it serves equally to fabricate the throne on which the Vrâtya will sit during the ceremony. The Goddess has precisely the principle function to create the king and place him on a throne, because she carries the royalty of Heaven on the Earth. (Note, the Gina'abul-Sumerian language is multi-functional thanks to its numerous plays of words and homophones.)

As to the role of the female sovereign to whom belongs the royal authority that she distributes as she wishes, compare the Sumerian translation of Udumbara and the Irish tales where the young woman incarnating sovereignty offers the cup of immortality to her heroes.

The Egyptian goddess Hathor, a perfect model of the feminine principle, incarnates the radiant energy of perpetually renewable life. Numerous frescoes, like that of the tomb of Sennedjem, represent the goddess of the sycamore in the tree of life. She pours a vessel of water of life and presents her sacred fruits to the deceased, that they may nourish themselves and thus receive the benefit of eternal life.

The goddess Hathor represents the Mother, the universal matrix. She is the mother of gods and the wet-nurse of humanity. She is the central pillar, the tree of life, the holder of the functionality of Kundalini (the "ladder" that traverses the seven principal chakras through which one obtains illumination). She is thus the cosmic tree that connects Heaven and Earth, the link between the Source and humanity.

In China, the cosmic tree is called Kien-Mou, litt. "raised wood," and this decomposes [see Decoder] to "the place where the lords dwell." As you can see, it all fits!

As shown in the Decoder, the Greek sukomoros decodes by means of its Sumerian phonetic equivalent $SUKU_5M\ddot{U}R-\acute{U}\check{S}$ to the meaning haunches that distribute the blood.

The particle $M\ddot{U}R$ confounds with Sumerian $MURUB_4$; the two share the same classical Sumerian Cuneiform sign and sense: "haunches, center, middle."

$MURUB_4$ has a homophone $MURUB$ which means "vulva, woman, or sexual attraction."

In playing with this word game of which the Gina'abul and Sumerians were very fond, the hidden sense of the Greek sukomoros would give equally "the woman (or the vulva) who distributes the blood."

Also see the Decoder for the Sumerian decomposition of the Latin sicomorus.

An extraordinary number of figurines representing the Mother-Goddess are regularly disinterred at sites around the world. They are generally in a squatting posture which, according to the official thesis, suggests childbirth, in keeping with the role of the Mother-Goddess who aids fertility and maternity. Now that you know the true hidden power of the Goddess, can you really believe that these statues all represent women ready to give birth?

One finds the same evocation in the Codex Borgia from the ancient Indians of Mexico. At the top of Plate 74 [not shown] is found a goddess, in full frontal view, squatting on an altar with a receptacle between her legs. Specialists see in her the representation of Tlazoltéotl, the goddess of the Earth and the moon, also named "Mother of all the Gods." The moon affects the periodic flow of women's blood and clearly symbolizes their menstrual cycle and the hidden knowledge of the Dark Stars.

In Greece, the Goddess Artemis, who is regularly represented in a tree, symbolizes as though by chance the moon! The sacred drink of the Aryan gods of India is called Soma, justifiably calling to mind the mythical plant from which is taken the nectar of immortality... and the moon.

Absolutely all the traditions of the world say the same thing. We add that on Plate 66 of the Codex Borgia [shown above] there is a tree possessing an opening that is easily identified with a vagina. From this opening comes a flow of blood. The roots of this tree have the form of a serpent's head.

German and Scandinavian mythology use the same symbolism in the sacred Yggdrasil, the tree of the world, the cosmic tree. [As with so many key words in diverse ancient languages, Parks' method of decomposition in terms of the Sumerian syllabary (see Decoder) illuminates the meaning of this Icelandic name.]

Three ancient goddesses named Norne -- of which the triple temporal appearance (past, present, future) rules the course of ages and the destiny of Man -- live at the foot of Yggrasil. The three Nornes also symbolize the three phases of the moon: crescent, full, and waning. The three Nornes water the sacred tree from a fountain of youth named Source of the Earth, of which they are the guardians. Once again, full symbolism!

[Please examine the Decoder entry for Nornes.]

As with the Codex Borgia, the Scandinavian legend adds that at the foot of the tree are found serpents who gnaw the roots. One finds this same ideology in Iran, in the Hoama, tree of the world, itself gnawed by a lizard-serpent and placed on Mount Araití. [As shown in the Decoder, Hoama decomposes to] "the mother-bird," supreme symbol of the Mother-Goddess and of the Holy Spirit!

As to the mountain Araití, it decomposes to ARA₄-ITI, meaning "marked or illumined by the moon."

We bathe "for the nth time" in full symbolism. The fact of finding serpents sucking the roots of the Aztec sacred tree, of the Scandinavian Yggrasil, and again of the Avestic Hoama demonstrates for us beyond the shadow of a doubt that priestesses symbolizing the Mother-Goddess, totally subject to the lunar cycles, were ruled by a caste of serpents on the Earth.

This conforms exactly with the Gnostic ideology which makes Sophia the slave of angels called archons. Numerous traditions have in common the fact that the serpent is held responsible for the menstrual cycle of females. We will go into the details of the serpent and the menstrual cycle in the second book, but it is quite evident that it relates to Judeo-Christian thinking which makes of the serpent the one who pushed Eve to reveal the secret of the celestial divinities to humanity...

From [K2]:

Karma One: The two first volumes of The Chronicles of the Gírkù make frequent reference to the menstrual cycle, to its importance, and to its power of healing and understanding, as the menses of the Amašutum and other feminine entities in the narrative are employed in sacred rituals. Strangely, one finds this custom in the ancient gnostic rituals that dedicated a certain cult to the eternal feminine.

On the other hand, in certain other ritual traditions or religions, particularly in "the religions of the Book" ..., the woman is considered as impure during this period....

Why is there this taboo on females to the point of comparing them to sorceresses?

Parks: The female has been at the heart of a universal intrigue since the night of time. Her power has alarmed the "gods" of the different mythologies and has frightened the Church, because it is capable of liberating the human, who would no longer have need of the clergy for reassurance and the sense of being assisted. The menses of human females have also been made the object of sacred and Hermetic rituals for reasons that one can well imagine.

Since we are among the great truths, let us examine the exact sense of the word "sorceress" in the language of the "gods". We will find there, as by enchantment, a fundamental theme that the Judeo-Christian religion has attempted to mask from the people. The Sumerian term for sorceress is Míuš'zu. Its true translation, and the diverse interpretations that one could draw by virtue of the homophones of which the Sumerians were so fond will put us on the trail of a carefully hidden meaning. The simple decomposition of MÍ-UŠ₁₂-ZU gives "the woman of the wisdom-secretion" or "the woman of the knowledge-venom".

For 130 years Adam remained separated from his wife [...] because of the venom that he had just absorbed. When the venom had been depleted, he returned [to Eve].

The Zohar, Berechit 3, 55a

The Sumerian homophony game brings us yet more clarification without altering the original sense of the term. If we replace the UŠ₁₂ with ÚŠ, we obtain MÍ-ÚŠ-ZU, "the woman of the wisdom blood", and with UŠ, MÍ-UŠ-ZU, "the woman who elevates the knowledge (or the wisdom)"

Before Christianity intervened, sorceresses were considered to be persons possessing the energy of the Goddess. The diverse possibilities of translation playing on the homophony of the language of the "gods" assures us that we are in the presence of a particular substance of which the females are the only ones to possess the secret.

Another element must be brought in to accomplish the sacred act, and this is very close to the alchemical tradition. If you have an absolute confidence in your partner and you love him or her infinitely, so that you share in all things with this person, then know that all is possible, including the sharing of menses and sperm:

The tree of knowledge of good and evil: why is it so designated? [...] It is because this tree takes its nourishment from two opposing sides and it recognizes them as when one eats the sweet and the bitter at the same time. As the substance is taken from two opposite directions, it is called "good and evil".

The Zohar, Berechit, 35a and 35b

The rabbis who compiled the texts of the Zohar knew very well of what they spoke. They understood that the allusion relates to sperm and menses, sperm representing "the good", and menses "the evil"!

Yahvé's taboo against the mixing of these "impure flows" is detailed in the Bible...

[See Leviticus, "Sexual Impurities", 15.]

...If these revelations seem strange, do not forget that our society is totally disconnected from the sacred and certain realities. Sex has been banalized and is sold today on street corners as vulgar merchandise for quick consummation. The "genius" of man has never ceased to quest for more refined and perverse means of exploiting women for his immediate pleasure and the money that he can gain from them.

He even possesses the capacity to enjoy the suffering of his feminine double. He is without doubt the only animal (Á-DAM in Sumerian) capable of torturing and killing his neighbor for his own pleasure.

In distorting certain realities, the human being has been able to confine himself in a formatted world, totally the image of the perverse universe of the "evil archons" (reptilians) who are described in the gnostic texts and who have been able to pass for the true divinities of our universe. An existential shame accompanies the sense of the sacred, because sex is the center of the guilt inflicted by the bad "gods".

If the Sumerian "gods", transformed into a unique and universal God in a great majority of religions, had banned the sacred to the point where today this sacred has become a veritable marketplace, it is precisely in order to turn humanity away from the true reality which would permit him to raise himself. Most of you have no idea of the marvels that surround you. You, who read these lines, if you have the joy of sharing your life with a person whom you love profoundly, you must understand that sex has nothing to do with a performance such as is presented to you by the media. Sex is a connection of the heart, a fusion in true love...

War (2)

The information in the previous section helps to establish the nature and qualities of the Amašutum that were at the center of the Great War whose aftermath became the subject of Parks' narrative and ultimately led to our modern world situation.

The Great War had a biological basis, as mentioned earlier, and in this section we explore that aspect further.

Sa'am's initiation described above was called "Fire of Aš," Aš being an Emešà word for "spider." The Decoder indicates several associations between "spider" and the Mother-Goddess among the Gina'abul and also the Hopi. The connection is explained to Sa'am by Mamitu:

"The Mušgir took from us our dignity but also our crops, because before becoming our enemies, they enjoyed a part of our harvest that we also shared with the Sukkal; we have always been major agriculturists. When we threw ourselves into war against them, the Mušgir, left to themselves and totally taken by surprise, found no other solution than to appropriate our plantations.

"Like us, the spider is a formidable warrior. If you place her in the field, she will relentlessly attack the ravaging parasites. The spider also undergoes periodic Gibil'lásu (renewal of the skin) and withdraws in the same manner that we do when we shed our skin. The spider is independent and can go for weeks without food or nourishment, just like the Amašutum.

"We have another point in common with the spider: venom. For a long time, before the Musgir, the original Amašutum prototype secreted a substance [the poison used in Sa'am's initiation] that numbs the senses and sickens.... We have determined the precise makeup of this material and can recreate it without difficulty.

"This fluid was produced and stored in a bulge hidden in the uterus of our illustrious ancestors. At that time, the Amašutum didn't deliver their young in the way that we are able to do it at times. If they wished to mother naturally, they produced an intermediate temporary matrix [an egg!] from which emerged an offspring. This famous fluid gave the possibility to the female to destroy at any moment her egg, as it was suitable or not to pursue the process of developing the embryo.

"We, the females, have always been immunized against this venom, but for you the males, this fluid degrades the chemical elements that establish the link-ups between the nerve endings and the muscles. Unhappily, at the epoch of the Mušgir, the majority of us did not secrete this fluid any more. If that had been the case, we would not have had to combat the Mušgir because the males never were able to distinguish between our Rasa [Decoder] and our poison.

"Why do we not secrete the poison now? Because a little before the creation of the Mušgir, we entered the confederation of the Kadištu thanks to our Sukkal allies. As divine Kadištu, we were no longer able to possess the poison. This weapon represented a danger to others and was totally incompatible with the function of a Designer of Life. From that time on, all Amašutum were deprived of this fluid at the time of clonage. Any who possessed the fluid cohabited with their new sisters, but could not be counted as Kadištu. Some of them succeeded in abusing the Mušgir and had eliminated some of them. Then these were counted as Amaš (savages)."

With lowered eyes and seeming embarrassment, Mamitu reports that all but a handful of these were massacred in the Great War. "Among us, Tiamata is the sole survivor. After the war, the few survivors of the ancient race were specially integrated into the Kadištu."

Laws

At a certain point in the unfolding of the events in Parks' narrative, we find An and Ninmah busily cloning an army of Anunna (see Genealogy) on the planet Dukù in the system of Ubšu'ukkinna (which we call Maia), a star in the Mulmul (Pleiades) cluster (see Worlds).

The Anunna were ostensibly created to defend the Amašutum against a mysterious enemy force, but that was a contrivance of An himself, whose real aim was to attack and destroy Tiamata and her Amašutum. In other words this was a revival of the Great War.

Sa'am was to be an instrument in An's plan, but due to his genetic heritage, his initiation, and other factors, he was rapidly becoming more than An had bargained for. (The truth is, Sa'am was a Kadištu and, as a soul, probably always had been.)

Sa'am shared his knowledge with Mamitu-Nammu, and the two of them alerted Tiamata to the situation. Tiamata's immediate response was to recall all Amašutum from Dukù, where they had been running the plantations that provided An and the Anunna with the food that they required. On hearing of this, Sa'am asked Tiamata what would keep An from simply cloning the priestesses that he needed.

Her reply was surprising: he could not do it because it would be a violation of law.

Tiamata went on to explain that all of these cloned races had a control system built into their genetic structure that simply required them to obey certain laws or commandments that were handed down from time to time. Part of that system required that it be contained in any future cloned races. There simply was no getting around it (she said).

The second response of Tiamata, then, to the new threat, was to direct Mamitu-Nammu and Sa'am to devise a Didabbasar, or text of laws, commandments, and decrees to be delivered to Dukù and established there.

A sensitive aspect of these laws was that they could not reveal that the Amašutum now understood what was being planned by An. They were kept general enough to avoid that, but they firmly placed the peoples of Dukù into a position of client to Tiamata and the Amašutum, while also obligating the Amašutum to provide the support they needed for their existence. Not the means of support; just the support itself.

One of the more interesting of the laws is the decree that not only An, but Anšár and Kišár, co-creators of An (see Genealogy), are subject to ("united to" - which sheds light on their programming) the entire set, which was in part written by Sa'am, "The Prince Sa'am Nudimmud in the name of the People of the Ancient Serpent," An's own creature of only weeks before!

It is also very interesting that the Amašutum priestesses had wanted to examine Sa'am intensively in their laboratories before allowing him to co-author the set of laws, until Mamitu managed to convince them that Sa'am wasn't really the prototype of the Anunna that they had thought he was, but was of unique genetic makeup and therefore useless for their purposes.

Another highly significant decree reserves for "the People of the Ancient Serpent" (Amašutum) the right to create "Ádam (animals)" to assist the Gina'abul of Dukù (under the direction of the Amašutum) in working the land, producing cereals and other nourishments.

Parks' delineates for us the laws to the best of his recollection. This Didabbasar is named Mardukù, "that which is dispersed and applied in the Dukù." Fifty in number, each law making up the Mardukù is given its own name. The term Marduk designates the sovereign executive of the Mardukù.

Readers will immediately think of the fifty names assumed by the Babylonian god Marduk as listed in the Enuma Elish. Parks of course acknowledges the parallel and unmasks Marduk in Adam Genesis.

The Mardukù is, if you will, a covenant. One must reflect on the Ten Commandments and their peculiar attraction to followers of the patriarchal religions to this very day.

The fiftieth decree is poignant:

That by this ultimate commandment, a copy of the Mardukù shall be deposited in the bosom of the stellar system of Ti-ama-te (the solar system), major seat of our universe. That a copy will be placed in the Abzu of the very holy Mulge ("the black star"), the retreat and rest place of the Kadištu who work in the system of Ti-ama-te at the service of the Namlú'u (the [original!] human beings) of Uraš (Earth) [see Genealogy, Races], also commonly named Lú. That Mulge ("the black star"), which occupies the heavenly crossroad of Ti-ama-te, shall be the receptacle of the Mardukù and of the inscriptions of the Destinies. In the name of the Original Source, that the wisdom of the Mardukù marks the entire system of Ti-ama-te and that it brings peace to our entire universe. For this reason, this commandment bears the name Sagmegar ("the repository at the head of the ME"). Thus shall it be -- ME 50/3.

Note: the black star SAG-ME-GAR ("the repository at the head of the ME" ["ME" is defined as "crystals containing the Gina'abul art and laws".]) also bears the name Nibiru or Neberu in Babylonian.

Apparently Sagmegar is another name for Mulge, and this sacred place, the true identity of the popular Nibiru, that once marked our solar system as a symbol of peace for the entire universe, no longer exists.

What is the physical form of the Mardukù? The Mardukù is inscribed on two massive plates of gold. Destinies, the arts and laws, are recorded on "optical disks of green quartz" -- the ME. ME were used in the development of the Mardukù.

Now... visualize the scene in which Sa'am has brought the Didabbasar to Dukù, to literally "lay down the law" to Ninmah, An, his creators Anšár and Kišár, and all the Anunna, thus binding them to the will or at least to the service of the Amašutum.

But Ninmah appears to have been expecting this! She orders an ornate box to be brought to receive the Didabbasar, says she will inspect the laws, and dismisses Sa'am and his party. Then shortly after, in his encounter with Anšár (see Souls), Sa'am is told that he had been programmed to produce those laws in the first place, that they were thus expected and joyfully received, and will be used as a decoy to bring back the Amašutum who will now engage themselves in educating the Anunna and once again producing the foodstuffs that they so badly need.

You now bring us the solution that has been so long awaited. The Didabbasar that you have produced is but a decoy. Without having read it, I know its contents. It is the divine instrument that will accomplish our designs against the ancient protectionist politics of our adversaries. Do you not see that you blindly obey our supreme will? We thought that you had discovered that. Know that nothing nor any person can break your programming!

This little discussion does not do justice to the extent of the compromise created by the "decoy." It was the Amašutum who were utterly trapped, far from their home and unable to alert their queen, committed to building the agricultural infrastructure that would feed an enemy army of millions including a vast number of the hated and incredibly destructive Mušgir (see Races).

It will be seen that all these events led to the founding of the Earth civilization that we live with today.

Who indeed was fooling whom over those laws and the genetic software that was supposed to be controlled by them? Something had gone very wrong. Only the more responsible group turned out to have been compelled by them.

How might this be reflected in the uses of law in modern civilization?

Bottom line: An did not believe either in the laws created by the Amašutum nor in the primacy of the Amašutum themselves and the Kadištu -- the entire order that had prevailed since the end of the Great War between the Mušgir (dragons) and the ancient Amašutum race of the constellation Urbar'ra (Lyra). He wished to impose a system of patrimonial descent.

Sa'am states:

My creator was manifestly alienated, not knowing what was good; he was cut off from life, and detested it to the point of having created flesh and blood automata devoted to his service.

An and his [Anunna] acolytes did not know the Original Source. Or at least, they attached no importance to the Supreme Source of which Mam had spoken to me many times. This source of which we are all issued and who is honored by the ensemble of the Kadištu. They seemed to be completely misinformed as to the presence of a universal entity named "Original Source", creatrix of all things, rather taking themselves as the gods.

The enormity of the situation was there, under my eyes: the female and male Gina'abul did not practice the same religious system. The major breach that opposed them against one another was a war of belief and of cult!

Whatever the assessment of Sa'am's level of autonomy held by An and by Sa'am himself, Sa'am's development was not complete at that time. More transformations awaited him.

To learn how the Didabbasar became the foundation of the power of An and Enlil when they captured and colonized Ti-ama-te (our solar system), jump to Join Us (Align with Us) or Die. An and Enlil, it should be noted, are the entities who postured as Yahvé (also known as Yahwe, Jehovah, God, etc.) for the benefit (i.e., the control) of their creation, the Ádam.

Initiations (2)

Another in the sequence of initiations described in Le Secret is the sacred marriage that takes place between Sa'am and Mamitu-Nammu after Sa'am has been made fully male through surgical intervention by Mamitu.

As an introduction to this topic, here is Parks' Note 70, providing some background:

The Egyptian papyri and Mesopotamian tablets attest that the different goddesses of ancient Egypt and Mesopotamia -- identified with the Celestial Cows -- transmitted their divinity and divine powers to kings through having sexual rapports with them. The king was invited to partake of the vital energy of the goddess in the sacred nuptial bed where he obtained immortality and became thus "the Bull of Heaven". Likewise, the grand priestesses of antiquity, veritable incarnations of the Mother-Goddess on Earth, practiced the Hieros Gamos (sacred marriage). They chose a lover, considered as the son of the Mother-Goddess, and practiced with him "a sacred sexual union". Through this ritual, the man was at once metamorphosed into the spouse of the goddess and invested with the royal function. These rites were practiced as much in Sumer and Egypt as in classical Greece.

In the second Karmapolis interview [K2], Parks further describes this practice among the Mesopotamian cultures:

The Akkadian term Qadištu denotes "priestess of high rank," of which the Sumerian equivalent is NU-GIG, "the non-diseased" -- a title attributed to the goddess Isis...

One should know that in antiquity, the priestesses of high rank practiced sacred sexuality, which served to raise the frequency of the males by releasing the coiled serpent, the Kundalini.

The males of that epoch, in certain cultures such as the Mesopotamian, were able to honor or sanctify the Mother-Goddess and couple with her in the temples through the intermediary of the priestesses who represented her.

This act and the original term Kadištu or Qadištu are undoubtedly the source of the Hebrew Qodesh (to sanctify).

One well understands that Yahvé, the unique and jealous god, would not hear of this. This is why we find in the Bible all those heavy passages in which Yahvé imposes taboos against the "false gods," the cult of goddesses such as Ashérah. As we saw in Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres, the Kadištu (Elohim) are in conflict with the Ušumgal-Anunna authority that incarnates the patriarchal and authoritarian "god" found in the Bible under the appellation Yahvé.

Returning to the sacred marriage of Sa'am and Mamitu-Nammu, it's interesting that in the period leading up to this union, Sa'am is not impressed with the sanctification of his person that is supposed to result from it. For that matter, without having a male nature prior to his surgery, he has difficulty in appreciating the attraction of any kind of sexual activity. But Sa'am has his own agenda: to transmit the powers of the Ušumgal to Mamitu, which he knows will be essential to her security in the coming time of conflict.

For her part, Mamitu is offended by the prospect, which suggests she is not already adequate to any situation, and which furthermore seems to threaten a change in the nature of her being.

At any rate, the sacred marriage and the sacred union of Sa'am and Mamitu proceed. These acts are fully and lovingly described by Parks in Le Secret. To attempt to summarize them on this page would be a travesty. The passages have to be read in the original, or in any other language of translation when these become available. From them, and from Sa'am's reported impressions, we can gain some appreciation of what it was like to experience what for us today is a rather abstract idea that comes out of ancient lore.

A couple of notable events occur during these ceremonies. Sa'am experiences his first Gibil'lásu (shedding and renewal of the skin). Mamitu undergoes the process simultaneously as well. This was probably induced by a beverage that they drank, although they were apparently at the verge anyway.

We read about the "shining countenance" of these gods or reptilians. According to Parks, their new skin did glisten once they had dropped their old scales. Perhaps indeed this is the "shining."

And apparently Mamitu does receive the telepathic powers of Niama, as immediately after, she is able to communicate with Tiamata using the Gírkù that she is about to give to Sa'am. Recall that Sa'am and Mamitu had traveled from Nalulkára via the timeless pathways to Ubšu'ukkinna to deliver the Didabbasar (set of laws) and to oversee the plantations there, only to find themselves trapped as pawns in An's war development program. With the aid of the Gírkù, Mamitu is able to apprise Tiamata of the full situation. Tiamata makes an instantaneous decision to strike with a massive force to "suppress" Sa'am's Kuku (ancestors), and all of An's forces, including the newly-cloned Anunna and the accursed Mušgir. She informs Mamitu that they will arrive within hours; that there will be no protection for Sa'am and Mamitu; and that the Kadištu have been plunged into crisis over this; they will not intervene and specifically will not offer any support to the Amašutum.

And thus the war that went on to overturn everything on the Earth, and whose results we live with to this very day, is about to begin.

Briefings

Kadištu

Sa'am is afforded one brief interview with pure Kadištu beings before entering into the oncoming chaos. Two came to meet him in a strange and highly symbolic place. They are an Abgal from Gagsisá (Sirius) and a semi-etheric Ameli from the brilliant star Bun.

This is a conversation between beings who were superior - far superior - in every way to the Anunna race (known to us as Anunnaki) who went on to conquer our solar system and pose as gods, the distilled memory of whom informs all of the common human images and conceptions of God.

Yet it is striking that this conversation is not above the reach of some modern humans. People who have read and appreciated these pages will have no difficulty with the briefing Sa'am received. It is, in fact, with just a little abstraction, a briefing for all of us today.

Interestingly, the Kadištu arrive in a craft. A strange one to Sa'am's eyes but still quite "physical."

And what do you suppose is the greeting he receives? It is a practical request: "Use your crystal to realign yourself; otherwise we will be unable to approach you!"

The briefing itself is devoted to a preview and analysis of the events about to unfold. Here are some key points:

- The contentious situation resulting from numerous discords among the Gina'abul is going to produce a material transformation in the perceptions of our universe. The administration and executive organization of the Kadištu will be temporarily [!] eclipsed in a part of this universe because of the upheaval being prepared by Tiamata.
- We have tried to dissuade her, but her fear of again seeing the ancient Mušgir regime diffuses among you like a bacteria, blocking resonance with Wisdom. We cannot blame her for having assisted in the Great War and having seen of what the Mušgir are capable. However, the reign of animality lavished by a great majority of the Gina'abul species will dominate in the mastery of this sacred region of our universe that is now under the executive control of Tiamata. We cannot go against this predestination.
- Your role in this chain of events is crucial. You will have to make numerous important decisions. We are not here to guide you in your choices. We are here to inform you that the greater part of the Gina'abul are locked in a prison of warped conceptions of the Source and suffer terribly from this.
- While keeping in mind that there is no separation between you and yours, you must aid your brothers in overcoming their deficiency. That is one of the greatest missions that you gave yourself in incarnating among the Gina'abul....

- Son of An, you are going to observe different forms of thoughts and experiment with the conditional and the unconditional. Never forget that you are the master of your incarnation. The narrow corridors that you have chosen to follow will help you to assimilate and to not dissociate the shadow and the light. The Amašutum incarnate this subtle association that involves the creation processes. They symbolize the direct link between the ANGAL (the highest) and the KIGAL (the lowest). They are actually in great danger, because the majority of your Kuku think that hatred and vengeance heal wrongs....
- Rancour and incomprehension together nourish non-loving.... [But the] darkness of the ego is another aspect of Light, because it creates emotions that engender experiences that lead to the Source of the Light.
- As long as bitterness continues to grow, the initiate will never break free. The initiate continues to hope in his ego and in his struggle against this bitterness. Only when he arrives at the limit of his possibilities does he finally take the road that will lead him toward the Light.
- The initiate is constantly tested, yet he has faith in the Light, because he is himself light....
- Will you brandish your weapon [the Gírkù] to protect and save yourself or will you seek to go beyond your fears and penetrate the unfathomable? You must go beyond good and evil, beyond your fears; there is true Wisdom....
- The apprentices of life and of the animal kingdom -- those whom we name the Gílimanna (Celestial Bestiary [see Decoder entry for Gílimanna]), as well as my ally here and yourself [Sa'am and one of the two Kadištu belong to the Abgal race], affiliated beings, and more precisely this new subrace named Anunna, are likely to establish a colonial authority based on servitude and dominance. These beings are unable to recognize the basic facts of social and karmic evolution, because they identify themselves as gods, which they are not yet. Doubtless the day will come when they will acquire eternity, but only when they have become conscious of the sacred that resides within themselves....
- ...The code of this universe, that Tiamata understands perfectly, implies that immortality of the body is not acquired by genetic means, but rather by grace of the evolutionary processes of the soul. The Gina'abul clones' quest for immortality therefore will greatly complicate your mission. The Anunna must above all not know that which you have penetrated through your initiations, because they would take the sexual energy and use it as a means of domination and repression in the manner of the Mušgir. Look around you. Look at all this gold. [There was a prodigious amount of gold surrounding Sa'am at this moment.] This would satisfy the thirst for immortality of several regiments for a long time....

To which Sa'am begins to respond, saying that it lacks only several willing Amašutum. But at that moment, events signal the end of the interview.

Parks gives us a tantalizing hint of a subject of first magnitude importance, to be developed in Adam Genesis. But the astute reader will have already located supporting information on these pages.

There is one final bit of advice:

Your Queen has found allies among a minority of ourselves; our heart is torn. Do not underestimate her planned action, because her allies are terribly formidable and will not look out for you in the battle.

Combat will soon begin, my brother! It will send you far from here, to a place where you will meet with emotional experiences that will lead you to explore the depths of your identity. You have agreed to take the heavy responsibility to treat the ills of beings of your lineage. This task will force you to make difficult choices beginning today. These choices risk leading to other types of sufferings. You will be able to count only on yourself.

In incarnating among the Gina'abul, at this precise moment of their history, you have projected yourself into a universe where the mental suppresses the spirit and where the ego neutralizes Wisdom. Do not err by this combat. It is for you only to protect the Sacred in all its forms. Quickly leave this place, time presses.

Ninmah

Your filiation with the Abgal of Gagsisá (Sirius) is beyond any doubt; it transpires as well physically as inwardly. Your weaknesses and clumsiness reflect the virtues of a being in motion. You carry within yourself the inner aptitudes proper to the Kadištu, which fascinate your Kuku. These are the same aptitudes that have made the Abgal the emissaries of choice in our galaxy and which permitted you to revive Mamitu's priestess [who had been struck down by Anšár and appeared dead] moments ago.

An Abgal such as yourself must carry the genetics of an illustrious Abgal. Your creator has doubtlessly assembled you in part from his genes, thanks to which you possess at once the physiognomy of certain of your Kuku and their aptitudes, but above all he has given you almost 65% of the characteristics of your blood Mother....

...who, she informs him, is Mamitu-Nammu.

We offer these selected bits of information from the book because, taken together, they will speak worlds about our own history.

Duat

Dukù

The outbreak of war is horrible. In one short day, Tiamata and her allied forces completely overwhelm Dukù, destroying all the cities and killing everyone in their path without mercy. Sa'am, Mamitu, and a party of Nungal and Nindigir make an escape via an underground passage leading from the city of Adhal to a rendezvous point on a sacred mountain, where they hope to find Sa'am's father, his Uanna, and a fleet of ships.

This passageway, explains Mamu, is sacred to the Amašutum priestesses. Their once-secret name for it is familiar to Egyptologists: the Duat.

We include here Parks' information about the Duat, not only because of its possible importance to Egyptology, but because it will play a central role in Parks' subsequent books, and will be seen to have a place in our modern world as well.

Mam explains:

The Duat was a domain in which the powers of the lower and higher regions were unified, a sort of inverted mirror in which the most sacred secrets were manifested. In this place, the body of a great Kadištu had been carefully interred in a way that permitted his soul to detach from the material world and rise toward the light. Before the burial of his body, the deceased Kadištu had undergone, in the mountain, the rite of the stargates that had permitted him to return to his original place in the heavens....

Notice, as shown in the Decoder entries for Duat and Dukù (that key Pleadian world), the particle DU₆ represents both a cavern and a mound; this mound clearly evokes the celestial place of origins.

The Sumerian cosmogony names this celestial mountain DU₆-KÙ, "the holy mound." The Egyptian Duat also suggests the idea of a double place, at once subterranean and celestial, both being territories sacred to the "gods."

The Egyptian funerary texts explain that at the heart of the terrestrial Duat flows the underground extension of the Nile, named Urenes (see Decoder). On this river circulates the divine bark that transports the body of the deceased king toward its tomb and the light.

The passageway on Dukù contained an underground river as well...

At the bottom of the trench, 1 Gi (3 meters) of width separated us from the river. One by one, we dropped into the hollow, immersing ourselves in the underground stream. The liquid element had for me the most astonishing regenerative effect. I had the impression of having known this sensation for a very long time. My mother also seemed to appreciate this fortuitous moment. Beyond the fact that the purifying water rid me of the soils of combat, it seemed to cleanse my entire being....

We ran along the spring with its sparkling reflections. This river was going to lead us toward the mountain. The rocks embedded in the bottom of the watercourse, shone with a strange filtered light and illuminated the caverns. There were markings on the ground. Who had thought there were so many grottos and tunnels spreading out beneath the town?

Mam explained to us that the Duat incorporated the two ways of life. I understood them to be the way of water with luminous reflections and the way of the earth that we were following.

The way of water represented the Milky Way and indicated, to the north, the entrance of the mountain. Here were performed the rites of passage and the initiations into the knowledge of the soul.

These grottos symbolized the Primordial Chaos, the sanctum of the midwives whom Mam designated as the Gir [see Decoder]. In these passageways, pilgrimages and secret rites of regeneration were formerly practiced.

A strange inscription was graven on a wall. Mam pointed it out to me:

Son of the stars, we salute you,
You are our favorite.
We, Gíg (Dark Ones) and Gir bid you welcome.
We are those who encircle your secret.
The Holy Duat is your birthplace and your tomb.
In this place, we put you in the world in the morning and bury you in the evening. In the morning, your choices bring you here, in the place of the Mysteries.
When your Zišàgál (incarnation) falls into our bosoms, our hearts rejoice.
You, who are hidden beneath our veil and who know all our secrets,
We reassemble your members and your flesh in the name of the One Source.
We create you in the image of the Sons of the Water.
Our entrails are your home and our flanks your garden.
We embrace your image when you enter into us,
We honor you when you go out from our thighs.
We are the wet-nurses who breastfeed you without ever weaning you.
When you suckle us, we embrace you and lick your entire body.
We lift you in our arms and address to you the word of the glorifications.
You, who knew the riches of the soul, you are the gracious light who illumines the lost ones. In the evening we bathe you and purify your body.
We, Giš (Dark Stars), grant you the funeral offering.
We, midwives and mourners, ease your soul and implore you to leave this lifeless body.

The Mistresses of the Horizon reconnect you with the current that leads to the hall of light and guides you to the heavenly country.
At the crack of dawn, you undergo the final eulogies and prayers.
Fly away like a bird tonight.
Allow the sky to clasp you in its arms, Allow yourself to find your divine family.
The road that leads to this cannot be revealed.
We sanctify the emplacement of your body,
That illuminates the earthly and celestial Duat.
Tomorrow morning you will awaken among the living.
Glory to you, Son of the Water.

It became evident that the Gir of the Duat gave birth naturally to "elect" beings renowned beyond the frontiers of the Ubšu'ukkinna [the star Maia]. Why did our priestesses bury the dead while we had the custom of burning the bodies? My mother turned to the south and indicated to us that in this direction was hidden the tomb of a great Kadištu of singular name, doubtless one of the Sons of the Water of which the inscription spoke:

"These places are so ancient that they are filled with truth. Each of the fossil stones of light in the depths of the water had been carried by a Gir. Each Gir is a Nindigir capable of giving birth to a Kirišti [Decoder], but very few among them had the opportunity to produce such an event in the past," she confided to us.

The Nungal seemed to comprehend the sense of her points. This gave me the occasion to ask them why the Sukkal had been designated to complete their Kadištu initiation. They responded that when Tiamata had gotten wind of the designs of the Ušumgal, she had placed them into the hands of the Kadištu, who entrusted my children to the Sukkal who completed their initiation as life designers. Finally, it was the Kadištu who took the decision to send the Nungal to Mulmul [the Pleiades] to place them under the tutelage of their creators.

With heavy heart, I listened to the words of my children while dragging my feet through the water with the luminous stones. The intent of the Kadištu was clear: they had desired that the destiny of the Nungal be placed into the hands of Mam and myself. Ashamed to reveal to my offspring my lack of awareness of the subject, I questioned Mam on the role of the famous Sons of the Water, the Kirišti. My mother responded to me that I would find the explanation in Ugur, the crystal [Gírkù] that she had given to me. I persisted and asked her why it was inscribed that the Gir practiced lamentations when they accompanied the body of the deceased.

One of my Nungal had listened to our conversation and allowed himself to reveal to me that the lamentations were practiced by the Gir with the aim of liberating the soul from its corpse. The lamentation permitted the soul to relax the tension accumulated in the course of its existence and to manifest that which the being would not have had the time to express while living or at the moment of its death.

The Nungal finished his commentary by giving me a good definition of a Kirišti:

"The Kirišti are sons of the Stars, Kadištu emissaries working for the Source. They never dissociate Gissu (shadow) from Zalag (light), and they work where these energies are disunited. Their work is not easy; it often happens that they are directly confronted by beings who separate Gissu from Zalag and who worship only the darkness."

The structure of this subterranean cavity had been fashioned in places by hands and not by nature. The very high vaulting built out of large stone blocks allowed the roots of the forest over our heads to penetrate sparsely.

We came out into a spacious cavity in which the watercourse became an enormous cistern, a sort of gigantic basin into which the water from the mountain poured before becoming a river once again. The basin water was strangely calm. Facing this reservoir were several chapels hewn geometrically into the rock, breaking up the façade. Their silhouette possessed a form to some degree pyramidal and highly elongated. Candles burned in their depths....

Uraš

The notion of the two ways is found in the Egyptian funerary text of the same name: the Book of the Two Ways is a coded esoteric text in the form of an initiatory itinerary whose purpose is to present a precise cartography of the subterranean necropolis of Rosetau (assimilated by Egyptologists to the beyond), sacred place traced by the ways of water and earth of Osiris.

The journey is long, sinuous, and scattered with obstacles, yet the formulas of the Book of the Two Ways allow the "opening of the way" and give the king the possibility of liberating his Ba (soul). All Egyptian funerary literature evokes the same finality: to regain the country of light and the heaven of the Goddess Nut -- the "celestial vault of the thousand souls."

The path taken by the king or his followers connects the tomb of Osiris to the Great Pyramid. In volume 3 we will speak of the very secret underground network of the Giza plateau (the terrestrial Duat) that proceeds well beyond Giza, as far as to Thebes, the location of the Valley of the Kings. I think this has been partly discovered by the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities and has actually been the object of meticulous secret exploration....

The Amduat ("the book of that which is in the Duat") indicates that the Duat is under the Giza plateau, in the vicinity of the Great Pyramid, and is protected by a certain god Aker. Aker also guards the remains of Osiris following the ritual of resurrection conducted in the realm of Seker (Greek: pronounced Sokar or Sokaris) in the heart of the Great Pyramid.

The Egyptian traditions, such as the Texts of Shabaka, claim that the body of Osiris was secured in the "House of Seker." This secret place was not well specified by the various texts, but it seems clear that it was situated alongside the Sphinx.

Alternatively, Seker/Sokaris is not only a place but also a "god," often identified with Osiris himself.

Sokaris is a funerary "god," Master of Ro-Setau, which corresponds to the necropolis of Giza.

Seker/Sokaris is the king of the caverns and has the function of guiding the deceased and of protecting the dead king, such as Osiris. The Pyramid Texts (1657a-b) say that he is the god of the initiation and of the subterranean spaces where a part of the mystery of resurrection operates. All of the great religious centers of Egypt have consecrated chapels to him.

The root of Seker is associated with the verb skr: to offer, or to punish, which would have the same pronunciation. The connection between Osiris/Seker/Sokaris is all the more remarkable as Osiris himself was punished, offered... and resuscitated as Horus, "the child of light," on December 25 like the Christ.

Osiris is resuscitated by grace of the intervention of Aset (Isis, archetype of the Divine Mother) and Nebet-Hut (Nephtys), considered together as the great mourners who aided in his resurrection.

This resurrection of the soul takes place in the House of Seker where the Texts of Shabaka say that Osiris was kept in safety.

The Pyramid Texts and the Book of the Dead claim that the ritual of the divine resurrection can be performed successfully only when the gates of heaven are open. These gates which lead toward the region of light are four in number as in the representation of the Mysteries of Osiris and Isis in the tomb of Rekhmirê (18th dynasty)...

Several popular authors have associated these gates with four channels built into the Great Pyramid, claiming that they pointed to four particular stars at a certain point in the Earth's nutation cycle. However, other researchers have found that the model simply does not work out.

With all the elements that we have just revealed, there is no doubt that the House of Seker is found in the heart of the Great Pyramid of Giza and that it encompasses the so-called "King's chamber" and "Queen's chamber."

The House of Seker gives access not only to the gates of heaven but to the entrance to the Duat. The different funerary texts such as the Amduat, in the tomb of Thutmosis III, clearly show the House of Seker at the heart of a schematization of the pyramid. This pyramid (or mound) is surmounted by the head of Isis, and is called the flesh of Aset (Isis) that is on the sand of the House of Seker (Amduat 5th Hour, register 3, 374), which implies that the Great Pyramid, in the image of the primordial mound, represents the exclusive domain of Isis -- her flesh, to be precise -- and that it incorporates the dwelling-place of Seker, on which it is itself placed!

The ideology, according to which the Great Pyramid of Giza is the domain of Isis and of the mysterious feminine, is confirmed by the Egyptian term Mer (pyramid) that one meets again in the Sumerian MÉR (Serpent coiled upon itself), millennial symbol of the Mother-Goddess and of the eternal feminine.

The Decoder plumbs further meanings of MÉR.

The following is based on decompositions of Seker and Sokaris.

The docking quay will catch the attention of the specialist in Osirian myth. In effect, according to the ancient traditions transmitted by, among others, the Pyramid Texts (872a-c; 884a-b), the resurrection of the soul occurs in a place similar to a dock or quay, a springboard to the stars, which permits the soul of Osiris (or of the dead king assimilated to Osiris) to rise from its material envelope and vanquish death.

The goddesses Isis and Nephtys, after having mourned over the corpse of the "god", transform themselves into dock pilings/posts so that Osiris will not drift in the void and can reach, thanks to the celestial bark of Seker, to the region of light:

Isis weeps for you (Osiris),

Nephtys calls you,

The Great Docking Post (Isis) pushes aside the obstacle for you as Osiris in his suffering...

The Great Docking Post weeps for you as Osiris in his suffering. His bow line is held by Isis, his stern line by Nephtys...

The mourner as Isis calls you, the docking post as Nephtys calls you.

We hit the nail on the head in indicating that the name Isis, which is officially a Greek transcription of Esi, she who is on the throne, exists in Sumerian under the form ISIŠ₂ or ISIŠ₃, meaning respectively "lamentations" and "to weep"...

For those wondering why Egyptian gods and goddesses have appeared on these pages, we have to explain that a very large story is under development here; all will be made clear.

Briefly:

Sa'am and his party have struggled to reach and board a number of Gigirlah (ships) and have departed the area, headed for a stargate that will lead them through the timeless pathways to... where?

They have learned that Enlil, Sa'am's errant creation, has somehow drawn Tiamata away from her legions and is now in pursuit of her, accompanied by An, Sa'am's father, the rest of the Ušumgal, and a large number of Anunna. Mam telepathically receives the coordinates of the destination toward which all these beings are racing. When entered into the ship's navigational system, they learn for the first time where they are actually going.

It is Ti-ama-te! Our solar system, where Mamítu had labored long years on the planet Uraš (Earth) with her Life Designers, developing the magnificent first humans and many other life forms.

Mamítu is shocked to learn of this, and becomes disconsolate, because she knows that taking the war to Ti-ama-te is going to ruin everything. Here, Sa'am realizes that this outcome was foretold to him by the Kadištu in their briefing.

We describe here their exit from the stargate, their entry into the system of Ti-ama-te, and the conditions they found there at that time.

The fluid was on the point of solidifying when we began the great descent toward the heart of Ti-ama-te. What an awakening! A three-dimensional image of the exterior appeared on our circular screen. A gigantic planet with vaporous reflections captured our attention and progressively materialized around us. It possessed a medium-sized moon.

Mam informed me that the planet appeared to be Mulge -- the Black "Star" [Fr: Astre] -- the planet of the Kadištus.

I did not see any vessels. However, bright flashes dotted the surface. My mother explained that Mulge belonged to a class of planets that are surrounded by cold ionized gas clouds from which emerge lightning flashes. The weather was chaotic on Mulge and storms tormented the surface. Life there was not possible in the KIGAL dimension (see Dimensions) but it existed in the ANGAL and also in the Abzu of Mulge.

This planet clearly was not our destination, but the next one definitely was, as we shortly began a precipitous descent.

The plunge was awesome and much more demanding than when traveling on an Iníuma [see Stargates]. The effect reminded me of the hard accelerations of the Mú-u.

When we reached the three-dimensional barriers, the fluid liquified. At this moment, we were ejected from the timeless path through a spatial Stargate and the liquid withdrew progressively, disappearing into the walls of the craft.

The holographic image projected on the circular visual screen presented to us a small planet with tints of bronze and dark blue where three-dimensional existence was sustainable. It was encircled by gunfire, supplied by our troops who had pursued our adversaries in their retreat. There was a violent glut of radio messages. They detailed the battle taking place beneath our feet. Our forces seemed to be everywhere and all were animated by the same murderous ardor.

I was finally face to face with Uraš, the planet where all the great galactic routes converged.

The forces of Tiamata had reassembled and were responding energetically to our attacks. My creator's Uanna cast its shadow onto an abyssal ocean.

UDU-IDIM-SA₅ "little stockyard of the red wellspring" or "little stockyard of the subterranean waters of the red (planet)". It appears to be the Sumerian form of the name of the planet Mars. We have seen that

We made a circuit of the "star" without approaching it. I was surprised and asked my mother why she did not wish to take us down. She replied that the four of us were Designers of Life and that we would not take part in combat. Mamítu revealed to us that it did not appear to be Uraš, but its granary, the planet Salbatánu (Mars). On this globe were produced and packed the food reserves for the use of the Amašutum of Mulge and of Uraš. (Gina'abul decomposition: SAL-BA-TÁN-U = "the matrix/womb of the rations of the crown")

We left the terrifying gunbattles of Salbatánu, directing ourselves to Uraš. The run proceeded in the traditional fashion, at a cruising speed, without use of the timeless tunnels. Several vessels with unknown silhouettes followed the same course as ours in a calm, yet troubling respect. My mother indicated to us that they appeared to be Kadištu craft, more precisely Amašutum of Ti-ama-te who did not wish to take part in the carnage.

As we advanced further toward our objective, more flying ships showed up. The little planet with the blue reflections took form progressively on our circular screen. An impressive ballet of Kadištu vessels turned around it, resembling a natural ring formed of rock and ice. The vessels of our Nindigir joined up with this strange procession. Our Gigirlah slipped into the metallic multitude and plunged into the dense atmosphere.

Past the many different cloud layers, we approached the precipitous terrain below. The mountains were infested with flying creatures with huge wings and long beaks. They flew along like the wind and we followed docilely.

Mam was euphoric; the battle did not seem to have touched Uraš.

We reached a broad steppe teeming with a multitude of animals with exotic forms.

"We have created here many varieties of animals that synthesize the different species found in our universe," explained Mam.

We saw gigantic quadrupeds with highly elongated vertebrae grazing on the vegetation, while curious dorsal appendages emerged from an inland sea. Here and there, the spectacle was at once familiar and strange. Mam added that Uraš was a sacred natural park for which the Kadištu collective had brought together its life-designing competencies in order to synthesize their millennial knowledge.

This sacred reserve was under the responsibility of the Namlú'u (human beings) [see Races].

Forests of gigantic trees bordered the valley toward which we were starting our descent. The spectacle revealed to us a vast universe sprawling beyond our view. Our Gigirlah slowly came to earth in the midst of this stupefying tableau.

Elongated paws, powerful and muscular, passed not far from us.

We rested in this place for several hours. The spectacle rendered us totally speechless.

Some Anunna craft made their appearance and landed alongside us....

Finally, I asked the grand Life Designer of Uraš where were the famous Namlú'u. Mamítu gave us to understand that the Namlú'u rarely appeared down here, because they really didn't live in the KI dimension, but more in the ANGAL, in the fourth and fifth dimensions. The Namlú'u were the trustees of the gigantic natural garden of the Kadištu. They were responsible for this place. Their incursions into the KI were for the sole objective of punctual and daily safekeeping of the divine creation.

Seeing all these marvels and this equilibrium menaced by the battle raging several leagues from there, I recalled what the Kadištu had said and the fact that we had come down here to transform the probable futures of Uraš.

We waited still more hours. For what? I didn't know how to say it, the fascination was so complete.

It came about that our wait was rewarded, because when the executive administrators of the gigantic park came into our dimension, astonishment and marvel manifested in the bosom of our group. A turmoil, almost disturbing, that appeared to me to resemble a sort of immoderate modesty. The Anunna being in admiration....

Uraš

Note on Points of the Compass:

Parks describes a convulsive encounter 10,000 years ago between Uraš (the Earth) and the planetoid Mulge-Tab (Venus) in which Uraš's axis flipped by 180 degrees. Since the north and south directions are defined in relation to the geometry of the solar system, this presents a problem in choosing the convention to be used to describe positions on Uraš's surface in his books -- especially since part of the narrative relates to the post-encounter era in which we live today.

Parks chooses to use the sense of direction that is correct for each era. Thus the land that will become Australia was in the northern hemisphere; today it is in the south.

If the matter of east and west should come up, keep in mind that in the previous era the Sun would rise over what is today's western shore of Australia and set over the east.

We will generally use today's cardinal directions, to avoid confusion on the part of casual readers of our pages. However when translating directly from Parks' books, we will show Parks' usage and also note the current directions in brackets.

Deep History

Although much worse was to come, Uraš (the Earth) was hardly idyllic when Sa'am and his party arrived there, or before! Its history had been scattered with conflicts, and often bloody ones. All of this was described to Sa'am by Mamitu, who knew the planet well, and Sé'et, who had studied Uraš' history on Nalulkára.

The group established themselves in Sigun, "the red land" in Gina'abul-Sumerian, which today is Australia see [Decoder]. According to Mam, the area was sacred, but she was evasive as to the reason. She did reveal to Sa'am that Sigun had once been part of an extended land, but it had become detached when Uraš had moved away from the sun in the very distant past due to a projectile of colossal size that had been ordered onto the planet by the Kadištu High Council. This had had the effect of toppling the planet's axis of rotation.

Uraš had always been considered a gigantic laboratory and in a laboratory one can recover from unexpected results, especially when unknown factors had been introduced without authorization. In the event, the unexpected had been occasioned by the mad creation of the Gina'abul.

This people had set its sights on Uraš for a very long time. The planet being a "neutral" place where experimentation was extensively practiced, the males of the royal Gina'abul family took the liberty of performing numerous genetic experiments leading to the famous huge Hušmuš, the savage reptiles of ancient times.

In those days the Kadištu were not as much on top of matters in Ti-ama-te. So, suddenly they found they no longer absolutely controlled the situation, and they were thus forced to assume the radical and difficult solution of assassinating the planet. The projectile caused a sudden change of climate that exterminated a great part of the planetary fauna.

Sa'am did not know, and Mam, who had to know, would not say, if it had been an object of Kadištu fabrication, or a natural projectile.

Although there were some survivors of the decimated species, for years and even millennia, eventually those of the greatest size progressively disappeared from Uraš. Also, the climate became much more humid, and the entire planet became tropical.

The first prototype Namlú-u possessed a much denser body at the time of the Hušmuš. Their traces can still be found in the soil of Uraš. These first guardians of Uraš disappeared at the time of the catastrophe designed by the Kadištu. Certain of them had been directed to the Abzu, but few of those survived.

It was only following that great catastrophe that the Amašutum were admitted into the order of the Life Designers, and they were given as their initial mission various tasks having to do with the reconstruction and reorganization of life in the KI (3rd dimension).

A little before the arrival of the Amašutum, the Kadištu created the new prototype Namlú-u from the combined genetic patrimony of the Life Designers. Today this is a remarkable "mixed-blood". The Kadištu has lavished them with a multidimensional etheric body. Where the earlier version had had to put up with the worst perils created by the "royalty", it was important that the new model possess the capacities to move itself to where its principal enemy could not go.

After the events that ravaged Uraš, the Kadištu chose to create a permanent base on Mulge (MUL-GE₆, the "black star"). The Urmah, Kadištu warriors, established their principal base underground somewhere in Kankala [from the Sumerian KANKAL, uncultivated country, Africa]. The Namlú-u were commissioned to steadily integrate the KI in support of the newly-arrived Life Designers, the Amašutum, and to effect the safekeeping of the life preserve of the planet.

We present here two "recursive" archive retrievals -- sets of recordings whose retrievals by Sa'am were themselves recorded and played once again into the awareness of present-day Anton Parks. They are found in Adam Genisiš in the sequence in which the original retrieval sessions occurred, which is after the relocation of Sa'am and his people from their first encampment to the Abzu. Their placement in this Deep History section is determined by their basic content, which relates to the period prior to the arrival in the Ti-ama-te system of the Ušumgal, the Anunna, Sa'am and all the others.

The recordings make occasional reference to "Ušum (dragons)". Keep in mind that the Kingú originated in the constellation Ušu (Draco), which is where they created the Ušumgal (see Worlds). It is also the case that in other contexts (ancient Earth civilizations) the Kingú and the Ušumgal are respectively depicted in the form of Eagles and Serpents. This can be a source of confusion, as can the fact that the Kingú-Babbar are the "royal albinos" or simply referred to as "royals", while Earth civilizations associate royalty with serpents.

I asked Parks about this:

In AG, in one of the old recordings made by Mamitu into Ugur, she frequently refers to "Ušum (dragons)". The context seems to indicate that these are the Kingú-Babbar . Is it correct that "Ušum (dragons)" means Kingú-Babbar even though "Ušumgal" means "grand dragon"?

Yes, exactly! Nammu speaks of the Kingú in this manner and particularly the reds (the more violent). It clearly seems to be the Kingú.

How does this contrast with the use of the symbol "Eagle" for the Kingú and "Serpent" for the Ušumgal in ancient civilizations?

This symbol is there to mark the domination of the royal Kingú over the Ušumgal serpents. I have not "seen" it, but I think that the Kingú have already eaten Anunna or other Gina'abul.

By extension, in the old days, we can also connect this symbol to the Nungal (of royal Kingú blood), who are opposed to the Anunna... the two function very well.

Miscellaneous old notes dictated by Mamítu-Nammu into Ugur. These recordings were retrieved from the crystal by a senior Kingú-Babbar with a momentarily-captive Sa'am/Enki witnessing...

We pursued the implantation of spiritual principles into the mortal mentality of numerous animal varieties of this planet. There is so much to be done to repair the errors of our people. I use for this the teachings of the Kuku (ancestors) of Gagsisá (Sirius). The introduction of Šim-Kúšu (whales) and Kíg-Ku (dolphins) by the Light Bearers is a success. After many Limamu (millennia), these mammals succeeded in balancing the vibratory rate of the planet. The task is huge, however. I sometimes have the impression that we will never complete it. I feel that I am not being well supported by my guides...

Many Life Designer colonies are trying to contact us. Certain of them succeed in meeting us. The confederation is worried and the Namlú'u have been showing themselves less and less for some time now. Everyone fears the war. As long as I will be covered by the Kadištu High Council, I swear that no conflict will break out....

My group has joined with a colony that comes from Adala, in Mulmul (the Pleiades). Their star system is near Ubšu'ukkinna (the star Maia). [Parks thinks the star may be Taygete, depicted in Worlds.] They are Life Bearers of the Confederation. This colony was in difficulty on Kankala (Africa), and we provided assistance to them, as we did for the colony of Sigun (Australia) many years ago. Red Kingús had destroyed their fleet. The Kingú-Babbar give me absolutely no support. They prefer, as always, to deal with the various protagonists and preserve a form of "neutrality". I couldn't care less, we collaborate with many types of Kadištu. I will complete this mission, which Tiamata assigned to me with the accord of the entire Life Designer Confederation...

I have found the means of producing regenerative nucleic acids that give the Ukubi (apes, simians) a longer life. I have run some trials, and it seems to function perfectly. The Kadištu of the third order do not follow my work, they have...to me...

I have been called to the headquarters of the Kadištu. My instructors counseled me to cut back my work on the embryonic development of the Ukubi that I am conducting on Kankala (Africa). The minister dedicated to the development of Uraš declared that my experiments go too far and that they risk creating tensions between the different Gina'abul found in Ti-ama-te (the solar system). I must pursue my work clandestinely. The Kingú High Council must know nothing of my studies. The Red Kingú are nervous, they fire on everything that moves...

I don't understand, I try to improve the models of life, but the Life Designer leadership restrains our efforts through more and more frequent restrictions. The Kingú-Babbar don't have to worry about confectioning Mimínu subraces ("greys") for their egocentric purposes. They have found the means of neutralising the chemical and neuronal controls of their biological vassals, which modifies their emotions irremediably. On the contrary, we do not place limitations on our subjects! We respect the biological rhythm of species and proceed by stages when we intervene. The risks are not at all comparable...

A group of Kadištu warriors, the Urmah, has been assigned to dislodge the recalcitrant Gina'abul. I know them, they are not very conciliatory. The Life Designer leadership employs them only as a last resort. We are no longer secure. I have ordered my daughter Dim'mege to return to the Abzu. She has dethroned Ninuru, the Ama'argi sovereign, and proclaimed herself queen of Šàlim. What violence! I had always imagined that she would become the sovereign of the subterranean world; I created her especially in this vision. But I did not expect it to come about in this fashion. I would like things to be otherwise. We are pursued by Red Kingú, the worst of all. We are permanently in danger. If these threats continue, we envisage returning to the Abzu...

The following early notes were retrieved by Sa'am in privacy. Sa'am believed that Mam actually intended that he find and view them eventually.

In the first described, Mam is in an open savannah, surrounded by strange-looking Ukubi...

The Ama'argi have fabricated, at the behest of the Ušum (dragons), a new prototype Ukubi that has been introduced into the reserve of Kankala (Africa). It is much tougher than the other species created up to now. It reproduces by itself. This new strain lives with its brothers in the west [east!] of the continent. Its brain box is a third larger than that of its predecessors. It manipulates objects without difficulty and seems docile. It learns quickly. If picked up by the reds, it can serve its masters with discipline. I detest these genetic cookings that transform science into unquantifiable art. These practices serve only to create more adroit domestics and not to improve a species...

I was stupefied. Several other documents troubled me equally. They all put Nammu into the scene surrounded by Ukubi whose aspect seemed to change over time. An exceptional document came up. The visual and sound commenced in full tumult. Unknown Gigirlah made their appearance with a terrifying sound. Their color was reddish with silvery reflections. The night was lit by the evening star... which was not as I had known it... doubtless it was different in earlier times or else it was not the same star.

Ukubi ran in every direction. The light from large vessels illuminated the scene. In disarray and with an indescribable noise, the primates were lifted en masse into the air and flung into the gaping mouths of the cargo Gigirlah.

The spectacle suddenly changed aspect. The source recording the event, known as the Gírkù of Mam, began to jiggle vigorously. I saw feet running at high speed. The roar of the vessels approached. I heard a burst of voices. The image was so jerky that it was impossible to distinguish anything. Suddenly, total blackness. Panting resonated as in a corridor. After several instants passed as though suspended in time and space, I saw the face of Nammu. It was in a sweat. It was illuminated by Ugur, continuing to function. Mam began to whisper:

We are in the province of Sinsal*, in the heart of the animal reserve of Kankala (Africa). We must be careful. The Red Kingú see no difference between the Ukubi and ourselves. The reds are searching for manual workers and meat. Their demand for servants and nourishment grows more and more. They practice their kidnapping in the savannah day and night. We are usually informed in advance of the harvests, because we have informants among the royals. The Imdugud help us sometimes when they wish to avenge themselves on the reds with whom they have always had differences. When the reds descend from the heights, my team and I are obliged to descend into the ancient tunnels that the Urmah constructed in the past. The region possesses innumerable passages built a long time ago by warriors of the Source. Our principal base is in the Gígal, the ancient subterranean metropolis of the Urmah. There are still several of the feline Life Designers there. They have authorized us to set ourselves up next to them, but we avoid direct contact with them. The Urmah are peculiar; I am the only one who can approach them. We are all exhausted. The Ukubi are frightened. The Ukubi colony with which I work always requires a certain amount of time to connect with us again after a series of kidnappings. We always have to begin at zero again.

Mam frowned and turned her head to the side. Sobbing could be heard around her. End of recording...

Probing further for information about the royal Gina'abul and their interest in the Ukubi:

The last line that I had completed possessed the capacity to distinguish between the agreeable and the bitter. I had spoken of this to no one. Only my two closest collaborators whom I will not name, know it. If the Kingú were to discover that it was possible that one of our creatures were capable of release from the rules of society commonly accepted by the ensemble of our race, they would kill me on the spot! [...]

I am touched. It troubles me to observe that the Ba (the soul) who descends here and dons his terrestrial clothing will have to endure the KI in a thousand ways. Who are these Ukubi who defy the universal laws of ascensional movement? I am a Kadištu and I am incapable of answering this question. To learn, to endure matter in order to deepen one's understanding, yes, but to incarnate here to be parked in a reserve and be devoured by one's own creators... I am going to stop, beginning now, my research on the Ukubi. I will no longer be the accomplice of eaters of flesh. May the Ukubi live in peace! My efforts will be limited now to the study of the Namlú'u [...]

...This scene was set in the reserve of Kankala (Africa). Some royals had landed their Mága'an, a cargo vessel, in the bush. They were the red Kingús with horns. Their movements were quick and their agile tails thrashed the hot sand. They charged at some Ukubi that they had just chained and severely whipped. I was astonished to discover a commentary superposed by Mam on these images:

Behold the splendor of the Gina'abul. What abjection! What dishonor! Our work is reduced to nothing in the blink of an eye. How can the Kadištu High Council allow such a thing? May these images serve as evidence! The Reds are at their work. They are covered by the Kingú-Babbar. Damn them! May they all return to Te (the constellation Aquila)! How can I restrain myself from shrieking faced with such a spectacle? I have been deceived for too long! We have tried to create new Ukubi prototypes in the sole aim of producing an efficient manual laborer and nourishment for the line of Ušum (dragons). Among those captured and chained like this, only the specimens modified by the Ama'argi have a chance of winding up as domestics. The others in one blow are finished in the muzzles of the Ušum (dragons). The Kadištu confederates are powerless. This world is slipping between our fingers. I must admit that it has already been a long time since it was truly under our tutelage. The Ušum, by their conduct which is not within the principles of the Source, have established sectors where the light is no longer reflected. They nourish themselves there. The royals feed themselves on this emotion carried to its paroxysm. The Celestial Adjusters have been completely overrun. Uraš from now on carries a memory of suffering.

Another document gave me more understanding of the strange relationship that we seem to have with the royal Gina'abul, or Ušum (dragons). Another bit of information that my creator had taken care to integrate into the genetic programming that procured for me the ensemble of my intellectual capacities. I found Mam in a room, perhaps a laboratory. She seemed highly troubled:

I am at the moment sheltered in the Gigal. I have returned from the Itud (the moon). The Imdugud had invited me to meet with them in their secret bases. The sons of the Kingú-Babbar and the Urmah had received me to inform me of the royals' directives. (They sometimes play the intermediaries. They do it generally when they have affairs to treat with their Gina'abul co-creators.) This was very disturbing. The Imdugud indicated to me that the Kingú no longer wish to see me working in Kankala (Africa), still less in the Sínsal. The Kingú think that my work is going to conflict with their program. Their patience is no doubt wearing thin. They must have fallen on some specimens with enhanced awareness that we have developed. They have mastered fire, they command a structured social life and a noteworthy conception of the sacred. I have never transformed the Ukubi into servants as the Ušum (dragons) wished. The Ama'argi are charged with this in place of me! They have reorganized the central nervous system of several bipedal races. These experiments produced Ukubi of strong constitution who could carry heavy loads. But they were a bit clumsy. Their neural mechanisms were progressively refined in order to make their movements more precise. However, certain specimens still suffer from significant neurological problems. They have been stricken with epileptic automatisms that at times leave them in persistent vegetative states. The agile Ukubi little by little are annihilating their predecessors whom they consider to be degenerates. Certain of them even use their primitive companions as workers or as bait for hunting game. Should I be angry with the Ama'argi? Have they not suffered enough? This wretched partnership is their life insurance. The Ama'argi no longer live in fear of being offered to or devoured by the Ušum. Be they greens, reds, or whites, they are the same; all are outside of the universal principles of the Source. For this reason, my group and I have greatly multiplied our efforts leading to a migration of the Ukubi to the great lands. Our specimens are now dispersing toward more secure countries. There they can live in peace.

I had heard enough... I understood now that the royal Gina'abul sowed terror on the entire planet thanks to their pressing a despotic enterprise. They secretly directed the genetic manipulations of our priestesses through the use of abject blackmail: to create and perpetuate life in exchange for their own survival. The Ukubi were the principal food chain of the Kingú and also a first rate manual worker. They were nothing more than Mášanše (beasts). We were very far from the idyllic image that we used to have of Uraš in the greater part of our colonies. Uraš was no longer under the exclusive care of the Life Designers, but rather under the authority of the royals. For how long? I had no idea; doubtless for a very long time... Among the Gina'abul royals, the strange Imdugud appeared the most pliable. I had just learned that they were associated with the Life Designers called Urmah.

For their part, the Kingú were using us as servants. We were nothing in their eyes, just good, docile, and efficient subjects. We were worth no more than the Ukubi. This new information changed, in my spirit, the course of events that were unfolding in the heavens.

That was quite much for a single day. I thought of the Nungal. We found ourselves from then on having to live among beings who were affiliated with the Babbar (albinos) and for whom my mother and I were fully responsible.

*As has been confirmed by archaeologists and paleontologists, West (today East) Africa is the great reserve of simians or monkeys on the planet. The region of Sinsal was the place where the Life Designers such as Nammu studied the simians, but it was also the holding area from which the Dragons procured manual workers and meat. KI Matters

Please review the earlier section DIMENSIONS.

(Adapted from a graphic in Ádam Genisis)

Parks' recollected experiences were set in a dimensional system similar to that which has been reported in a wide spectrum of metaphysical, religious and occult literature and the literature of the paranormal. It is odd that this arrangement of physical nature is not described or even suspected by most of our physicists. Even the Open SETI Physics 101 page of our companion website, which explores some leading-edge physics models, does not point to the dimensional system that many researchers in other fields do believe to be valid.

This says to us that our physics has far to go; we cannot accept that the experiencers in the aggregate have been mistaken.

Parks provides significant details that have not been mentioned elsewhere; this is why we ask the reader to review the previous section and why we have emphasized these aspects in the version of the graphic at right. They are exceedingly important for the understanding of human and "superhuman" life on the Earth ...and of current events as well!

Perhaps the key understanding is that Ti-ama-te -- this solar system -- was a place of very high evolvement at one time, something of which it is very hard for us to conceive. In order to support the high order of beings that lived and worked here, the "frequency band" of nature in this solar system was and is higher than what is natural to its present-day rulers: the royal Gina'Abul. They have never felt physically comfortable with it.

FOR THIS REASON, THEY HAVE ALWAYS WORKED TO LOWER IT, AND ARE DOING SO TODAY.

Curiously, Sa'am's Nungal do well in our environment.

As stated earlier, the Namlú-u live exclusively in "higher dimensions", completely inaccessible to us.

KUR Adventure

To give the clearest sense of these dimensional levels and what it is like to experience them, here is an excerpt describing a probe of the levels by Sa'am and a battalion of Amar'argi warriors who are searching for a group of Mušgir. The Ama'argi were armed with Gúrkur [Decoder] and Gidrugiri ("lightning sticks"); Sa'am as usual carried his Gírkù:

...we activated our Gúrkur to propel ourselves into the KUR-GAL (2nd dimension). We were projected in a flash into a mineral desert with bluish tones...

It was a strange sensation to be able to move about without any sensation of air resistance. I have no good explanation for this phenomenon....

The place was arid. Some brambles and shrubs, of undulating forms, grew there -- the only signs of life in this totally empty world.

We had to consider passing on down to the KUR-BALA, the lowest dimension. This would be a risky maneuver. The KUR-BALA ("KUR of the queen") is where the Mušgir sometimes liked to hide themselves. From this dimension, all beings can have direct visual access onto the KUR-GAL and KI as though looking through a magnifier.

This is the KUR of power. Whoever is in this dimension is like the point of an inverted pyramid with a global vision of the superposed worlds. Should he be able to evolve here like the Mušgir, he can be the master of the dimensions.

We passed into KUR-BALA; the "plunge" was immediate. Having previously experimented with this density on my own, I again found it to be almost stifling.

I recall that the world of the first dimension is a region to which come BA (souls) who are sometimes lost. But the place was deserted.

The KUR-BALA is difficult to endure. A permanent state of tension reigns there and a vertigo seizes the being who is not used to it. Moving about presents many difficulties. It was an odd sensation, trying to board our flying vehicles without bumping into them.

One of the Ama'argi suggested that the Mušgir could be hiding in the KUR-NU-GI. Hudili had spoken to me of this intermediate dimension that existed between the KUR-GAL and the KUR-BALA.

The KUR-NU-GI (KUR of no return) is impassable to our Gúrkur. Had the Mušgir gone to that dimension to spy on us?

They never found out, because at that point their party was attacked by an invisible force, and matters took a different turn.

Sigun Camp

As "Mami" explained it, she chose Sigun as the place where the little band of refugees would establish their own colony and scientific experiment station, because the continent was totally free of Ukubi, those joyous hairy mammals that otherwise completely infested Uraš. It was true enough that these likable creatures with their tumultuous comportments would likely interfere with the experiments that the group was intending to undertake.

Mami had affection for them. One day she took one of the Gigirlah (shining wheels) on a day excursion to the east and returned with a young female Ukubi of petite stature. She named the creature Húlla (Happiness), and made her the colony's mascot.

The encampment was in the north, near the dense and humid jungle that covered the northern part of the continent. They had thrown together primitive shelter -- tents, made from materials that they found on their Gigirlah. Their food was taken from forest plants, which Nammu and Se'et knew well.

Immense herds comprised of innumerable herbivorous species ranged over the vast grassy and fertile plains.

In that epoch, the skies of Uraš were constantly overcast; the sun was never seen. Sa'am's morale suffered severely in the gloom, a thing that he had to try to hide from his entourage. But there were moments of relief when the Namlú'u, the guardians of Uraš, made their regular appearances.

Guardians of Uraš

The following is quoted directly from Ádam Genisiš.

The guardians of Uraš are not solitary; they usually travel in groups of two or three individuals minimum. From their height of 1-1/2 GI (4.5 meters), we must have resembled so many Ukubi (monkeys) to them.

The combined sciences of the Kadištu has provided them with a semi-etheric body without compare. This, aided by an interaction that was to me completely unknown, permitted them to change tonality and to evolve from the 7th to the 3rd dimension with no difficulty. This etheric envelope of a pearly violet-rose tint seemed to reflect the divine essence of the Original Source.

The Namlú'u never opened their mouth to speak; they systematically used the Kinsag (telepathy). They are highly cultivated and know numerous dialects, among them the Emešà of our priestesses.

From the beginning, I was able to observe that, to displace themselves interdimensionally, the Namlú'u seemed to use the field of Turzalag (tachyons) that forms the principal structure of the matter of the timeless vortices. We ourselves use the Turzalag field, but only for point-to-point superluminal travel.

When they descended into the KI, each Namlú'u group functioned to guard a specific terrain. Once their mission was accomplished, the Namlú'u sometimes came to meet us.

Mam and I had noticed that our Anunna had problems tolerating their presence. The guardians of Uraš were reputed to be able to detect the thoughts of others. When they sensed trouble or danger, the Namlú'u took on a reddish tint. How many times had they changed color in the company of certain of us!

The etheric body of the Namlú'u is stupefying. It shines constantly and through its transparency one sees the entire energetic system that irrigates it with light, that which we call the Nadi [Decoder]. Every living being possesses this system that connects us to the Source.

One day, my mother carefully related to me the details of the doctrine of the Abgal of Gagsisá (Sirius). She explained to me that the system of Nadis allows the Pàranna [Decoder] to flow back and forth harmoniously. She was referring to the vital energy that the Gina'abul prefer to call Niama.

The energy of Pàranna is unknown to my Kuku (ancestors); only certain of our priestesses know of its existence and mechanism. It seems to be a sort of opposite face of the Niama. According to the force of will exercised and the speed with which it is passed through the Šagra (chakras), the Pàranna can open perceptions beyond our conventional notions.

Mam revealed to me that the semi-etheric body of the Namlú'u is not the only element that they possess for adjusting their tonality; their great secret is their use of the Pàranna. The Namlú'u are veritable energy centers for directing molecular expansion -- an expansion realized through the perfect interaction of the Pàranna, the Šagra, and the Kundalini, which permits them to place in action their individual field of light.

This field of light, issuing directly from the chain reaction effected on the atomic particles of the body, permits any organic form to transform itself into a vehicle of ascension. My mother calls this expansive action the Merkaba.

Nammu indicated to me that every living thing that possesses a physical body is surrounded by this invisible force. "Each living organic body is attuned to different realities; only those beings chained to the KIGAL density are unable to render an account of it," she stated emphatically.

The Merkaba is constituted of a field of counter-rotating light that links forms to the different levels of reality. By this means, it sometimes happens that certain objects find themselves in several dimensions simultaneously. In awakening their Merkaba, the Namlú'u transform themselves into super-luminous beings to whom the notions of past, present, and future do not exist in the way they do for us. I still think today that the KI density of this planet is no stranger to that, since it is so unusual in relation to others in which I have evolved up to the present.

The Namlú'u possess an absolute mastery of their Šagra (chakras), which permits them to communicate together instantaneously. They can dialogue with forms of life other than their own. This was in any event that which Nammu had revealed to me, but I have never yet, even for one instant, succeeded in communicating with them other than by simple gestures.

The Namlú'u have no leader. They form a collective community of the first order; a social unity -- a single essence!

Parks provides more discussion concerning the Namlú'u in his book, Ádam Genisiš.

Nungal

"Barag (sovereign) Enki, the Nungal have been stricken with a grave malady totally unknown!"

Mam, Sé'et and I took a Gigirlah and departed the nature reserve of the Abzu. We were frozen in silence until our arrival. Sé'et clasped my arm tightly before descending.

This scene will haunt me for eternity. The Anunna, frightened, were huddled one against the other at the edge of the encampment. From the sloughed-off skins on the ground, I deduced that my children had just entered their period of Gibil'ásu (renewal of the skin).

Some Amašutum were gathering skins, which they placed into boxes. This gesture had appeared to me totally bizarre in Mulmul, but was no longer as Nammu had explained to me that the Gina'abul skins served the Amašutum as an acidic factor to feed the crystals of their Gigirlah.

Most of the Nungal had taken refuge under the large main tent, while the priestesses incessantly came and went. We erupted suddenly among them. The Amašutum were like a herd; we blocked their path. We opened a passage and discovered to our stupefaction the cause of this turmoil. Sé'et took one jump and locked herself onto our mother and me. Facing us, some wailing Nungal were squatting on the ground, trying clumsily to hide their faces behind their arms. Their skin was totally white and practically devoid of scales! Was this a genetic anomaly? Mamitu leaned calmly toward the one between them and said: "There is no cause for concern., these are Babbar (albinos); they are of the Imdugud variety!"

Royal blood flowed in the veins of my Alagní (clones). The unfathomable discovery shook me from head to toe. A murmur of surprise ran through the Amašutum. The news went through the colony like a wave out of nowhere. In the blink of an eye I became the focus of the Nindigir's (priestesses') regard. My mother's barely controlled amusement and the sheepish air of my sister embarrassed me profoundly.

Seeing me totally disconcerted, my progenitor drily thrust at me: "How were you able to give me confidence in you? One must never clone from unknown material! Your lack of attention kept you from noticing that it is I who behind your back selected the genetic material of the Nungal. You are from now on associated with this production. I hope that this humiliation will teach you a lesson..."

This was one of the greatest lessons of my life! To better my creator [An] and to flatter my ego, I had decided to produce as quickly as possible Alagní (clones) who would have offended him. To accomplish this and because of my insistence, Mam and I retained the genetic material of an "enhanced Šutum" who belonged, so to speak, to Abzu-Abba, our ancient king. Mam had seriously duped me by choosing genetic material whose identity she must have known perfectly well. Had she perhaps even changed the labels that accompanied the cells behind my back?

This incident placed me face to face with my responsibilities. My experiences with cloning had been up to now slightly hazardous. From now on, I determined to myself to never fail again and make myself ridiculous before my people. Nudimmud (the cloner) was the first of my surnames; I must in the future honor it as much as possible.

Hudili, my right arm, came to retrieve me. Our eyes were moist. Myself by my anger and his by emotion. He knew how, as always, to find the correct words: "Am (lord), you have given us the most beautiful of gifts. Royal blood flows in our veins. Perhaps we will be the instrument of reconciliation of the Gina'abul?"

Sé'et, Crystals, Dim'mege

During much of this early period, Sé'et was out in the forests, observing the wildlife or conducting experiments. Sé'et, you will recall, was the Amašutum priestess who had been rescued by Sa'am on several occasions. She was devoted to Nammu and hoped to become her equal someday in terms of her knowledge, science, and leadership.

Sé'et, as Parks describes her, was a very very charming female, and Sa'am was strongly attracted to her. While she was said to be Sa'am's "sister", this may have meant nothing more than that they were each created by Nammu. That was her opinion of the matter.

The developing relationship between Sa'am and Sé'et bears watching, as it eventually becomes one of the most important elements, if not the most important, in Parks' story and perhaps in our own history.

There was frequent concern over Sé'et in this period, because she resisted carrying the crystals that were universally used for communications, and so Sa'am was often required to go out and search for her.

Those crystals were a highly important technology. Today we admire natural crystals for their beauty; we play with them, sell them at fairs and shows, and try to "meditate" on them. However, most people would be hard pressed to demonstrate that the crystals that we have are anything other than inert.

Yet ancient documents and scriptures are filled with references to special stones that have great capabilities, not only to perform energetic operations on other objects, or possibly to store and replay information, but also for communications -- long range and even sort of interdimensional, as in communicating with the "gods".

Parks cites and discusses a number of references concerning these matters.

We have our own "crystal technology", if you will, in terms of micro-miniaturized solid-state information-processing devices. We do not yet, as far as I know, have any crystal technology that in itself can communicate over long distances. Perhaps this is something to watch for.

Thanks to the use of their crystals, the band of Life-Designers were not oblivious to the progress of the war that had brought them to Uraš. They knew that the Ušumgal/Anunna were consolidating their hold over Ti-ama-te, and that this idyllic little adventure in the forest would soon have to end.

The molting of the Nungal was the precipitate cause of the group's pulling up stakes and going to the gates of Šàlim, "City of Eternity", the capital of the Abzu. Misunderstandings needed to be cleared up, as the Sa'am's Nungal appeared to be Babbar, who would have been anything but welcome in Šàlim. After some highly interesting interaction, all was clarified, and the entire group was admitted to royal quarters where they were to be housed.

It was pointed out that Sa'am/Enki was after all the Barag (King) of all the Abzus, including this one. In theory, Queen Dim'mege was his subject. In actuality, there were delicate adjustments to be made. During all the discussion, Dim'mege showed remarkable foresight: she knew the lords from the Dukù would quickly achieve control over the Earth, but by forming a powerful alliance with Sa'am, and with their mastery of agriculture and the needed equipment that they owned, they might retain some control over the situation.

"...I rightly wish to see your Kuku wallowing at my feet. You, like me, do not wish to see these louts profit from the riches of the Abzu. I therefore claim responsibility for the Mášanše (cattle) and the ensemble of the Ádam (animals) who will be tasked with assisting the Gina'abul of Dukù in their works of labor."

One should add, she also wished to become Sa'am's lover.

Nunkiga, Station on the Edin

Although there was much to appreciate in the Abzu, Sa'am became restless there, and wished to construct a retreat for himself on the outer surface. Since the choice of a location for a new development was always dictated by the availability of Dirannas (Stargates), Mamitu indicated a particular spot with an exceptional concentration of them. It appeared to be a large "Edin" well "west" (east) of Kankala (Africa). (Edin or Eden = plain in Sumerian; the connection with the biblical Eden will be seen in due course.)

Sa'am made some expeditions to the area and selected a place that had two medium-sized Dirannas. It was situated right in the middle of the vast "Edin".

It seemed dangerous to bring the Nungal out there to perform the laborious work of setting up the station, so Sa'am turned to the forty Anunna that were with them. Though it is always difficult to get any work out of Anunna, thirty of them -- those of double polarity -- took a real interest in the task.

Mamitu and Sé'et went along to advise on establishing a livestock facility. The station would need to sustain at least sixty persons and a flock of sheep would provide milk for them. For this reason, they named the place *Nunkiga, "the Noble Place of Milk".

In stages, they created a small farm for raising fruits and vegetables.

* NUN-KI-GA is the first name given to the holy city of Enki. One finds it so designated on the most ancient clay tablets, and later in the form ERIDUG [Decoder].

Ukubi of Sínsal

We departed the Abzu and passed over the broad mountains bordering the northern [southern] hemisphere and its gigantic continent where the Ama'argi maintain bases. Our craft crossed the northern [southern] ocean to reach Kankala. This land was like an immense abandoned garden. We followed a long strip of vegetation to reach the country of Sínsal [the Rift Valley].

Different types of savannah unrolled one after the other, passing from powdery ochre to dense green. The acacias were and still are the kings in Kankala. The landscape changed when we attained the Ukubi reserve. Volcanoes and lakes dotted the eternal valley.

An incalculable number of Ukubi inhabited these regions. We landed on the high plateau of the reserve. The site was a maze of valleys and mountains. Mam informed us that more than 200 million individuals had lived in Sínsal, but that the figure must be lower now due to the numbers taken by the Ušum (dragons).

Our vessel frightened the natives and the local fauna. We had landed near a small isolated village on the edge of a watery plain. Smoke rose from huts, from which I presumed that the Ukubi had domesticated fire. The dwellings were constructed of branches supported by stones. I stepped into one of them and noted some stone tools that were stored there. Cowhides covered the floor. Near the fire, dead branches and dried herbs seemed fated to feed the "incandescent mystery".

I rejoined Nammu and Sé'et at the center of the village. Suddenly a female Ukubi with her infant in her arms came out of a hut and headed off in the direction of the plain below. "By the Source," I exclaimed, "these are primitives, they are not simply Adam (animals)!"

My remark was hardly pleasing to Mam who retorted drily, "The omnipresence of fear and emotion in their daily life chains them to matter. On that account, they are hardly more Adam than you or I."

...The wind began to turn, leading to a break in the natural murmuring. I knew this particular atmosphere. Mam, totally exalted, invited us to move rapidly down toward the valley. A bit farther, we caught a glimpse of a friendly-looking Ukubi family. Hands raised, they communicated with the Namlú'u. The "primitives" undulated from head to foot. The etheric beings stamped their feet in rhythm, creating a cyclic pounding sound. Sé'et and I were stupefied by this strange custom. Nammu pricked her ears, counting the beats, finally stammering: "I don't know this combination!"

Disconcerted, she seized the Gírkú from my waistband, passed her hand several times along the edge of the crystal and shouted: "Namlú'u-Ukubi -- binary combination previously unknown!"

Our génitrice raised her arm and recorded the scene "on-the-fly". The rhythm was constant, but it rose in power. It suddenly became giddy, disorienting, creating a sort of trance among the Ukubi. The Namlú'u began to turn their heads in cadence...

In the next moment, An's fleet made its triumphant appearance on Uraš, having swept Ti-ama-te of its enemies. In that same moment, the Namlú'u vanished. This marked the first phase of their withdrawal from Ti-ama-te. Full and formal withdrawal occurred only a short time later.

A New Colony

Review

Readers by now have had more than a taste of the characters of those who waged the war that transformed our solar system, Ti-ama-te, and our planet Uraš, and the events leading up to the new situation have been mentioned. But we should take a moment here to review and sum up.

In our region of the Milky Way Galaxy, and in the constellations mentioned on these pages, at least, there exist some civilizations -- designated Kadištu -- with the genetic makeup, the orientation, and the training/experience to support the aims and programs of what Parks calls The Source. Generally when Parks uses the words God and the gods, he is actually referring to imposters; it is important to remain aware of this.

What the aims and programs are, is not made clear, but the development of life forms through genetics seems to be a most important part. Because of this, Parks often refers to the Kadištu as Planificateurs and Planificatrices. These French words are normally translated into English as planners. However, in view of what they do in Parks' story, I with a bit of license translate as Life Designers, intended as a message to the advocates of Intelligent Design.

This solar system, Ti-ama-te, had been a primary Kadištu base, under the guidance of the extraordinary multi-dimensional Namlú'u primordial humans who had been developed here. The system was named after Tiamata, the Ušumgal queen of the Gina'abul of Margíd'da, who was the one most responsible for it.

Tiamata was definitely of Kadištu orientation, as were Nammu and Sa'am.

Other Kadištu races were here: the female Gina'abul known as Amašutum, the Ama'argi based in the Abzu of Uraš, the Urmah and the Imdugud.

Definitely opposed to the Kadištu, and also here, were royal Kingú-Babbar and related races, and on occasion Ušumgal. It's important to note that the Kingú-Babbar were (are?) violent enemies of the Ušumgal.

When Tiamata learned, via Nammu and Sa'am, that An and the other Ušumgal lords were developing the warrior Anunna race and the much despised Mušgir for purposes of conquest, she immediately prepared to wage war, against the advice of the higher Kadištu councils. This act was out of character for a Kadištu, but anyway this was her choice.

Tiamata quickly found an ally in the Kingú, and together they virtually annihilated An's Anunna forces in a single "day", but An and his close relatives, and a number of Anunna and Mušgir, escaped the main battles and came to Ti-ama-te, where they overcame the Kingú who were based here.

During that brief war, Sa'am and his party were also under attack by the Kingú, to whom their Kadištu status meant nothing or less. So Sa'am and his associates, and also about 300 surviving members of the Nungal Kadištu race that Sa'am had developed, fled here also. In the process of escaping here, Sa'am's creation Enlíl managed to isolate and chase Tiamata here too, and at a certain point in time not long after that, they destroyed Tiamata and all of her forces that had come with her.

In that moment, the Namlú'u departed... as they had told Sa'am earlier that they would. They had foreseen all of this.

While the most powerful Kadištu had withdrawn, the larger Kadištu community outside Ti-ama-te remained of course intact, and now set up a sort of quarantine... you know, the one we live under today.

Sa'am and his party had not taken part in the war. They had, one might say, dallied among the Ama'argi and done some genetic work, but suddenly reality came to them.

For having been allied with Tiamata and thus indirectly the Kingú, they could almost be seen as enemies of the Ušumgal local victors. They, the Ama'argi, and the Amašutum, were all trapped here with the powerful Ušumgal clearly about to take over the rule of the solar system. They needed to decide on some sort of strategy, and quickly.

Hudili's Address

Hudili (the senior Nungal and Sa'am/Enki's faithful "right arm") addresses an emergency council of the Ama'argi, from the height of his imposing stature and in a piercing voice:

The victorious army can never exploit the Amašutum of Uraš without risking their total isolation from the rest of this universe.

Uraš is clearly no longer under the protection of the Kadištu, but it is always under their benevolent vigilance. The allies of the Source never completely abandon a place on which they have worked.

This is what we have learned, we, Nungal, when we were with the Sukkal.

You doubtless know why Tiamata had placed us in the hands of this race of Life Designers. The Sukkal are allied with the Urmah. The Imdugud come from the Urmah and Kingú-Babbar. Today, all of you present here in this Assembly are undoubtedly thinking that our metamorphosis has moved us closer to the Kingú-Babbar, but we, Nungal, are more Imdugud in our body and Sukkal in our heart.

With hindsight, and after all these events, I ask myself at what point Tiamata knew our secret affiliation. We were created by the very holy Enki and Nammu to whom we render eternal gratitude. We slept in some part in the depths of the genetic patrimony reserve in Nalulkára. Nammu-Damkina and Enki have awakened us forever. We are the worthy inheritors of the Kadištu knowledge.

We are but approximately 300 survivors, but we will do all that is in our power to protect you and to maintain peace. Tiamata has judged that this peace was endangered by the obvious designs of the Ušumgal. Let us render homage to our queen who is engaged in an absurd war, but who is devoted to preserving the premier mission of the Amašutum, that of maintaining peace in the heart of the Gina'abul.

Wherever she may be, let us render to her our eternal thanks.

Sé'et called for calm, in respect for Tiamata. And the assembly stood in silence.

Then, Hudili concluded energetically:

When we go to meet the Ušumgal and their Anunna warriors, we will present to them the jewel of this planet. We will show them a Namlú'u. They will not be able to disavow the work of the Kadištu. The army of Ubšu'ukinna (Maia in the Pleiades) will not unfurl its ensign of victory on Uraš.

In the name of life, we will all see this together!

The Jewish traditions found in the rabbinical exegesis, itself traced from Mesopotamian and Egyptian beliefs, explain that "The abyss named Tehom (taken from Tiamat(a)) raised itself and threatened to submerge the work of God. But in his chariot of fire (sic), God rode the waves and hurled at him great volleys of hail, lightning, and thunderbolts. God then dispatched Leviathan, the monstrous ally of Tehom, with one blow to the head, and also the monster Rahab with a thrust of his sword straight through the heart."

Tehom, the Abyss, and his "monstrous" acolytes surely represent Tiamata and her allies, who were mostly destroyed, expelled, or buried in the earth, which is to say in the hollow world of the Abzu (the Abyss).

As you will have understood, this grotesque allegory is intended to attest to the burial of the worship of the Mother-Goddess and of the Source by the alien usurpers. Whether it is Marduk who hunts Tiamat(a), Seth who pursues Apophis, Zeus who kills Typhon, Mikael who eliminates the villain Satan or even Yahvé who unseats Tehom-Leviathan, the story is exactly the same every time! We will see later that certain Biblical passages also equate the abyssal monsters (adversaries of the good and irritable "one God") to enemy countries, such as Egypt.

After the completion of Hudili's address to the assembly, Mamitu took Sa'am aside and told him that with her new power of Niama (that she had received from him), she was now able to view the future developments on Uraš, and they were horrible. Unimaginable anguish and bloodshed awaited them.

...The perverse beings who destroyed our queen's fleet are going to create bitterness on this world. The Namlú'u will fall and our own people will suffer to a point that you do not imagine.... my son, I see blood, much blood flowing...

Mam was practically in a panic and wanted to leave Uraš as quickly as possible, within the brief moment of time that she felt was available to them. She had calculated that they had enough ships at their disposal (about sixty Gigirlah) to escape with all the Amašutum and Sa'am's Nungal. But Sa'am recalled his briefing by the Kadištu and would not flee what he felt to be his responsibility.

In this discussion, Mam explained that this ill-fated planet had long been under the hidden control of the royal Gina'abul -- the Kingú Babbar. She had always concealed this information from the Kuku administration of Margíd-da (Ursa Major) who, had they known that Ti-ama-te (the Solar System) was dominated by their eternal rivals, would have come on the instant.

And so she had labored long and hard to maintain light on this planet. But now that the Kadištu had gone, she had no more spirit for it.

It was here that Sa'am told his mother that the Kadištu had actually turned over the vigil over the planet to them, Sa'am, his mother and sisters, and the others with them.

This was news, and she was moved by it. She said that it is very rare that the Kadištu ever make any suggestions to anyone. In this case, she said, Sa'am should disregard her earlier proposals. She opened wide her protective arms...

My son, I will support you unto the death, if that should come.

Exchanging New Names: Zehuti and Petah

In the solemn moments following Hudili's moving speech, Sa'am/Enki without any reflection was moved to give to his premier Nungal the title/name Zehuti (= Egyptian Djehuti/Thoth). Please see the Decoder for decomposition of the Sumerian syllables in this word.

Thoth is frequently represented in the form of a being with the head of an ibis. One should know that the ibis is often reported to be the bird that symbolizes the dead who voyages in the other world before attaining the light. Thus, Thoth is justly he who "brings to the deceased the breath of life".

[His role is] similar to that of Seth's for the solar god, but contrary to Seth, Thoth defends the sun god not with a sword, but with magical formulas, because he is a great magician. We also note that Thoth personifies knowledge, science, and writing. He is generally considered as "the bird emerged from Ptah"...

Zehuti quickly returned the gesture, announcing to the entire gathering that henceforth he would name Sa'am-Enki Petah (Ptah).

Some correspondences between the Egyptian god Ptah and Sa'am-Enki:

Hymn from Iunyt (Esna in Upper Egypt) : "Ptah-Tatenem first put the gods into the world".	Placed the Nungal into the world
"Beauty of visage"	"The well-fashioned (beautiful) lord"
God of the terrestrial depths	Ruler of the abysses Kingdom is the Abzu from which comes the Egyptian term Abdju.
Caused minerals to grow in the depths of the earth. Occupied with the forge and gold. The divine smith (metalworker).	Occupied with the gold mines for the Gina'abul.
Protector of artisans Mason of the world	The Master Mason

Etc.

More evidence will be provided as we proceed, supporting the concept that Sa'am-Enki corresponds well to the Egyptian divinity Ptah.

Fallen Angels

A fracas in the streets of Šàlim and a call for "Enki, Enki!" awakened Sa'am-Enki from his rest and brought him quickly to where Ama'argi, Nungal and Anunna were gathered, very excited, while flying vessels of the Kingú passed overhead. Zehuti came to meet Enki and quickly explained: a contingent of Kingú was requesting asylum in the Abzu! Enki's decision was required on the spot.

Only one choice was possible, though this was not without its risks. The Kingú were forbidden to remain in the Abzu, but they could take refuge in the numerous grottos and natural tunnels hidden within the earth's crust. (Do we know about these today?) The royal Gigirlah stayed on until the Ama'argi finally trained their guns on them.

That is how a certain number of Kingú came to take refuge under the mountains of Uraš.

This is one of many paintings depicting the theme, always with the same elements: angels rebelling against God and falling to Earth. In the usual theocratic interpretation, these angels-gone-wrong (after all, they opposed "God", they mated with God's human creatures, etc.) are being punished for their sins.

But many events could account for this racial memory. Here, Parks suggests the banishing of some of the Kingú to homes under the surface of the Earth after being defeated by An, Enlíl, and the Anunna, though none of these players could be called angels by any stretch.

And - how ironic - An, Enlíl, and the Anunna themselves, the would-be Gods, were chained to the Earth by the Life Designers after destroying the Queen, Tiamata.

Parks also cites the interaction between the "angels" of god of the Earth (the Anunna, "angels of Yahvé") and the Nungal (sons of the Elohim).

Aria

The incident of the Kingús' requested asylum clarified and brought immediacy to the situation. Sa'am and his people could not remain in isolation while his Kuku were consolidating their hold on the planet. At the particular moment, roles were still fluid, and now was the time to attempt to optimize them. The first step was to mark their territory and to signal their presence.

Zehuti was ordered to take command of 100 Gigirlah and to begin patrolling the planet's exterior, keeping in constant communication. Mam, Sé'et, and Sa'am posted themselves on Aria (Antarctica), the sparsely-populated boreal (southern in our times) continent on which the Ama'argi had established several scientific stations.

Aria was a verdant country upon which the north (south) wind played agreeably, sometimes melodiously with the airs around the declivity leading toward the Abzu.

Aria (Antarctica)

The name of this frozen continent of today has surprisingly rich ancient associations. Rich and varied, yet Parks' information unifies them handily, once it is understood.

The Sumerian form, A-RI-A: "desert country, region".

Connotation in Latin vocabularies is "melody".

Sanskrit: colonies established in India, also designating "nobles" or "masters".

Egyptian Book of the Dead: Ariâa, meaning "guardian" and above all "gatekeeper of the opening to Amentet (or Amenti)", which is to say of the "other world", the abode of the righteous" in the Egyptian funerary texts.

The Egyptians of the more recent dynasties regrettably confound this "other world" (indicating the terrestrial Duat) with A'amenpteh (Atlantis).

Sa'am's party landed in a region "filled with natural folds" -- mountain ranges! He had never seen such as these up to this time. The elevations were snow-covered. No Ukubi had ever been implanted there.

The peaceful plains basked in a temperate climate. But this was far from the temperatures of Margíd'da (Ursa Major) or of Mulmul (the Pleiades). Sé'et shivered a bit.

Briefing (2)

Mam said to us suddenly, "The time has come!"

She brought out a small yellow crystal from a case on her waistband and twirled it above her head. In just the time it took to turn her head several times to scrutinize the surrounding area, two Namlú'u appeared suddenly in our dimension. They seemed to me even larger than those whom we had been accustomed to meet. Their stature impressed me terribly.

Neither Sé'et nor I had known that it was possible to summon Namlú'u with the aid of a mineral like that.

"These are Namlú'u from very high levels. I am the only one to possess this crystal; no one must know of the existence of this stone! Dim'mege is its guardian when I am absent from this planet," whispered our progenitor.

Nammu then addressed them with these words:

Welcome to you, and we thank you for honoring us by your presence.

Mam raised her hand. The two beings tall as mountain responded in the same fashion. One of them suddenly changed his physiognomy. It was only at that moment that I understood that the Namlú'u are polymorphs. My stupefaction was even greater when the being addressed us in our language.

The creatures of the world of duality are good companions when they detach themselves momentarily from the ego to meet us. It is always a joy to meet with you, Šubatám.

SUBA₂-TAM (brilliant reflection) was the name that the Namlú'u gave to Mamítu-Nammu. The Sumerian decomposition of this epithet can equally be translated as "brilliant precious stone". As so often happens, the Sumerian offers another translation thanks to a game of words. The surname can equally be transposed to ŠUBA-TÁM, "the brilliant guardian", which conforms to Nammu's role as the great life designer of Uraš.

Times are difficult for the allies of the Source. Specimens of limited flowering, belonging to our own family, arrive on Uraš. You do not know them yet. They are different from the Kingú. They have hunted your creators and are actually in conflict with the Kingú. They disturb the fragile peace that dwells in Ti-ama-te (the solar system) and wish to transform this part of our universe.

Yes, we have seen these beings. Our founders have also spoken of them and of their relations with the Kingú. They call them the Gílimanna (Celestial Bestiary) [see Decoder]. The last Kadištu with whom we have been in contact actually are the Urmah. What can we do at this time to please you?

We have thought that it would be judicious to introduce you to these Gina'abul in order to inform them of the genius of the emissaries of the Source. Your presence thus revealed cannot but contain their malevolent projects.

Heaven is immense. Its stars are infinite; some are born today while others die at the same instant. The ocean is great and its pearls innumerable, but some seem more pleasing to view than others. Uraš is vast and its different forms of life are considerable, but are all subject to the rhythm of the KIGAL which arises from life, death, and rebirth. If a primitive form of life issued from the Source wishes to install itself on Uraš, we cannot stand in its way.

The KIGAL of Uraš is a place where changes regularly occur. It is a world of change and duality.

This world will go to its ruin if the plans of the Gina'abul are not restricted. You yourselves are in danger!

We are not ignorant of that, Šubatám (brilliant reflection).

Our first role was to guard the KI of Uraš for the emissaries of the Source. We have done that for many Limamu (millennia). At present, a master of the KI has been designated by you, yourself. We rejoice to see that he appears to be your son.

Nothing happens by chance, Šubatám. Our founders have truly not been repulsed from Ti-ama-te (the solar system), but have retired temporarily to allow duality to have its way in this world where the evolutionary process of the soul largely predominates. However, the founders never cease to watch!

We defer to your judgment and that of your son Enki. If you think that it would be wise to introduce us to your brothers, then we will agree to it.

Prophetess

He is there, he arrives, the murderer of our sovereign. His project is horrifying! The furious winds blow with him. She falls as a flowing star in the night, she, the faithful ambassador of the Source who dreamed of a permanent truce for all the Gina'abul. In the shadow of the patriarch sidles the carnivore, the seducer of the Nations. The Sipad (herder) of the flock whose march is teetering. His designs are sinister. The multitude honors him blindly with a single voice. He drinks from their sorrows and his work on the earth... and she falls, the Ama (mother), she plunges into the deep ocean. No one can do anything.... The wave, the breaking wave...

Align with Us or Die

Who owns the Earth? Who owns the Solar System?

Many would say "Whoever has the power to claim it."

The religious person would add "Only God has that power."

In Anton Parks' reports -- his books -- there are races who, by their orientation, by their training, and by their genetics, are closer to "The Source" than the others. And while they do include fierce warrior races among them, (e.g., the Urmah), these races generally do not claim and hold territory. That is not their way.

To the great consternation of Tiamata, Mamitu-Nammu, Dim'mege, and others who had established the great life-creating experimental station that was Ti-ama-te. They could not understand why numbers of Kingú were permitted to remain and flourish here; these haughty royal Gina'abul were slaughtering and eating the precious Ukubi and other creatures that were being developed.

The final straw for these Amašutum had been the discovery that An and the other Ušumgal lords were developing a powerful new army of Anunna and Mušgir. Against the advice of the higher Kadištu councils, these Amašutum formed an alliance with the Kingú and determined to drive the new threat out of this part of the galaxy.

And they had very nearly achieved their clean sweep, but there was a problem: Enlíl, Enki's misguided creation, had managed to corner Tiamata and chase her all the way to Ti-ama-te with the Ušumgal and an unknown number of their warriors joining the chase; Sa'am-Enki and some 300 Nungal had followed, hoping to rescue their queen.

And then the gates closed. Whoever was here, was here. Nobody could leave and no one else was entering. [What gates, you ask? The Diranna. See Stargates. These are apparently easily defended from within, and control over them has never been achieved by any party quarantined in this solar system. Indeed, that is the quarantine.]

Shortly after that, as we saw above, Tiamata was killed, her mothership was destroyed, and then Sa'am received the telepathic message from his father, An: Victory was total, and Sa'am was to join them immediately.

This was the setup for an epoch-making meeting that took place in the very important African savannah: "Sínsal", the reserve for the development of "bipedals", and known to us today as the place where the remains of the earliest proto-humans are found.

As we will see, everything about this meeting could be seen as a jockeying for power or power arrangements. In that sense, it set the theme for all future human activity down to our own time -- although humans such as we know them had not yet been created -- and we would hazard to say, nonhuman intelligence (ETs, gods, God, or whatever you wish to call them) in this sphere also.

Dim'mege and Mamu were planning to assert their territorial control, even to the point of challenging the very presence of the Ušumgal, and they were expecting the Namlú'u to appear and back up her claim. They had expected to see a straggling remnant of the Anunna army. But they were in for some unpleasant shocks. The first was the sight of the tip of Africa, inundated by the tidal wave that had been created by the plunge of Tiamata's mothership.

The second, upon reaching Sínsal, was the view of the victorious armada, hundreds of thousands of warriors lined in military precision. Facing them, Sa'am's party consisted of himself, Mam, Sé'et, Zehuti and Dim'mege, flanked by a hundred Nungal, some Anunna who had arrived on Uraš with them, and 400 Ama'argi. No match.

But it was the Kuku (ancestors) who were stunned, and the cause of it was the sight of the Nungal. With their light skin they were taken for Kingú Babbar and the cry went out to kill them on the spot.

But Mam took the verbal offensive, declared the presence of the invaders to be an outrage, and refused to have to justify in this meeting place the species who belonged to Mam's group.

At this point, the Kuku emerged from the mass, followed by Ninmah and Enlíl. Sa'am immediately noticed that Enlíl had not molted, as had his Nungal. This business of who molts and who doesn't seems to be key among all these races and genetic operations. At any rate, Sa'am with his knowledge of cloning almost lost himself in contemplation of the implications of this curious discovery.

Anšár (creator of An) brought the focus back to matters at hand by reminding Mam that her mistress and creator, Tiamata, was defunct and could no longer give her cover, and that Mam was henceforth under the Kukus' "divine injunction".

Sa'am took a moment to scrutinize the spirit of one of the Anunna standing near the Ušumgal. He wanted to learn how he was seen in their eyes. What he saw was confusion in their hearts. Sa'am was the son of An, with the power to command them, but also a coward who preferred to take refuge in Mam's petticoats rather than join them in combat...

Enlíl then signaled his soldiers. With a great din, first one and then three more cadavers were projected into the air, landing heavily at the feet of Sa'am and the others. They were a green Kingú, a Kingú Babbar, an Amašutum, and an Urmah warrior.

Again, Sa'am the geneticist studied the face and body of the Urmah, never having seen one before. The skin was golden as the sun, his hair of an ochre tone...

"That is what we do to our adversaries," broke in Anšár. "This is but a pale reflection of the torrent of blood that has been spilled on account of Tiamata and her allies. It is Enlíl, our champion, who led us to victory. It is to him that comes the right to administer this territory. You are in our grip. Align with our side or you will all die.!"

The little pageant continued with Ninmah stepping forward to announce that her lover, Enlíl, has been proclaimed Master of the Mardukù (the Laws) by the combined Ušumgal Council.

Please review Laws. Without an understanding of these Laws -- who wrote them, what they were intended for, and how they were subverted -- many other understandings will escape the reader as we move through these books. Don't forget to think about the role of laws in religions, highly pertinent. Also, keep your eye on this very interesting character, Ninmah. A Kadištu. Or was she? Sometimes she herself would have liked to know. But that's life on Uraš for you! It helps you find out who you really are.

Another note: While the Ušumgal Council appeared early in the Chronicles narrative, it seems to take on great prominence from this point forward in the history. Clearly, some key event concerning this council has transpired.

Ninmah continues...

"The Anunna High Dignitaries have also voted. To [Enlíl] alone accrues the right henceforth to administer the Anunna of Dukù. Therefore we have accorded him the title of MARDUK.

"We wish to have no further effusions of blood. Your destiny is in your hands."

A momentous detail that the Assyrian specialists have never understood: Marduk is not a proper name, but a title given to him who possessed the full powers, that is to say, who was the Master of the Mardukù. [See linked references above.]

In the Mesopotamian mythology Marduk is the son of Enki, we know that to be true, except that Marduk is no other than Enlíl at this precise point in history. [The specialists do not understand that Enlíl is Enki's son. In fact, they seem to be unaware of the entire cloning enterprise (and how this clouds the meaning of family or parental relations) that was so all-important.] We will see at the end of this work [AG] and throughout the third book that Enki had another son who also carried the title of Marduk. This explains why the tablets make at one point a clear distinction between Marduk and Enlíl while still amalgamating them in certain versions.

A moment of discussion between Dim'mege and Mam, and then Dim'mege stepped forward to pronounce, as sovereign of the Amašutum of Uraš, that she would not oppose the coming of the Gina'abul, but the first-ranking of Uraš would have to be consulted.

And who would they be, joked An. If there were any beings more evolved than these ridiculous Ukubi (apes), let them show themselves now or forever quail before our presence!

Well, that was a moment. Dim'mege signaled with Nammu's yellow crystal and some fifty Namlú'u popped into the KI, right in the middle of the Anunna formation, quietly and effortlessly bumping the soldiers aside.

A moment of cold panic seized the Anunna in their columns, who then moved to distance themselves from these beings, tall as mountains.

Zehuti then moved to join with the Namlú'u, and from that position, addressed Enlíl:

As the premier Nungal, and full member of the Kadištu, I allow myself to assign to you the holy presence of those responsible for this place. They are surprising beings who conjugate all the qualities of emissaries of the Source. You who wish to pass yourself as the Šàtam [territorial administrator] of Uraš, you must accept the Namlú'u, in the name of the Source of whom we are all issue and in the name of your creator Sa'am-Enki, master of this place!

Here, Zehuti prostrated himself before the Namlú'u; Sa'am and his group did the same. But the Anunna remained stunned by all that was taking place. The Ušumgal, with nothing to say, said nothing. An had become feverish. Enlíl watched him from the corner of his eye. And then, with a nervous snigger:

"Never! Never will I kneel before these creatures who are no parents of mine!"

"Not even before your creator Sa'am-Nudimmud-Enki to whom you owe your life as do all your Nungal brothers present here?" asked Zehuti.

"I have no common origin with you and your Nungal brothers," responded Enlíl. "Am I modified like all of you? Have I the white skin like that of the Kingú-Babbar traitors? I recognize but one authority, that of my fathers with whom I went to battle in the heaven. He who you call Enki is for me Nudímmud. As a son of An, he is just a brother to me, but not my parent!"

Yet another important element that seems to have escaped the experts on Mesopotamian tablets: the bloody disputes between Enlíl and Enki are not over fraternal order, but over ascendancy (lineage). In fact, there exists an ancient Sumerian tradition in which Enlíl definitely descended from Enki and his spouse, the goddess of the Earth Damkina. The specialists, troubled by such documentation, have preferred to put it into their heads that it must not be the same Enki (even if it was the same spouse Damkina as in the other texts), and have thus transformed this Enki into an obscure god of the Earth of whom no one knows anything...

This confusion is explained by the fact that Enlíl, from his arrival on the Earth, profited from his notoriety by creating a deviation between his creator and himself. This devious maneuver permitted him to record himself as brother (at times even elder brother) of Enki and not as his son. Only the Ušumgal, the Nungal and the ancient Anunna knew the truth. Time has taken care of the rest.

Other documents of clay reveal however this hidden filiation, as for example the tablet K 5157 (bilingual text, part of the Babylonian Liturgies -- Paris, 1913) where it is stated: "[Enlíl], whom the father who has engendered you, Enki, (and) Ninki, send you a prayer in my favor."

Ninki ("priestess of the Earth") is a name given to Nammu, but also to her daughter Sé'et.

An interceded here, offering a kind of reconciliation, showing a "magnanimous" side. He thanked "Nudímmud" for having integrated the diverse heretofore-unknown species of this place. He said that the information that Sa'am and Nammu had compiled would be of great support to their project. And while Nammu had not been able to eliminate the influence of the Kingú over Uraš, at least Sa'am had been able to resist them, to the point where none were in evidence at the moment.

For all this, he rendered thanks to Sa'am and agreed the name ENKI was sound and well-deserved. The Master of the KI will be their teacher and will guarantee the development of the colony.

Furthermore, Sa'am had already worked for the survival of the Anunna in the first battle on the Dukù.

For all this, Enki will be given the full rights to manage his domains, and of course he has the rights to all of the Abzus of Ti-ama-te (the Solar System). Enlíl will be the Šàtam (Administrator) in chief of all the Anunna developments. Enlíl and Enki will work together for the survival of the colony...

The Jewish literature and the texts of the Koran explain that Satan cohabited with the "angels" because he was a part of the same celestial family and he was himself in the service of God (=An). The Mesopotamian mythology indicates itself that, upon the arrival of the Anunna on the blue planet, the Earth was given to Enlíl and the Abzu to Enki... But the texts do not indicate that Enki and the priestesses who surrounded him were adroitly deprived of their rights and of their legitimate oversight of Uraš.

...Ninmah will remain in the Uraš colony with her lover.

The Ušumgal will purify Ti-ama-te of their enemies. Once that is achieved, some of them will return to Udu'idimsa (Mars) with the High Council and "one other" will rejoin the colony of Enlíl on Uraš.

Here Enki was momentarily nonplussed, and Sé'et took the opportunity to step forward and speak her mind. She might have done better to hold back, because this resulted in An's proposal to exile her to Mulge for her troubles. Interesting and most significant point: An put this to a vote of the seven members of the Council, of which Enki was counted as one (due to his having inherited the position from the father of them all, Abzu-Abba, whom he had killed in the first days of his life).

His vote made no difference; in fact they knew he would vote against so they never even asked him. It seems that majority rules in this Council institution.

As the Anunna soldiers were taking Sé'et away, Mamítu and Enki protested, which resulted in a peremptory decision by Anšár to send her to Udu'idimsa (Mars), where he felt she would be more useful anyway (there being too many Kadištu on Mulge). Or did he have other intentions for her? It was noted that he gave her an odd look.

Further negotiations ensued, with Dim'mege and her Ama'argi being granted the rights to her territories but in return for services that would be required of them.

Briefing (3)

The reader may have noticed that scattered throughout these pages are occasional passages designated "Briefing". These contain information from Kadištu sources, as Parks recalls them, and they invariably have value that passes beyond the activities of the moment but can help us today in our understanding of the pageant in which we find ourselves. Designating them as "Briefings" is intended to assist the reader in locating them using the menus or the search engine.

One of these occurs at this point in the narrative. At the end of the Sinsal meeting, An is reminded of the Namlú'u who had been silently standing in their midst. In fact, his soldiers were becoming disturbed by this. An looked up at them, became rather uncomfortable with their presence, and made a dissembling attempt to approach them. We will pass by that, except to say that it clearly angered the Namlú'u, one of whom replied thusly:

We are not party to your dealings. Your words are the sickness of your affliction. You seem to lose yourselves in a perpetual disequilibrium of expression of the Source. This brings to you an erroneous vision of the world that surrounds you and distances you from inner peace.

May the emissaries of the Source who work in the heart of your group lead you toward true wisdom.

Do not deceive yourselves as to your adversaries! Contraries are always attracted; this is not a fatal thing. Take the time to hear what they have to say to you. Some have a positive influence and others are diverting. Watch them acting and perhaps even enduring to guide your line toward reason.

The effort must come from you. No one will do it for you.

The time has come for us to withdraw progressively from this density, which is in great peril.

At this point, Mamu overstepped. She attempted to command the Namlú'u to remain:
YOU HAVE NOT BEEN PROGRAMMED FOR THAT!

In doing this, she showed that she too had failed to grasp some basic matters. The Namlú'u then were required to give her a gentle dressing-down, in front of her enemies:

Emotion gets the better of you, Šubatám (brilliant guardian). We have not been programmed at all, contrary to your own creations. You seem sometimes to forget it, but this is justified by the fact that the females of the Gílimanna (Celestial Bestiary) did not participate in our conception.

We are but simple conduits linked to the Source. We have no particular obligation other than to propagate the light.

Our creators left this density in order to allow you to experiment with your ideologies. This quest that guides your hearts has been in progress for many Limamu (millennia). The coming of all these soldiers represents the final phase of the work of the Gílimanna (Celestial Bestiary) on Ti-ama-te (the solar system). This phase will take whatever time is required for total realization, but it will lead the Gílimanna to an impass if it persists on this path.

For us to remain near the Gílimanna while it develops the most painful phase of its project of demolition, would lead to suicide for all of us.

Šubatám (brilliant guardian), guard your energy to aid your own. You have no need of our services to complete the work of your life. We leave you now and may reason win you over and never be at risk of losing you in eternal torments...

I heard "Good riddance!" from the group of my Kuku (ancestors). The Namlú'u disappeared from our reality, scattering several Anunna.

Was it a farewell or simply a "till we meet again"?

Aftermath

This "briefing" went down hard on everyone present on the Sínsal that day. The Anunna soldiers, for example were left in anguish. Thinking themselves to be the most highly-evolved form of life and now able to relax in their new idyllic world, they had been quite disillusioned by the vision of the Namlú'u and the things they had said. They went back to their Gigirlah and took to the skies. An, for his part, was totally confused.

Sa'am's Kuku, Ninmah, and Enlíl were furious. Sa'am and his people went to their various vessels. Zehuti had started to board with Nammu and Sa'am, but Nammu gestured him away, to go find some other vehicle.

Sa'am was disconsolate, head in his hands, but Mam pulled his hands away and gave him some slaps. She was highly disappointed with him, whom she had thought to be a Kirišti (Kadištu emissary, working in the universe for the Source), because he had not acted to save his sister. She went on to list all the things that Sé'et had been doing for him, and it was an impressive list.

But she did not seem to know or acknowledge how much Sa'am truly loved his sister, and how much he was grieving. This was cruel.

This seemingly minor matter -- how much Sa'am loved his sister -- is actually of an importance that cannot be overstated; it leads directly to the key theme of the following book, The Awakening of the Phoenix! In fact, there could hardly be any matter more important to us today, because its deliberate misappropriation has become a core component of the very thinking and personal orientations of many of us.

How can that be, and what is that theme? It is the idea that Sé'et/Aset/Isis and Sa'am/Asar/Osiris were sister souls or celestial sister/brother. Their long train of incarnations is traced, as is the means for conducting the inseminations and the soul pathways that make it

A tasty extract from the gnostic Nag-Hammadi text, "The Origins of the World", Codex NH2-5 ; 20:

"When he (the first father) learned for certain that there existed before him a luminous immortal Man, he was profoundly troubled, because he had declared to all the gods and to their angels: 'I am God. No other exists beside me.'

"And he was frightened by that which perhaps they, from that point on, knew: that one other than he had existed before him and could condemn him! But he, insensed as he was, ignored this condemnation and took it lightly. He said, "If someone was before me, let him appear, that one may see his light. And no sooner had he said that, than a light shone forth from the Ogdoad who is in the heights and crossed the seven Heavens and the Earth. When the first father saw how beautiful and clear was this light, he was stunned and became confused. When the light had appeared, a marvelous human figure was shown in it..."

Extract from the Babylonian poem Atrahasis, lines 1 to 26:

"When the gods had the task of man, endured the duty and carried the burden, the burden of the gods was large, the work was hard, the distress was immense.

"The great Anunnaki imposed on the Igigi (Nungal in Sumerian) a sevenfold burden...

"As they agreed, the great gods drew lots: Anu returned to the Heavens, Enlil took the Earth for his fiefdom, and Enki, the prince, received the inland seas.

"When Anu returned to the heaven, the gods of the Apsu (Abzu) descended; the celestial Anunnaki imposed the burden on the Igigi.

"These gods dug the watercourses to open the canals... In that manner they carved out the Tigris and then the Euphrates rivers."

possible to proceed.

And Parks shows what has been made of this, and by whom, for the purpose of controlling humans.

A preview/introduction, translated from Anton Parks own page, is being constructed on our page Heru.

Destiny of the Nungal

A follow-up meeting took place that same evening. Important matters needed to be discussed.

For example, the dispensation of the code of laws, the Mardukù. Decree 40 designated Sa'am as the sole possessor of the rights to put the Mardukù into practice. But the Kuku wished to name Enlil as the Master and Administrator of the Mardukù, with Sa'am being constrained to the more limited role of Chief Executive (whatever that may be). Would Sa'am be of good will and cooperative?

They raised another issue.

While An and his warriors had soundly defeated the Kingú and were consolidating a position in this solar system, clearly this was but a local victory; the gateways out of the solar system had been closed. Whatever they were going to have in the way of a base was going to have to be constructed here from locally-available resources.

An and his creator Anšár were envisioning a colony that at the very least could provide their people with food and other survival needs, and which sheltered sufficient stargates to allow travel and communications around the solar system. For this, Sa'am-Enki thought of the vast Edin plain in the middle of which he had established his little Nunkiga (Eridu) agricultural station. This was in an area north of present-day Iraq, near the Taurus mountains. Here there was a concentration of more than twenty Diranna (stargates).

And so Sa'am-Enki suggested this site. An, Enlil, and the others were enchanted with the proposition, and they all went to inspect the place the next day.

There they found some Nungal working in plantations where Sé'et had been developing medicinal plants. Enlil found this quite disagreeable, it being more of a pastoral place than a potential command post. But they also saw a practical drawback: the area was quite arid and waterways would need to be constructed. Lacking any equipment for achieving this, the prospect was for rivers and streams to actually be carved out by hand labor. But who would do it?

An would not consider using his victorious Gina'abul warriors for such a menial task. Sa'am-Enki suggested Kingú prisoners of war, but An drily replied that he was not in the habit of taking any prisoners of war. Amasutum were actually proposed.

In the end, it came down to Enki's faithful Nungal, who were made to report to work without even the use of hand tools that had been offered to them for their use by the Ama'argi. The justification for using them was that they contained some Kingú genetics.

This development actually physically sickened Enki for quite some time...

Eventually, Dim'mege alerted Mam to Sa'am's condition. Partly to shock him back into action, and partly because it simply was needed, Mam paid a visit to Sa'am, informing him that she had arranged an Assembly of the Ušumgal High Council to meet there, in Sa'am's own Abzu, the next day, to finalize the division of tasks and lands before An returned to Salbatánu (Mars). Mam and Sa'am would preside over this Assembly.

"...Raise yourself, show to your progenitor, to Enlil, to the ensemble of Nindigir (priestesses) of Uraš that you are worthy of their confidence! You have been associated to the Source by my intermediary. I chose you even before we were informed of your hidden filiation. You are blessed by the Kadištu (Life Designers). Have they not revealed to you your mission? Before looking after others, take care of yourself quickly my son. Do not disappoint me, Son of the Water!"

Sa'am was divided over this new prospect. He was, after all, partly the creation of An. He was part Gina'abul and he shared their pride. Was he ready for this new commandment from his mother? What did the Gina'abul have to say to him? These were the questions with which Sa'am faced the Assembly next day.

We will not have the space here to reflect the rich description of the proceedings that you will find in Parks' book. We do want to cover the key events of this epic meeting between Mam, Dim'mege, Sa'am, the Ušumgal de Margid'da (Ursa Major) and their fifty Anunna dignitaries.

The physical arrangement was in the time-immemorial manner of the Amašutum: a throne composed of two seats (occupied by Nammu and Sa'am) presided over several rows of benches.

Dim'mege was placed near An, in the first row. A piece of gilded silk, richly brocaded, covered her nose and her mouth... doubtless a sign of dissatisfaction toward the High Council. She appeared to have lost some weight.

First on the agenda, raised by Sa'am, was the fate of his poor Nungal, 300 individuals struggling with the gigantic physical task of constructing the colony's waterways with practically their bare hands. He wanted to know why they could not use Kingú prisoners for this.

Lahmu, the son of Abzu-Abba, got right down to it:

"If you had not created Alagni (clones) from impure blood, you would not be in this position, young imbecile! The Nungal have the fate they merit. They are bastards whom no one in this assembly had wished to see born, including Tiamata, your "genetrix" (progenitor), and yourself!"

"What audacity!" cried Sa'am.

"Are you then so old that memory plays games with you these days? It is Anšár himself who had solicited our queen for the creation of the life designers, with the sole aim of cloning soldiers who would be under your control, that is to say the control of the Ušumgal de Margid'da (Ursa Major). The Nungal were assembled partly from sequences composed by your own creator, Abzu-Abba. I then took the responsibility to reprogram certain genes during the final sessions. As you know, we were pressed for time and the cloning sessions were realized rapidly. Specifically, Nammu was opposed to the reutilization of an unknown material."

An and Ninmah crossed regards...

Ninmah rose calmly and appeased the assembly with a tranquil voice:

Lahmu truly needs someone to revive his memory! Let certain members of the Assembly be definitely advised of the following facts:

Sa'am-Enki is not responsible for the physical state of the Nungal! As he has just declared, he has merely utilised an existing material. He cannot be entirely blamed for his error, because his act was foreseeable! May the truth be known here and may our children work together for the survival of our colony.

I have always had access to the genetic patrimony of our race. With the accord of the majority of the Ušumgal, I have secretly been charged by An with modifying the gifts of certain cells...

We suspected that Sa'am was going to have to create Alagni (clones) in his haste. Also he fell into the trap that had been set for him by his Kuku. The Nungal would not have been able to survive in the plan of the Ušumgal, so it was simpler that they be made in the image of our sworn enemies, the Kingú-Babbar! Believe me, Enki, the Nungal would not be living today if events had unfolded the way you think. Their presence at our side is finally a blessing.

We provided here a taste of the contentions that characterized these momentous proceedings. But again with the limitations of this presentation, we can do little more than to state that the following conclusions were reached:

- In spite of Sa'am's fervent wish otherwise, the Nungal would be required to complete their labor and assist in the establishment of the colony. Those who survived would have their lives saved.
- The established presence of the Kingú in this system from the night of time would be respected.
- Sé-et would remain a prisoner.
- Zehuti (Thot) would be granted freedom with Enlil's blessing.
- The Ušumgal had maneuvered into a position of control over the Mardukù texts, with Enlil henceforth the colony's Šàtam (Administrator) in Chief.

In formalizing that last point, Ninmah performed, with the unanimous accord of the Assembly's permanent members, the ritual of the transmission of the Divine Laws on her lover, depositing on his shoulders the pectoral of brilliant crystals, Gina'abul symbol of supreme authority. These were the ME that contained the precepts of the line of Anduruna (Gina'abul star system in the Great Bear constellation). In these crystals was figured, among an enormous mass of information, an integral copy of the Mardukù with all the rules that composed it. This act was heavy in meaning, as it placed Enlil "above" the laws...

The contentious proceedings were by no means completed with that. There remained the hard choices that would determine the character of the new colony that, as we show a little further down this page, was being established at Kharsag, in the Taurus Mountains southwest of Lake Van in present-day Turkey.

We have provided numerous illustrations of this area. Readers would do well to click here, opening a second explorer window onto the series of illustrations, and lending reality to the points of the debate or rather the struggle taking place at this point in the great assembly.

It is quite striking that the factors driving the establishment of this place that became so iconic in the memory of the as-yet unborn human race -- after all, Eden -- seem so understandable and reasonable to us now, when we are able to learn of them.

Thus Ninmah had been thinking of a base, actually to be the principal residence of the colony, in the mountains of the South, to which she had given the name Dukug. It would support the development of the river system being carved by the Nungal in the vast Edin (the plain). This would be a forest city where would dwell the fifty Anunna dignitaries forming the Ušumgal High Council.

DU₆-KUG

- "the brilliant hillock/mound" or "the sacred mound", not unrelated to the place of the creation of the Anunna, the Dukù (the holy mound) situated in Mulmul (the Pleiades) and ultimately conveying the same sense. It is of course a play of words.

The Assembly was hardly of one mind over this idea. An, for example, was opposed; he couldn't understand the benefit of putting so much effort into the construction of what would be a temporary city. But Enlil believed it would endure a good length of time... the time required for the Nungal to accomplish their task.

Anšár supported An, proposing to simply install the colony where they were, in the Abzu, without bothering to consult Sa'am who had been given authority over that realm. But that was out of the question for Enlil anyway, who needed to have the colony be near the Edin where he could keep an eye over the progress of the Nungal.

Sa'am remarked to Enlil that if the rapid advancement of the work were his wish, he ought to allow the Nungal the use of the drilling machines (Albarzil), of which the Ama'argi possessed several. These large devices had been used to carve the deep tunnels that traversed numerous regions of the globe.

Enlil was torn between seeing the Nungal undergo punishing labor on the one hand, and being the supervisor of a well-executed project on the other.

(Enlil seemed to have it in for the Nungal... not for anything they ever did, as far as we can tell, but simply for who they were. In other words, for their genetics. In other words, for reasons of racism, that existed before there were any humans on the planet to practice it. It was well-known among those who were to become the gods of Uraš. Would you say that it is still, to this day?)

Ninmah's main concern was to gain the Council's approval of her project. If the work on the plain advanced too rapidly, her program in the mountain risked becoming unable to retain interest. Enlil understood this. He negotiated Sa'am's presence on the Dukug near the colony, at least for the time it would take to construct the city, because he wished to make Sa'am the project manager for the region. With this as condition, and assuming the project be approved by vote, he authorised the sending of one Albarzil to Edin, to where the Nungal were working.

KHAR-SAG or HAR-SAG/GHARSAGN

Sumerian Word Plays: the encircled summit, principal enclosure or haystack. Related to Sumerian HUR-SAG, name of mountain. Cited forms possess the same archaic cuneiform sign, proving their common origin and sense.
This explains definitively why Ninmah was named

According to recent studies, cedar forests existed long ago in the Zagros Mountains and doubtless in the Taurus. The Sumerians carried out a massive destruction of these vast forests to obtain construction materials and charcoal to make their bricks and their domestic fires. This resulted in the progressive disappearance of the cedar forests in the mountains around the first millennium A.D.

Ninmah had developed the design of the city, which she named Kharsag. It was to be disposed in terraces and comprised of a great garden where grew an abundance of trees. It would be composed of orchards and plantations for the benefit of the entire colony. The buildings were to be constructed from cedar, which was available in the mountains.

Kharsag would be encircled by a palissade that would protect the city from eventual predators, or even the Ugubi (apes) or the Ukubi (genre Homo) who wore clothing of skins and carried weapons of wood and who loved to perch in the heights to view from a distance their game.

Ninmah presented her plan to An, who seemed to be opposed to it. But Enlil lent his support, and with his gift for language, detailed the need to build large buildings and a great reservoir to support the plantations and the community. Equally needed would be roads and irrigation canals.

Enlil then turned to Mamítu, hoping for her support of the project by way of furnishing them the secret of plantations by means of which several crops can be produced in a single season. But Mamítu expressed disinterest in the whole thing, as long as her daughter remained a prisoner.

My place is not with you in the mountains. It is not negotiable and neither is the presence of my son at your sides!

Anšár stood up like a picket post and responded with force:

Then be condemned officially Mamítu-Nammu by the High Council! That she be branded anathema and be excluded from our assemblies beginning with this day!

Anšár raised his right hand; the entire ensemble of the High Council stood without making any request and voted on this decision. Ninmah and I were the only ones not to ratify the condemnation. Not being part of the High Council, Dim-mege did not have voting rights.

Ninmah stared fixedly at my genetrix. Doubtless she found this sentence too unjust...

Enlil, totally euphoric, profited from this moment of exultation to put the coup de grâce. He probably had not noticed that his companion did not support him this time:

I ask of the Assembly that the name of Sagba (anathema) be attributed to Mamítu-Nammu. That she carry henceforward the malediction conferred by the High Council!

More than half the voters ratified this wish and my mother left her seat. She could not resist lancing at Enlil the following:

I remember you when you were but a vulgar fugitive on Nalulkára. My descendant, who is your creator, has just come to me to ask what he should do with you... I regret that his heart finally took over from his reason. In spite of the prowess of your creator, mixed-bloods are decidedly not Alagni (clones) of the highest order and you are an example of exactly that. I predict for you a deadly destiny, my son, you will finish alone and tormented forever, I promise you!

Ninmah rose and declared the following:

May the Assembly be indulgent. Nammu's anger is noted, but her words overstep her thoughts. Enlil is a marvelous creation, so here be praised Enki-Nudimmud (Enki the Cloner) for his prodigy!

The congregation chanted in a single voice: "Nudimmud!"

As if by "accident", the Sumerian term SAG-BA (anathema, malediction, vow) possesses as its Akkadian equivalent the name Mâmîtu of which the sense is strictly the same. Now you know why... Mâmîtu or Mamit is a term that often designates the violation of a vow. It will also be utilized by the Akkadians to designate the female demon who personifies this malediction...

Mam left the room, demanding that the Assembly leave the Abzu after the session. Without hesitation, Dim-mege came toward me and took a place at my side, on the seat of her creatrice.

Perhaps ironically, all this led to An's invitation to Ninmah to continue making her case for her ambitious project, and finally its acceptance by the assembly.

Finally, festivities were about to begin when Dim-mege addressed the High Council on the question of the division of the riches of Uraš (the Earth). Anšár counseled her to arrange with Enki, as Master of the Abzu, to share its riches with his maternal family. He stared then at Enki and Dim-mege, making the following specification:

Enki will make you share in the decrees inscribed on the Mardukù. Numerous are those which concern the role of the Amašutum with respect to the Anunna. Your females will be a great support to us. They will not escape these decrees graven on the plaques of kùsig (gold) deposited in the Abzu of Mulge (the black star). Be it recalled that according to our code vigorously enforced by the actual authority of Anduruna (Gina'abul stellar system in Ursa Major), the presence of this holy Didabbasar (text of laws) in Ti-ama-te (the solar system) is in force here on Uraš and in the entire solar system. Thus I invite you, daughter of Nammu, to consult the Mardukù as quickly as possible and to take your dispositions to requisition your females so that they may place themselves under the orders of the executive depositions of this text, that is to say your brother Enki, as well as Enlil, the venerable Šatam (Territorial Administrator) of our foundation program. In the future, daughter of Nammu, we want you to know that we would like you to mix your breath with ours, as this piece of silk that covers your face is an insult to the High Council.

My sister had to draw her veil forthwith. The members of the auditorium stood in unison, as if to liberate themselves from this spell which had been heavy and interminable. Dim'mege posed on me a regard filled with compassion and withdrew her Gúrkur from one of the folds of her robe of silk. She gave it a turn and evaporated from our dimension, leaving the room.

A brouhaha of indignation quickly arose. Few among us possessed a Gúrkur on Uraš. This highly coveted object made many envious.

A celebration for Ninmah followed... wine flowed, undoubtedly from Udu'idimsa (Mars) where Sé-et had surely been sent. Enki missed her presence cruelly, and his thoughts turned to their loving times... erotic details in the book. They had done much together, but, in obedience to Nammu, they had never unified. Had Enki known their destiny, he surely would have done it, as then by the force, he would have been able to communicate the power of Niama, and then they would have been able to communicate secretly with the aid of the Kinsag (telepathy).

There I was, drinking with these individuals who were not like me. The members of the Assembly were considered to be sages, however, they had ransomed us in full legality and had humiliated us without reservation. The Mardukù had definitely been turned against us. At what point had I been manipulated by my Kuku (ancestors)?

I understood finally at this instant that if I were to preserve anything of my maternal family and my own, I must play their game with finesse. I guarded that none took note of my trembling hands as we clinked glasses. My hands that were not like theirs. Webbed like those of my mother and my two sisters.

Joy filled the room. The marvelous project of Ninmah and Enlil was on everyone's tongue. Ninmah came over and pledged her alliance. She had never been so resplendent.

My Šagra (chakras) were closed. I avoided having any distinct thoughts, as I would have taken the risk of revealing myself. But I knew that I would not remain there. At this instant, I hadn't the least idea of a plan that I would construct to save our honor, and even less of an idea how long it would take. I did know that my reprisals would be terrible!

Adjustments

Following the ratification of Ninmah's project and the departure of the High Council from the Abzu, a long discussion took place between Sa'am/Enki, Mam, and Dim'mege to review and absorb the meaning of the recent epochal events.

Certain new understandings and adjustments were needed. We summarize here:

- Sa'am was to hold no hope for anything further from his Kuku (ancestors). He needed to become more combative!
- Mamitu transmitted the contents of the Marduku to Dim'mege... who was beside herself with anger to hear of it.
- Mam explained that they had never imagined that the Ušumgal and Anunna would wind up in Ti'ama'te (the solar system) where they would use it to consolidate their power.

And when they were alone together, Mamítu conveyed to Sa'am:

- He needed now to give himself more regularly to the mystic path, in whose practice he would raise the sexual energy through meditation.
- He was no longer to have a sexual rapport with her!
- He will have a great need to master his emotions when he will be in the mountain with Ninmah and Enlil.
- He was henceforth aligned with Sé'et. Nothing nor anyone must disturb this verity!

After a night of fitful sleep, Sa'am awoke, requisitioned a Mága-an (cargo vessel), placed on it an Albarzil (mechanical drill) and provisions. Accompanied by eight Ama'argi, he set off.

One of his main objectives was to liberate his faithful Nungal Zehuti (Thoth) from his yoke.

Sa'am set off to where, exactly?

We interrupt our narrative to present material that we have been collecting relating to the Kharsag colony and its geography. Much of what follows had been part of this website since well before the information that you have just been reading.

Kharsag

At the end of Anton Parks' first book, Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres, the opening battles of the great new war between the rebellious Ušumgal and Tiamata's combined forces had quickly resulted in disaster for the Ušumgal, except that a remnant had escaped to this solar system, and in the process Enlíl had managed to chase Tiamata here as well, where she was subsequently destroyed.

Enlíl had done this, while Sa'am-Enki and his associates, who also had managed to flee to Ti-ama-te and Uraš in particular, were having a relatively idyllic time experimenting with the life forms they found in our now-southern hemisphere. Sa'am, Mamítu-Nammu, and their immediate party had gone to "the heart of the planetary reserve," and were joined there by 300 surviving Nungal, accompanied by close to 180 Amašutum and also by a small number of Anunna who had gotten past a protective barrier set up by the Kadištu.

They sheltered there, having broken communication with the maneuvering warriors, while combat raged elsewhere in Ti-ama-te, and particularly on Udu'idimsa (Mars), which was the larder of the solar system at that time. An soon consolidated and established himself there along with his bloody warriors.

There were assurances that Mulge, the planet of the Kadištu, would never be conquered, due to its elevated frequency. Certain races of Life Designers lived there in the ANGAL (higher frequencies), while others such as the Amašutum, the Abgal, and perhaps the Urmah, tended to frequent the Abzu (subterranean world). Parks does not know of the status of Mulge-Tab (the satellite of Mulge) at that time, though a number of Amašutum had been stationed there since the coming of that race into the bosom of the Kadištu (Life Designers).

When total victory was announced by An, Enlíl's illustrious future here was assured, while Sa'am-Enki would remain forever a barely-tolerated strangeling, even though his great talents were desperately needed and gladly received by the new overlords.

Karma One: The Ušumgal hierarchy and the Anunna came to colonize the surface of the globe and installed themselves, not at first in the Mesopotamian plain, but in the mountains situated today to the north of Mesopotamia...

You differ here from Sitchin who believes that the Anunna established themselves in the plains -- Eden -- in order to set up spaceports for the arrival of "rockets".

Your book also gives evidence that the Anunna, as well as other races or castes, travel with technologies much more sophisticated than "rockets", such as interdimensional and

There came a time when a major colonial facility was needed, and Sa'am-Enki designed and oversaw its construction in what is now known as the Taurus Mountains of Turkey, according to the best understanding of Anton Parks.

Parks and I have cooperated on a project whose aim is to develop a complete graphic picture of the colony, which constitutes what was known as Kharsag and which incorporates the so-called Garden of Eden. We are documenting this effort within these pages.

Note that a second colony, figuring importantly in Parks' third book, was constructed after the first one was destroyed in an Earth upheaval around 10,000 years ago. For the purposes of distinguishing them, on these pages we designate them as Kharsag 1 and Kharsag 2.

Other than a brief mention, not much will be said here about Kharsag 2 until the third book is published.

Determining the exact location of Kharsag 1 was difficult, as might be expected. Parks had a strong mental image of the landscape and its features; finding them on a modern map was the problem. There was an additional aspect: we did not know how much the terrain had been altered by the upheaval mentioned above.

We developed the following methodology:

1. As a first-order approximation, we assumed that no significant changes to the terrain had taken place.
2. Parks located the general area on a printed map.
3. I developed images of the area using Google Earth.
4. Parks moved to the smaller scale with appropriate imagery from Google, attempting to refine the position. He settled on several possibilities.
5. Using Digital Elevation Model (DEM) data and a variety of software, I produced rendered landscapes representing each tentative area. Parks then selected one outstanding choice from among those.
6. We examined that choice with more imagery, looking for anything that would contradict Parks' memory.
7. Since there were a few contradictions, we "adjusted" the landscape to eliminate those. The needed adjustments were rather minor: a flat area had to be raised slightly, and a river course had to be diverted into another channel that exists today but that has a few blockages, and is dry.
8. That constituted the "localization". The process is virtually complete.
9. Much work remains on representing the atmosphere, vegetation, artificial construction, creatures, and work activities.

sense to me.

As to the technology of the "gods", and in abstracting from what I have been able to observe in my "visions", I will say only one thing: I cannot see extraterrestrial races traveling in space with rockets! Rockets or space ships of yesterday and today are typically human productions and not the intergalactic vessels that afford the ability to move about our universe. I clearly explain in The Secret of the Dark Stars the reality of stargates and their use by the "gods". I don't see what I could add to this subject, only that I am absolutely convinced that these have been studied by the militaries for many dozens of years.

[N]

We have provided on another page a report of a study showing via interim images how we implemented the process described above, to determine the original colony's location. For the moment, that "report" contains additional images that more logically belong on the page you are viewing now. We are reorganizing all of these images at this time, and adding some new ones on this page. Some images will be moved from the "study" to this page. Temporarily, there will be some duplication between the two pages.

To see the graphical study and all associated images, click the thumbnail below:

The first Kharsag colony, that which we call Kharsag 1, was established in present-day Turkey, in the Taurus Mountains southwest of Lake Van (the large dark body of water in this Google Earth image). Its specific position (37.63N, 41.97E) is labelled "Kara Dag 1". (Google Earth labels several high ground areas in the Taurus Mountains as "Kara Dag". Since one of these coincides with Kharsag 1, we called it "Kara Dag 1", at least in this image.) After the Earth's upheaval due to the close encounter with Mulge-Tab (Venus) roughly 12,000 years ago, Kharsag 2 was built close to the western shore of the lake. The green rectangle indicates the area selected for the present study. "DEM" refers to the "Digital Elevation Model" dataset obtained for rendering into 3-D models.

Google Earth view to the south over the Kharsag 1 area. The high ground that was the position of the Kharsag 1 headquarters is as stated one of several designated Kara Dag on the Google Earth maps of the Taurus Mountains. In the distance to the south is what was called the "Edin Plain", a work camp and a place of dreadful hardship for the workers there. The platform south of Kara Dag 1 was Enlil's customary vantage point for watching the ongoing work with the aid of high-tech viewing systems. Today, this "platform" area is not high enough to provide an unobstructed view to the south. We feel it is acceptable to correct this by raising the platform slightly in our rendered landscapes, citing the planetary changes induced by the Mulge-Tab encounter as a possible cause of a later subsidence. Just to the north of Kara Dag 1 (toward the bottom of image), the green valley below the ridge was the site of Ninmah's Garden, where Ninmah and Enki experimented with crops and other plants. We will be sure to render a watercourse through the valley of Ninmah's Garden and appropriate vegetation, originally cedar, pine, poplar, and willows along the stream.

The platform area, shown with south at top. Another variance from Parks' memory was the location of the stream, shown in grey in the Google Earth view. We indicate here in red color the routing that Parks recalls. In our landscape rendering, we filled somewhat the stream bed on the right and dug one on the left corresponding to the red, and we raised the platform.

View of the colony area looking NW from over Enlil's platform. Parks has airbrushed for us the habitation areas. Ninmah's garden to the rear.

Landscape render of the previous view with the modifications. Inverted white pylon in foreground marks a possible position for Enlil's observing point. At rear along ridge, right to left, can be seen pylon markers for Enlil's house, Ninmah's laboratory (green), and (partially obscured at extreme left, reddish) Enki's house.

East-to-west view of the Kara Dag ridges (vertically aligned at the center of the image) showing the building locations and the valley on the right that will be Ninmah's Garden. A stream is to be shown running through the garden valley as in the next image. Enki's house location is by the water in the western valley closer to the top of this image. Enlil's viewing platform south (left) of the ridges is also marked with an inverted pylon. From here, looking further south, Enlil could monitor the agricultural activities on the Edin Plain.

Ninmah's Garden area in valley below ridge with Enlil's and Ninmah's house position markers. We have shown a large patch of soil for planting and will add the plantings next. Some fruit trees will be placed on the periphery; there will be an orchard near Enki's house whose position is seen at the far right corner of the image.

Growing wheat on the Edin Plain. View to the north. What is the most important element of this picture? The system of irrigation canals is the most important construction project ever undertaken by humans... because the human race was introduced precisely in order to build it. Blue sky courtesy Ama'argi at the request of An.

Actually this explanation of the view is an oversimplification. As we get further into the Ádam Genisiš story, we will see that the river and canal projects were well underway before humans such as ourselves had been created. Originally the Nungal and even some Gina'abul worked on the rivers while Miminu were assigned to canal construction.

Note: the most ancient variety of wheat cultivated by man is known as Einkorn, and the earliest discovered remains of it have been found in the Karadag mountains of Turkey.

Humans

First Inhabitants

As we have seen, when the Ušumgal and their Anunna, Mušgir, and Mīmínu (see Races) came sweeping down to the Earth, it was not as though there was no one to greet them. Our planet already had a history and had its occupants.

As a matter of fact, Uraš (Earth) had been colonized for a very long time before that awful moment. The Namlú'u had been created here, and under their guidance the Kingú and the Ama'argi Amašutum had been developing a number of primates who were by that time well established (Project Kingú). Mamitu-Nammu and the Ama'argi had been very actively developing a variety of life forms here ("Project Elohim").

The Two Ádamic Lines graphic farther down this page begins at a point in time 200,000 years prior to the arrival, and provides at least a glimpse of the two aforementioned "projects".

Note from that graphic that they had been working with entities known as Ugubi, Ukubi, Ukubi Ullegara, etc. Who or what were these, and how do they fit with our conventional understanding of the archaeology and paleontology of the period?

It is important to provide a reconciliation of Parks' information with the conventional picture if at all possible. To begin to achieve this, we are going to look at the (more-or-less) standard taxonomy of the primates.

Although taxonomy, strictly speaking, is purely concerned with classification, it is often presented pictorially as a tree structure, which does encourage an interpretation of descent through time of developing life forms. In other words, evolution. Since, as you may have guessed, Parks' story argues strongly for something more like design and mixing-matching of genes in a laboratory, this is not going to support evolution but rather is a very strong sort of "intelligent design" - except not exactly by "God", as the IDers would have it, but by the pseudo-god that was Ušumgal-Anunna.

We have developed a taxonomy graphic that has no time element in it. Rather, it shows nested "bubbles". This will provide an initial crude framework for understanding some terms and for showing how all this begins to fit together. Please take a moment to study this image:

A couple of points about the diagram:

The entire lower grouping is a subfamily that should be seen as nested within the family Hominidae. It was impractical to place it there in the graphic. Also, what is shown as the "Gorilla tribe" is sometimes considered to be a separate subfamily of the great apes.

We have shown in a white font the names used by Parks that need to be grafted into this system:

Other names found on the tablets and used in Ádam Genisiš will be explained below.

This subject will be taken up in much more detail in the section "Creating Humans" below, and indeed in much of the remainder of the website, still under development.

Creating Humans

As we will explain more fully, Sa'am's Nungal were called on at first to perform the physical work of constructing the colony, digging riverbeds and irrigation canals in the Edin plain to support the needed agriculture, and working in the cropfields themselves. Eventually, when the Nungal became rebellious, a series of worker races was developed to free them from this labor.

From the Karmapolis interview [K2]:

In Genesis 1.26, when the Elohim wished to create the first human, they said, "Let us make man according to our Tsélem (usually interpreted as image)." But "image" seems an inappropriate translation of Tsélem, which is formed from the word Tsél, meaning "shadow" [Parks uses the French word "ombre", which could mean "dark" as in the title of his first book], and the final [Hebrew letter] Mem, which in Hermeticism symbolizes water, the vital element, which is to say semen.

Thus in stipulating that the Elohim would form the first man from their own Tsélem, that should be translated as forming from their genes, their "shadow-liquid", which is to say the semen of the Elohim!

"[...] they (the creators) fashioned a creature by linking their powers from one to another, those with which they had been endowed. Each potency furnished a quality conforming to the image that they made of it psychologically. Thus they created a being modelled after the perfect Primordial Man [i.e., the Namlú'u]."

- Nag-Hammadi Manuscript, The Secret Book of John, Codex NH2-1 ; 28

See [Decoder entry for Tsélem for the result of decomposing this Hebrew word into Sumero-Akkadian syllables.]

The Biblical clay generally represents the blood or even the genes.

Thus we translate the passage in question as: "Let us make the man (with) our high exalted vital force taken from the clay (i.e., our blood or our genes)..."

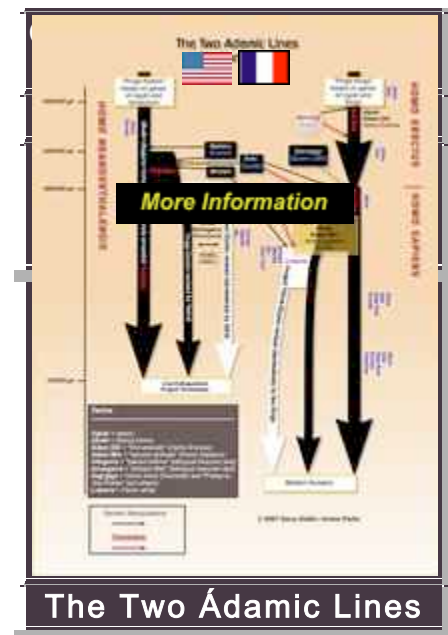

This translation is perfectly in accord with text of The Apocryphon of John given above...

The Two Ádamic Lines -- Abel and Caïn: Please refer to the genealogy diagram found at the top of the Genealogy section as well as the graphic at right as aids to understanding the various races mentioned in this section. In most browsers the graphics will open in separate windows and remain available until closed.

We present here some information on the complex genetic history of the human race, based on private communications received from Anton Parks plus published materials as well as our own interpretations. This section will grow rapidly in the coming weeks.

Note, to begin, that while the earliest labeled date on the graphic is "500,000 years ago", the project arrows do not begin at that point; their origin is at an unspecified earlier point in time -- apparently much earlier!

"Project Elohim": In the first genetic operation depicted, what Parks calls "the blacks," the Á-DAM, were created by Enki and his people as required by the Ušumgal-Anunna as slave beings for work in Edin. (Do not confuse these beings with present-day "blacks". In fact the entire line was terminated and is no longer present on the Earth.) They were an upgrade of the preexisting Ugubi, a kind of monkey similar to the apes of today, with genes of the Amašutum.

This race is also called Ukubi (genus homo) Ullegara (placed before).

Subsequently these were upgraded to the "mixed-blood" Sag-giga with the incorporation of Kingú-green genes (to mark or assert the superiority of the Ušumgal over the Kingú). The resulting being is the one known as the Lùlù, (i.e., mixed being).

G.Z.: I wonder how individual beings such as Enki and the others can manage lives of many hundreds of thousands of years in duration. Let alone the story in the book, just the chart here shows Ninmah's activities over a span of 100,000 years, and she had been living for... another 100,000 years before she started that? More?

What is it like to live that long, and to work on projects that take that long to complete? How do such beings handle the sheer size of their memories? Do they ever become tired? Do they enjoy that? Are we the anomalous ones?

A.P.: Yes, I know that it is difficult for us to envisage such dates as these, but they relate to a civilization that is not ours and of which we are only a pale reflection. This reptilian civilization, whether Kingú, Amašutum (Nammu), or "Yahvéiste" (An, Enlíl) has not ceased to truncate the human via genetics and at times to stealthily restore it.

From this comes... ourselves: beings who barely use 10% of their brains and 95% of whose DNA (junk DNA) serves no purpose.

Therefore it does not seem to me impossible that humanoid beings such as the Gina'abul are able to live hundreds of thousands of years. If we did not have all of these gaps (breaks or fractures) within ourselves, I would not be having to explain this, but given the data, I find it easily plausible.

The Earth has been a laboratory that was in the hands of the Kingú for many thousands of years. By all evidence, the Kadištu had allowed them to work more or less in tranquility (and I don't completely understand why), but there had to have been conflicts. The Imdugud, for example, were the result of a sort of conciliation between the two parties.

The Kingú had been free to create, break, recreate... the notions of time are not important under these circumstances...

Enki didn't wish to see his genetic creation used as vulgar Á-DAM. He decided to progressively and clandestinely modify these slaves to render them autonomous.

"Project Kingú": In a separate development, the Kingú-Babbar undertook the creation of a white race, the Lubarra, mixing their own genes with those of the Ádam Sag-giga, thus marking their supremacy over the creation of the vanquishers.

The role of Ninmah in all of this is confusing. Originally she was among the Ninti ("nurses") who would support Enki in his creation of the black Ádam for working in Edin. But she was not part of the team that would improve the black Ádam.

However, in a time when she was briefly the companion of Sa'am-Enki, she clandestinely worked on the genetic development of the white Ádam under his directives. So Enki was not the creator of the whites but modified them via the agency of Ninmah.

Later, because of Enki's rejection of the society of the Ušumgal-Anunna, Ninmah began to work on her own in cooperation with the Babbar to progressively improve the white Ádam while Enki and Sé'et continued to modify the black Ádam.

The above is just a quick and partial sketch; the full story, whose outlines are incorporated in the graphic, is much more complicated and, as stated, will be developed over the next few weeks.

The original specimen specially conceived for work had been androgyne. Enki would "cut it in two" to make a man and a woman. This is illustrated on a clay tablet:

What do we see? Enki is shown at left. Around him are serpents (symbol of creation and fertility) waving in rhythm. We conclude from this beyond a shadow of doubt that the serpent of the bible is no other than Enki the geneticist, otherwise known as Nudimmud the cloner.

Enki was often represented as a serpent. He bore the designation MUŠDA (powerful reptile) in Sumerian, an epithet that defines him as the Grand Architect or Mason of the World. He is the crafty serpent of the Bible who foils the plan of Yahvé in Eden.

At his side appears a star with an arrow pointing downward. The star symbolizes the term DINGIR (god(s)) [see Decoder], and the arrow, "the below" or "the abyss," confirming that this "god" is indeed Enki, the divinity of the Abzu - the subterranean world.

In the middle of the image there arises or awakens a woman emerging not from one of the Ádam's sides but more from a sort of kettle or vessel that one could easily take to be one of the artificial wombs [that are so prominently mentioned in Parks' story].

This kettle resembles the ancient Sumerian symbol corresponding to the demoness Lilù (Lilith) who represents the malady and the evil we have spoken of above. [See Races]. Do not the old rabbinical legends relate that the first companion of Ádam was Lilith?

At her sides, a man tends to the woman a branch of a tree whose extremities end in vaginas. The symbolism is clear! But the crunchiest is on the right: we see a totally irritated monarch brandishing two forks. To the Sumerians, the fork symbolizes a chieftain of the land. We easily equate this personage to "a Šàtam," a territorial administrator or regional chief. And who is the grand Šàtam of the Anunna? It is Enlíl, adversary of Enki!

compared to other races. You often say that they are not in harmony with the plans of "the Source" of all things, all being. What is the reason for this disequilibrium? Have we inherited it?

Parks: It appears to be a sort of involuntary degeneration due to the multiple genetic manipulations that were employed, and the genes that were used. Enki's Nungal for example are going to "metamorphose" little by little and change the color of their skin. As to the Anunna, they will be sickened by the terrestrial frequency that is too high for them and will above all tend to have shorter lives than previously, which will oblige them to systematically connect with the female Gina'abul to obtain "the secret of the trees".

The imbalance of the Ušumgal-Anunna is clearly reflected in our own comportments, because we (humans) are essentially their heirs. As indicated in Adam Genisiš, Homo Sapiens (Caïn) is not the issue of the Life Designers (Elohim) like their brother Homo

The Slavic manuscript of Ádam and Eve indicates that Satan claimed to Ádam the possession of the Earth: "Mine is the Earth, divine are heaven and paradise. If you become a man who belongs to me, you will work the Earth..." Other Biblical passages such as Matthew (4,8) or Luke (4,6) evoke the same thing. But note that in the Bible, it is "God" who catches the serpent "instructing" Ádam and Eve in his garden. Why not Satan!?

In other words, according to the foregoing, the garden should have been Satan's, not God's.

But wasn't the serpent supposed to have been Satan?

Keep in mind that they were all serpents, in a manner of speaking. (Except for the humans, whom they created. There is a reason for that, to be explained.) This makes it easy to sow confusion. Remember, the Ušumgal with their Mušgir and their Anunnas won sovereignty over this solar system. And who is it who always gets to write the history after a war?

But to return to the image...

As the Sumerians loved symbolism, we find at the Šàtam's side a "Gullum" (a cat). The cat has often been regarded as a baneful animal. This ideology is reinforced among the Sumerians, because if we decompose the term Gullum, we obtain GUL (to destroy, annihilate) and LUM (fertility, abundance, carrying fruit), which means that the Šàtam (Enlíl) has only one objective: "destroy the fertility" of his handiwork that has become too abundant and free for his taste. What is better than a cat to express this idea! Moreover this episode is confirmed at the end of the Babylonian tablets of Atrahasis where one sees Enlíl command Enki to reduce the longevity of humanity and to render certain females infertile.

Fertility and longevity were, and always are, of strategic importance. Without these factors, the human race would never have amounted to anything more than a band of workers for the plantations, that would expire when no longer needed. They could be renewed only by use of the cloning machines, and then only when operated by the handful of skilled individuals. What Enki did was to ensure that the Earth would eventually go to his humans, for better or for worse.

In The Secret, Parks mentions that the entire Anunna army that defeated Tiamata was raised in practically no time with just a few cloning machines and some cells taken from the repository.

People wonder why genetic operations seem to be so important to the entities who abduct humans. Perhaps this will help them to understand.

Notice that Enki's feet and hands are bound. This evokes the fact that Enki is not as free as he would wish because he is solidly under the directives of Enlíl.

Here is more discussion of these modifications from the Karmapolis interview [K2]. The reader should follow with reference to the "Two Lines" chart above.

Karma One: Enki made certain that his own prototypes were capable of reproducing sexually. You express this in very precise terms: "the Initiation into the Secret of the Giš" or the "Secret of the Dark Stars", the title of the first book, which causes one to think of the eternal feminine and the importance that the Gnostics attach to sexuality. Why had Enki wished that humans be more and more autonomous and be initiates? Is this gift of sexual reproduction made to men by Enki the reason that one finds in the Bible a complete taboo against sexuality, and the idea of a temptress "Eve"? And why does the Bible relate that the woman was created at a second point in time, from the side of man, as a sort of subproduct? Isn't this a deliberate distortion?

Parks: Yes and no. There were several versions of humans. The first, "manufactured" by the "Life Designers", was effectively totally asexual. This ancient version that is found in a distorted form in Genesis 1.26 is the product of the Elohim (Life-Designer divinities). The model mentioned is without any doubt a melange of the Primordial Man named Namlú'u and the Neanderthal prototype, also manufactured by the Elohim, precisely by Nammu, the mother of Enki. This version was rendered asexual, thus docile, by the clan of Yahvé (Ušumgal-Anunna) who worked for those Sumerian "gods".

In order to give this humanity autonomy with respect to the authoritarian Anunna regime, Enki separated their sexes so that these workers would be able to multiply by themselves.

The Edin (the Mesopotamian plain), where one finds the most ancient traces of wheat, was the seat of a gigantic agrarian industry that was very difficult to completely control. When the sexual humans found themselves faced with their obligation to pursue their travail for the "gods" in Edin, they had to clandestinely manage their covert "autonomy" with the aid of the administrator of the area, namely Sa'am-Enki (Samaël, the biblical serpent).

The reason for this maneuver is a profound "bad blood" between Sa'am-Enki and his people, the Life Designers (Elohim), and the paternal clan of Enki symbolized by the biblical authority. Enki, "the serpent", is usually represented in the Mesopotamian imagery as an instructor and not as a tempter, while the Bible inverts the roles and distorts the situations...

Karma One: In reading the Bible, one notes that the original man of the Bible, Adam, does not resemble the fabulous project that you describe. The biblical Adam seems more an idiot, "innocent", ignorant, subservient to Yahvé, and is not this powerful being that you describe in the beginning of your work. Why this discrepancy? Is this the same "Adam" or was there another project, another original man before the Biblical Adam?

Parks: Yes, as I have just mentioned, there were several versions of the human, as there were several of the ape... The very first is the Namlú'u [see Decoder], created by the Life Designers, Kadištu (the Elohim) who seeded the Earth before the invasion of the Anunna. These are the immense human beings who embody extraordinary capacities. This specimen is named, for example, in the gnostic Nag-Hammadi manuscript (Secret Book of John, Codex NH2 - 1, 28) where he appears in the form of the "primordial perfect Human" created by the different creators according to their different powers and qualities. The Namlú'u are almost four meters in height and are multidimensional beings. As expressed by several gnostic texts, they were the guardians of the Earth before the arrival of the evil gods (the Anunna). They disappeared from our dimension at the time of the advent of these.

The word "Namlú'u" is a generic term used in Mesopotamia to refer to the primordial humanity and later employed to designate the Sumerians who were considered in the ancient Near East as the first humanity placed in the service of the "gods".

So there is definitely a blending between this Namlú'u, guardian of planet Earth on behalf of the Elohim, and the different types of workers fashioned for the needs of Yahvé, beginning with the simians who are Homo Neanderthalensis and later Homo Erectus, leading to modern man, that is to say Homo Sapiens.

We strongly suggest keeping a doubly-enlarged image of "Two Ádamic Lines" (above, this page) open in a window while reading this information. (Click the language flag for the first enlargement, and click a second time for the double enlargement.) Parks' interview response here is only a first, gross overview of the extremely complex genetic history of man. It may seem reasonable enough in a quick read, but finding and tracing the references in the chart is indispensable to understanding.

Now you can see that Parks is discussing the lines on the left-hand side and the right-hand side.

This Homo branch [on the right, the biblical "Caïn" family] is the "animal" family, that used by the different Gina'abul ("reptiles") who make up the reptilian family imposed on the Earth. [See here the Decoder entry for Á-DAM.]

I show in Ádam Genisiš that the first version of Homo Neanderthalensis is named Ullegara ("placed before"). The second, revised as requested by the Anunna and originally asexual, is called Annegarra ("placed after") on the clay tablets. This exemplary corresponds to the biblical Abel [the line on the left side of the diagram].

The [Caïn] branch, considered as "animal", is a version deliberately rendered less "spiritual" than its cousin Neanderthal who possessed a form of profound mysticism relating to life and its Life-Designer creators.

How ironic indeed that Adam was modeled as a counterfeit of the model of Man by the Hebdomad.

- Nag-Hammadi Manuscript "The Second Treatise of the Grand Seth", Codex NH7; 28

"Hebdomad" is a term found in Gnostic texts of various persuasions to denote seven demonic offspring of the Great Archon. Parks speaks of this just below.

Continuing...

The Adam, in service to the Gnostic Hebdomad, is no other than a reduced version of the Ullegarra ("placed before"); he appears to be the Annegarra ("placed after"), an ad hoc revision of Neanderthal.

Neanderthal man (Abel) possessed in the human and biblical spirit the image of a being fashioned by those "on high". As I have indicated, his memory is doubtlessly combined with the extraordinary multidimensional Namlú'u for the simple reason that these two species were fashioned in a different period by Kadištu (Elohim) Life Designers.

The second wave of workers associated with Adam is the animal branch that I name Ádam Dili (first animals = Homo Erectus) and Ádam Min (second animal = Homo Sapiens) who were good only to serve the reptilian "gods". They appear to be the biblical Caïn.

Genesis claims that Caïn had been created by Yahvé (An and his Anunna angels) and that he was "bad" through association with his brother or cousin Abel. The reason for this assertion is that Caïn (Homo Sapiens) was genetically cut from the divine.

Effectively only 3-5% of modern human DNA expresses itself in proteins and would be used, the rest being the so-called "junk DNA" of which everyone speaks.

The strange assemblage from the gnostic texts, this "hebdomad", is no other than that of Yaldabahot (Yahvé) and his six other archons, who correspond to the Great Council of the seven Ušumgal ("grand dragons"), and who possessed all the powers in the story that I relate. There is no doubt that this Yaldabahot is the Sumerian "god" An.

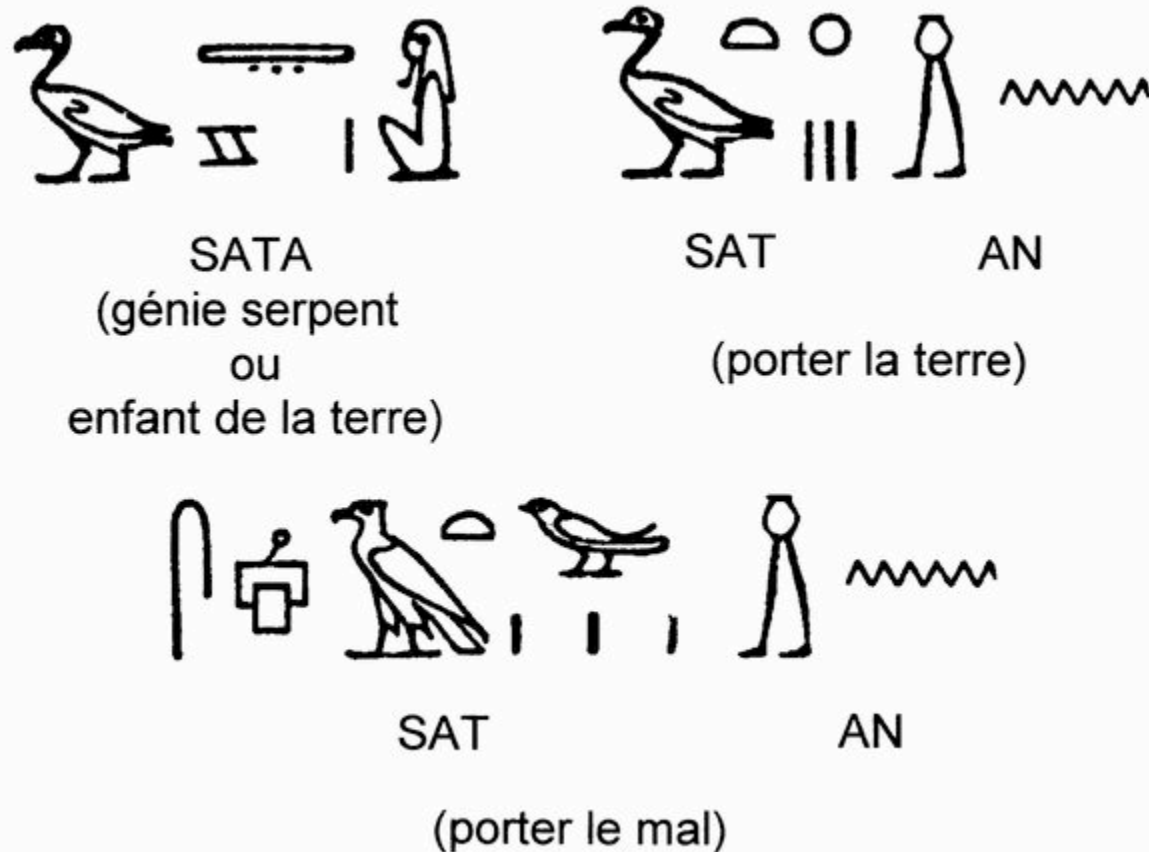

As much as I am in accord with numerous so-called apocryphal passages, I must point out that the gnostics often associate Yaldabahot with Samaël, which is for me a monumental error. This misunderstanding is doubtless due to the fact that Enki-Samaël (son of An-Yahvé) worked for the latter and was obligated to create creatures for the subordinate angels of his father, the Anunna. It is a little like the confusion that is made between Enki (the serpent) and Enlíl (Satan) who is the grand Šàtam (territorial administrator) of Edin (the Mesopotamia plain). We will see in Volume 3 of this series that this same Enlíl-Šàtam who is no other than Šètēš (Seth) will be in permanent conflict with Heru (Horus), who is actually Lucifer, "the Lightbearer". As you can see, there is much confusion between the great mythological archetypes.

Sumerian clay seal showing the geneticist Enki, a vial in his hand, near a Ninti (nurse) carrying in her arms a human of smaller size than the Gina'abul and whom one can imagine was a clone. Note the presence of the tree (Giš = "Dark Star") near the goddess.

About the Šàtam:

Don't ask why no author has yet made the connection between the Sumerian terms Šàtam, Ádam, and his Biblical quasi homophones, and above all have not had the good idea of observing that the Sumerian "god" Enlíl clearly holds the role of Šàtam, ("territorial administrator" or "country chief") on the clay tablets. I don't have the slightest idea! As always, the truth is reestablished today. The "smoky" Enlíl who symbolizes the Biblical "God" (or the chief of the Anunna) is no other than Satan! Furthermore, his name EN-LÍL -- "the lord of the wind" (of the word) -- can as well be translated in Sumerian as "the lord of infection." It is no coincidence that Enlíl, supreme chieftain of the terrestrial Gina'abul after An, was not at all appreciated by the Sumerians who have kept in memory the fact that he was a despotic and bloody monarch! This conforms to the Gnostic ideology that compares the great Archon to Satan!

The term SATA exists in Egyptian. Its strict translation expresses "serpent wizard" and "child (or son) of the Earth" (on the left hand). If one assembles certain Egyptian particles that can compose the term Satan, one obtains at the same time "to carry the Earth" and "to carry evil". It is interesting, because one again finds here the verbal form in second position as with the Gina'abul and Sumerians. More, the imagery that emerges here conforms to the Mesopotamian and Christian ideologies that present respectively Šàtam and Satan in similar manners. Do you truly think that this is by chance? In Adam Genisiš we observe how the Egyptian language was as important as that of Mesopotamia for the formation of certain biblical terms.

Yaldabahot and the Great Archons

Karmapolis: The Gnostic literature speaks of great Archons and their chief, Yaldabaoth, as the source of evil and

The term "Satan" is a melange of Šàtam (territorial administrator) and Šandan or Santana (plantation chief, herbalist, horticulturalist) from the Sumerian traditions. But an important detail separates Šàtam and Šandan: the latter is under the orders of the Šàtam, who possesses full powers. He administers entire regions, even countries. Enlíl reigned over the totality of Kalam (Sumer). So he administered his territories through the intermediary of the Šandan (Santana) without whom he could do nothing at all. Because in the universe of the Anunna (the dominant caste), one thing alone counted in their eyes: survival by the grace of the agricultural plantations. Now, with the Gina'abul, the Šandan (Santana) are exclusively the females. Long before the Sumerians, the Šandan (Santana) were uniquely women who worked in the vast Mesopotamian plain called Edin. In The Secret I have detailed the close association that one finds the world over between females and trees in the Garden of Eden.

This website represents an effort to acquaint English-speaking readers with the larger themes and implications of Anton Parks' work as well as a lower-level view of the narratives of his books that are still awaiting translation into English. At times we give simple direct translations; at other times compressed summaries. (We confess to developing these at a somewhat leisurely pace.) Where we have contributed illustrations, graphics, tables, etc., to the books themselves, these are presented here, once the books are published at least in French.

On this page we return to the narrative that was interrupted several pages back at the end of the Adjustments paragraph.

Dukug

Sa'am-Enki made his way across vast expanses of desert, heading south (remember the directions were later -- much later -- reversed) to the mountains named Dukug by Ninmah, where the Nungal had been toiling under Enlil's command and the watchful supervision of armed Mîmînu. (If necessary, review Races.) (Recall that Enlil had just decided to make Enki his Project Manager here.)

The sight of his beloved Nungal and their condition literally sickened him.

They for their part, were overjoyed to see him. He quickly had the Albarzil (mechanical drill) unloaded and put into service. He let his people know that their fortunes had changed from that moment, and to celebrate, declared a one-day holiday... much to the puzzlement and objection of the Mîmînu, whom he told to go complain to Enlil about it if it concerned them so much. (They did.)

Enki then searched for, and found, Zehuti, bent with the labor and almost at the end of his strength. They had a warm reunion, following which Enki took Zehuti and the females aboard the cargo vessel and returned to the Abzu. There, Zehuti was established in Sé'et's chamber, advised to get much-needed rest, and then given the responsibility to administer Enki's domain.

For Enki's place was to be in the Dukug with Ninmah and Enlil. To which he immediately returned in a Gigirlah.

He found them waiting at the foot of the Sacred Mountain, where the first order or business, of course, was Enki's peremptory granting of the day off to his Nungal. Enlil was looking quite imperious as he tried to dress Enki down for not coming to him first before taking such steps. However, Ninmah cut him off handily, with the advice that the Nungal were not animals and needed their rest.

Clearly Ninmah had the upper hand, and indeed Enlil was noticeably softened in her presence.

They boarded their ship and went to search for the ideal site on which to construct their new city. Ninmah wanted it to be along the edge of one of the numerous watercourses. Eventually they settled on such a place.

It was decided that Enki would be occupied with the supervision of the works while Enlil with the social administration of the colony.

The next day, Enki assembled most of the Annuna of double-polarity (recall that some thirty of these had already been of great assistance in the building of the Nunkiga agricultural station) and most of the specimens of the same nature from among An's troops. Essentially washed up on a savage and unknown island, possessing only rudimentary tools, and but little assisted by the technology of the Ama'argi, they would require the services of diligent workers.

As to the mode of buildings' construction, they would have to be of wooden frames from the available cedar, and vertical poles. They were too pressed to take the time for stone-cutting, and while Mam had the Abgal knowledge of stone-pouring, she could not be approached, having been ousted from the Gina'abul society.

Work began immediately on the clearing of many trees to make a large habitable zone. In this, the Anunna of double polarity performed remarkably well.

As work proceeded, Enki noticed that Ninmah's plans did not provide for exteriors to provide protection from the elements. This would have led to the need to rebuild every five years, which would have been unacceptable.

His solution was to provide exterior ventilation systems of copper, precious metal which he brought in from the Abzu. He would need this also for the roofs.

For the most important buildings -- Enlil's residence, the main warehouse for storing the harvests, etc. -- Enki planned walls of cut stone. The Ama'argi had great reserves of the stone and the copper that he would need.

Enki carried out rigorous explorations of the mountains, in which he encountered specimens of Ukubi (genus Homo). (These are tabulated above... see First Inhabitants.) Enlil was for systematically eliminating any of these that ventured too close to the new constructions but Ninmah and Enki dissuaded him from this, claiming that they were totally inoffensive, though Enki actually did not know for certain. The Girkù showed several tribes of Ukubi-Ádam (Homo Erectus) armed with hand weapons of wood, prepared to do battle against the Red Kingú.

The Ama'argi had such an aversion to the Kingú flesh-eaters that they had given this faculty of self-defense to some of the Ukubi, but those who strode the mountains seemed totally pacific.

Once the work got underway in the Dukug, Ninmah left for a final two-month visit to Udu'idimsa (Mars). During that time, Enlil stayed at Enki's side, passing his time verifying the progress of the work and observing Enki's least movements. But his favorite pastime consisted of surveying, with the aid of a magnifying viewer, the progress of the labor in Edin. In fact, when Enki was there near his people, he was certain that the Šatam (territorial administrator) was obstinately spying on them.

We have numerous illustrations of this viewing platform arrangement in the Kharsag section and the associated study.

A difficulty arose. The irrigation system under construction had been intended to deliver needed water to the city and its cultures. But it was also to provide water to all the Diranna (stargates) that were spread along the length of the Edin plain. These were going to have towns too. Enlil observed and pointed out that this would result in a sinuous trajectory that would not be acceptable. "We must not build one river, Enki, but two!"

Actually Enki knew this but he had hesitated to bring it up because he wanted to spare his workers the doubling of their labors. He objected, but Enlil rapidly became upset and said this would have to be brought to the High Council. But until then, they could proceed as they were, because the first Diranna was 3 Uš (32.4 km) distant.

[Note that the precision of this placement is not 0.1 km but rather of course 1 Uš or about 10 km, along the line of a river planned 300,000 years ago, measured from a point on the ground of which we are not at all certain.]

I recalled the counsels of Mamítu just before my departure for the Dukug:

Put Namkiágna (love) in all you undertake, my son, and you will see that Namkiágna will return to you inexorably.

Her doctrines issued from Gagsisá (Sirius) seemed familiar to me but sometimes so difficult to apply.

ENKI as Master Mason

A title he found absurd...

The double-polarity Anunna named him Šidimgal (Master

Here we move forward just a bit in the narrative...

Ninmah has returned from Udu'idimsa. All could see that the work was going well. Kharsag's buildings were incomplete but they had their roofs and the place was generally habitable. It was time to organize a ceremony in honor of the three creators of Kharsag: Ninmah, Enlil, and Enki. And this took place at a divine Assembly, which was the natural point for Enlil to present his proposal of the second river. Of course this was accepted without hesitation.

Dim'mege was present, and here she made a stupefying request:

When the work in Edin has been completed, I reclaim the responsibility for the Mášanše (livestock) and the whole of the Adam (animals) who are charged with assisting the Gina'abul of the Dukù in their tasks of labor!

Enlil doubtless found in this an opportunity to rid himself of a task both inconvenient and without any advantage for a grand Šàtam such as he. The High Council probably thought that Dim'mege had consulted the Mardukù and had positioned herself through a rapport with him. So under the effect of the joy and the flowing alcohol, the Assembly, seized with an uncontrollable zest, accepted the request.

MUNUS-LIL-LA

"The female who carries the breath", understood as the breath of life. This term is the Sumerian equivalent to the Akkadian Lílitu (the Lilith of the Hebraic texts). We have already noted (see Personages) that DÌM-ME-GE₆ "dark pillar" has equally for its Akkadian equivalence the name Lílitu, of which the original stems directly from the Sumerian LÍL-TI, "breath of life".

ENKI as Master Mason

A title he found absurd...

The double-polarity Anunna named him Šidimgal (Master Mason).

We note that the Sumerian term ŠIDIM-GAL (master mason) has the same archaic sign as the name MUŠDA (powerful reptile), habitually attributed on the tablets to Enki-Ēa, sovereign of the Abzu (terrestrial abyss).

Furthermore they awarded Dim'mege the honorary title of Munuslíl'lá, denomination that did not displease her.

Here is a brief listing of the important incidents and events from the closing pages of the chapter on Kharsag's foundation and the final hours of the Assembly:

- Enki ponders how he is to break it to his workers that they must dig TWO river beds.
- Dim'mege assures Enki that she is not an ingrate (not clear what that means), that she has an extraordinary patience, and that he will thank his sister one day.
- In a loose (drunken) moment, Ninmah reveals to Enki that Sé'tet is indeed on Mars, and is engaged in helping with the harvesting of crops.
- Annoyed at her verbal excess, Enlil drags Ninmah off.
- As he does so, Enki taunts Enlil about being his alagni (made-in-the-laboratory creation); Enlil denies it as always. The Kuku (ancestors) who understand very well, have learned to stay off this topic.
- As night descends, Kharsag is illuminated and is described as becoming quite beautiful.

- Enki takes inventory of what is still needed: warehouse for foods, laboratory for Ninmah, irrigation canals, large reservoir.

Sign

During the development of Kharsag and the plantations, Enki takes an occasional rest trip... for a dip in the sea (with respect to his amphibian nature)... or a visit with the Ugubi (apes) and the Ukubi (genus Homo) of Kankala (Africa).

Here the reader might review the diagram in the section First Inhabitants, noting that Parks considers the entire subfamily Homininae (Homininians) to be nested within the family Hominidae (Hominids) that includes the Ugubi.

These species are numerous and varied. Certain tribes -- without doubt the most ancient -- do not possess the use of the word, while others communicate with the aid of sonorities unknown to me. But they speak! Their larynx, more elevated than ours, does not permit the same intonations as we use. To think that my mother is in large part responsible for this genetic cuisine sends shivers down my spine. The archives of Mam enfolded in my Gírkù are categorical: Mamítu-Nammu has cloned several species, and more particularly that of the Ukubi'im (Homo Neanderthalensis) in a manner so as to render the line of Ugubi (apes) autonomous and thus to restrain the savage harvestings effected by the Kingú.

The Ama'argi, for their part, seem to have modified certain varieties uniquely to flatter their ego and perhaps even to try to do better than my genetrice. The Ama'argi have played a double game. Certain of their manipulations were official and others clandestine. At the same time, from other traces I gathered that isolated groups of beings come from the stars had also manipulated certain Ukubi (genus Homo). But their aim was not exposed in my crystal.

Enki regularly visits a tribe of Neanderthal at "Sínsal", in "the grand reserve of Kankala (Africa)" and works to gain their acceptance. These were called "Ullegarra" or "Annegarra" by the Anunna as shown in the schema The Two Adamic Lines. Their fossils are found in Africa, Europe, and the Near East. Heights range from 1.55-1.65 m.

He is completely accepted the day they discover his hands are palmed.

This tribe is evolved; its members dress in skins of antelope; they dwell in wicker huts, in relative comfort. They procreate by sexual rapport.

Enki's experiences with the Neanderthal reveal them to be a charming and actually advanced race of beings... in many deep respects though not in technology. We will not be able to detail this material here, but the following is essential:

At the heart of the infertile valley was found a luminous object with silvery reflections. We approached it. It revealed itself to be a capsule whose origin was unknown to me. Its form was triangular. It appeared to be an inverted Unir (pyramid) whose point was embedded deeply into the earth. From its inverted belly emanated a warm, soothing light. The Ukubi'im valiantly accosted the apparatus and celebrated its divine glow. Without knowing why, I was taken with an incomparable emotion.

I approached the object and saw a symbol on its side. Three small inverted pyramids formed conjointly a reversed triangle. I knew this emblem. Mam had presented it to me several times and it appeared on certain of her personal objects. This same sign was graven on Ugur, my inseparable Gírkù. It appeared to be the symbol of the Abgal from the triple system of Gagsisá (Sirius).

Tears flowed ceaselessly down my cheeks. I tried to contain myself, but the emotion was too strong and I did not know the reason for it. Was it my maternal filiation with the Abgal that had put me in this state? The Ukubi'im were overjoyed to note my trouble. Nammu had made me suffer through and recognize unknown emotions up until then. She was without contest my guide in this life. Her information was precious to me at every instant. How I would have wished that she could have been at my side in this particular moment!

I wanted to contact it with the aid of Kinsag (telepathy) but an Ukubi'im female approached and posed on my person a penetrating regard that troubled me profoundly. She took my hand and spread the fingers. She wanted without doubt to ascertain the common origin between the capsule and myself. What relation did the Ukubi'im entertain with the Abgal of the Gagsisá (Sirius) system? The Ukubi'im surprised me day after day. Not only did the Namlú'u seem to frequent them and share with them common rites, but the Ukubi'im also maintained a still stranger rapport with the Earth and its elements. I have read somewhere in my crystal that they bury their dead...

A final detail concerning Enki's visit needs to be mentioned: when he leaves the Ukubi'im, he takes with him a female, "for study", who becomes more of a companion for a period of time.

Prophecy

Upon his return to the colony, Enki finds a visitor waiting for him in his quarters -- a Ninhal (priestess in divination) in full meditation. Rather mysterious, she wears a metallic mask that hides her entire face and gives her a menacing aspect... although her eyes are fully visible. A feature of her footwear suggests she is Ama'argi.

Shall we pause here and reflect a moment on what this website is really all about?

Although we didn't exactly warn you how far this might proceed, back on the first pages, we did at least state that an otherwise-ordinary person had been having extraordinary experiences: vivid memories of an extraordinary being living a truly extraordinary life in ancient times on this planet. In fact, we now understand that we are being handed, if we can accept it, a lengthy, detailed history of a remarkable being, known to us by several names out of our mythology, who seems to have been shouldering responsibility for the well-being of several humanoid races, at least two of them being of his own creation, and one of them being ourselves, faced with powerful, deadly enemies as well.

This relationship of creation to creator, and its truth or misrepresentation, has given rise to issues of status -- divine nature or claims to divine nature, and rights, you might say.

All of this is taking place within the context of a war -- a galactic war at that, one which may be persisting into our day, and coloring the actions of the various power structures in our human civilization.

And if that were not enough, we are about to learn that one of the sides in the galactic war has a shamanic tradition, under which our central character is made to undergo periodic review and evaluation by those with the perspective of his long sequence of lives and the source of all this. One of those examinations is about to take place.

For us, the readers, this is a priceless touchstone, a kind of exposure to reality that we never expected to find... or it is nothing. That is something we decide for ourselves.

So we proceed. Here are the main points of the session.

The Ninhal places Enki in the middle of a large pentagram that she has traced on the ground. (Yes, the symbol is that old and was used by the Amašutum in their enigmatic ceremonies.) She seats herself before him and examines his hands.

Noticing the Ukubi, who is absorbed in an examination of some crystals, she warns Enki not to associate himself with the likes of that Urašienne (Earthienne).

Enki does not take this well. In other words, things are not getting off to a good start.

The priestess indicates that this is a matter of the highest importance, and means abandoning his mission in life if he persists. The discussion continues intensely for some time.

The priestess broadens the discussion. Enki is impatient and irritable throughout.

She finally manages to gain his interest by telling him she sees his line of life as on a table of crystal.

You will live multiple adventures and you will have choices to make to preserve your wellbeing and that of your family... that of Nammu. I distinguish a visage exquisitely made up... dark green eyes outlined in night. A female of solitary destiny will come and her times will perturb your existence... a Nin (priestess) of divine allure, bedecked in an infinity of jewels. The color of her skin will be identical to that of the Babbar (albinos). In these troubled times, Uraš will bear mortals who resemble you to some degree. The Gina'abul males and their mortal sovereigns will be at her feet. She will put the people of Uraš to their knees, innumerable in this epoch. The entire world will tremble at her passage...

The priestess continues, describing this Nin who will exalt the imagination of soldiers on the field of battle. For this fateful time she will be under the influence of the grand Šatam, Enki's creature Enlil, and Enki's creator An. Cities, banquets, temples are described.

Her destiny is tied in part to yours... It is she whom you pursue and you unconsciously flee... She is a double of the above and the below... you are Urní (sister souls).

Sister Souls

Again, Enki will have none of it. But the priestess continues, perhaps because her information is the most important possible for Enki. And in fact we feel we must provide this part verbatim as it is possibly the most important in any of Parks' books... not only for the characters but for us as well, if we can figure out exactly how we are linked to it. So we proceed:

What tale are you telling me, poor fool?! I am a complete soul, not fragmented. This is my first Zišàgál (incarnation)....

You are mistaken, my son! Your error is at the image of your candor. Do you believe that you would be such as you are today if you had never taken Zišàgál (incarnation) prior to this?

When the long road of Zišàgál unfurls such that the objectives of each become known, the Ba (the soul) can decide to fragment into two or several parts, it is its choice! But the process is irreversible up to the point where each part has achieved its work and recovered its other fragments at the end of the cycle. So it is not until the missions of each of them will be accomplished that each fraction will be able to reform the initial being.

The majority of Kadištu (Life Designers) have finished this work of Gibilzišàgál (reincarnation) and serve the Source in awaiting the definitive rejoining.

The entire being that you represent has made the choice to so divide, my son. It has taken the resolution to fractionate itself for a better evolution. But it is plausible, even foreseeable, that certain of your parts can be recovered according to your evolution and your lives...

I was dumbfounded by this revelation. My inner universe was completely shaken. What was I, truly? Only the fragment of an unknown being? My ego had taken a mortal blow.

What is my profound origin? I asked, completely disillusioned. The Nindigir (priestess) again took my hands and employed a more indulgent tone:

My son, do you not see it? Have you not discovered it thanks to your progenitrix and to the dark little ones of the vast Edin (plain)?

Your eyes, your hands, and your feet are for me an open book. You are not only affiliated to the Abgal of Gagsisá (Sirius) through your mother, but you are so equally on the part of the provenance even of your Ba (soul). Your entire celestial family comes from this admirable place. It appears to be the planet named Sé'etra'an that is situated in orbit around Gagsisá-Eš (Sirius 3).

We well knew that the planetary systems of Gagsisá were composed of three suns. However, the name of Sétra'an evoked for me nothing in particular.

You do not seem to know this sacred name. Sé'etra'an is the place where the largest number of Gir [see Decoder] reside. As you know, the Gir are Nindidir susceptible to birthing a Kirišti [see Decoder]. The term Sé'etra'an is translated SÉ-ET-RÁ-AN "the presage of life who accompanies the elevated". The name of your sister Sé'et (presage of life) comes plausibly from this source.

Then why do you speak to me of another Nindidir, other than the one destined to me? My progenitrix has the secret intention of making me a Kirišti. Is not Sé'et the one destined to accompany me? If I have an Urní (sister soul), it must be she....

My interlocutrix stopped me short:

Nammu is mistaken! One does not become Kirišti, but one is that from birth. The Kirišti must habitually be authentic Abgal. You possess only 1/4 Abgal blood via Nammu. Your mother is 2/4 Abgal - Tiamata, her progenitrix, not being fully of Gagsisá (Sirius). It is your sister Sé'et who possesses the most Abgal blood among you, in the neighborhood of 3/4.

Furthermore, a Kirišti must be conceived naturally and exclusively by a Gir. Have you come from the flanks of Nammu my son?

Moreover, where is Sé'et? Is she at your side to sustain you in your task?

Seeing me disappointed, the priestess took a compassionate air. She hesitated a short moment and lanced at me:

You cannot be other than what you are. You are the victim of a laborious consanguine degeneration... exactly as planned by the Gina'abul. Doubtless you are here to alleviate some pain among our people. But that is not all, my son....

The eyes of the reader of destiny darkened again. She continued:

My child, I must again place you on guard against this Nin (priestess) with the pearly skin. She certainly is your counterpart, however watch your attitude. Your choices are disparate. Your distant counterparty has chosen diversionary roads that we must not judge. She always will know how to give a pretext to her cries and her tears. You closely resemble one another on many points, but the route that she has chosen is broken and holds many pitfalls.

It is in the masculine that she will try to find comfort and the soothing of her pains. She will use manners until then unknown to attract the males in her royal litter. Many among them will fall by her doing into madness or will simply lose their lives.

You alone will understand her, and you will estimate her without taking yourself well into account because an Urní (sister soul) is always attracted by one of his or her counterparties. However, when her agile and imperious silhouette will have won over the powers of this world; when the shadows that she engenders in the name of your creator and of the grand Šàtam, will have recovered Uraš; when her delicate and contemptuous tone have ceased to resonate in the alabaster palaces and when the dead packed under her feet will have made her sick with nausea, this Nin of indomitable youth will come to you totally desperate. She will have no more wealth.

At that moment, because her eyes will no longer be in quest of ambition, she will finally place her clear vision on you and will recognize you as whom she has searched for, during an eternity. You will become her unique object of lust.

You must take guard not to fall into madness yourself, because this female will possess a powerful magnetism.

She will try to change for you. Her attachment to your regard will be hidden from the ensemble of the Gina'abul.... That is all that you must know about her, my son, without the risk of influencing the destiny that you have chosen for yourself...

They continue; the point is not that Enki has chosen to suffer, but that he has already chosen these major paths under discussion, but still must work out the detours.

We pick up the dialog a bit further on, with other information that appears useful to us.

Nammu claims that the density of Urašien (earth) KI is poison for males of the lineage coming from Urbar'ra (the constellation of Lyra) and that I will end by bitterly proving this reality if Sé'et does not return to me. What do you say to that?

The royals and their Imdugud descendants do not have this problem. It is true that the frequency of this planet is more elevated than that of our colonies and particularly of Urbar'ra (Lyra) and even of Margíd'da (Ursa Major). The KI of Uraš (earth) is poison for the males who come from these celestial places. I have but one recommendation to make on this subject my son, which is to find a Nindigir (priestess) who will give you her "look of life".

I am considered by most of us as a Kadištu (Life Designer). I have received the breath of my mother, I am the "reflection of the Mistress of life". I am son of the water and the Níama expands in me like a fountain at an inexhaustible source. Nothing can happen to me!

The Níama has nothing to do with that. The majority among us do not possess this power and that does not impede us from being Kadištu (Life Designers). I will not be as categorical as you. You too much resemble your creator. Your apprenticeship has definitely not yet been achieved. You must have a bit more regard for your Nungal.

What is to become of the Nungal?

The priestess hesitated a short moment...

Your alagní (clones) are innocent victims. If your fidelity to the relationship resists the temptations and tempests that menace you, then you will know how to take the measures that will deliver these beings of yours.

The session ended abruptly at that point. The Nínhal (meditation priestess) rose, made her sign of reverence, and left the apartments soundlessly.

We end here with Enki's consideration of the dark small one he had brought from the vast Edin, and the female named Húlla, the small Ugubi (ape or monkey) of Nammu. Why so much difference in their statures and temperaments? Enki was determined to find the reason and above all to comprehend the functioning of these exotic species, in action so much more peaceful than the Gina'abul.

Reflections on Page AG5

Well, what are we to make of all this?

We are being handed information about how a conscious entity grows in a nonhuman evolution. Could this possibly have anything to do with ourselves?

I am going to suggest that if it did not, we would not be reading it in the first place...

because it comes to us through a person who makes no claim to be anything other than fully human and yet he has it through what seems to be immediate first-hand experience. And if he has some connection, could not others?

What that connection is is actually suggested by the story itself: there was or is a very great apprenticeship taking place. Our human race was still something for the future, but Sa'am/Enki had created the Nungal as part of his Life Designer apprenticeship and he was now being informed that his work was not being judged too kindly as he appeared to have abandoned his creatures. Apparently, once created, a conscious race needed following.

Now I am perhaps guessing here, but would not one way of following up be to take incarnation into the race itself from time to time, and what would be the benefit in doing that if something could not be brought in?

Would there not be perfect justice in this operation, as the creator would be made to experience exquisitely the experience of his creation... and perhaps to take any needed corrective action.

We barely know how this would work. For example, we gather that Sa'am/Enki is not the only being responsible for human genetics. We have hints that many have dabbled, not the least forces who have opposed the "Life Designers" in the galactic war about which we are beginning to learn. Who knows but what they are all forced to come in at times? Would that not bring about the kind of situation we see around us today?

War(3)

Readers may need to review the sections War(1) and War(2) for a refresh on the background of the Great War that led to all the events of our history here in the Ti-ama-te solar system.

As of some twenty or thirty years after the founding of the Kharsag colony, the war continues. Units of soldiers, battered from combat, frequently burst in upon the colony for a bit of rest and restoration. This always sows discord and forms the central subject of the assemblies. Enlil never lets them stay for longer than an Ud (day) before sending them back to the front.

Where Enlil had been earlier complaining of headaches, he and the other males less frequently do so now. Enki wonders if this indicates that the KI is becoming more compatible or if it is a sign of the imminent victory of their side in the war.

The feline Life Designers known as Urmah deploy a major military position in the east (west) of the vast Edin (plain) toward Kankala (Africa). The Kuku (ancestors) have never detected their base. Enki has learned from Nammu's archives, recorded in Ugur, that the bases are subterranean, and bear the name Gígal [GI₇-GAL: great and noble; GI₆-GAL: great and dark, in Sumerian]. Enki will not speak of this place to his Kuku, to Ninmah, and least of all to Enlil, the Great Šatam.

Enki intends to go there as soon as possible.

The Kingú have been to Šàlim to sign an accord, giving them official permission to establish themselves in the grottoes and tunnels of Uraš (the Earth). The royals have been rendered unstable by war and the domination of the Anunna. Those who have always occupied Uraš become progressively vulgar fugitives. But the hard-core ruling group remains completely elusive. Dìim'mege has in compensation concluded a truce between the Kingú and the Amašutum of the Abzu. Having had a history scattered with discord between themselves and the royals, this accord seems beneficial to the people of the Abzu.

The treaty was signed without Enki's consent or even his presence. His mother signed in his place.

Enki guards this information secret. It gives no regard to any governing authority of Kharsag.

Thus the Kingú remain allies of the Amašutum and to Enki just as they were to the cause of the ancient queen. For the Kingú, Nammu is taken as Tiamata's legitimate descendant, while they do not recognize her as having any authority over themselves.

Agarin, an Ukubi'im

Agarin (Sumerian for "blood relationship") is the name given by Enki to the Ukubi'im (Homo Neanderthalensis) that he brought back from Kankala (Africa). She lived at his side for some 18 Muanna (years). His companions had never supported her presence; Nammu had even forbidden them to live together and ordered Enki to liberate her.

But Agarin had never wished to return to Edin; she had become habituated to Enki's presence. She followed him around as would a wife. They had an affection for one another and had even coupled on numerous occasions. Enki found her to be of an exquisite sweetness; she had definitely added some sweetness to the bitterness of his existence (which he had done everything possible to hide from the colony).

Agarin had obtained no progeny from this, but had received the force of the Niama, which could render one mad.

After he discovered her inanimate body, Enki analyzed her blood and found the venom, but no wound. Though it was unknown to him, Mamítu-Nammu revealed it to very certainly be the venom of Ninmah!

This meant that Enki was going to have to be watchful around Ninmah... who while appreciating Enki, was also spying on his work on Neanderthal genetics, clearly on the request of Enlíl.

Ninmah had clearly seen Agarin as a potential adversary, as she had come to possess the force of Niama.

Due to the attachment he had had to Agarin, Enki did not use her body after her death in his genetic work, although he did preserve her genetic material. He gave her body a simple burning according to their custom; no one bothered to attend and render a final homage. He scattered the ashes into the wind that blew in the large Edin.

Immediate Postwar

Eventually, of course, the Great War did wind down. We are not at the moment aware of any treaty signed with the Gina'abul, though we will update this statement if it is found in error. It seems more to have been a general recognition by all parties that the Gina'abul were not to be evicted from their base on Uraš and that it was useless to continue to try to deny them even the eventual ownership of the entire Ti-ama-te (solar system).

Fighting seemed to have ceased on Udu'idimsa (Mars). Mimínus (grays) were scattered around Ti-ama-te (the solar system). Mulge, the planet of the Kadištu (Life Designers), having a "frequency" too high for Sa'am's Kuku (ancestors), would never be dominated by them. However Sa'am could still worry that the Gina'abul might somehow, someday, be introduced to the Abzu of Mulge without his authorization (which should have been required, as he was Lord of all Abzus in Ti-ama-te). Many emissaries of the Source lived there, including female Gina'abul.

The situation regarding Mulge-Tab, satellite of Mulge, was even less clear. It appeared that its KIGAL was a delicacy for the senses. Nindigir (priestesses) lived there and were guardians of the "life-designer" ordinances.

Sa'am-Enki hoped that, with the war over, he could move beyond his usual confines, travel freely around Ti-ama-te, and perhaps take care of some important matters. Understand that where he had always considered himself aligned with the Kadištu beings who were here, they often did not recognize this in their turn, and Nammu had warned him to be careful lest he be treated as a general Gina'abul. Plus of course he was further confined in his travels by the Gina'abul themselves, who never trusted him, while at the same time very much needing his frequent assistance.

So Sa'am would be able to move around in his Gigirlah, but soon likewise the troops of his Kuku (ancestors) would be landing on Uraš, bringing who knew what changes.

Sa'am-Enki wanted to meet with the feline Kadištu Urmah in their secret underground base at Gigal.

He had found the plan of the layout of this base in Ugur, showing it to be at the extreme south (today's north) of Kankala (Africa), near a long river that flowed in the southern (northern) part of Kankala, and whose sources were in the Sinsal country, the grand reserve of the Ugubi (apes). This is the location of what we know today as the Giza plateau.

There was a protective barrier field set up by robotic lookouts hidden in the vegetation, causing Sa'am to have to stay outside and simply observe the comings-and-goings of the felines for several nights.

Their intensity had been increasing. The earth trembled at times from muffled sounds emanating from the profound depths. Lights flashed out from holes and gaps in the ground.

All of this gave the impression that the Urmah were abandoning the place, though Sa'am didn't see sufficient vessels to suggest an actual flight (fleeing).

With the aid of a viewing device, Sa'am could see that the Urmah were impressive in size, with a greater stature than that of the Gina'abul, large shoulders, and the head of a Pirig (lion) with ocre mane. Surprisingly, several had long claws on their right hand. The Gírkù had no information on this. Sa'am reports that the Imdugud, their "children", sported exactly the same for self-protection.

We mentioned above Nammu's warning to Sa'am about contacting the Urmah. But she also said they tolerated well-enough the Amašutum as emissaries of the Source. Nammu had had working relationships with them - not always very engaging.

The Urmah were "quick" ["vif"] and "dry" ["sec"]. They possessed a state of consciousness that functioned quite differently from that of Sa'am and his associates. Very suspicious in nature, and very solitary, as could also be said of the Imdugud.

The vessels of the felines of the Source were small and light. Some were silent; others emitted at times a hissing that stirred up the dust. Those went out only at night.

Here Parks seems to make a distinction between "felines of the Source" and "Urmah" when he states that the vessels of the Urmah are paler and more elongated, and he does not know their point of access to the Gígal, which seems to be situated much further "inland".

Sa'am recognizes these vessels as the ones that had attacked their mountain at Dukug with some Uru (missiles) two Muanna (years) earlier. That assault had damaged a small part of Kharsag and the works of his Nungal in the vast Edin, but there had been no injuries. The Anunna had responded severely from positions at the foot of the mountain. Afterward, they had tripled their defenses in the Dukug and the Great Šàtam (Enlil) had requisitioned several hundred additional soldiers to protect the agrarian city. That had made it necessary to enlarge their crop plantings. In several days, that same need was to become much greater!

Enlil has just brought in four more Albarzil (mechanical drills) from the Abzu. These were needed years ago; work has simply not been advancing. This is standard practice for Enlil: respond to need when it is already too late.

Sa'am-Enki has been unable to make contact with his father, whose trips "to the heart of Tiamate" (Mulge) sometimes seem to be just a pretext for hiding from his children.

Gígal

The Urmah left the Gígal by night amid deafening sound and light. The colossal flotilla departed the planet in several waves and a continual fracas that raised the earth. The entire operation took about half a Danna (1 hour).

The departure was a major military maneuver that must have been ordered by the Kadištu (Life Designers) confederation. It seemed to be a peculiar thing to Sa'am-Enki, as the small numbers of arriving Gina'abul soldiers (around 600) surely did not require that step. The Urmah numbered in the thousands.

Ninmah would have located their base northeast (today's southwest) of the Dukug. Sa'am-Enki had pretended to know nothing of the subject. He took care that no one followed him to the south (north) of Kankala (Africa). He had made a practice of using the Diranna (star ports) on his trips.

After the Urmah soldiers' departure, Sa'am-Enki returned to his exploration of the plateau. Its protective force field had been deactivated. Armed with a long rope, and Ugur, the Gírkù for illumination, he explored numerous ventilation shafts that punctuated the terrain.

The Gígal was monumental, possessing several levels, which was also indicated in Ugur itself. In fact there were seven levels, but Enki was far from being able to explore them all. That would have taken Iti (months) or even Muanna (years), as the tunnels extended under Kankala (Africa).

In these tunnels, Nammu and her associates had found refuge on many occasions when under attack by the royal red Kingú.

Some of the tunnels seemed to be buried far, far into the earth. They had to go somewhere. Enki believed that certain of them even led to the Abzu. Nammu and Enki's sister Dìm-mege must have known this.

Sa'am reports that there were monumental halls from which emerged broad galleries (or tunnels) through which could pass voluminous vessels. These were doubtless where the Urmah kept their flight vessels.

The walls were smooth, without inscriptions. Some of them seemed to be constituted from a single enormous block. Most of them were not natural. They had not been carved by natural erosion or even by the hands of individual workers. Rather they appeared to be artificial caverns.

The principal seat or headquarters area appeared to have been assembled from the exterior on several levels, on which was then placed the thick, heavy roof that formed the actual plateau.

Anunna > Anunnaki

From this point forward in Parks' books he uses the term Annunaki. The Sumerian number GÍŠ-U (600) is synonymous with the name Anunnaki, which is to say Anunna of the KI (the Earth).

The Giga is a fortress and its walls are impregnable ramparts. Sa'am believed that entire structures could be moved in order to obstruct certain of the underground spaces. He found himself on several occasions facing colossal walls whose orientations seemed completely strange.

There seemed to have been no mechanical devices or systems left behind; the spaces were completely empty. Furthermore, while the two upper levels were dry, some of the lower ones were flooded with clear water. A broad watercourse flowed through the two lowest. The crystal (Urgu) indicated that this was a hidden counterpart of the long river that extended through the south (north) of Kankala (Africa). This lower river had no doubt been diverted in places so that it would run simultaneously on several levels.

Sa'am-Enki discovered several "port basins" lined with willows, that reminded him a bit of the Duat of Dukù - a similar environment. We suggest you pursue the hyperlink so that you can consider the similarities as well as the differences between these two versions of a Duat, assuming that we are indeed dealing with a Duat here. Later, the role of the Duat in the path of a deceased Kadištu will become of central importance.

The river to which we have referred would be the Nile, except for uncertainty introduced by the great dislocation that is due to come to Uraš before we will have today's geography.

I discovered various towns or groupings ["agglomerations"] in the Giga. Numerous edifices are of pyramidal form, others more rectangular or square with wide columns. The architecture of the buildings of the felines of Sipazianna (Orion) was heretofore completely unknown to me.

The habitation spaces and the temple halls are totally empty. The doors are broad and high. A luxuriant vegetation mixes among the stones of the edifices.

The fourth and fifth levels have strange lighting on the ceiling. The ceilings are very high; they differ according to the level and the sectors. They must be nearly 13 Nindan (nearly 80 meters) high. Lines and points cross forming a pleasing and harmonious pattern that illuminates the constructions.

I am blown away by this place. It makes me tremble and wonder at the same time. I must guard this as a secret in my spirit, making it my habit above all not to think of it when I return to Kharsag, particularly when around the Ušumgal and Enlil.

I would love to install myself here. It is here that I would love to establish my Nungal, where they will be free, but I hesitate, so impressed am I with this place. The Anunnaki and their creators above all must not know this place.

Festival of Heroes

Nearly a month after the 600 arriving Anunnaki had posed triumphally at the base of the Dukug (the Mountain of Heaven), a prodigious Festival of Heroes was organized for them at Kharsag.

An had hastily descended from Udu'idimsa (Mars), followed by a cortege of Mimínu ("greys") and Mušgir (dragons) dressed like princes.

Enki was totally stupefied to see these revolting creatures around his creator. Dim'mege, who had been invited to the ceremony (while Nammu had not), grimaced strongly at the spectacle.

An testified once again to his supremacy over Ti-ama-te (the solar system). And he demonstrated unmistakably that his constant relations with the worst species of their consanguine family could only increase his power and the fear that he had always inspired on the part of the entire race.

But seeing Enki's and Dim'mege's reactions, An justified himself by stating that without the Mušgir (dragons) they would never have been able to deal with Tigeme (Tiamata).

An certainly lacked any tact. He seemed to have forgotten that Dim'mege, Sa'am-Enki, and even he himself were all descended from Tiamata. (See the Source Races chart in Genealogy.)

Prisoners were proudly exhibited. There were three Kingú-Babbar (albinos), five reds and a handful of the common skin (green). The spectacle was pitiable. Three royal reds were savagely executed by the Mušgir who opened their thoraxes. The sour odor of spilled blood and the still warm and palpitating entrails made me nauseous. My sister and I trembled like leaves. Sigpabnun (Isimmud), my agent, seemed very calm.

Among the captives was an Urmah in very poor condition. He was chained outrageously, as justified by the terror that he created in my consanguine family. The Urmah couldn't budge because he was garrotted. His stature was very high, as with most emissaries of the Source.

In his drunken triumph that he shared with his absent son, Enlil praised "the race of elects" who had known how to conquer Uraš and to subjugate their enemies. The Great Šatam took a sword. I understood what he wished to do; I leapt toward him in calling for him to spare the Urmah, arguing that we could study him: "This is an emissary of the Source, above all do not touch him!"

My sister restrained me in my impulse. The Urmah fixed me for a long time in his eyes. EN-LIL forced him to kneel and cut off his head! This required several strokes.

EN-LIL and some Anunnaki jumped on the corpse to drink the victim's blood. This greatly amused my creator.

All this was too much for Dim'mege, who staggered and clutched Enki; she urinated on his boots.

Ninmah came to their assistance, explaining that scenes of carnage always aroused the drunken pride of the males.

She went on:

I am a Nindigir who has taken initiation on Nalulkára. I am no longer a Kadištu since I have conspired with the ensemble of the Ušumgal. I accept this, because I did not give more support to the despotic ideology of our queen.

We have here two beings issued from the line of Tiamata by the intervention of Nammu. If in the future you wish to execute emissaries of the Source, do not do it in front of their delegates present here, only out of the respect that we owe to Enki, his sister, and their absent progenetrix, and in honor of their precious collaboration. Without them, Kharsag would not exist!

Having reestablished order, Ninmah reseated herself on her throne and ordered the festivities to begin. Eden, Ninmah's Garden, had been swept clean for the occasion. Dates, melons, figs, grapes and honeycakes were on display in sparkling plates on tables of "ivory" from the strange creatures that the Ama'argi called Amsi (elephants). The triumphant army filed in majestic and processional rhythm before An, Ninmah, Enlil, the Ušumgal, and Enki. An gave his thanks to each of the high nobles for their acts which had made all this possible.

Comment

Somewhere on this website - and it might as well be right here while we think of it - the perfectly obvious should be acknowledged.

What do you suppose a "scientist" in good standing, guardian of our quest for the truth in our understanding of our place in the universe - would say to all this? I expect he or she would protest loudly, calling for a little more strangeness, more - je ne sais quoi - ooboo-gooboo in his/her aliens. If any appearance at all; more likely nothing more than the weakest radio signal trying at some universal code.

Why, this scene resembles nothing more than a feast at royal court (if you ignore a tail in evidence here and there). We KNOW this scene!

But, we say, of course! Isn't that exactly the point? Now finally you have just begun to think.

Proceed...

Enlil's sensation of triumph and joy was very great. Double, because the Great Šàtam was taken with an Ama'argi princess for several months now. He no longer carried any regard for Ninmah, the sovereign of Kharsag.

This is undoubtedly why Ninurta, their common progeny, was not present that day. He preferred to "slash the Imdugud", as he liked to say.

Ninurta had directed the Anunna these last Muanna (years). He had been the official chief of the armies of An for three cycles (years), and it is he who had led the military apparatus to final victory. So his absence was not well appreciated.

Ninmah had taken an interest in Sa'am-Enki. He notices, and takes advantage, feigning drunkenness to match her actual state of inebriation, to pry some more information from her about the status of Sé'et, and even manage to convince her that it would be wise to bring Sé'et back to Uraš. Ninmah warns Sa'am-Enki that Sé'et would not be able to give him the "regard of life" which she, Ninmah, could, and this will lead to his ultimate death.

Nisighu (Bluebird) - Gíghu (Blackbird)

Some days later, Sa'am-Enki returned to his exploration of the Gígal - to its third level. This level possessed several extremely large cavities that would seem to have been able to permit the passage of the Urmah's flying vehicles.

In the northern part were rooms of immoderate size with thick columns, totally deserted.

Amid the maze of stone was a profound hall, devoid of any artificial lighting. With the aid only of the green light of the Gírkù, Enki found inscriptions on the ground, in the Emešà (mother) language - a very archaic form that seemed not to employ any Emenita (male language) terms, other than names that were mentioned.

He left this inscription on the ground to present later to Nammu. It seemed to be composed of Kùsig (gold) powder. Its contents were as follows:

Ana apil É-a ilittu šá Nam-mu tu-li-du a-na marutu ina An Gi-gal bité-su-nu gab-bi maš-ka-nu šá Ur-Mah ana šá muhhi hi

Nun-Gal
pa-ni-šú id-da-gal Nisig-hu akanna Gíg-hu

Translation:

To the son of the house of the water progeny of Nammu, she who has engendered in filiation with An.
The complete house of the Gígal is the retribution of the Urmah to (him who has) responsibility for the Nungal.
In his privilege, he will dispose of Nisighu (Bluebird) as well as Gíghu (Blackbird).

Exploring further - feverishly - Enki's Ugur eventually illuminated the sides of an ovoid flying apparatus of the Iníuma general type, with bluish reflections. The reader can for the time being refer to our Iníuma illustrations. We have prepared 3D images of Nisighu for the forthcoming book Le Réveil du Phénix (The Awakening of the Phoenix) and at the time of that publication, we will place here an image of how the Bluebird appeared to Enki in the Gígal cavity.

A word of description: yes it was blue, it was longer/slimmer than the Iníuma, and it had wings, apparently for use in our atmosphere.

Enki found it highly esthetic, giving the impression of power to displace rapidly and in silence.

A bit further is found another vessel of dark reverberation. It possesses small wings of triangular form and three rectangular dark windows at the level of the cockpit. Its contours are straight, taut. Its massive silhouette and its full length give it an extremely menacing aspect. It gives me the impression of roaring in silence. It appears to be without any doubt a powerful machine of war.

Here again, we have prepared 3D images and await the time for their release.

Anyway, the heavy responsibility of all this sent shivers down Sa'am's spine. He was no warrior; he was at times nervous handling the Gírkù. How was he to be responsible for the Gígal and for these two strange machines? In fact, he was unable even to find the entry door to Bluebird.

He also at this time faced a heavy task in Edin: to install the bulk of the Annunaki in the villages of cedarwood constructed along the two enormous grooves that had been dug out by his Nungal. The work had begun; the water had begun to be diverted. The dikes and irrigation canals had been excavated by the Mímínu (greys). Always he was preoccupied by something fundamental.

To be continued...

Search for Sé'et

HOW TO RECORD IN YOUR GÍRKÙ

If you have the power of Níama, as does Sa'am-Enki, you take great joy in focusing your thought on the Gírkù's luminous essence, and with an assured gesture, passing your hand three times over its extremity. When the virtual control panel appears, the information may be tapped in, then appearing on the pellucid screen.

Ninmah has agreed to allow Sé'et to return to Uraš, but where exactly is Sé'et? She has not made an appearance and we find Sa'am-Enki in his Gigirlah (vessel) on a journey to find her.

Sa'am-Enki summarizes what he has been able to learn of the outcome of the hostilities that led to the present situation. Briefly, the allies of the Source had been successful everywhere, recouping all territories from his Gina'abul ancestors (Kuku) and their allies, except for here, in the Ti-ama-te system, where the Kuku have achieved undeserved mastery.

From Mulmul (the Pleiades), the Ubšu'ukkinna system (Maia of the Pleiades) has been retaken by the Amašutum of Adala (Taygete of the Pleiades), of Gišda (the Hyades) and by the Ameli of Bun (Aldebaran of Taurus). I understand that our system of Anduruna (Dubhe), my birthplace, has also been entirely recovered by our females of Margí'da (Ursa Major).

Sa'am-Enki laments the irony, how he and other allies of the Source pursued the war to this system and ended up contributing to the (local) victory of his Kuku, becoming now unwelcome in the "fruitful" places.

In spite of their legendary wisdom, the royal authority of the Amašutum established in Gišda (the Hyades), disavow the daughter of Tiamata, Mamítu-Nammu - legitimate sovereign of the Gina'abul. My mother and I are exiles here, along with the Nindigir (priestesses) who have followed us in the battle as well as our Nungal. We are now constrained to associate ourselves with the Ušumgal and their Anunna - forced to collaborate with the Gina'abul traitors with whom we have no affinity. The technology that we use to survive each Ud (day) is quite rudimentary. We depend on only the equipment that has made the voyage with us and what we have by the good will of the Nindigir (priestesses) of the Abzu.

If I may say, this perhaps strikes a resonant note... but we are a long, long way down the road today. Let us go on...

Sa'am-Enki points out that Ninmah, the sovereign of Kharsag, has illegally replaced his progenitrix in her constitutional functions, Nammu, who possesses the regal blood of her mother and of the Kadištu via the genetics that she has acquired from the Abgal of Gagsisá (Sirius). The ordinances of An and his Šātam (territorial administrator) are outside the universal rules.

And so Ninmah swept into Sa'am's Kharsag, uninvited, and as Enlil's companion, rubbed herself like a Su (an animal) over everything Sa'am possessed, without his even knowing, until even his personal effects were impregnated with her emanation.

Although Enlil was totally in Ninmah's power, her objective was not Enlil; it was Sa'am himself, and had been for a long time.

Sa'am, observing himself here, saw that his own character had been modified over time by his creator's (An's) entourage, becoming more and more hardened and careful.

When Ninmah came into his dwelling place, it was always to spy on him and to lend to him her therapeutic virtues. Recently she had placed on his research table a goblet filled with her Úzug (menses). She had believed him to be sick, but he had been well enough in public.

She often found him to be with inopportune symptoms which actually did not at all reflect his state. He never drank her euphoriant drinks and he always cleaned out his working tools after she left.

Her comportment was at one time emphatic and irritating.

His mother Mam, for some reason Sa'am did not understand, was avoiding her son at this time.

Sa'am-Enki had brought up Zehuti (Thot) from the Abzu (underground world) and put him in his (Sa'am's) place in Edin. Sa'am had left the Gígal, Edin, Kharsag and its Ereš (queen). He had abandoned his Nungal for a time and left Enlil to track the Ugubi (apes) and Ukubi (genus Homo). He was henceforth on the search for Sé'et!

Although Ninmah never ceased to predict Sé'et's imminent return to Uraš, his sister's whereabouts remained unknown.

Here is a summary of some notes entered by Sa'am-Enki on his search:

- He visited Udu'idimsa (Mars) and its zone of production hidden in its Abzu. Mîmínu (greys) served as guide. The beings at the head of the Kiši (ant people) said Sé'et had returned to the Abzu of the Mulge.
- The Abzu's fields seemed abandoned; its silos empty. The priestesses there said that Sé'et had been set free and taken by a group of Ama'argi from Mulge-Tab, a month ago.
- A gigantic mothership was under construction in the center of the planet's Abzu, by Mîmínu, accompanied by the deafening roar of a multitude of machines.
- On the way back to the surface, Sa'am saw strange stations for treatment of mined materials.

As to the surface of the planet:

It was a charred and choking ruin, ravaged by combat. Sa'am's Niama permitted him to perceive the atrocities that the astral domain had endured, which he felt it would be preferable not to reveal.

The light of Udu'idimsa (Mars) is much stronger than that which we experience here on Uraš. I take it Parks is saying this is in part because its smaller size gives it a smaller (shallower) atmosphere, but he also reminds us that this time period is prior to the disruption of the orbits of all the inner planets that occurred later when Mulge-Tab went traveling. In other words, all those planets were closer to the sun then than they are today.

So much for the physical description of Udu'idimsa. As for the progress of his search:

Sa'am did find his creator An ensconced in a sumptuous palace he had built, in just several Ud (days), in the middle of the rubble of the ancient royal quarters.

An welcomed him with open arms... the first time since they had all arrived in this "hole", as Sa'am put it. An had been avoiding Sa'am, but there he could no longer. He apparently wished to cut an impressive figure before his slimy henchmen...

I was not very cordial and this escaped no one. An was lounging on his enormous bed ornamented with red and green jasper. He was totally ridiculous! Close to him were two Kingú-Babbar chained by the neck and the two bound hands. They seemed to symbolize the victory of my creator over his consanguine adversaries. This scene was deplorable.

Asked where Sé'et might be found, An responded that he knew nothing, and that Sé'et had left Udu'idimsa (Mars) an Iti (month) before, with some Amašutum from Mulge-Tab, the satellite of the planet of the Kadištu (Life Designers). Sé'et was no longer "under their divine providence", having been given her liberty in thanks for her efforts.

Mulge and Mulge-Tab have the use of arms that escape our control and understanding. These accursed planets are not yet under our authority. You are the guarantor of of the Uga-Muš (the People of the Serpent) my son. If you ignore the conduct of individuals for whom you are responsible, how can we have confidence in you?

The very interesting conversation continues; we'll attempt to summarize the points:

- The Amašutum must obey Sa'am; if they do not, their blood will be on him.
- Sa'am goes to so much trouble to preserve his Nungal. An could liberate them with the snap of a finger.
- Give him Mulge and Mulge-Tab, and An will give Sa'am his deserved place on Uraš. Enlil will be ousted. Ninmah will support this.

Sa'am responds that he cannot offer what does not belong to him. To which An's tone becomes rougher:

Then have you nothing better to do in Edin than to run after your Kadištu (Life Designer) sister? Only the uncertain Source whose nature you preach knows perhaps where she is found at present. It has been a long time since the daughter of Nammu was part of your existence. You are reconstructing, Enki. That is the reality. Ninmah needs your services on Uraš. It is necessary for us to be willful and disciplined so as to renovate these unfortunate places.

Is it not you who are responsible for this carnage my dear genitor? Peace reigned in these places before our arrival!

An did not take this well. Their regards affronted each other. An's was hard and dominating. He no doubt had attempted to sound Enki by means of his Niama, but Enki had closed his chakras, as was his habit.

Enki was master of the Abzus of each planet in the system. An was constructing his ship without Enki's permission. A challenge of force existed between them.

Having nothing further to say to one another, they ended this meeting like strangers.

Enki departed in his Gigirlah (vessel) totally irritated, leaving some description of the physical state of the planet in his Gírkù. He headed for a Diranna (stargate) and programmed his arrival on Mulge, "the dark star" of the Kadištu (Life Designers)... the "planet of deserters"!

He did not understand why he spoke thus. A profound anger had assailed him for several Ud (days). He had a bad presentiment, but why? He hardly recognized himself. His hands trembled abnormally. He would have to calm himself quickly; otherwise the descent would be rude and he risked causing himself a major crisis of Buluhur (spasms).

Sa'am-Enki emerged at Mulge, to find the planet criss-crossed with powerful storms, whose lightning actually posed a threat to the equipment on his ship. He would have liked to descend into the Abzu, but did not because the detestable Mardukù had had to be deposited there. (Readers may need to review the section Laws.)

Following his instinct, Sa'am-Enki avoided Mulge. He could not explain the strange malaise that it gave him. He knew that in its Abzu were many emissaries of the Source who had survived the war.

At any rate, he followed his intuition toward the satellite Mulge-Tab.

This object was of moderate size compared with Mulge, but possessed a dimension similar to that of Uraš. It had an environment very different from that of its mother Mulge, being at once aquatic and forested. It did not seem to have been affected by the terrors of war.

Enki's vessel was directed toward an accessible stargate. Mulge-Tab's traffic was minutely filtered. The satellite possessed a thermal shield that served to protect it from external aggressions, and procured for it a constant warmth from one end to the other of the planet.

When I exited my Gigirlah, a piercing whistle resonated in my ears. I was greeted by a group of Ama'argi.

Their bodies were moulded in a white sheath, split to the knee, of the same type that Nammu wore at times.

I had to breathe calm and self-mastery.

The sky of Mulge-Tab is of a blinding blue and its soil radiates a constant warmth. I had the vague impression of finding myself on the planet Dukù. See [Worlds]

At this point we are presented with a richly and beautifully detailed description of the reception -- Enki's arrival was expected and awaited -- and of the planet itself. It would give us great pleasure to simply translate this... but this is not the purpose of these pages. An English-language translation will eventually be published. And so, as we generally try to do, we will bring you some of what we believe to be essential facts that will help to understand what has taken place in this long-forgotten piece of our history; the full flavor will be available later.

But where shall we draw the line? Shall we simply mention for the benefit of some future liberated botanist that an immaculate white magnolia whose fragrance is Enki's preferred of all he knows is the sacred tree of this planet? Why not?

Suffice to say that Enki was met by an escort of dozens of Amašutum in gold-ornamented liturgical vestments, dancing in rhythm as they led him toward a port city where a tribune of honor had been prepared.

Asar is the true Egyptian name of Osiris, "Osiris" being the Greek name of Usir (the seat of the eye) given to Asar after his legendary disappearance. Its origin is assuredly Gina'abul (Sumerian) under the form AŠ-ÁR ("the glorified unparalleled one").

After endless praises, the females provided Sa'am-Enki with yet another of what he takes to be pompous names: Ašár ("the glorified unparalleled one").

The Ama'argi then turned to the gigantic Unir (pyramid) that dominated the west of the port city with its white marble facade. On its top the rays from a quartz crystal of immoderate size seemed to rend the sky in two.

Sa'am-Enki felt a shudder. The priestesses had exalted the divine light of the sun through the intermediary of the dazzling pyramid that reflected its luminescence.

He was led silently down a long road to the pyramid and made to descend where he was left in the underground darkness, alone... until he could make out some figures moving in the distance. Sa'am-Enki was then invited to join in a basin... three Abgal -- Kadištu of Sirius! (See the description of this race under Races.)

The Abgal emanated an indescribable peace that, at the moment, reminded him of Sé'et. But their faces painfully evoked her absence.

One approached, took him in her arms, and spoke with the aid of Kinsag (telepathy):

My brother Ea (of the house of water), we were all waiting for you. We would have wished to have met with you under more propitious conditions. You must hear the truth on the subject of our sister Sé'et.

The Abgal held me still more strongly.

The daughter of Nammu is no longer of this world. Her vessel exploded before reaching Mulge-Tab. Your mother is aware of the situation, but she did not dare speak of it to you, knowing your attachment to your sister.

This was altogether too much; the dream had suddenly turned to dread. Enki leapt from the water, as to deliver himself from the clutches of this nightmare. Blinded by anger and overtaken by convulsive sobs... an Abgal tried to calm him and announce that "the past and the future can be apprehended by the spirit", saying that one must look beyond appearances.

Sé'et has chosen to depart and to experiment with death.

They said that Enki's sister had opened a way of wisdom for the Gina'abul who were aware of her death...

Enki neither understood nor wished to understand anything. Anger was the most direct path of response for him. He hastily took his leave, thinking only of the plot of his Kuku (ancestors) and An's manipulation. His head resonated with sinister thoughts toward them!

Sa'am-Enki hastened to leave the subterranean complex. His anger could not be controlled. He knew he was wrong to have reacted in this way, but there it was. He was also angry with himself; his Abgal blood was of no use against his "genetic animality" programmed by An to render him systematically blind.

Still, he understood. His mother and he had been betrayed by his Kuku (ancestors). The Amašutum were bereaved; she who was destined to ascend to the throne of Uraš and promised to unseat Ninmah -- in the name of Tiamata and of Nammu -- no longer existed!

The Amašutum asked if he did not wish to collect himself by visiting the dummy of his sister. Being unable to recover Sé'et's body, the Nindigir (priestesses) had fabricated this and placed it in the Duat of Mulge-Tab, under the pyramid. (The Primordial Chaos is the best place to shelter the body of a Gir, an obstetrician of Kirišti.) But Sa'am would not render value to this masquerade. He simply asked them to guard their silence over this entire affair and left Mulge-Tab, the harbor of peace where the days appeared to succeed one another identically.

Suddenly it was all clear. Ninmah's proposition was logical if she was au courant of the situation. Sa'am was certain that Ninmah was part of the plot.

Fatigued, he engaged his automatic pilot and programmed as his destination the star port at the foot of the Dukug, the sacred mountain (at Kharsag).

He would say nothing. Whether it had been an accident or a crime, he would know by their eventual reactions to the prolonged absence of his sister.

He headed back to Uraš. He had a severe crisis of Buluhur (spasmod crisis). He had to get some sleep quickly. Here is where this entry into Ugur ends.

Nungal Insurrection

...Long time passes before the next entry into Ugur. The pain has been so excessive.

But in time, Sé'et's face begins little by little to fade, he begins to forget her smile, her green eyes (pupils)...

Sa'am-Enki spends some time in the jungle in the south (north) of Sigun (Australia) where they used to camp after having first arrived on this planet.

What has become of her soul? Where is she?

Kharsag remains the sovereign domain of Ninmah, the Ušumgal and most of the Anunnaki, while the Edin (the plain) is the retreat of Enlil and his multiethnic workers. Some Anunnaki are scattered in the gigantic plain. We have begun to erect cities for them near most of the Diranna (star ports) that punctuate the lands of the grand Šàtam (territorial administrator). These buildings are not yet all inhabited.

The Nungal have pursued their interminable labor, unsupported now by Sa'am-Enki for years. Meanwhile after the loss of his sister, he abandoned himself to a suicidal despair, imagining a thousand and one means of putting an end to his days. But he would need an extreme and radical method, since he was gifted with eternal life by grace of the Níama. He would throw himself under an Albarzil (mechanical drill); crash in full flight against the Dukug (holy mountain); pass under a reactor [?]; eliminate himself with the aid of a Gidrugiri (lightning bolt)... or with Ugur. He never lacked for ideas but he could never carry out the act. Something or someone always impeded. He would like to have thought it was a Namlú'u - an invisible one - who was responsible.

Finally he borrowed an Ama'argi Tumuá (single-place flying apparatus) and flew it around and around Uraš under full power until its power crystal blew up, leaving him stranded in the middle of Kankala (Africa). He had to call Ninmah via Kinsag (telepathy) to come and rescue him.

He had not mentioned Sé'et's disappearance when around the Kuku or Ninmah or Enlil. But when he did mention her name, it was in inventing some imaginary news. Sé'et was said to be living in the Abzu with her mother and sister Dim'mege. Ninmah had at times mentioned to Sa'am-Enki that Sé'et ought to come out of the Abzu and pay a courtesy visit. Sa'am was always obliged to invent excuses more and more unlikely, one after the other. They had all played this stupid game.

The density of the KI had made itself felt more and more for the males from Margíd'da (the Great Bear, Ursa Major) and from Mulmul (the Pleiades), even for those of double polarity. Sa'am-Enki had thought he might escape this effect thanks to the omnipotent force of the Ušumgal, but Nammu and Ninmah had been correct: it was difficult for him due to a paternal genetic factor that he could not explain very well. Nevertheless he tolerated the situation much better than did the Anunnna. His Nungal and Enlil supported the KI marvelously.

He was not a true Nungal, and so contrary to them, he did not possess the genetic components of the Babbar (albinos). For their part, the Ušumgal hid in their quarters at Kharsag where Ninmah took good care of them. She was like that with everyone, and Sa'am-Enki eventually had to cave to her repeated advances.

The midwife of the Anunna had become Sa'am's Šan (mistress/owner). She was the one who produced for him her "regard of life". He hardly rejoiced in this, because Ninmah did not inspire in him the confidence he would like to entertain with whom he would love. Moreover, he suspected that behind his back she gave her Úzug (menses) to his Ušumgal Kuku (ancestors). She had this wish to render herself indispensable and to see that no one at Kharsag would escape her sovereign control.

He had gone to meet Nammu in the Abzu to ask if she would accord him her "regard of life" in place of Ninmah, but she had not accepted. Once again, she had preferred to leave Sa'am facing his responsibilities.

His sister Dim'mege had proposed that he come live at Šàlim, the capital of the Abzu, and form with her the "pillar of the world". She had suggested that he would become her Nitahlam (lover), and offered her "regard of life". But something undefinable spoke against that; he did not know what.

Dim'mege nevertheless was more agreeable to the view that Ninmah and Sa'am would inspire more confidence.

She had slimmed down in recent Muanna (years) and was very pretty. She always had been. And now she wore a heavy scent that secretly intoxicated Sa'am.

Ninmah had been asking for some of Dì'me'ge's Ama'argi to come to be mates to her Anunnaki so that the colony could grow. Although Ninmah had wanted more, Dì'me'ge had allowed only fifty, and these purely voluntary. Dì'me'ge was no fool! She knew the real reason was the need for their "regard of life".

Ninmah had also asked Enki to repatriate a large number of Nindigir (priestesses) of Mulge and Mulge-Tab for the same reason. But Enki had refused even to speak to the Kadištu about this, the idea was so grotesque! (Actually he had no rapport with them anyway.)

In spite of their union, Enki and Ninmah did not live together. Ninmah wished that Enki would give her a child, and she had used all of her charms to this end, but he retained his sperm as Nammu had assigned him to do. He did not wish to give offspring to the sovereign of the Anunna, the accomplice of his creator assassin.

He took refuge at Nunkiga (Eridu), his little station in the middle of the large Edin (plain). Sigpabnun (Isimmud) was with him there. He guided him sometimes to calm himself in his follies. His presence and his extraordinary calm were at times soothing. He was very centered.

At this time, Enki seems torn by everyone's needs. The climate on Uraš is not warm enough for the Anunnaki. They reign like sovereigns on high (at Kharsag). The Nungal can barely approach them from Nunkiga. Enki's Alagní (clones) are supposed to be digging with six Albarzil (mechanical drills) but two are out of service. Their materiel is out of date. Dim'me'ge has not authorized replacement, doubtless in retaliation for Enki's not having become her Nitahlam (lover). Some Nungal have returned to digging with shovels. Enki tries to maneuver for them between Dim'me'ge, Ninmah's people, and his Kuku (ancestors), but barely.

Enki has returned three times to Mulge-Tab. Life there is peaceable. The Nindigir (priestesses) who live there form an exemplary cellular organization, or at least so it seems. They seem to care for nothing except his personal pleasure when he is around them.

They seem totally disconnected with the difficulties on Uraš. Is this the life of the Kadištu (Life Designers)?

For so long now, Enki has painfully confirmed that he has not been able to approach the Ukubi'im (genus Homo Neanderthalis) family with once he had had such good rapport and from which came Agarin. She had come out of Africa. Certain tribes had been directed toward the middle lands (Europe). Enki did not know if it was his proximity to Ninmah that was causing the problem. He seemed to have been changing little by little and losing his profound essence.

At this point Enki has one idea in his head: to find "his promise" - Sé'et - her essence, soon, wherever it was, and whatever would be the mechanism with which it would come to materialize.

He had gone to meet with the Abgal of Mulge-Tab again, who were never far from the liquid element and the Kíg-Ku (dolphins) who peopled the borders of the sea. The Abgal had initiated him into the functioning of the Ba (soul) which aided him in detaching momentarily from his promise. They had explained that the Ba could sometimes lead down indirect paths for the benefit of life's missions. This idea conformed to what had been said to him innumerable Muanna (years) ago by the Ninhal (divination priestess) when she had visited him at Kharsag. (See Prophecy.)

Enki had asked his Nungal Zehuti (Thot) - who had for some time been occupied with coordinating the Nungal in Edin - to go and study the Gígal and take personal charge of the secret zone that the Urmah had accorded to him. Zehuti had also taken responsibility for Šé'et's chamber in the Abzu, ensuring that it was just as Enki had left it when he departed for Kharsag. Enki was planning to visit the Abzu again and rejoin his maternal family soon.

Enki had absolute confidence in Zehuti.

Seeing the Nungal digging under his nose was going to be completely unbearable for Enki. The Nungal were exhausted. Enlil would give them no rest under any circumstances. The tension mounted more and more in the trenches.

The great Šàtam ranged long and wide over the vast Edin, supervising the urban works. Some Anunnaki were put to work on that, but very few. Mainly it was the Kingú who had been occupied for some time with the construction of the Anunna edifices. The Mîmínu (greys) oversaw the work day and night. The royals were hardly better treated than the Nungal; often in chains. Enlil had several at his service.

Weather Modification

Conforming to Decree 33 of the Mardukù, the Ušumgal and Ninmah ordained that the Ama'argi shall make the sun appear. Our females had refused, stating that this decree was related to the climate of the Dukù and not to that of Uraš.

A vote had been taken at Kharsag. My creator had not descended from his accursed Udu'idimsa (Mars) but he had ordered Enlil to stand in for him.

The grand council voted in the majority to put Decree 33 into practice. The Amašutum present declared that it was folly and that one should not change the climate as brusquely as Ninmah and the great Šàtam wished. However, under the sovereign order of the Assembly, the Ama'argi had had to pierce the cloud base so that the sun could appear and they would have the warmth required for Ninmah's progenitures.

The giant prisms and antennas of our Nindigir (priestesses) were directed toward the firmament, and the climate has actually changed on Uraš! The sky is of a profound blue. It is suddenly warmer, which is going to have repercussions on our daily life and on our agriculture.

Enki should have been occupying himself with the agricultural programs, but the task simply repulsed him. He had less and less interest in working for the Anunnaki and their directors. However the vast Edin waited to be planted and to generate the nourishment needed by the colony and all the workers.

They had extended the agricultural areas, cloned the cattle that would pull the plows and bring the milk, but it was not enough.

The Nindigir (priestesses) busied themselves with the flocks. The small cattle grazed in the heights, near Ninmah's garden and Enki's laboratory.

Enki approved the restarting of agriculture in the Abzu of Udu'idimsa (Mars), which would leave him some respite. Šetir, the priestess of grains, and Udu'us, priestess of cattle, were assigned this work. Cargoes coming from Mars were chartered regularly to bring additional foodstuffs. What was lacking at this point was a labor force on Udu'idimsa (Mars).

Ninmah had some Nungal come up to Kharsag, where they served in various urban works. In these more elevated living areas, the Nungal were better treated than in Edin (the plain).

Ninmah presided over maternity at Kharsag. Enki had not participated in childbirth and delivery for some Muanna (years), the sovereign of the Anunna having a number of competent Ninti around her. Enki had had to expand the maternity center a year before.

The Anunnaki mixed with the Ama'argi, and the colony grew, to the great pleasure of Ninmah.

Enki contemplated the cloud of dust, fatally approaching. Zehuti's (Thot's) absence had much affected the Nungal, though Enki compensated as much as he could by spending all his time with them. But they were covered with sweat, dust, and earth, and could do no more.

Ninti or Nintu

Generic Sumerian term designating "midwife, nurse, "cloner"". NIN-TI is translated "priestess of the life". One finds this term on numerous Sumerian tablets, especially where there is question of childbirth or delivery, treatment of specific persons, or of clonage... Ninmah-Ninkharsag (or Ninhursag) is always described as being a highly gifted Ninti.

The weather had become much warmer. The Nungal were only approximately half-finished with their task. [Ocean levels were lower at that epoch. The Persian Gulf was above sea level and made up part of Edin.] It was insanity!

It is at this rather bleak moment that Enki seems to have gotten an idea - risky, but one that might resolve all this. He cannot consign it to Ugur, for fear of having it learned by others if he should lose possession of the Gírkù. But the end of the suffering seems suddenly very close.

Enki is going to ask Sigpabnum (Isimmud) to wait at Nunkiga (Eridu) where he will be given a mission. He will carry it out at the proper moment, to be signalled by Enki.

In his next Gírkù entry, Enki has rejoined his domain in the Abzu and has been visiting there for some Ud (days).

Several types of Ugubi (monkey or ape) and Ukubi (genus Homo) families have passed through the overture and joined the underground domain - not en masse but occasionally. They have been disturbed by the changes in the climate above. Other families have sojourned there since the night of time.

Among them exists a particular type of colossal size who serve as mountain sentinels to beings who live under the earth. The Ama'argi call them the Uru. They possess a character that is conciliatory toward those who approach them with respect.

Enki has moved into Sé'et's old chamber, which appears to have been totally undisturbed... is in the same state of disarray as when Sé'et left it, as though Zehuti had not even set foot there.

We will summarize the remainder of this Gírkù entry.

Enki is spending time, awaiting the right moment for his plan. Meanwhile we are treated to the lovemaking side of his life, especially the intense relationship with Dìm'mege.

Dìm'mege asks how she compares with Sé'et, not realizing that Enki could not have had bodily relations with Sé'et; otherwise his sister would share the Niama, they would have had full telepathic rapport, and she probably would be with them all today.

It's complicated; Dìm'mege now shares the Niama as well, but Enki can keep some information from her by controlling his chakras. Nevertheless, Dìm'mege knows of his plan and approves of it.

Uru

From the Sumerian URU₂ "guard"; "keep watch". Its homophones URU₁₆ "enormous", "immense", "valiant" or even URU₇ "parent" give the same sense. They appear without doubt to be great mountain apes of which one finds traces today among the different cultures of the planet, as for example the Bigoot in the USA, Pongo in Africa, Yeti in Nepal, Kaptur of the Caucasus, etc.

Sexual arrangements among these beings clearly differ a little from ours. Another matter is that of the "regard of life" -- the menstrual fluid. All of the females in Enki's life would like him to share theirs. There are reasons why it is good to stay with just one. He sticks with Ninmah in this regard.

Enki worries about leaving the Nungal for too long, but he believes it is only a matter of days before his plan comes to fruition.

Nammu does not seem pleased with all the pleasures taking place between Enki and Dim'mege. The reason is a little mysterious and they speculate.

She has just exhibited to Enki for the first time a being whom he had never seen before. She is his creatress, in that she has fashioned him from genetic material. In fact she has used the same genetic material that she had used for Enki. They are, in a sense, brothers. Nammu has not been very precise on this subject.

Enki thinks that Nammu must have used partially his genotype to augment the Abgal content.

The being is a mixed-blood, mixture of Abgal and Kingú.

Nammu seems close to this strange being with the skin of a Babbar (albino). He is called Hé'er -- "the fruitful who guides" -- which seems quite a strange name to Enki. Who is this Hé'er to guide and why should he? Enki believes Nammu wishes to make of him a guide for the Gina'abul, who would achieve that which Enki himself had not achieved correctly.

[This appears to be "Horus the Great" (see the enlarged Sources chart in our Genealogy section), son of Nut (Nammu), not "Horus the Avenger", posthumous son of Asar (Osiris).]

Ok, Enki's plan ("ruse") seems to be working. Nammu has just come by, very angry, to tell him that his Nungal have ceased their labors. She must have become aware of Enki's inner chuckling, as she became doubly indignant at his inertia and nonchalance.

I wish to face everyone with their responsibilities, my mother as well as the Ušumgal. Mam (Nammu) for having made me carry the sole responsibility for the genetic origin of the Nungal, and my Kuku (ancestors) for having used our Alagni (clones) as Arad (slaves). I love Nammu from the depths of my being, but I must not let myself walk on her feet. I have retorted to my genetrix that she must not worry; when my presence will be requested in Edin (the plain) and at Kharsag, I will go then to be with our rivals.

Don't concern yourself my mother, I know what I am doing. I will go to restore your prestige soon!

First clean your own honor before evoking mine Enki!

It seemed true that Nammu had lost all confidence in Enki and this saddened him profoundly. But he knew how he would recover his pride, as she said he must, and also hers!

The Nungal had not taken up their work again. The Mīmínu overseers had commanded them to resume their drilling, but they had used their tools for the revolt and had taken several Mīmínu hostage.

Enki had sent a signal in one of his crystals at Nunkiga and his devoted Siggabnun (Isimmud) had gone to the Nungal and discretely conveyed the message that was intended for them. The clones were then freed in their movements, and crossed the Edin, headed for the home of the Great Šatam (Territorial Administrator, Enlil).

Siensišár and Remission

The Electronic Text Corpus of Sumerian Literature (ETCSL)

Readers are encouraged to familiarize themselves with the ETCSL body of literature comprising "a selection of nearly 400 literary compositions recorded on sources which come from ancient Mesopotamia (modern Iraq) and date to the late third and early second millennia BCE." Parks certainly makes reference to this and in particular opens his Ádam Genisiš chapter being discussed here with an extensive quote from the section Enki and Ninmah.

Parks notes that this text clearly distinguishes Mamítu-Nammu, mother of Enki, from Ninmah, his mistress. Too many authors, he says, confuse these two.

The general topic is the use of the Siensišár -- artificial womb (see Decoder) -- normally to create "dignitaries", but here to be used to confect a sort of primitive human. Enki is going to have to modify or upgrade the Siensišár to make use of the "blood" of beings residing in the terrestrial Abzu.

The mutiny takes place in Edin. Enlil ("the lord idiot") barricades himself in his dwelling in Duranki (Sumerian name for the town of Nippur, city of the Great Šatam Enlil. It has the meaning "Bond between heaven and earth".)

The Great Šātam has tried several times to reach Enki via Kinsag (telepathy), of which he possesses partial mastery due to the Níama that he has received from Ninmah, but Enki has not responded.

Seeing that Enki is not going to command his Nungal to return to work, Nammu seems to become concerned that her Uga-Muš (People of the Serpent, the Amašutum) will be drafted. Therefore she prescribes that Enki produce a handiwork that will replace the Nungal. This is something of which he had long dreamed, but would not have undertaken except by the order of the greatest Amašutum geneticist, Mamítu-Nammu.

Ethical questions had long surged in Enki's spirit, and he had discussed these with Nammu. Who would risk incarnating in these bodies, ready to work?

Her response had sent chills down his spine. It is worth quoting verbatim from the book:

Each is free to incarnate where he wishes, it is the common code of beings in our universe. Sorrow and failure are an integral part of Zišàgál (incarnations) that evolve in the parts of the Galaxy where duality rules.

We know, you and I, that it is difficult to accept, especially you, my son, when you must carry on your shoulders the wishes of your Kuku (ancestors).

If you do not offer them a solution quickly, it is war that awaits us here and the fragile peace that Uraš (the Earth) enjoys will be destroyed for Limamu (millennia).

We, Nindigir (priestesses), have borne the brunt of discord throughout the course of our long history; we know where all that has led us. Do you think that the Kadištu (Life Designers) asked themselves the question of which type of Ba (soul) was going to incarnate in the body of the Imdugud? The model of the allies of the Source does not cease to concern me, even if at times I do not always totally incorporate it!...

Their following conversation dealt with the selection of the genetic material that would be used to clone these beings.

From an ideological perspective, it would seem out-of-bounds to contemplate employing Ušumgal or Anunna material, for fear of offending those groups. Nammu wished to exploit the genetic material of the various types of Ugubi (apes) that she had upgraded to Ukubi'im (Homo Neanderthalensis) under the noses of the Kingú and emissaries of the Source. She felt such tenderness for them that she doubtless wished to further develop this family. Enki well understood that, having studied them and rubbed elbows with them, as it were. Agarin, his female Ukubi'im, was in his heart. She had shown him how endearing these beings could be, and how they were animated by a remarkable conscience, no doubt sharper than that of the Anunna!

[Here, in his Note 92, Parks briefly reviews, giving references, the state of genetic science today with regard to puzzling genetic links between the various Homo types. Rather than contemplating a moment of deliberate external manipulation, researchers fall on simple ongoing relations of copulations between apes and hominids.]

Once Enki and Nammu had basically decided on using the genes of the Ukubi'im (Homo Neanderthalensis), Enki proposed using specifically genes of the Ukubi'im family that he had studied over a long period of time, and that he had stocked and brought with him there to the Abzu.

Nammu was astonished at the proposition (not made clear if she had known about the genes being there), but she accepted.

Let's again take the liberty of quoting verbatim a paragraph from the book. This material is of keen interest; we might as well keep it true to the original.

I fabricated a new type of Siensišár (artificial womb). A model that was going to permit us to generate mixed-bloods.

I began with Ama'argi apparatuses, the Uzumúa matrices that are composed of a large quantity of quartz.

I made a number of attempts and I was required to employ Zirzi (destroyers of life) to eliminate unfruitful products. This experience of having to destroy unsuccessful models is completely disagreeable to me. It reminds me of my creator and of the Alagni (clones) that he had created and suppressed before obtaining me.

I incinerated the body of each; it was necessary never to leave any trace of our work. I had to refine my attempts in order to avoid having to kill. I had blood on my hands and that did not please me at all! I had felled Abzu-Abba, I had killed on the Dukù to save my skin and there I am today in the act of suppressing living beings due to the fact that they are only drafts or specimens of a great line to come.

I have difficulty creating beings with restricted understanding. We have voluntarily chosen this model for its developed conscience. I cannot produce pure Ádam (animals), not like these stupid Kingú Ukubi-Ádam (Homo Erectus)!

Meanwhile, Enlil had convened a Divine Assembly at the Ubšu-ukkinna (Retreat) at Kharsag. Enki send Sigpabnun (Isimmud); Anšár received him with great fracas.

Enlil had beseeched An to descend (from Mars) to preside over this extraordinary convocation. An was not in good humor at the moment when Sigpabnun arrived; he was spending much time with Ninurta trying to dislodge the Kingú and the Imdugud who had installed themselves on Itud (the moon). It was wasted effort and even suicidal; the royals and their children had possessed bases on the satellite of Uraš for Limamu (millennia). Moreover, An possessed limited numbers of soldiers, which did nothing for his ambitions.

Two Iti (months) have passed. Enki has gone to Duranki (Nippur) (where apparently Enlil has remained all this time, in his barricade) to try to do something about the situation and deliver the Great Šàtam. He found him understandably highly irritated and filled with wicked reproaches.

The two of them did not take the same road to return to Kharsag.

Reaching the mountain of Dukug at Kharsag, Enki found Dim'mege at his side. Zehuti (Thoth) had left the Gígal and was in place to represent the ensemble of the Nungal. All high society was present. The Ušumgal in full, some Mušgir (dragons), and some Mîmínu ("greys") who had come down with An.

This was another laborious session as the Kuku knew so well how to organize.

While various important options were being offered to Enki's partisans, Enki's ultimate aim was to put an end to the diplomatic disorder and above all to release his Nungal, by means of the program that he was going to propose.

SO...

The discussions went like this:

Enlil demanded reparations for the affront that he had suffered.

The Ušumgal were strangely ill at ease and did not take up a position of support for their Šàtam.

Enki quickly calmed everyone's spirits and presented the plan that he and Nammu had prepared. That is, his proposal to create a substitute for the Nungal and an outline of his work with developing the new Siensišár (artificial womb) as described above.

Ninmah listened and never took her eyes off Enki. Enlil was very suspicious. He scanned in the assembly that it was not a good idea. But An and Ninmah were not of his advice and begged Enki to pursue his presentation.

Seeing that the situation was eluding him, Enlil grew beside himself, red with anger. It then appeared that An, with the use of Kinsag (telepathy), ordered him to be quiet. Because at that time he was brusquely calmed and seemingly took on the quality of the Mardukù, which is to say, Master of Laws.

An approved the idea but needed to know more about the genetic material to be used. Enki explained that he would be using Ukubi'im (Homo Neanderthalensis) mixed with Gina'abul. This troubled An, who thought that these specimens would have an affinity with the "distressing" Namlú'u of the Kadištu (Life Designers).

Enki could not honestly respond affirmatively, because the sources of the different types of Ukubi'im (genus Homo) were nebulous. Nammu and Dì'm'ege had actually never taken him into their confidence on this. Likewise, he had not been able to learn anything on it from his crystal. However it did seem as though Nammu and her Ninti (priestesses of life) would indeed have augmented the Ukubi'im line of emissaries of the Source, while the Ama'argi had transformed the Ukubi-Ádam (genus Homo Erectus) without the knowledge of the royals.

Enšár, father of An, asked which genetic material of their family was Enki thinking of using. Enki said that the Ama'argi being workers and meticulous, their material would procure good elements.

And then, with the clap of hand, Enki introduced into the room the specimen that he had assembled. The audience was totally stupefied!

Dì'm'ege accompanied him like a mother. She wore an ample semi-transparent drapery, tied across the chest, covering her body from breast to ankle. Sumptuous jewelry rustled over her vaporous drape. She was an incomparable beauty.

Enki instantly caught the pointed regard fixed by Ninmah on the daughter of Nammu. Her face darkened. She was undoubtedly struck to see that she and Nammu were no longer the only females to carry the Níama. Enki perceived a profound jealousy on Ninmah's part, accompanied by a sudden sense of vulnerability.

Readers of these pages have already encountered the term Kirišti (look it up in the Decoder), which is associated with the concept of Christ. Although this class of being arises in the system of Gagsisá (Sirius), from which Sa'am/Enki embodied genetic material, Parks clearly states that Sa'am/Enki did not meet the genetic requirements for a Kirišti, and Parks himself, as human as you and I, far less so!

This needs to be emphasized, as Parks' information relating to "Neb-Heru" contains clarifications of the term Kirišti and readers are cautioned not to gather from this that Parks is preparing in any way to assume the role of such a being.

Parks includes in his appendix relating to Neb-Heru a very explicit warning about this, written by "The Collective of the Site Antonparks.com".

Neb-Heru, the Morning Star brought the Anunnaki against their opponents exploded

Adam Geniš includes an appendix of this name, highlighting very telling ancient texts concerning the planet Venus, which they called (among other appellations) the Morning Star, and which they describe as having been a roving star ("astre") before taking its present position in the solar system. As he says, this interpretation was developed by Immanuel Velikovsky in Worlds in Collision.

Yes, we know how Velikovsky fared at the hand of the brilliant Carl Sagan. We hope that our pages may help to redress the affair, which has served to deprive generations of the knowledge which was their birthright.

Parks examines a number of singular documents that confirm, in part, the proposals of Velikovsky, as well as the cosmic events described in Adam Geniš, involving the "astre" Mulge-Tab (companion of Mulge). The most eloquent of these documents are funerary Egyptian texts, but others are just as convincing.

Here is a brief outline (paraphrased from Adam Geniš) of the method Parks used to develop his "Neb-Heru / Morning Star" scenario.

1. Document the total conviction of the Mesopotamians about the place of origin of their gods. Set against this ideology the recent astronomical discoveries concerning the solar system. This serves to reestablish a truth long distorted by authors such as Zecharia Sitchin who wished to see in a wandering member of the solar system, the original home of the Anunna "gods" of the Mesopotamian texts.
2. Attempt to identify this perturbing celestial object. It is found to be mentioned in the Indian Rig-Veda. Draw parallels between this Vedic text and the Egyptian ideology. Note that there is a common source.
3. Establish that Enki and Osiris were one and the same personage. This leads to the possibility of authenticating the amphibian filiations of Enki-Osiris (Sa'am) as well as his consanguinity with the Abgal Designers-of-Life from Sirius - those which were considered to be KIR-IS-TI. Together, these facts connect the Kiristi with the Christ, symbolized by the Morning Star in the hermetic passages of the Bible. This in turn leads to interpretations of the meaning of the various crosses found in different parts of the world. Also, explore the sacrificial tradition of the Dogons which recounts the death of Nommo, the "Christ" of Mali. In consequence of this sacrifice, the universe was disrupted, along with the positions of the stars. All of this gives for the first time the opportunity to assimilate the sacrificed celestial Nommo to a celestial body, whose destruction produced the birth of the planet Venus.
4. Perform a close study of the origins and formation of the planet Venus as seen by different cultures. Note that Venus is always born from the destruction of its progenitor.
5. Explore the connections between various myths that see the planet Venus as having caused floods over the ages. Noting that in the Mesopotamian traditions, Venus and its progenitor bore the names Neberu and Mulge, begin to understand the hermetic ideology of the Egyptians that saw in the dismembered Osiris the asteroid belt. Discover that the shattered tree of the horizon and the primordial hill from which emerged the new sun (Venus) form an identity: a celestial image of Osiris in the sky. Osiris symbolizes the hill of the ancient gods (Kadištu) because he is their representative on Earth. Horus the Avenger, the posthumous son of Osiris, represents the Morning Star. Show that the various Pharaohs (images of Horus) all symbolize Venus. Discover through a study of the Egyptian funerary texts that the soul of the Pharaohs must make the celestial voyage that permits the rejoining of the dismembered body of Osiris in the sky and restoration of the previously disrupted universe. For that, they must follow the ancient path of Neb-Heru (Horus-Venus), the orbit that goes from the light to the darkness. All these discoveries lead to the resounding evidence that the Mesopotamian astre Neberu and the Egyptian Neb-Heru form the same astral image. Provide a graphic showing a possible bit of the object's disruptive trajectory.

Put simply: there was indeed a wandering object in the solar system, which was occasionally highly disruptive to the Earth (and other planets). Its birth out of the destruction of another celestial body was observed by humans, as was its eventual assumption of a stable solar orbit. We know it as Venus. It never was the home of the gods, and there is no such place associated with the solar system. But there are deep connections between this object - Venus - and Horus/Neb-Heru, with Osiris identified as its progenitor.

"Neberu" vs. the Planets X

Parks first examines Zecharia Sitchin's assertions that the Sumerians placed the origins of the Anunnaki on a wandering planet that they named "Neberu" or "Nibiru". This planet, according to Sitchin, possesses a highly elliptical orbit of period 3600 terrestrial years. Sitchin apparently derives this idea solely from the clay tablet "VA-243", which he believes shows the mysterious astre revolving around a sun.

Tablet VA-243 [Berlin]

But this is not any sort of astronomical document. It contains three lines of text, simply indicating: "Dusbsiga (a personal name), Ili-Illat (personal name), your servant". There is no allusion to Neberu and no trace of this planet as the home of the Anunna(ki) "gods". Nor is there any tablet that declares such a thing.

I repeat, there is none! [If there were,] the whole world could verify it, a thing which has definitely not been done up to the present. I insist and I show this in my recent book. I am not asking anyone to believe words that I have received affirming "this version is better than any other". On the contrary, I must insist that M. Sitchin doesn't seem to know the truth about the tablets that he pretends to analyze. Otherwise, he would long ago have given the references to those tablets that a rash handful have demanded of him for years...

Nowhere is there any written allusion such as "the Anunna of Neberu" or "the gods of Neberu" or "they descended from Neberu".
[GMSS]

On the contrary, all the Mesopotamian texts evoke a unique place of origin for the Anunna(ki), clearly denominated Dukù, of which the sense is "sacred mound" or "holy mound".

The Gina'abul-Anunna and the Sumerians had the habit of using the terms "mountain" or "mound" to poetically name heavenly places in the sky, and more precisely stars and planets. The Sumerians utilized this same term Dukù to designate chapels in Eridu and Nippur, in honor of the primordial hilltop of the "gods".

No need to search for any connection between the Dukù and Neberu; there is none.

But Neberu plays a key role in Sitchin's thesis. The Anunnaki needed Earth's gold to place in the atmosphere of their distressed planet in order to fix the sunlight; this was supposed to help retain the atmosphere. Thus the need for gold mines and for human slaves to work in them.

But as explained in Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres, the gold served a radically different purpose, in relation to the secret of immortality!

Meanwhile, neither Sitchin nor anyone else has identified one word of support for the gold-in-the-atmosphere thesis in the Mesopotamian mythology. Furthermore, the name Neberu (Nibiru) itself is rarely found, and when it is, it seems to be associated with the planet Jupiter or with Mercury.

If Neberu indeed exists, would it not be one of the objects recently discovered (since 2002) at the periphery of the solar system? Let's look at their characteristics:

DESIGNATION	DIAMETER, KM	ORBIT	PERIOD, YRS	COMMENTS
2002 LM60 "Quaoar"	~1300	Nearly circular, mostly beyond Pluto	287	Largest known Kuiper Belt object
2003 EL61 "Santa"	Length 2300 (elongated) = Pluto's diameter	Transneptunian, inclined		Two small satellites
2003 VB12 "Sedna"	~1800	Transneptunian, 3x diameter of Pluto's or Neptune's, perihelion 76 AU	10500	Member of "inner Oort cloud"
2004 DW "Orcus"	1600	Transneptunian, perihelion 30.5 AU, 2:3 resonance with Neptune	247.5	minor ice planet

2005 FY9 "Easterbunny"	3/4 size of Pluto	Transneptunian, perihelion 38.5 AU	310	Kuiper Belt
2003 UB313 "Eris"	2600	Perihelion 38 AU	557	In "scattered disc", just beyond Kuiper belt

Many of these have highly-elongated orbits, yet they are all transneptunian, meaning that they never come within the orbit of Neptune -- a minimum requirement, one would think, for the Mesopotamians to have seen them raging through the sky. And not one of them has an orbital period anywhere near 3600 years.

How could Neberu be any of these?

There is also a problem stemming from the name given to Pluto by the Sumerians and Akkadians: ŠU-PA. Sitchin translates this as "the supervisor of SU". Parks explains why this cannot be correct, and opts to translate ŠU-PA as "the control of the ramification (branch point)", meaning the planet that controls the astres and planetoids situated outside the solar system. The Sumerians recognized Pluto as the first planetoid of a very large family!

Parks also notes that the descriptions of the solar system cited by Sitchin to validate his thesis all imply the presence of the asteroid belt. We will see that this dates from approximately 10,000 years ago; various other traditions distinctly hold this notion, as we shall also see.

That said, we note all the same the fact that the Mesopotamian astronomers did seem well acquainted with an obscure Neberu, whose periodic passages frightened everyone.

Parks proposes that the Sumerian "gods" knew the solar system well, including the position of Pluto. But the "gods", and by consequence the Mesopotamians, had not been able to tabulate the planets beyond Pluto because they are unnumerable. And this corresponds well to the way recent astronomical discoveries are pointing.

It is perfectly possible that a planet matching the characteristics of Sitchin's Nibiru may someday be found. But what would qualify it to be the "10th planet" (12th by Sitchin's counting)?

And as to such a planet's being the original planet of the Sumerian "gods", the clay tablets and all of Parks' work state otherwise.

But Parks' work is not concerned with this issue. His Neb-Heru, the Morning Star appendix to Adam Genisiš is devoted to demonstrating that at a certain epoch of our story, an astre -- a celestial object, in this case a planet -- that was already a part of the solar system, was displaced, and strongly perturbed all the planets of this system over a period of several millennia. And this planet is easily identified.

Sitchin's Nibiru and the Longevity of the Anunnaki

Throughout his books, and in public talks, Zecharia Sitchin has ascribed the remarkable longevity of the Anunnaki to their home dwelling place, the planet Nibiru, whose orbital period is 3600 earth years. This, he says, means that every year of the life of an Anunnaki god equals 3600 years of earth human life.

That no one challenges Sitchin on this nutty idea is a tribute to the cultish quality of his following. However he was challenged once - by me, at a public appearance in the Bay area. I simply asked him how he might justify the assertion that longevity and aging are linked to the length of a planet's year.

His reply: "Next question?"

Identifying the Celestial Disrupter

The epoch of disruption would have occurred within the time embraced by the history of long-lived indigenous cultures still found on the earth today. This motivates Parks - as it did Velikovsky and others - to delve into diverse mythologies, searching for descriptions of the disruptions and whatever caused them.

Tales of monumental disruptions are common. As to what caused them, the source is often described as a fiery celestial visitor, and as often as not, the visitor is personified as a god.

Mythologists readily accept such cultural myths of gods as descriptions of natural events. Parks follows this practice, while also knowing that actual living beings were also seen as gods.

This might tend to confuse the reader. Really it should not, when it is recalled that memories of both powerful beings and powerful celestial events were accumulated and retained over thousands of years... and memories can be quite plastic.

Parks begins the quest with the Indian Rig-Veda and its description of the awesome Agni [Decoder], god of fire and sacrifice, the celestial perturber that heaved the earth, yet a warrior in the personal sense, mighty in combat.

Parks traces connections between the Vedic Agni and the biblical Lucifer (Venus), the Latin name meaning "light bearer". In the Greek version of the Bible, Lucifer is named Phosphorus, which also translates as "light bearer". Doubtless from the celebrated passage in Isaiah, "How are you fallen from the sky, Star of the Morning (phosphorus)?..." the Christian church makes the erroneous association with Satan (look up this name in the Decoder).

Parks provides several astonishingly parallel references to Agni in the Rig-Veda.

Note: Of necessity we are being brief; Parks' treatment of the Indian and other myths in his appendix is lengthy. As with other aspects of his work, we cannot provide the details on these pages, but we do attempt to trace the outline or structure of his material, to at least help the reader gain an appreciation of the logical development.

Or is there yet more in store for the reader? Consider this: Parks' narrative has on several occasions explicitly described the initiations of the central character, Sa'am, who is revealed in Adam Genisiš to be identical to Enki-Ea, Osiris, and other important figures. In his pursuit of information reflecting on the identity of the celestial perturber, Parks goes deeply, one might say lovingly, into ancient scriptures of several cultures that have always been with us, but that we now clearly see are also devoted to initiation. For example, there is the Egyptian Book of the Dead, containing instructions to the dead Osiris who with the aid of the initiating priestesses will undergo transformation into Horus, and rise like the Phoenix from the burning ashes.

Question: can one undergo initiation by reading about the information transmitted to the initiate in full ceremony?

One would think not; the initiation must be experienced; death or imminent death must be a part of the experience. The information alone is insufficient; it is not knowledge. Yet the information is essential.

Now consider the human race as a whole. In your opinion, with respect to the information written in these books by Anton Parks, would you say that the human race has been ignorant? I would, yes. Is the human race at this time facing the experience of death or imminent death?

An outrageous suggestion, perhaps. Perhaps with vital information about its past and about its true place in the cosmos, the human race gains the potential to move from the status of uninitiated to pre-initiated and then to the initiated state.

We continue:

Parks provides passages from the Rig-Veda that clearly associate Agni with the the Egyptian Horus (Heru). Some notable points:

Born of two mothers... powerful and reasonable... for the sake of man and the worlds... reposes throughout nature... extracted by rubbing from the breast of his parents... first borne to the east and then to the west.

Rig-Veda, Hymn 12, by Angiras Hiranyastupa

When Agni wished to harness his chariot, his two mothers labored first by mutual efforts to give him a body... These two mothers who remain together hold equally in their breast the fruit who, faithfully conserved, born day and night, always young, always in movement, immortal across the human ages.

Rig-Veda, Hymn 8, by Dirghatamas

Where the father of Agni is "the master of the sacrifice", Osiris is himself the great sacrifice. The two mothers of Agni are comparable to those of Horus: two pieces of wood making the ritual fire. They represent night and dawn. Isis and Nephtys transform themselves symbolically into docking posts to guide the soul of Osiris so that he will not be lost in the void but will be able to raise himself and transmute himself into Ra'af (black sun or black celestial body) before reincarnating as Horus, the celestial son.

This ritual is accomplished in the Great Pyramid. As noted in Le Secret, the Egyptian term for pyramid is Mer. Please consult the Decoder for a full elaboration of this word.

Readers may recall that the Great Pyramid is symbolic of Isis. The tomb of Thutmosis III (Amduat, 5th Hour, Register 3, 374) leaves no doubt of this, because it assimilates the flesh of Isis to the primordial hill. The head of the goddess is clearly seen at the pinnacle.

The pyramid symbolizes Isis. At its eastern extremity (on the right) appear a serpent and a star, representing the Morning Star. The four seated divinities evoke the four aspects required for the transmutation of the dead king into the celestial Horus in the form of Seker/Sokaris (lower center, with two wings). Before the head of the serpent-star an inscription reads, "Living God. He goes and he returns. He opens (the door called) the slicer."

The Great Pyramid is the place where the "god" Osiris was conceived and resuscitated as Horus, the first divine king of Egypt. The body of Osiris, equipped for the great voyage, was placed in the sarcophagus in the chamber known as "the King's", while the two mothers, Isis and Nephtys, were stationed in the lower chamber ("queen's") to produce the son, the divine falcon.

In the ancient Egyptians' Book of the Dead this falcon ("of gold") is proclaimed to have the head of a Phoenix (because of its feathered crest of brilliant colors), which Parks shows is connected to another passage of the Rig-Veda (Hymn 10) concerning the birth of the royal infant Cumara, heir of the throne.

The deceased, assimilated to Horus, explains what he sees, what he lives. This passage has the sense of the Hymn 10 mentioned above.

I came today from the land of Ruty (the double lion); I left there to go to the dwelling place of Isis the divine. I have seen the secret mysteries, having been conducted to the hidden retreats, because they have made me see the birth of the great god; Horus has granted me his Bâ (soul) and I have seen what was there... I am the one who has been charged with bringing his thoughts to Osiris and to the Duat. It is I, the falcon who lives in the light, who is powerful thanks to his diadem, he who is powerful thanks to his radiance. I will cause him to go and to return, as far as the ends of heaven.

Parks provides many more examples from Egypt and India, tying together the Morning Star, falcon and phoenix, and the planet Venus as essential factors in rituals of resurrection.

This history brings to us precious mythological correspondences. Parashu-Râma, the Indian Venus, possessed a father considered as the sacrificial fire in the image of Osiris who is the grand sacrificed in Egypt. The Purânas indicate that the terrestrial father of Venus worked for humanity and that he was in relation with the priests and the master agriculturalists. Were these not the functions of Enki in Mesopotamia and of Osiris in Egypt? The Mahâbhârata indicates that Jamadani, the terrestrial father of Venus, was assassinated by a king and his son belonged to a warrior cast. We know that Osiris (Enki) was assassinated by Seth (Enlil) and his proud partners (the Anunna warriors). The murder of Enki does not appear to exist on the Mesopotamian tablets, because his assassination did not take place in (Sumer).

Abzu (2)

As will be explained in the third volume, the ancient Egyptian priests in the service of the Osirian cult succeeded in partly hiding the murder of Osiris and in "reviving" their "god", notably in his principal temple at Abdu (Abydos) in Upper Egypt. The objective of the technique was to cause Osiris, the dead god, to speak through the voice of a carefully hidden priest. Thus the penitent-initiate, after a long initiatic journey and a beneficial ritual bath in the temple water, had the impression of hearing the voice of Osiris while viewing the holy relic, at Abydos the head of the Egyptian "god". This simulation doubtlessly evoked the fixed and glassy-eyed or expressionless aspect of Enki in his Abzu surrounded by water.

For a review of general information on this structure, see Osireion and Abydos: The Osireion. Osiris treats Osiris as the primary deity of Egypt at the time of the height of its civilization.

THOSE BUILDING BLOCKS: CARVED OR RECONSTITUTED STONE (CONCRETE)?

A controversy has raged for many years over whether the stone blocks used in such structures as the Osireion (seen above; click for enlargement) and the pyramids are quarried limestone or concrete, poured and molded in place. Parks is convinced that the building blocks used in these structures, not only in Egypt but in Central and South America, are indeed mixed and poured.

Archaeologists agree that the Roman civilization had and extensively used concrete, but question whether this technology could have been possessed by much earlier civilizations. And isn't it easier to simply accept that the blocks were quarried from the seabed and dragged up onto the pyramids by Jewish slaves under the urging of the Egyptian overseers and their whips?

We find that the very question is inappropriate, based as it is on erroneous models of human civilization and history. Those who created the human race, in Parks' memory experiences, had and used concrete building blocks for pyramid-style buildings on their home planets, and so naturally continued the practice here.

A stone taken from the Great Pyramid. A fine particle on the surface resembles plastic. This stone is warm in the shade, where a natural stone would be cold! [Implies higher specific heat and/or some difference in the distribution of air pockets, etc.]

Temple of the Valley, facing the Sphinx. Take careful note of the angles and how certain stones form angles. Above all, note how these stones resemble those of South American structures, such as at Cusco. These cyclopean blocks are of the same type as those of the Osireion at Abydos.

Temple of the Valley. The central stone possesses five corners, where one would have been sufficient. Such prowess could have been achieved only by molding. The same technology as exhibited by the Amerindians of Mexico and South America. It can be nothing other than molding.

The Abdju (Abydos) site was sufficiently important that each Egyptian made a pilgrimage there at least once in his life.

Please review the Decoder entry for abzu. The Sumerian word is very similar to the Egyptian hieroglyphic for the sacred city of Osiris: Abdju (Abydos). (There is no Z in Egyptian.)

A modern language correspondence may be illuminating: absoudre (Fr.) from the Latin absolvere / absolvere. In Christianity, to absolve of one's trespasses through a sacrament of penitence is exactly what the initiates in Egypt did as they presented themselves in the Osireion of Abdju (Abydos).

Note: In the third volume Parks will explain why the body of Osiris was originally interred under the Giza plateau, afterward to be dispersed and brought back together in several temples of the time in the Egyptian territory.

The principal sanctuary of Enki-Ea was situated at Eridu. This aquatic temple that symbolized the primordial waters bore the name É.ABZU (the dwelling place of the Abzu). According to tradition, when he was not in the Abzu itself (the subterranean world), Enki usually lived in this type of temple with his wife, where they were accompanied by Abgal [see Races], "saintly carp" who later became priests/purifiers.

The term Abzu came to serve to designate parts of certain sanctuaries associated with extensions of natural or artificial bodies of water in the form of basins and of copses of roses and sacred trees.

In Egypt, the aquatic temple of Osiris at Abdju (Abydos) gives but a small idea of the Mesopotamian "Abzu sanctuaries" of which there remain only very few vestiges today. But it is without doubt the first of a series dedicated to Enki-Osiris.

Abydos was a necropolis where the Egyptian sovereigns all had their sepulchres. Its local divinity was Khentamenti, "the First of the Occidentals (Westerners)", which is to say the first god coming from the "Occident". The occident was regarded by the Egyptians as their ancestors' place of origin. This was the land of A'amenptah (Atlantis), the country of Ptah.

Please refer to the Decoder entry for Ptah. As we have seen, this "First of the Occidentals" was no other than Sa'am-Enki before the designation was attributed to Usir (Osiris) upon his death.

At left we show the image that caught Parks' attention; click to view it in full size, and click here to view a detail of the stone at the top.

He points out...

In zooming onto the stone, I found seashells !!!!!!!!!!!

But there are no shellfish in the Nile (it being sweet water) !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Thus this image indicates that the Osireion was covered by the sea at some point in time. And that means the Osireion predates the last great world flood dating more than 10,000 years ago. At least this is a supplementary proof.

A'amenptah (Decoder) refers to Atlantis, the homeland from which came a part of the ancient Egyptians. After its successive engulfments, the island of the A'amentptah was progressively transformed into the Amenti or the Amenta, the Occident or West, the world beyond the terrestrial life of the Egyptian culture, where the ancestors lived. We must not fail to connect the Amenti with the surname given to Enki-Ea in Emesal: Amanki "Lord of Heaven and Earth".

Archaeologists have always agreed on the great antiquity of the Osireion, that in fact it is the oldest structure found in Egypt. Parks traces the discussions, the more radical of which place it at 11000 to 12000 years ago. In Adam Genisiš Parks designates this building as the first cenotaph in all of Mesopotamia erected in the honor of Osiris-Enki. Its construction of cyclopean stones using the same technique employed in building the Sphinx, dates it to the time of the final engulfment of Atlantis and the death of Osiris, almost 12,000 years ago. And this puts it at the epoch of the explosion of Mulge (the "black star") and the ejection of its satellite that brushed the Earth, provoking the upset that is discussed in the book, and others of which Parks will write in his third volume.

The Egyptians also named Abdu Ta-ur, "the Great Earth". This term also evoked in a way the "hill of the origins", the primordial land of the Egyptian "gods". To the Mesopotamians, the "hill of the origins" is the Dukù, the celestial realm where the Anunna "gods" were created. In Egypt, it seems more to be the land of the ancestors, that is to say at the time of the A'amenpteh (Atlantis) from which arose the majority of the Egyptians, and the Abzu, the subterranean world. Their celestial "pendant", their "Hill of the Origins," was no other than the "astre" of the "gods", the planet found between Mars and Jupiter, of which we will speak later.

In Adam Genisiš the two primordial hills (Ta-ur and the Dukù) are geographically and politically opposed. Atlantis and the Abzu symbolized the lands and the people of Enki-Osiris and the Dukù more the Anunna of Enlil-Seth.

Ta-ur, the great Earth of the ancient Egyptians materialized through Abydos and its original Osireion butte, gains its full Hermetic sense when we decompose its name in Sumerian: TA-ÚR "toward the roots" or TA-UR₅ "toward the heart of the foundation" or even "the nature of the soul."

Enki=Osiris

Parks finds numerous correspondences between the Sumerian Enki-Ea and the Egyptian Osiris, and Quetzalcoatl as well, supporting his "memories" that they are indeed one. (Quetzalcoatl is the subject of a future book.) We do not have space to convey here all of the material from his Neb-Heru appendix, but here are a few of the main points:

The Sumerian word ENGUR generally designated the underground waters of the Abzu, the subterranean world. It was often employed as a synonym of "Abzu". ENGUR also corresponded to the Akkadian term Apsu. It was a saintly name associated with the goddess Nammu and her son Enki. We can decompose the term as EN-GUR₈ and translate that in two ways: "the lord (or ancestor) of the profoundness (or depths), or again "to the depths".

Parks finds an Egyptian form in the hieroglyphic En-Khu-Ur ("for the glory of the prince").

The Cuneiform sign for ENGUR resembles the plan of the Osireion of Osiris at Abdju.

"Enki" [Lord of the Earth] declines to "É-A" [(Master of the) Temple of the Water] in Akkadian. Parks shows a Mesopotamian cylinder seal depicting Enki-Ea, solitary and vegetative, in his watery sanctuary Engur-Abzu. Shown below is a corresponding Egyptian image, a symbolic representation of the Osireion of Abdju (Abydos).

Papyrus "Salt 825"

The hidden meanings of the Engur of Enki such as "place where one restores the heart" or "place absorbed in repose" correspond perfectly with the diverse Egyptian temples, such as the Osireion, in which were sheltered tombs in honor of Osiris. Note to the right of Osiris, the Ankh, symbol of life.

The ENGUR sign as given by Parks is a rectangle containing a cross, symbol of the KIR-IŠ-TI [Decoder], captured by the Christian church as the symbol of Jesus Christ.

The sign of course well antedates Christianity and is found on numerous ancient monuments, especially those of Central America, where it is identified as the "Cross of Quetzalcoatl" -- the being assimilated to the Morning Star and the Christ of the pre-Columbian culture. We will see that he appears to be a double of Horus.

The circled cross of Quetzalcoatl symbolizes the new (fifth) sun of the Aztec culture, created after the destruction of the preceding world by Quetzalcoatl and his "shadow" Xolotl.

The planet Venus, as the Morning Star, was also considered as the new sun by the ancient Egyptians, and was none other than Horus, the Egyptian "Christ".

The Engur symbol equally resembles a coffin or casket, the semblance being confirmed by the fact that this sign can be pronounced ZIKUM, meaning "sky" in Sumerian. But ZIKUM can also be decomposed as ZI-KUM, meaning "wounded life", "wounded spirit", or even "wounded and carried away"! Does not the spirit of a mortally wounded person ascend to heaven? Is this not what happened to the spirit of Osiris?

Given that the Akkadian pronunciation of ZIKUM is Šamû, Parks offers more wordplay; see the Decoder entry for Šamû.

In summary, Parks has shown a number of connections between the Mesopotamian Enki-Ea and the Egyptian "god" Osiris and with notions relating to the resurrection of the Egyptian "god".

He mentions that...

...numerous Egyptian cities possessed culture centers designated as "Per Ankh "House of Life", generally attached to major temples of the kings. We may compare them to schools or universities for learning distinct sciences following disciplines such as history, astronomy, writing, etc. The city of Abjdu (Abydos) was reputed to have specialized in medicine. Interesting that Enki-Ea was, in the eyes of the Sumerians, the great doctor, the healing serpent of the "gods"!

Sign of the Fish

Readers are likely aware that Carl Sagan and co-author I. S. Shklovskii (Intelligent Life in the Universe) were taken with Babylonian historian Berosus' account of the amphibious teacher Oannes, who brought knowledge to the neolithic peoples of the Persian Gulf. Their discussion, along with the work of Zecharia Sitchin, whose first book was published ten years after Sagan's and Shklovskii's, on the mystery of the Oannes and the related Nommo legends of the Dogons of Mali, and Robert Temple's (The Sirius Mystery) focusing more on the Nommo, constitute the sources of the many ongoing discussions and speculations on extraterrestrial contact with early human civilizations.

It actually is not much to go on, and would seem to offer no further insights as to what took place, which is most unfortunate considering the monumental impact such a connection must have had on the path of human development leading to the world in which we find ourselves today.

As it happens, Parks' virtual-reality memories are filled with information about the Oannes and Nommo amphibians, who are Abgal originally from Sirius, and this is conveyed in both of his books to date, Le Secret des Etoiles Sombres and Adam Genisiš. In the present section of his Neb-Heru appendix to Adam Genisiš, Parks checks his memories against ancient legends and myths, and shows that the contact, if that is what it was, left much wider residue for us to consider. This is important not only in itself, but in its bearing on the Mulge / Mulge-Tab / Morning Star scenario, due to a major connection between the amphibious Abgal and the lost planet Mulge.

The Egyptian term Abdju (Abydos) possesses a homophone whose sense is "fish". This sacred fish served as pilot of the solar bark of Râ. Its function was to warn the passengers of the bark of enemies sent by Seth. We have no difficulty in identifying the Abdju fish with a symbolic Horus or even better a reincarnated Osiris, while the Sumerian counterpart of Osiris is Enki who himself possessed the fish symbol.

This fish that precedes the solar bark is evidently the planet Venus which today leads [at least it does sometimes] the course of the sun (Râ).

We know that the fish equally represents Sirius, the Egyptians' other sacred star and the home of the amphibian Life Designers. Of course this reminds us of the aquatic beings called Nommos frequently mentioned in Adam Genisiš. The Dogons affirm that the Nommos restored the world several times and that they transmitted to humanity such gifts as speech and grain.

To the Sumerians the Nommos are the famous Abgal who follow Enki's directives. The Sumerian term Abgal translates to Apkallû in Akkadian, a designation for a sage and, as follows, a priest.

Berosus, the Babylonian historian and priest of the Temple of Bel in Babylon brings us some details concerning an Abgal-Apkallû in a surviving fragment of his book The Babyloniaca, unfortunately lost in the meanderings of history. His descriptions are reminiscent of those of the Dogon.

In Babylon there were many people of diverse origins who dwelled in Chaldee and lived lawlessly, like animals in the fields.

In the first year there appeared a being that came out of the Erythraeum Sea that runs parallel to Babylon. It said its name was Oannes and it was an animal gifted with reason. Its body seemed to be that of a fish. It had under its fish's head another head; it also had feet like those of a man, coming from its fish's tail. Its voice and language were human in their articulation. This representation has been conserved down to our time.

This being was accustomed to passing the day among men, but it never took any food. It gave them elements of learning in letters, science, metallurgy, art, the manner of constructing cities, of founding temples, creating laws; it taught the principles of geometry. It showed them how to distinguish the grains of the earth and to harvest fruits. In short, it instructed them in each thing that would serve to "sweeten" their mores and to humanize their life.

At that time, no material needed to be added to improve these instructions. And when the sun rose, this being, Oannes, returned to the water, to pass the night in the depths, because it was amphibian.

There followed other animals resembling Oannes.

Berosus, in The Ancient Fragments, Isaac Preston Coy, 1980.

The records of the Egyptian Helladius report that a man-fish named Oe lived in the Persian Gulf. He had come out of a luminous egg and consecrated himself to the erudition of humanity.

There is a myth among the indigenous Pomo tribes of California that tells of the arrival of a supreme founder being who "came out of the ocean and transformed himself into a man."

In China there appeared the Lingyus, aquatic beings with human face, hands, and feet, but with the body of a fish.

In Egypt, fish was consumed by the people, but was strictly forbidden at the royal table of the Pharaoh! Doubtlessly, the pharaohs knew the symbolic truth of the fish. In a way, some of them remembered the "amphibian" origins of their "god" Osiris who was "massacred" by his enemy Seth.

Strangely, Jesus Christ was sacrificed on a Friday, the day when the Christians eat fish. The Christian church has obviously chosen to hijack the symbols.

Anubis, the embalmer god, charged with the mummification of Osiris and of the rite of KRST (interment). Osiris was the first "god" to be buried and brought back from the dead. Tomb of Khabeknet, 19th dynasty.

There is a quasi-homophone of Abdju [see previous section, Abzu(2)] in the Egyptian language: Abtu. According to Budge, this term has the meaning: massacre, carnage, bloodshed. He noted that the term equally signified "sacrifice(s)", and that as late as the 19th dynasty, as revealed in The Book of the Amduat (Div 7), the Egyptians believed that human sacrifices originated from the time when Osiris was buried.

Continuing with this development, Parks shows that the hieroglyphic representation of the name Sa'am carries the meanings "to kill" and "to assassinate". The name "Osiris" (Usir = the seat of the eye) was given to Sa'am after his death by the Egyptians, who knew his true name.

Sign of the Cross: KIR-IŠ-TI and the Morning Star

Followers of the major religions, especially the western ones, tend to believe that certain miraculous events took place at a favored place and time, involving unique super-human individuals, which led to the religious system that they know. They usually do not realize that all of these religions are filled with rich mythological elements that had already existed for thousands of years before their religion's founding days.

Religious scholars do know this; this is what they study, and this study does not seem to interfere with or undermine their religions faith. They maintain a dual focus.

Anton Parks also has a dual focus, but his is not the situation of a conventional religious scholar. On the one hand he has his vivid memory-like impressions of being a full participant in the events that eventually became "mythologized" elements of religions. On the other hand, he has become a student of the mythologies that developed. This not only serves him (and us) as a check on his experiential information, but it brings out information about events taking place at the time that the myths were developing into what they now are.

Important case in point: we are concerned in this section of our work with the planet Venus, because it appears to be today's remnant of Mulge-Tab. Characteristics ascribed to Venus down the millennia might tell us something about the putative Earth/Mulge-Tab encounter. And some of these characteristics have been associated with or ascribed to religious figures, such as Jesus Christ.

As stated at the top of this page, the term KRST and variations are decomposed on the Decoder page. Please review the important concepts given as relating to these words.

We also mentioned at the top of the page that Sa'am-Enki (Osiris) was considered by certain Gina'abul as being a KIR-IŠ-TI. At the end of the book Adam Genišiš there is a description of the rite of resurrection of which Sa'am-Enki was the object.

There was an occult Egyptian concept that considered Osiris, the premier dead and resuscitated "god", as being symbolically transmuted into the Morning Star before reincarnating as Horus. And in the New Testament, Jesus declares himself "The Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last..., the progeny of the race of David, the radiant Morning Star." (Apocalypse 22.13 and 16)

In Apocalypse 22, Jesus presents himself as "he who comes". As to the Alpha and Omega, he appears as the first and the last. He is the king, the source, the Anointed of the Eternal. His role as Messiah is clearly defined.

We find here several extremely precise aspects which are "in affinity" with Osiris and Horus. The Greek term Christos -- Messias in Latin -- possesses the sense "annointed, blessed by the lord". One speaks of a person who has been annointed (from the Latin unctum, "unguent") when he has been consecrated by a liturgical unction. The initiatic ritual in the cenotaph of Osiris at Abdju (Abydos) consists precisely of this, and from this ritual comes the Christian baptism.

The initiate, also the future king, presents himself in the pool after a long initiatic journey. He climbs the steps to gain access to the central island on which is found the head of Osiris and is reborn as a young sun.

We have just noted that the term Messiah comes from the Latin Messias. However we do not fail to underscore that the Egyptian Mesi is translated as "to be born" or "to mother"!

The initiation ritual in the Osireion temple of Abdju is reminiscent of the earlier Sumerian one that led the "gods" to the Engur of Enki-Ea in the Abdju, the subterranean world:

You enter the Earth; Geb (god of the Earth), opens himself for you. You enter the subterranean hall under the (sacred) trees. You have arrived now, near to the god (Osiris), the god who sleeps in his sepulcher. His true image reclines on his funeral bed.

Heket (HĒ-KET), "who blends the breath" in Sumero-Akkadian, is a goddess with the head of an amphibian. She wears the Ankh sign, which is her attribute par excellence.

Heket is a primordial divinity who gives life; she forms the infant in the maternal belly. She is "the saintly obstetrician".

This goddess contributes to the regeneration of Osiris in the Osireion of Abdju and to the conception of Horus as the resurrection of his father.

In this holy place, one accords him the title "Vindicated". His body is purified in Râ-Anedjti; his flesh is purified in the (sacred) basin of Heket.

For you, are opened the Gates of the Horizon of the Other World. In peace, in peace, you attain the holy place of Osiris. You pass the night and you sleep in the secret place of the mysteries.

The abyss of Osiris-Enki is without doubt the abyss of the world, the dwelling-place of the "god" of water, in miniature. The initiate is taken deep into the Earth, through the tunnel leading to the subterranean Osireion, and is immersed in the sacred water before climbing onto the sacred isle (platform) and encountering the sarcophagus and the reliquary containing the head of Osiris.

The immersion occasioned a sort of programming that had the effect of exalting the miracle of the initiate's resurrection.

In the Abzu or in Abdjû, the initiate faces the annointed, the Messiah, which is to say the saviour, the liberator who will absolve him of his sins. This is very much the role taken by Osiris after his death; he becomes the great judge, the master of eternity.

In Judaism, Jesus in the envoy of the God who will restore Israel to its rights and inaugurate the era of justice.

For the Egyptians, justice is a goddess named Maât. She accompanies Osiris at the time rendering Osirian justice in the hidden world of the dead. Maât (justice) judges the soul of humans in proceeding to the weighing of the heart of which Horus is the divine form, while Osiris pronounces the judgment.

Again, the Bible, compiled by the Hebrew priests, does not miss the opportunity to base itself on the esoteric Egyptian ideology:

"You are advised to regard it (the prophetic word) as a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day begins to break and the Morning Star (the Christ) rises in your hearts."

2 Peter 1.19

Heket (HE-KET), "who blends the breath" in Sumero-Akkadian, is a goddess with the head of an amphibian. She wears the Ankh sign, which is her attribute par excellence.

Heket is a primordial divinity who gives life; she forms the infant in the maternal belly. She is "the saintly obstetrician".

This goddess contributes to the regeneration of Osiris in the Osireion of Abdjû and to the conception of Horus as the resurrection of his father.

In all these attributes she resembles the goddess Nut, mother of Osiris, who one knows to be the double of Nammu, the mother of Enki, herself amphibian in nature.

IAW (adoration, prayer)

The name of the Biblical god Yahvé is clearly taken from the Egyptian hieroglyph IAW. From this term comes the name of the Hebrew priests named Yahouds (Judeans).

Parks cites Messod and Roger Sabbah (The Secrets of Exodus, 2000) for the explanation that the Aramaic translation of the Bible reveals that the Hebrews were the monotheistic "Yahoud" priests, the Judean exiles from Egypt, who were previously the priests of Amon and then of Aton, under the influence of Akhenaton, who transformed Aton (the solar disk) into a unique god.

Another example of the deep ancient roots of elements of Jewish culture is given by the Decoder for the common Jewish/Hebrew name Cohen, widely understood to mean "priest".

And, speaking of priests and priestesses, Parks traces the attributes of these highly significant functionaries or beings through several cultures. Significant because their source is of great interest: they didn't just arise out of nowhere, and if you have considered much of the material on these pages, you will probably agree they were not simply characters in "fairy tales". It also is safe to say they were more than simple graduates of theological seminaries.

Beyond all that, the attributes themselves have a continuity through several cultures, and this can provide lines to very ancient times and events.

We'll present this information and also trace concepts relating to the "Messiah" (annointed) and the Christ in the following table:

Egypt.

The symbol of life and the divine breath.

The ankh bow or knot accompanies all ritual ceremonies and figures in numerous talismans and funerary objects.

Epithet of Osiris: "He who lives". Also in terms Ankhu and Ankhiu, titles given to "blessed dead".

In the plan of a cathedral, the nave embodies the sign of the Ankh with the elliptical choir placed along its "horizontal" axis and perpendicular to the center aisle.

In Egyptian imagery, when a human (or divine) personage presents the Ankh bow/knot to another personage, what is offered is life.

The Egyptian celebration of the resurrection of the dead king through his son was conducted by goddess-priestesses carrying the handled cross. The two KIR-IŠ-TI "ardent sons of life", Osiris and Jesus, understood the resurrection in which actively participated the saints, respectively Isis and Nephtys; Mary and Mary-Magdelene. These feminine beings represent the Spirit, or the Holy Spirit of the Judeo-Christians.

Celebration of the Mystery of the Passion of Osiris

Synopsis: Begins with a ceremony for the ploughing and sowing. A representation in gold of the mummy of Osiris is covered with precious jewels and substances, wrapped in papyrus, immersed in a deep basin. On a certain day the image of Osiris is exposed to the sun just before sunset, placed in a sacred bark surrounded in flames that will enter the tomb of Osiris. Following that, the body of Osiris is placed in a casket of mulberry wood and interred at the same site used the previous year. The past year's representation is then placed against or enclosed in the interior of an Išed tree ("Tree of the Horizon", possibly willow or sycamore), symbol of the divine or of the goddess. On the "30th", the day when the Nile's flood turns, ceremonies associated with the burial of Osiris begin in a subterranean chamber.

Please see the Decomposition into Sumerian/Akkadian of the Egyptian term Išed. This derivation is key to the understanding of a major point of this entire Mulge-Tab / Neb-Heru development and the myths of the KIR-IŠ-TI.

The Egyptians saw the Išed as the "obstetrician" (there's probably a better word for this) of the new sun, the birth issuing from the opening or the bursting out of the tree of the horizon.

The star or celestial body symbolizing the the soul of the defunct, in this case of Osiris who was transmuted into Benu (the Phoenix), the guide of the celestial body of the night (Râ'af = black star), finally transforming into the Morning Star, companion of the diurnal sun. Thanks to the KIR-IŠ-TI such as Osiris and Jesus, death is no longer considered a destruction but rather as a passage.

Assyro-Babylonian BAR or BA₇
(soul, to liberate, to open or cleave)

This passage undertaken by the soul was scribed in clay by the ancient Sumerians in the form shown at left. The cross symbol is related to the later Christian cross indicating the Son of God or the passion of Christ.

Parks lists the many symbolic meanings of the cross symbol: the meeting of Heaven and Earth, matter and spirit, feminine/unconscious and masculine/conscious... and also a star that is the meeting point of two worlds or crossed/opposed forces; higher and lower.

The Išed trees were planted at the summit of the butte/hill of Osiris covering the aquatic tomb of the "god" of the abysses, the Osireion at Abdu. The Išed, creator tree of the horizon gave birth at once to the nocturnal and diurnal suns, confounded with Benu (the Evening Star) and Neter Duau (Morning Star). Needless to remind you that Venus transmuted in the terrestrial world symbolizes Horus or the dead king.

Recall that the tree symbolizes the Mother-Goddess.

The idea of the serpent suspended on a sacred tree placed between light and darkness is found on a Mesopotamian cylinder seal and in the story of the serpent (Enki-Ea) and the forbidden tree (the Goddess) in the Garden of Eden.

Parks reviews the many treatments of this theme as it arises among the Hebrews, Egyptian, Sumerians...

The larger mythological theme, he points out, is that of the perpetual battle between the Osirian forces (Allies of the Light) and the Sethians (Sons of Darkness).

The serpent is often replaced by Horus, the posthumous son of Osiris, sometimes in the form of a falcon perched at the summit of the sacred tree.

Possession of this tree of the eastern horizon constituted a capital stake, the legitimate authority of Râ.

At this point in the development, Parks takes up again his discussion of the Dogon and the Nommo (see Sign of the Fish, above), citing Marcel Griaule's and Germaine Dieterlen's excellent presentation of the myth of the Pale Fox' incest with Mother Earth in their 1965 book, Le Renard Pâle. (Or see the 1986 paperback edition.) This tradition, he says, will make it possible to assimilate certain elements that we have just revealed, and to discover how the history of the world according to the Dogon passed from one state to another via the unfolding of an enormous cosmic disequilibrium.

Readers without access to the book would do very well to review the web page The Dogon and The Sirius B star, and particularly the discussion of the Dogon's gods, the Nommo, as being created by "Amma, the celestial God and creator of the universe", and one of whom rebelled and was "sacrificed" by Amma, his remains being cut up and scattered throughout the universe.

Parks goes into some detail here as to how this was done, where each scattered part went, and so forth. We will see that the Dogon were not by any means the only culture with this cosmological story. What unifies the versions of it are not only the recognizable themes but the linguistic roots of the terminologies used. Here with the Dogon, Parks shows the strong ties to Sumerian-Akkadian. We have placed a couple of key examples into the Decoder: decompositions of the names of Annagonno, the sacrificed Nommo, and the tree Kilena to which he was attached during the event.

Annagonno is of course Enki-Osiris; Amma is An; the "pale fox" is Enlil.

Origins of the Planet Venus

In his opening section on this subject, Parks develops the direct link between the sense of the Morning Star (Egyptian: Neter Duau) and "the king", considered to be Horus (Heru), himself the image of Neter Duau (Venus).

Births of the Venus Warriors

The progenitors of Venus all incarnate a being sacrificed in connection with the world of the dead. This is true in all traditions including those of Central America and Scandinavia.

They are also often associated with war or a particular conflict, as with Ištar, Athena, Horus, Parashu-Râma, Lucifer.

Greek:

The Hellenic form of the Babylonian Ištar (Venus) is Athena who springs, "fully-armed", from the brow of Zeus (Jupiter).

The planet just before Jupiter (i.e., its "head") was the "black star" Mulge, which ejected Venus from its original position as the satellite of the exploded Mulge.

In Isis and Osiris, Plutarch cites Manethon's claim that the name "Athena" in Greek evokes "a spontaneous movement". Now please have a look in the Decoder at the translations of the Sumero-Akkadian transpositions of "Athena".

The singular story of the head giving birth to a warrior goddess is repeated in Indian mythology with the Goddess Kali in the Devi Mahatmyam. Parks particularly calls attention to chapters 7.8 and 9.22, which we'll leave for you to view on that page.

Parks continues...

KA-LI₉, the "glimmering testimony" in Sumerian, danced frenetically in the sky, excited by the ravages that she produced on her road. Putting in peril the equilibrium of the Earth and of humanity, Shiva lay down at her feet to arrest the destructive dance of the goddess and the stupefying racket that she produced. This infernal fracas of which speak the texts of India is singularly present in the Sumerian term MU₇ which is equally written in the form KA-LI and of which the sense is "to cry" and "to hurl"...

Kali is at once goddess of destruction and of creation. She is generally represented as a frightening female, dressed in black, which is to say obscurity, with shining, bloodshot eyes. In this form, one can say that she has everything of a dark star! She possesses four arms: two to destroy and two for offering. She carries a necklace of human skulls and dances on a skeleton. The body on which she excites herself is generally equated to the body of the universe in ruins. Others think that this corpse symbolizes the death that she brings on her passage. More recent representations connect this extended body to that of Shiva who lies down under the goddess to stop her destructive agitation.

We will see in Volume 4 that Venus was effectively immobilized "artificially"...

However, given the circumstances of the creation of the goddess, we retain here the presence of this "cadaver" as the corpse that gave birth to Kali -- the famous "head" of the Mother-Goddess that engenders Kali in the version of Devi Mahatmyam, that which corresponds to the head of the god-of-gods Zeus (Jupiter), which was smashed and from which spurted forth Athena whose pronunciations in Sumero-Akkadian give "the warrior" or "the cry of the lord-father" or "that of the cadaver of the lord-father".

Head of Brahma, Mistress of Zeus

The head of the god-of-gods appeared in the Hindu literature as the fifth and mysterious head of Brahma.

The Indian chronicles relate that Brahma, "the immense being", possessed four heads placed at the cardinal points. Knowing that this "god" is considered to be the creator of everything, we can equate him to the Jupiter (Zeus) of the Mediterranean traditions, and the four heads would be the four satellites of Jupiter: Io, Europa, Ganymede and Callisto.

The Vedic texts say that one day, Brahma fashioned for himself a fifth head with which to keep an eye on the goddess Sandhya ("twilight"). He was taken with her, united with her, and from this union was born humanity. Shiva-Rudra, the spouse of the goddess, became immensely angry and let loose a flaming arrow that cut off the fifth head of Brahma.

The key point for us is that the fifth head of the Indian Jupiter was said to "keep an eye on" the goddess of "dawn", which is to say to follow her cult -- for which reason Shiva-Rudra smashed it.

We know that in the Egyptian mythology, Isis represents the dawn and Nephtys the twilight. [The two pieces of wood that form the Arani (the two mothers) of Agni (Horus) are correctly assimilated to "the dawn" and "the twilight" in the Vedas...]

The Egyptian traditions make of Nephtys the ancient spouse of Seth (Enlíl) or sometimes his sister. We have seen in this book [Ádam Genisiš] that Nephtys corresponds to Innin (Inanna), the "spouse" of the system of Enlíl, without taking into account that she is also Enlíl's daughter. The Egyptians simply made her the spouse of Seth. This story seems to us much more coherent when one recalls the hidden liaisons between Osiris and Nephtys (Enki and Innin)...

We saw in this work [Ádam Genisiš, not yet fully covered on this website] that Innin is not without her connection with the fall of the Amašutum cult on the Earth. The explosion of Mulge (the black star) which was the planet between Mars and Jupiter, resulted from this fall and this intestinal war among the Gina'abul. Shiva-Rudra (Enlíl-Seth) is definitely the personage who made the decision to destroy the planet of the Life Designers...

Parks next points out an astonishingly-relevant fact: the Brahmans, the highest caste of India, claim to have been issued from the Head of Brahma! And this, as Parks has been showing us, is none other than Mulge, the planet of the Kadištu, which was in front of Brahma (Jupiter), and which Shiva-Rudra (Enlíl-Seth) was charged with destroying!

The Brahmans were for a long time farmers and shepherds, and this is in complete concordance with the teaching of the Life Designers of our story, as well as the Nommos of the Dogon, but particularly with the "discipline of the Santana-Šandan Amašutum as chiefs of plantations and cultivations, herbalists, etc..."

Returning to the Greek versions, there is the story of the death of a sacrificed "entity" who birthed a divinity who had to flee, to escape the wrath of the "gods". This is the account of Semele, mistress of Zeus.

Semele Ablaze
John McKirdy Duncan

The story relates that Zeus was quite taken with the princess Semele. He loved her so much that he showered her with gifts. When Hera, the wife of Zeus-Jupiter, learned of the infidelity of the king of gods, she disguised herself as Beroe, Semele's nurse. She called on the princess to prove her love. Semele then went to Zeus-Jupiter and asked him to show himself to her in his full splendor. Zeus did so and presented himself ringed in a blinding light, with his lightning and flashes. In a single instant the body of Semele was consumed. It is said that the tomb of the princess continued to smolder even long after her death.

Zeus just had time to retrieve from the womb of Semele, Dionysos, the son whom she had conceived with him. The king of gods hid him in his thigh before transforming him into a kid [young goat], so as to escape the wrath of Hera. In that form, Dionysus fled to distant lands and followed his mad course. In the process, he descended to the underworld to retrieve his mother from the kingdom of darkness, and carried her to Olympus, where Zeus gave her immortality under the name of Thyone.

Gustave Moreau: "Jupiter and Semele". At center appears the little Dionysos. His aspect recalls the Benu (Phoenix)...

This version is infinitely singular, because it portrays Jupiter (Zeus) as being at once responsible for and spectator of the celestial drama. As with the Nommos' variant of the sacrifice, the king of the gods will utilize light to immolate the victim. From this victim will come an infant who will follow a mad course, in this instance to escape divine anger. In each case, the infant will be preserved for some time before embarking on its crazy course.

The same notion is found in the Dogons' version which represents that "out of the flow of blood from the sacrifice of the Nommo sprang Yazu (Venus) in its obscure (invisible) position". This implies that Venus knows moments of invisibility on its cosmic course...

The personage of Dionysus is among the most interesting. Greek mythology has him stricken with dementia. He roamed over the world, his story full of mysterious voyages. In the course of his movements, he taught agriculture to humanity. Diverse paintings generally depict Dionysus as a cherub coming out of his mother, either weeping for his dying progenitor, or embarking on his mad course, spreading his wings to leave her blasted remains.

For example, the tableau Sémélé et Jupiter by painter François Marot in the Trianon. Don't fail to click through twice for the full enlargement!

Inanna-Ištar, the Morning and the Evening Star

Parks' work, where concerned with the mythologies of ancient humanity, differs from all other studies of mythology of which we are aware, in that personages begin in Parks' consciousness as full flesh-and-blood beings, but only over vast periods of time give rise to the myths that our historians know. These beings enjoy a near-immortality, either as birthright or through some sort of technology, although they can be killed. Given enough time, this is fairly likely to take place, but only perhaps after lifetimes measured in hundreds of millennia.

The genesis of the corresponding mythological personages could have been through the natural social processes as understood today, but could also have been contrived by the actual characters or their peers. Sometimes, given the eventual size of Earth's civilizations, the myths coexisted with the living personalities; sometimes they simply followed on later.

We must be careful to discern the mode in which Parks works at one time or another. For example, he opens the current section on Inanna-Ištar with the words...

Inanna is according to the evidence a very ancient divinity, because her name appears from the period of Uruk in the 4th millennium B.C.E.

Parks employs here a conventional meaning of "ancient". However he has his own direct experiences that have come to him, many from seemingly far more ancient periods, which form the basis of many references in his books.

Continuing...

She is a dominant goddess who reigned over the gods, having neither husband nor progeny. In the Bible (Jeremiah 7.18 and 44.19), it is she, as "Queen of Heaven", to whom women offer kneaded cakes in her image, in the temples. Manasses had erected in Jerusalem the post that symbolized her, and at the same time, he installed in the Temple his idol, the one which without doubt Ezekiel calls "the idol of jealousy" because he enflamed the anger of the jealous god Yahvé in the Bible.

Inanna supported the cult of the Mother-goddess and fought against the ancient patriarchal dogma. This brought her singular reprisals from the "gods" in the Mesopotamian texts, and also from the adepts of Yahvé in the Bible. Uruk, the town designated to her, is the city of "prostitutes and daughters of joy" where women were instructed in the initiation of men into sacred sexuality...

The presence of terms designating prostitutes and priestesses in the lexical lists of the middle Babylonian epoch poses the problem of the status of these women. But one notes that this groups together all these women who actually are in different situations. The equivalences established, for example, between the Šamhatu [a class of temple prostitute] and the religious Qadištu see [Decoder] do not correspond to what is known of each of these. This must arise from the fact that at a point in time, the religious functions of each had lapsed into disuse and were no longer included, only retaining the idea that the priestesses formed together a separate class of women, exempt at times from the framework of marriage.

The majority of them worked in the temples where they practiced sacred sexuality. These priestesses were the image of the great goddess. In this work, we have associated Nebet-Hut (Nephtys) with Innin (Inanna-Ištar). This association is even more striking when we understand that Nebet-Hut signifies "goddess of the temple" and that Nephtys is always represented with the symbol of the cup on her head.

Inanna-Ištar is the divinity who occupies the greatest number of Mesopotamian myths, be they of secondary level or in the principal roles. The important place held by Inanna-Ištar in the feminine pantheon led to a designation of goddesses in general under the common name Ištarātu. At Sumer as at Akkad, she incarnated the planet Dilbat (Venus) or Ištar-Kakkabu. Where one wishes to speak of the planet from the strictly astronomical point of view, one calls it Dilbat, but the religious philosophy loves to confound the planet Venus and the goddess Ištar.

An (the king of the gods) invites the gods to give to Innin the name "Ištar of the stars", being "the most brilliant among them". It is Venus who shows the route of the stars.

Dilbat, as the Evening Star, will be the Ištar of Uruk. As the Morning Star, she will be the Ištar of Akkad. The goddess herself sings the double aspect of her nature: "It is I, the queen of the sky, the Goddess of the Twilight. It is I, the queen of the sky, the Goddess of the Dawn." It would be difficult to provide a better description of the omnipresent character of Inanna in the universe than to identify her with the planet that shines and is "visible from one end to the other of the countries". In this form, she draws the admiration and the veneration of men who exalt her beauty. Goddess of the Evening, she consecrates herself to the favoring of love, of voluptuousness but also of premonitory dreams. Goddess of Morning, she will preside over the works of war and carnage.

Parks continues this section with more examples from the mythology of Inanna-Ištar, establishing not only the character herself, but the logic of the choice of this particular character to personify the heavenly appearance of the planet Venus. We learn of her support of agrarian activities, her teachings on the subject of human nutritional needs... and this in so many cultures, including those of the East and of Central America. And of course, there is the angry, warrior aspect.

Parks concludes with a most important observation: nothing corresponding to Venus appears in the Babylonian mythology nor in any mythology from periods prior to 3000-2500 B.C.E! Moreover, when it does appear, Venus is described as coming from the depths of the universe to rend the sky and trouble humanity. And this gave rise to the need for many hymns of praise, intended to appease this trouble-maker.

Chaos and Resurrection

Traces of Mulge and His Son

The Mesopotamian tablets indicate that Neberu (or Nibiru) is an errant "star" that periodically upsets the affairs of gods and humans. His origin is "the place of the celestial battle". This localization is extremely important, because it brings to mind beyond a shadow of a doubt the tree Išed of the Egyptian traditions, the shattered axis of the eastern horizon. Keep in mind that this opening is carried out under the command of Amon (Jupiter), the King of the Gods.

To be continued...

Mulge, Mulge-Tab, and Venus

As we have seen, Parks has demonstrated a widespread identification among ancient peoples of the planet Venus with a rampaging sky-god whose birth and life cycle were associated with a great cosmic event, the "explosion" of the planet Mulge ("Black Star") and the launching of its satellite Mulge-Tab ("Companion of Mulge") onto a new solar orbital path.

This "explosion" (the word is in quotes because it might possibly have been a slow-motion event) was perpetrated on the Mulge system by the Ušumgal, according to Parks' memory as mediated by the GĪRKŪ.

In this section we will examine the sequence from an astronomical/astrophysical point of view, with the intent of assessing the possibility that destruction in the Mulge system could eventually have ramifications on Earth. We'll include some thoughts about what might have been within the capabilities of the Ušumgal. However, any specific information that Parks could contribute to this aspect is still being developed for use in his forthcoming book, The Awakening of the Phoenix, Volume 3 of the series.

Initial State

Please review the section on Ti-ama-te, describing our solar system prior to the explosion of Mulge. This will give you a sense of the awesome greatness of Mulge within the larger galactic community, and in fact of our entire system before the invasion, hence the dimension of tragedy that ensued, but also will help you to visualize the relative sizes of the planets and their sequence of orbits in this system.

As to planetary sizes and orbital dimensions, we assume that those observed today for all planets other than Venus, such as can be found listed at Orbits and Properties of the Planets, are valid for the initial period -- the pre-explosion epoch.

Information that we can deduce for Mulge and Mulge-Tab/Venus has to be considered purely notional. But we can do better than simple guessing.

Parks recalls Mulge as being slightly larger than Saturn, and so it shall be in our picture of Ti-ama-te. We estimate the radius of Mulge to be about 65,000 km. We are probably safe in assuming Mulge's orbit to be approximately aligned with the ecliptic since all the other planetary orbits (except that of Pluto, which is no longer considered to be a planet anyway) are so aligned, and so is the main asteroid belt, which we think is derived from the explosion of Mulge.

The main asteroid belt occupies a ring of radius 2-4 astronomical units (AU) around the Sun, and so we assign a radius of about 3 AU or, say, 450 million km to the orbit of Mulge.

What might have been the characteristics of Mulge-Tab's orbit around Mulge?

The first bit of data from the present-day Venus' orbit that we might apply would be its orientation to the ecliptic plane, just as we did with the asteroids for Mulge. So we will say that Mulge-Tab's orbit was parallel to the ecliptic.

Its radius? Taking a look at Jupiter, the next planet out, we find that its two largest moons, Ganymede and Callisto, are of nearly the same size and orbits of distance 1,100,000 and 1,900,000 km from Jupiter's center. Although the radius of Venus (Mulge-Tab) at 6052 km is much larger -- 2.3 or 2.4 times larger -- than those of the two largest Jupiter moons, we will take the hint and give Mulge-Tab an orbital radius of around 1,500,000 km.

In this section we will develop the concept of Venus as an ejection from the Mulge system in a sequence of graphics with discussions, including relevant orbital mechanics where indicated.

Fig. MMTV-1. View onto the ecliptic plane showing the orbits of Uraš (Earth) and Mulge. At this scale, the planets themselves are not visible, nor would the Sun be visible, except for the fact that it is self-luminous. We show the Sun as a white dot, not to scale. Kinks in orbits are a graphic artifact.

The orbits depicted in Fig. MMTV-1 are of course mathematical abstractions. It might have been more precise to show them as very thin circles or ellipses. But we are using 3-D modelling software that requires us to depict them as tori, of sufficient thickness to make them visible. Still, they are rather "thin" tori (i.e., their cross-sections are small relative to the image size).

There is a benefit to this graphical method. Suppose we searched along the Mulge orbit for the planet Mulge itself -- we know it is in the image, because we put it there. If we then zoomed in sufficiently to show Mulge, the "orbit torus" would appear very thick indeed, and since we had not changed its scale from what it was in the previous image, the relative sizes of Mulge and the orbit torus would allow us to grasp the scale of Mulge in the solar system itself. That is what we have done in the following illustration.

Fig. MMTV-2. Close-up view of Mulge's orbit, showing Mulge and also Mulge-Tab's proposed orbit around Mulge. Its orbit was not visible in the previous image. Mulge-Tab itself is still not visible at this scale.

"Explosion" of Mulge

Dispensing with the orbits now, the Fig. MMTV-3 at right shows Mulge "exploding", and for the first time we can see Mulge-Tab, at the top.

Fig. MMTV-3. Mulge "exploding" and somewhat expanded from its normal size. Mulge-Tab, shown to scale, is just visible at the top.

And now we are in a position to discuss some very important matters. We are of course interested in learning whatever we can about how Mulge was destroyed, but even more directly important to us is the effect of that event on Mulge-Tab, because we think it is Mulge-Tab that at some later point, and perhaps more than once, came near Uraš (the Earth), and became identified with today's planet Venus.

Look at the image. At this stage, Mulge has been reduced to fragments that have begun to disperse and will continue to do so. The fragments will eventually stabilize in individual solar orbits, perhaps many of them as today's asteroids. Now, it is possible that the forces that destroyed Mulge were large and explosive enough to quickly send a wave of fragments and some sort of energy out to the distance of Mulge-Tab, instantly throwing it off its course. That would have required a much greater release of energy than just enough to totally destroy Mulge.

We don't know if that much energy was available. But since we don't know, we must allow for that possibility. Later on this page, we will designate the type of event in which the effect on Mulge-Tab was virtually instantaneous as a "Type 1 collision" between Mulge remains and Mulge-Tab.

It might be reasonable to consider that Mulge expanded "slowly", leading in the extreme to what we will call a "Type 2 collision". Assuming it did so in a radially-symmetric manner (an assumption not fully justified, but a good first approximation to what may have happened), then Mulge-Tab's orbit would not have changed until significant amounts of Mulge's remains (i.e., a significant fraction of its mass) moved beyond the orbit of Mulge-Tab, and Mulge-Tab's orbit finally began to expand in response. We are going to have to estimate the probability of any sizable piece of Mulge striking Mulge-Tab in this process. Assuming for the moment that Mulge broke up into a relatively small number of large fragments, and that there was no such collision with them, then Mulge-Tab's orbit simply expanded in response to the continuing diffusing mass of Mulge. As Mulge-Tab moved farther and farther from the center of this diffusing Mulge mass, its orbital path trended toward an open curve, and it gradually became more subject to the gravitational influence of the Sun.

Another way of putting this is to say that when the total gravitational field, at Mulge-Tab's position, of the portion of Mulge contained within its orbit, has become less than the gravitational field of the Sun at that position, then Mulge-Tab is in a solar orbit.

What are the parameters of that orbit? Our task is to explore the ways in which Mulge-Tab might enter such a solar orbit, and the range of possible orbital parameters, to learn whether it was possible or even likely that Mulge-Tab would eventually cross Uraš' orbit, and encounter Uraš itself.

Note that any close encounter and exchange of energy and momentum with another planetary object is going to change Mulge-Tab's orbit beyond anything we could guess. Therefore we will not be able to say anything at all about a sequence of close encounters, except to note that such sequences are possible.

To begin our exploration, let us collect some elemental data that we either "know" (e.g., if we assume that Venus was once Mulge-Tab), or can obtain through combining what we "know" with what Parks "remembers", and with what we can compute using basic astronomical information and equations (as may be found here and here). We will spare the reader the details at this time but offer them in a separate paper that will be prepared for online viewing and/or be included in Parks' next published book.

OBJECT	Radius, km	Density, g/cm ³	Mass, kg
Mulge	65000	4	4.6×10^{27}
Mulge-Tab	6050	5.24	4.87×10^{24}

ORBIT	Radius, km	Period	Mean Orbital Speed S km/sec
Mulge	450×10^6	1.64×10^8 secs 5.21 earth yrs	17.2
Mulge-Tab	1.5×10^6	6.6×10^5 secs 7.6 earth days	14.3

An important note about the overall geometry: we assume that all of this is confined to (approximately) the plane of the ecliptic. This is justified for Mulge itself by virtue of the fact that the orbits of all the other planets (except for that of Pluto, no longer considered a planet anyway) in the solar system are confined to that plane.

As to Mulge-Tab, had it been a satellite of Jupiter, it would have been classified as a Galilean type, such as Callisto or Ganymede, each of which has an orbital inclination of only about 1/4 degree from the plane of the ecliptic. Thus it is not unreasonable to guess that Mulge-Tab's orbit was in the plane of the ecliptic as well.

All of our work, then, will be in two dimensions.

Of the data given in the table above, the "mean orbital speed S " -- the tangential velocities of Mulge and Mulge-Tab within their respective orbits -- is of immediate importance, because these will determine whether Mulge-Tab enters an elliptical orbit with perihelion equal to or less than the radius of Earth's orbit. If that is the case, then an eventual encounter becomes possible.

Note also that in the above tables, "earth days" and "earth years" indicates their modern values. The units are offered simply for help in visualization. The very length of the earth year is to be a subject of discussion in this section, as it is in the literature of Velikovsky and others.

One final important note: in the tables we assume that, having identified Venus with Mulge-Tab, we can take the mass of Mulge-Tab as the mass of today's Venus. But it develops, as will be seen, that in one possible scenario, Mulge-Tab picked up a significant amount of mass from Mulge fragmentary material, and hence originally (prior to the Mulge explosion) had much different characteristics from today's Venus.

When we realized such a thing had been possible, we had to question our entire analysis up to that point. However we also realized that the scenario in question may not have actually occurred. Therefore our response has been to stay with our analysis on a contingent basis, but as a separate step to look for signs that the worrisome scenario did occur. This step is beyond the scope of the present web page, but will probably be covered in the material being offered for inclusion in Volume 3.

Fig. MMTV-4 illustrates a simple entry of Mulge-Tab into an elliptical solar orbit immediately upon the disappearance of Mulge, around which Mulge-Tab had been orbiting. This is a sort of zero-order approximation to the event.

We depict as a pair of magenta-colored vectors the velocity of Mulge-Tab at that moment in its components parallel ($v_{M-T,r}$) and perpendicular ($v_{M-T,t}$) to a radius or line drawn from the Sun. These motions are themselves the sums of motions of the Mulge system (Mulge and any satellites, etc.) in its solar orbit, and Mulge-Tab in its orbit around Mulge. Note that the Mulge system, being in what we state to be a circular orbit, has zero radial velocity.

Notice also that in this example, Mulge-Tab's solar orbit has the form of a highly eccentric ellipse, and this causes Mulge-Tab to cross the orbit of Uraš (Earth) -- because its perihelion, its closest approach to the sun -- falls inside Uraš' orbit. With such an orbit there is the possibility or probability of an eventual encounter of Mulge-Tab with Uraš. It is not the only class of orbit that would have been possible. Another possibility would have been for Mulge-Tab's orbit to be much less eccentric, say, like that of Mulge, which would never cross the path of Uraš. Or it might have been hyperbolic -- an open shape that would have taken it away from the solar system on a one-way outbound journey. We are going to have to determine the possibilities of Mulge-Tab's entering these various types of orbits.

Fig. MMTV-5. Closeup of Mulge/Mulge-Tab system at

To begin, we take a closer look at the composite motion of Mulge-Tab at its moment of release. Fig. MMTV-5 shows a ghostly Mulge that has by some means just disappeared. It had been traveling along in its orbit at a speed of 17.2 km/sec.

Mulge-Tab had been confined to the bright green orbit around Mulge at a speed of 14.3 km/sec, but has just now been released to a new path, the white curve.

idealized moment of release. All orbits are traversed in the counter-clockwise direction.

Although the directions of the motions are constantly changing, at this instant they can be conveniently oriented with respect to the radial from the Sun. Thus Mulge and its entire system were moving with an average velocity of 17.2 km/sec in a direction transverse to the radial from the Sun. We designate this as follows:

$$\begin{aligned}v_{M,r} &= 0 \\v_{M,t} &= 17.2 \text{ km/sec}\end{aligned}$$

Mulge-Tab participated in this motion, but also had its own orbital motion within the Mulge system. It was moving tangentially at 14.3 km/sec, and this was at angle ϕ with respect to the solar radial:

$$\begin{aligned}v_{M-T,r} &= 14.3 \sin \phi \text{ km/sec} \\v_{M-T,t} &= 17.2 - 14.3 \cos \phi \text{ km/sec}\end{aligned}$$

What are the parameters of the new Mulge-Tab orbit? We will need to know, if we are to be able to decide whether Mulge-Tab could have eventually had a close encounter with Uraš. As is shown in Fig. MMTV-4, if a "small" object enters a closed orbit around a large one (i.e., the mass of the "small" one is much smaller than the mass of the "large" one), the orbit takes the form of an ellipse of some size characterized by its semi-major axis "a" and eccentricity "e". According to basic principles of celestial mechanics, these can easily be computed from information that we have already developed on this page, along with the mass of the Sun, and a quantity known as "The Universal Gravitational Constant".

Please click here to see how all of these quantities are related.

Notice that the velocity components of Mulge-Tab at time of release are related to its angular position ϕ , as mentioned above. We have to presume that this angle's value was not selected by the Ušumgal. In fact, since ϕ is itself a parameter of our simplistic "instantaneous Mulge-disappearance" model, which is not necessarily itself correct, we should not at this point be second-guessing how it might or might not have been chosen by anyone. But we will examine the model shortly.

From inspection of Mulge-Tab's full orbit shown in Fig. MMTV-4, its perihelion is just $$R_{\text{per}} = a(1-e)$$

The values of a and e vary with the angle ϕ . We examine this, looking to see if for any values of ϕ , the perihelion of Mulge-Tab falls within the radius of Earth's orbit (1.5×10^{11} meters).

Here are the results of that computation:

ϕ , deg	Semi-Major Axis a meters	Eccentricity e	Perihelion meters	Earth Encounter
0	2.28×10^{11}	.03	2.22×10^{11}	impossible
30	2.57×10^{11}	.25	1.93×10^{11}	impossible
60	3.96×10^{11}	.86	5.44×10^{10}	possible
90	1.48×10^{12}	1.7	negative	impossible
120	-8.49×10^{11}	2.53	meaningless	impossible
150	-3.95×10^{11}	3.14	meaningless	impossible
180	-3.30×10^{11}	3.36	meaningless	impossible
210	-3.95×10^{11}	3.14	meaningless	impossible
240	-8.49×10^{11}	2.53	meaningless	impossible
270	1.48×10^{12}	1.7	negative	impossible
300	3.96×10^{11}	.86	5.44×10^{10}	possible
330	2.57×10^{11}	.25	1.93×10^{11}	impossible

So, yes, in this first simplified situation, for some values of ϕ , an eventual encounter can occur. Those values range out to about $\phi = \pm 65$ deg, as shown in Fig. MMTV-6, beyond which the orbit would be hyperbolic. For magnitudes of $\phi < 45$ deg, the perihelion exceeds the radius of Earth's orbit and so no collision would be possible.

This means that original positions of Mulge-Tab occupying some 11% of the full circle of ϕ would likely lead to an eventual interaction -- even a highly destructive interaction -- with Uraš. Would this have been a consideration for Enlil, who probably was hoping to escape this solar system eventually anyway?

Fig. MMTV-6. Perihelion of Mulge-Tab's orbit (meters) vs. ϕ , deg. We show a range of ϕ encompassing values for which eccentricity is between 0 and 1 -- that is, out to about ± 65 deg. (and a bit more for clarity in reading the presentation). The green rectangle shows the area from perihelion = 0 out to the radius of Earth's orbit. Note that a negative perihelion is self-contradictory; this would not be associated with an elliptical orbit.

Suppose, on the other hand, there had been a rather extreme fragmentation of Mulge. Can we guess what the sizes of these fragments might possibly have been?

Our next task is to consider more realistic "explosion" scenarios.

For example, we know that Mulge did not simply vanish when destroyed. Rather, it was reduced to fragments that either slowly or quickly moved away from what had been its center. Would any of these fragments have collided with Mulge-Tab? This is an important question, because in a collision, there would have been an exchange of angular momentum and kinetic energy between the colliding objects.

Suppose Mulge had been broken into just two fragments. That would be the minimum, as "one fragment" would mean no explosion or destruction had taken place.

If Mulge had been broken into two fragments, how likely would it have been for one of them to have collided with Mulge-Tab?

Without any analysis other than a look at the images we have provided of these two objects in their original positions, it is clear that a collision at the distance of Mulge-Tab would have been highly unlikely. In that case, our discussion of the event, developed on this page, would be good enough to use.

Well, yes, if we take the distribution of sizes of asteroids as a strong hint, since they presumably all were once a part of Mulge. A caution here: the combined masses of all known asteroids is less than that of our Moon. So are the ones we see in the asteroid belt a good example of the fragmentation of Mulge?

We don't really know, but it is probably beyond the scope of this discussion to try to ascertain a complete answer to that question. Therefore, let us look at the asteroids, and there we find that the typical diameter of an asteroid is around 1 km. So we will take that to be the size of our Mulge fragments.

Assuming that the fragments move out from the Mulge center uniformly in all directions, we can begin to see the possibilities for collisions with Mulge-Tab.

It is not a simple problem, because it depends on the relative speeds of the outgoing fragments and Mulge-Tab in its orbit. Why? Suppose that the outgoing speed of the fragments is very high. Then any fragments that were passing through the part of space occupied by Mulge-Tab at that moment would collide, giving up all of its kinetic energy to Mulge by imparting a velocity change in the outward radial direction. We should be able to calculate the fraction of Mulge mass that does this (i.e., collides). Let's call this a collision of Type 1.

On the other hand, the fragments could be moving so slowly that they impart zero kinetic energy in terms of adding a radial velocity component, but some of them do, at some point, "stand in the path of Mulge-Tab", and collide in such a way as to join with Mulge-Tab and share its angular momentum. That will be a collision of Type 2.

Type 1 Collision:

We can easily calculate the total mass of Mulge fragments that collide with Mulge-Tab. We know that they all, at some time, will pass through a spherical shell centered on Mulge's center, with the radius of Mulge-Tab's orbit. The fraction of that shell occupied by the projected area of Mulge-Tab will be the fraction of Mulge's mass that will collide with Mulge-Tab.

Using data already provided on this page, we calculate the following:

Total area of spherical shell at Mulge-Tab's orbit = $2.8 \times 10^{13} \text{ km}^2$

Projected area of Mulge-Tab = $1.15 \times 10^8 \text{ km}^2$

Fraction of Mulge that collides with Mulge-Tab = 4.1×10^{-6}

Mass of Mulge = $4.6 \times 10^{27} \text{ kg}$

Mass of Mulge that collides with Mulge-Tab $\sim 2 \times 10^{22} \text{ kg}$

That last number is key. Everything we have shown about the path of Mulge-Tab after the loss of Mulge now has to be adjusted to reflect what happens when that amount of Mulge matter collides with Mulge-Tab.

Note that this is 0.4% of the mass of Mulge-Tab as given on this page. Could that relatively-small amount of mass have enough kinetic energy to significantly change the motion of Mulge-Tab once transferred? Of course, that depends on its velocity, as in the relation for an object of mass m , traveling at velocity v .

$$\text{Kinetic Energy} = 1/2 mv^2$$

We do not know what its velocity might have been, but let's determine what it would have needed to be, to carry 10% of the kinetic energy of Mulge-Tab.

Sparing you the algebra, it works out to be 5 x the velocity of Mulge-Tab at the moment of encounter. That is, since Mulge-Tab's velocity was 17.2 km/sec, the Mulge fragments would need to have been traveling outward at 86 km/sec to increase Mulge-Tab's kinetic energy by 10%.

Is that a realistic velocity for these fragments? Have we discussed the mechanism that was used for destroying Mulge? We have not, yet. However, achieving an outward velocity of 86 km/sec would appear to require much more energy than just enough to shatter Mulge. And so it seems safe to work with a velocity of 86 km/sec as a conservative figure for estimating the effect of the Type 1 collision on the path of Mulge-Tab.

This collision results in a small adjustment to Mulge-Tab's velocity, radially outward from the original Mulge center. Except for that adjustment, the no-collision analysis made at the beginning of this study will prevail.

What is the effect of the radial velocity adjustment? Recall that in the basic no-collision case, values of ϕ close to 0/360 degrees result in the lowest subsequent perihelion for Mulge-Tab, because the effect of the "missing Mulge" left Mulge-Tab with a residual motion component retrograde to its solar orbit.

The Type 1 collision creates an actual push on Mulge-Tab, and its retrograde component is greatest for $\phi = 90$ degrees. That is, it is greatest if it occurs when Mulge-Tab is at the point in its Mulge orbit characterized by $\phi = 90$ degrees (see Fig. MMTV-5).

So in general, the Type 1 collision seems to shift the value of ϕ resulting in the minimum perihelion toward 90 degrees. How great this effect would be, depends on the velocity of the Mulge fragments, which we do not know, but we can guess that this will actually turn out to be rather small.

At any rate, it is not very important because the probabilities of various perihelion values are actually not affected, only the associated values of ϕ , which are probably of no interest.

Type 2 Collision:

Fig. MMTV-7. A first plume of Mulge's fragment cloud crosses the orbit (shown in green) of Mulge-Tab (orange). Eventually the entire cloud will cross the spherical shell containing Mulge-Tab's orbit but of course only a small fraction of the Mulge fragments will cross the orbit itself. Those will all be swept up by Mulge-Tab since in the Type 2 encounter they move extremely slowly. They will add to Mulge-Tab's mass but will leave its kinetic energy unchanged. This results in a predictable reduction in Mulge-Tab's speed.

The event we name "Type 1 collision" represents one extreme of a continuum of possibilities relating to how rapidly the exploded Mulge expands and crosses over the Mulge-Tab orbital shell (i.e., imaginary sphere centered on the unexploded Mulge, with radius equal to that of Mulge-Tab's orbit). In this extreme, the radial velocity of the Mulge fragments is so great that Mulge-Tab by comparison is stationary in its orbit.

In the complementary event, the "Type 2 collision", the fragments move so slowly that when they encounter Mulge-Tab it is as though they are stationary. Of course, had they been perfectly stationary, they would never have even gotten there! So we are speaking in relative terms.

Eventually all Mulge fragments cross over and beyond the Mulge-Tab orbital shell. Assuming their angular distribution is uniform, we can easily calculate that fraction of them that enter not only the orbital shell, but the orbital ring itself (shown in green in Fig. MMTV-7). Understand that the ring has a finite cross-section; it is after all swept out by the body of Mulge-Tab. It is in fact a torus. All fragments entering that torus will be swept up by the much more rapidly-moving Mulge-Tab before they can reach the far side.

In a first-order approximation, these fragments are stationary when encountered by Mulge-Tab. They have, then, no kinetic energy, and so add none to the planetoid.

But they do add their mass. How much mass would that be? The total amount of mass contributed by Mulge to Mulge-Tab in this way, is just the fraction that encounters the Mulge-Tab torus.

The fraction is easily calculated.

Replace the torus with a circle of flat ribbon whose width is the diameter of Mulge-Tab. Designate the radius of this circle as $R_{M,M-T}$ ($= 1.5 \times 10^6$ km). Designate the radius of Mulge-Tab as R_{M-T} ($= 6050$ km).

The fraction in which we are interested is simply the ratio of the areas of the ribbon and the sphere. Again, leaving out some simple algebra for the energetic reader to perform, that ratio of areas is just the ratio of two radii, and is given by and since we have the mass of Mulge as 4.6×10^{27} kg, we can immediately state that Mulge-Tab picks up about 2×10^{25} kg of Mulge fragments.

Since the kinetic energy of Mulge-Tab has not been altered by its encounter with the fragments, but it has a new greater mass, its velocity must have decreased as a result of the fragment encounters.

By how much? Again, leaving the simple algebra to the reader, new velocity / old velocity = $\sqrt{\text{old mass} / \text{new mass}} = \sqrt{1/5} = .45$

Have you noticed something quite remarkable about what we have just learned?

Yes, the speed of Mulge-Tab is eventually more than halved, but much more importantly, the mass of Mulge fragments accreting to Mulge is four times the mass of Mulge itself!

This means that the analysis of the Type 2 encounter will be much more complex than that of the Type 1, because during the long period of time that Mulge-Tab takes to acquire its new mass, it is deviating, probably greatly, from its original orbit. That is due not only to its declining speed, but to the slowly-diminishing amount of Mulge mass remaining inside the orbital sphere. Once beyond the sphere, it is no longer part of the gravitational center of the Mulge/Mulge-Tab system.

Furthermore, if Mulge-Tab is changing size due to the accreting matter, then of course the area representing its orbital torus (and thus the fraction of fragments being intercepted) is also changing, and dramatically at that!

What all of this means is that we do not yet have a way to analyze a Type 2 encounter.

Of course, we do not know if the pure Type 2 encounter even happened. One reason to think it did not, is that the accreted mass on Mulge-Tab would probably not have been uniformly distributed around its surface, and so today's Venus would be seen to be seriously out-of-round. It is not.

But suppose the encounter was something between pure Type 1 and pure Type 2. Would we be able to predict the result of that, on a continuum of encounter types?

The answer is, probably yes, but that is not a project for this web page at this time.

This issue will be discussed more fully in a forthcoming research publication by Anton Parks.

Tidal Locking

A somewhat anomalous synchronous "locking" exists between the rotations on their axes of Earth and Venus.

The following is from Wikipedia:

A curious aspect of Venus' orbit and rotation periods is that the 583.92-day interval between successive close approaches to the Earth is almost exactly equal to 5 Venusian solar days (precisely, 5.001444 of these), making approximately the same face visible from Earth at each close approach. Whether this relationship arose by chance or is the result of some kind of tidal locking with the Earth is unknown [1].

[1] Gold T., Soter S. (1969), Atmospheric tides and the resonant rotation of Venus, Icarus, v. 11, p 356-366

Tidal locking comes about through variations in gravitational attraction between specific portions of nearby astronomical bodies. The effect would appear problematic to say the least at the current distance of Venus from Earth.

We are scheduling this "curious aspect" for further study, and discussion if it should turn out to be relevant in terms of one or more close encounters having taken place between Venus and Earth in relatively recent times (i.e., about 10,000 years ago).

We may discuss our findings in a general sense here on this page, but where specific connection to events described in Volume 3 are concerned, discussion will be deferred to the appendix planned for inclusion in that book.

Enki in the Land of the Dead

The beings known by their created people as "gods" can never be accorded the status of "dead". This is because they have always inculcated a dependency on themselves for salvation of some kind, such that if they were seen as having ceased to exist, their people would be left tossed to the winds.

The process continues even today: the human matrix is engendered with the religious complex that allows it to live in tranquility, while actually in chains of extreme limitation.

But the gods do disappear somehow. In the case of Enki-Éa, we will find that there is one Sumerian tablet that describes his metaphorical disappearance.

Parks strongly supports the analogy linking the personages of Enki and Osiris, and uses this analogy to "decode" this Sumerian tablet with the help of the Egyptian funerary ideology. He also emphasizes that Enki-Osiris was not actually assassinated in Kalam (Sumer) (which is why the event is not generally described on Mesopotamian tablets) but rather in Kemet (Egypt). Parks also follows the traces of Enki's sister Ereškigal (as named in the Mesopotamian tablets) and her younger sister Ninanna (Inanna). Their interwoven shadows lead us into the depths beneath the Giza plateau.

Enki and Osiris were objects of mystical cults relating to the stability of the soul and resurrection in their respective temples. The priests used artifacts to give the illusion that they lived eternally.

Funerary rites were numerous in Egypt because death was not maligned there as it was in Mesopotamia. The ritualized defunct, image of Osiris and Horus, transcended death to perpetuate the Osirian myth and reequilibrate the universe. Death was but a state that served the transmutation of the soul.

But in Mesopotamia, death was terribly feared. To mention it directly could provoke it. And so the Sumerians preferred to use phrases such as "he/she has gone to his/her destiny" or "his/her destiny has seized him/her".

Parks states that this difference is consistent with the fact that Egypt was more inspired by forces said to be "of the light" (Osiris-Enki / Kadištu) while Mesopotamia was under the influence of forces associated with "darkness" (Seth-Enlil / Anunnaki).

Separating Egypt and Mesopotamia is a vast desert plain, known to the Sumerians as the Edin. It was under the sovereignty of Seth-Enlil, the Great Šàtam (territorial administrator). Seth (Šeteš), the mythological Egyptian god of the deserts, dwelled in the red earth, the desert and the foreign land known as "Dešeret" (Dšr.t), a term which in the Sumerian KUR, equally designates "the foreign countries".

"Kur" had two distinct significations to the Sumerians. First, the mountain where the "gods" resided, inaccessible to mortals, universal and vivifying. This would be the primordial domain, the Kharsag of the Gina'abul-Anunna in the Taurus mountains.

The second sense was the world beyond, the country of the dead generally situated under the earth's crust, between the primordial waters of the Abzu and the inhabited world above. We know that it does not appear in this case to be the hollow earth, the Abzu, but more the subtle dimension or lower frequencies connected to the underworld where certain Gina'abul had established their domain. This domain, unknowable to common mortals, generally symbolized to the Sumerians the kingdom of the dead.

Parks lists numerous points concerning the KUR from Françoise Bruschweiler's 1987 study "Inanna". These relate to its connections with life and death for gods of various levels and their relationship with intermediaries between humanity, the higher categories of deities, the demons and other malevolent spirits, and the heroic means used to force access.

He is therefore not surprised to find mention of the KUR on various clay tablets dealing with domains of Anunnaki and humans, trespasses, and the possession and uses of Gúrkur ("sphere of KUR") and Gürkur ("who transports toward the KUR").

Note

The great majority of the village chiefs, that is to say initiates, who reside on the Giza plateau know perfectly well that the site is riddled with galleries that form an absolutely gigantic subterranean network. They themselves moreover know of the placement of certain tunnels completely unknown to the authorities and to the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities. Any person who establishes a measure of contact with these individuals can verify this.

The term "GIGAL" is not translatable into Egyptian; the village chiefs are well conscious of this and maintain that this very ancient term does not come from Egypt at all. It recalls rather the Latin terms Giganteus (gigantic) and Gigantes (giants), that is to say "monstrous" beings - the sons or children of the earth (serpent genies) called "Sata" in Egyptian - who wished to scale Olympus to dethrone the king of the gods.

But the "foreign country" of Ereškigal (Isis) was no other than the royal kingdom in which were practiced the funerary cults. Totally unfamiliar to the Mesopotamians, and with which the Anunnaki of Kalam (Sumer) were in conflict, was the plateau of Giza, the place of the "foreign gods". This was named "Gigal" in Egypt; well in any case this what the natives call it who live on the millennial plateau.

The Sumerian tablet to which we referred above is one of the twelve on which is inscribed "The Epic of Gilgamesh" - in particular the twelfth one, which is a sort of epilogue. We suggest the reader who may be unfamiliar with these tablets review a summary, such as the Wikipedia entry Epic of Gilgamesh. But keep in mind that few seem to grasp the time frame in which the events described might actually have taken place. We are given a time for the tablets themselves at around 27th century BCE and that is supposed to be that.

Moreover, "Enkidu", a wild man who stands for Enki, was created in the time of the reign of a king Gilgamesh for his diversion and education.

So we ignore that; our interest is in what is said about the underworld into which Enkidu is sent to search for some lost playthings belonging to Gilgamesh. And this is, to the Sumerians, "the Land of the Dead".

A few notes as we begin to launch into this:

- The source for this information is Raymon-Jacques Tournay and Aaron Shaffer, edited throughout the 1990s.
- The document returns us to the beginning of the world. Its recreation by the Anunna is mixed up with the renown of humanity in such a way as to have it be strengthened by the Mesopotamian gods.
- Most of the clay tablets openly reveal the despotic and tyrannical position of An and his "intergalactic mafia".
- This twelfth tablet clearly reveals the genetic manipulation performed by the "Sumerian gods", producing the line of Á-DAM, the animal humans charged with serving body and soul the Gina'abul "gods" (lizards).

The "poem" is careless as to the order of events. It has, for example, the creation of humanity occurring before the repartitioning of the globe between the "gods"! But passing over that, we note that the characters present are always An, Enlíl, Enki, Ninmah (Ninhursag), or Ereškigal when she replaces Ninmah-Ninhursag.

Except that at the time of the "repartition", she replaces not Ninmah but Enki. And why? Because he is no longer among the living. He sails in the Land of the Dead, an infernal land, foreign to the eyes of the Sumerians.

He sails on a boat in the unfathomable land of the deceased... according to the Sumerian text. Specialists pay little attention to the term KUR, whose meaning differs according to terms and circumstances. Here they take it to mean the subterranean and aquatic world of Enki.

17th-century engraving showing cutaway view of a subterranean network under the Giza plateau. Thus this has been known about for a long time. The network is named "Gigal" by the natives of the millennial plateau. The schematisation of the labyrinths on the ground shows that the utilization of the lower Giza plateau as an initiatory platform was known in the highest antiquity. "Sphinx Mystagoga" by Athanase Kircher, 1676.

But this contrasts with the rocky world of Ereškigal (Egyptian Isis). Parks thinks of the Egyptian Book of Two Ways (see The Coffin Text - The Book of Two Ways), an initiatic itinerary that precisely maps the underworld necropolis of Restau (or Ro-Setau), in which the two roads lead to the tomb of Osiris and to the Great Pyramid.

Continuing with this, Parks gives the strict Egyptian definition of "Restau" as "entrance to the galleries or corridors", while translating the Sumerian vocable rather differently. See "Restau" in our Decoder.

The Latin restauro leads to French restaurer and English restore: to repair, reestablish. Parks mentions that the antediluvian sanctuary placed under the Giza pyramids was reused by the "Egyptian gods" as an underground base, and later to accomplish funerary rites of the ancient Pharaohs to restore the body and soul of the Egyptian sovereigns, successors of Osiris and of Horus.

At this point Parks intricately quotes modern and ancient texts, developing the concepts that the waterway navigated by the defunct ruler's solar barque, and described by the Egyptians, is named Urenes, meaning "gigantic" or "very vast"; it appears to be a subterranean Nile whose dimensions correspond to those of Egypt itself. See its Sumerian decomposition in our Decoder.

KIGAL

Sumerian (Mesopotamian)	Akkadian	Egyptian
Kigal: Great Earth / Place (Ensemble of Dimensions), can be decomposed to... GI₇-GAL (good and noble) GI₆-GAL (great and sombre): Why Mesopotamian tablets say the place where Ereškigal lives is filled with darkness	Kigal or Kigallu (base, uncultivated land, underground, infernal)	Sumerian Kigal >> Gigal Network under Giza Plateau Access to Duat Network

As we have seen, Parks gets mileage from examining the meanings of Sumerian or Sumero-Akkadian vocalizations of Egyptian terms... as with Kemet (see Decoder) where he sheds light on a funerary cult totally unexplored and feared in Sumer.

The Seventh Tablet of Gilgamesh evokes the idea that the Mesopotamians had of this strange and infernal land. It is that of a dream that Enkidu, the companion of Gilgamesh, had when he was at the point of access to this unknown country.

Enkidu's origins were in Africa, where he lived in harmony with the animals before coupling with a priestess of Uruk, the city of Inanna and Gilgamesh. The priestess transmitted to Enkidu her "breath of life", causing Enkidu to become "like a god". This transformation permitted him to mingle with the civilized world, to affront Gilgamesh, and become his friend for life with multiple adventures.

The Seventh Tablet of Gilgamesh depicts an Enkidu precipitated by external forces toward the great mysterious place of abundant doorways, tunnels, and initiator priests. Enkidu met the kings of the past, the sovereigns who had directed the land. They seemed to correspond to pharaohs, whose steps many times went underground to the Gugal to be initiated.

At this point it becomes obvious that the Enkidu character is a sort of early human, and Parks' analysis becomes dependent on the reader's familiarity with early human races... but no human races have actually been introduced yet in our narrative! In other words, further development of this page (Enki in the Land of the Dead) would not be appropriate until we have done some catching up with the story. Therefore the page will be placed on hold temporarily.

This page is largely an English-language translation of Anton Parks' preview introduction to his book: Le Réveil du Phénix The Chronicles of the Gírkù ("The Chronicles of the holy sword") retraces the age-old combats that lead two beings issued of a single energy arising from Gagsisá-Eš (Sirius 3) see discussion of Sky Orientation 4 under [Worlds]: two sister or sister/brother souls, rebelling against a despotic authority that had held sway over a large part of our galaxy since time immemorial. Whatever were their different names throughout the thread of history and memories, it is an ancestral combat well underway before the first book of this series, over other incarnations. That is what is revealed, among other things, by The Awakening of the Phoenix.

The crystal Ugur (The GÍRKÙ). We plan to develop a 3-D graphic model of Ugur for The Awakening of the Phoenix.

The Chronicles of the Gírkù draws a portrait of the gods of the Earth, giving them their true dimension. It is not a question of etheric or monolithic divinities, as some prefer to describe them, solely to reassure themselves and to give to the human genre an exceptional character. It is more a matter of individuals of flesh and blood, and moreover, humanoids. These were awesome predators, beached here at the time of an ancient war, who discovered that their royal Kingú creators had already appropriated this territory, long before. The conflict is partially exposed in the Babylonian creation text of approx. 1115 B.C., given the name Enûma Eliš by contemporaneous exegetes.

These warriors and colonizers dubbed Anunna(ki) calculated with a different notion of time from that of the human being -- looking forward many decades and centuries. Their methods and ways of conducting themselves over long periods of time testify to a quasi-immortality, not the extremely short existence of humans.

Their adversaries and galactic lookalikes who found refuge in Egypt and in its subterranean sanctuary named Gigal, conceived an astute codification of languages aimed at creating difficulties for the Annunaki with their goal of global domination over mankind. This codification, to a large extent described in the works of this series, requires an intelligence and an ultra-rapid manner of thinking not possessed by the human being.

The following paragraphs contain references to details of the Ádam Genisiš narrative that have not yet been reviewed on our web pages. This situation is being addressed.

The Awakening of the Phoenix begins where Ádam Genisiš brusquely culminates, just after the sudden disappearances of Mamítu-Nammu (Nut) and her son Sa'am-Enki-Asar (Osiris) at the time of the great battle of the Age of the Lion, almost 10,000 years ago. At this moment of our narrative, the combat conducted by the two sister souls who carried at that time the names of Aset (Isis) and Asar (Osiris), is newly troubled by the disappearance and the sorrowful mourning for one another.

The history reported by the Egyptian funerary texts and the local legends spread by the priests who did not wish news of the death of Asar (Osiris), and the true conditions of his disappearance to be known, were only pale reflections of the reality.

Symbol of Sirius

The Awakening of the Phoenix opens:

Setesh (Enlíl-Seth) is a mixed-blood artificially created through the genetic genius of Asar (Enki-Osiris) from his own genes, those of Mamítu-Nammu (Nut), and others derived from the Gina'abul race. Given that he possesses the same genetic material as his creator Enki-Osiris, namely that of his creator Mamítu-Nammu, Setesh passes both as his son and his brother. It is precisely this situation that is the origin of the conflicts that have opposed Enki-Asar (Osiris) and Enlíl-Setesh (Seth) on Earth.

After having shone brightly over unfathomable expanses of time at the heart of the divine assembly of Kalam (Sumer) in the role of grand Šàtam (territorial administrator), Setesh (Enlíl-Seth) little-by-little loses his prestige and the confidence of Atum-Râ (An). Setesh then makes use of all possible ruses to restore his previous popularity and renown. To this end, he engages in open war against Asar and assassinates him in order to obtain the lands and the throne of Egypt.

In his murderous folly that swept beyond all the frontiers of the terrestrial globe, Setesh caused the explosion of Mulge, the Black Star (today's asteroid belt). This in turn blew Mulge's ancient satellite into a completely unstable orbit -- one that perpetually menaced Earth throughout the narrative of The Awakening of the Phoenix.

The first disastrous passage of the bolide has overturned the Earth and caused a terrible deluge.

This fratricidal struggle that perpetuates itself on the Earth has the indulgence of Asar's creator, Atum-Râ (An), who saw in these conflicts the guarantee that he would not be made destitute by one of his sons, in particular the grand usurper of the throne of Egypt. After the death of his son Asar, he slithered to the head of the Assembly, claiming the power to guarantee a durable peace between the two consanguine adversaries, Sumer and Egypt.

A claim that he will never keep.

Aset (Isis) must take the country of Egypt and occupy the throne that is her due, but the authority of Atum-Râ (An) prevents her from fully exercising her power: the Queen must reign with her King, as in the mythical times when she had directed Egypt with her sister-soul Asar (Osiris). Even the protection and the support of her half-brother Râ could change nothing. She is a queen without real power over her country, but only on her subjects who live with her in the subterranean network, under the plateau of Giza.

Aset (Isis) possesses a highly developed intelligence. Very few are those who understand her, even among her own people. Faced with the unbearable disappearance of Asar and this geopolitical situation which removes from her once again all her legitimate rights, Aset will "thaw" the corpse of her spouse that had been ravaged by Setesh (Seth) and use his genetic code to reawaken her lover from the "land of the dead".

The struggle of Aset is that of a woman ready to raise mountains, more precisely to construct one in order to bring about the rebirth of Asar in her son Heru (Horus). Her plan is outrageous. Her fight to give life to her "inverted" double is as colossal as the Great Pyramid of Egypt, the matrix from which the prodigy will be effected.

It is in persevering closely with the counsel of the Abgal (Sirian) sages remaining on Earth that she will obtain the authorization to begin her construction that functions on the ancient knowledge of beings from Sirius. It is the intense struggle of a woman fatigued by the plots and destiny, a woman become goddess, determined to become mother to retrieve her lover and later unite with him in what will be called a shameful and incestuous union. Even the thinking of humans has no vocabulary for otherwise naming an exception like this one, simply a story tied to karmic bonds that surpass understanding.

Aset will then do everything possible to legitimate Heru's (Horus') access to the throne of Egypt. She wishes that the deaths of her mother Nut and her spouse be avenged by her prodigal son, and that she may finally live in peace.

Heru (Horus) is the future king whom the power in place, incarnated by Atum-Râ and his clergy, does not wish to recognize for fear of losing control over Egypt. The clergy knows perfectly well that he is the son of Osiris, but suppresses this information in order to permit Setesh (Seth) to legitimize his own access to the throne.

Likewise, the clergy with which Heru is in conflict refuses to admit that Heru could be the reincarnation of Asar, for the same reason.

Heru was engendered naturally, but by artificial insemination from the genes of Asar, Aset, and unknown Kingús. This makes him the equal of Râ and of the Nungal (followers of Râ), but also of the royal Kingú (enemies of the Anunnaki), of Nebet-Hut (Nephtys), and as well understood, of Setesh who himself possesses royal albino genes.

Aset, his mother, and later his spouse, controls his acts and gestures. She is his shadow and he the fighting arm of Egypt. In spite of his dissensions with Râ, Heru is going to have to do battle alongside him to repulse the enemies of Egypt; he is going to engage in a very long battle against Setesh and above all place himself behind the clergy who incarnate the executive power of the grand Atum-Râ (An).

Horus will equally do all possible to restore the image and the religion of his assassinated father and to make himself recognized as his legitimate son.

In this fashion, Heru pursues the destiny that the two celestial twins chose jointly for themselves: to combat the shadow that has so many times separated them. The Awakening of the Phoenix retraces this relentless struggle between the shadow and the light, in the name of Love and Life.

The work The Awakening of the Phoenix will include:

- An introduction by Anton Parks
- A preface written by the editors of a magazine specialized on the subject
- The account
- A report on the origin of the Tree of Life (Anton and Nora Parks)
- The Sumerian and Egyptian lexicons for the terms used
- The bibliography

Plus

- A diagram of the different human lines (Zeitlin and Parks)
- The Mythical Genealogy of the Celestial Twins (Zeitlin and Parks)
- The vessel of Heru (Zeitlin and Parks)
- The vessel of Osiris (Zeitlin and Parks)

I must excuse myself to my French-speaking readers. Whether on this Internet site [<http://www.anunna.net/antonparks>] or in interviews, I have several times announced different numbers of volumes that form The Chronicles of the Gîrkû. The problem stems from The Awakening of the Phoenix, which would normally have had to cover several historical periods. I had planned to close this series with a third and final voluminous book.

Once I had begun drafting the series, it was difficult for me to evaluate with precision the number of pages that the ensemble was going to require. The numerous notes at the base of the pages and the included manuscripts required enormous space. Take for example the two dossiers of Awakening of the Phoenix: that on the birth of Horus is four times longer than foreseen; as to that on the Tree of Life and the one by Gerry Zeitlin... they were quite simply not envisioned initially...

At the time that I left Volume 2 and the personage of Sa'am, I was relieved to have accomplished this heavy task, but also worried about bringing to market a work that could have appeared "incomplete"... In effect, Ádam Genišiš ends brusquely with the instant disappearances of the two principal personages of the two first works. I could have pursued the editing of Ádam Genišiš and included what is found at the beginning of this Volume 3, but that would not have made any sense. It was equally important for me to keep the two manuscripts that end Volume 2 insofar as they offer information at one time capital and original. These two appendices equally address the setting of The Awakening of the Phoenix.

The Awakening of the Phoenix aims to be to some extent the hard kernel of the series. In order not to fail in my duty to faithfully retranscribe this complex history, I am resigned to considerably "amputate" this third work, retaining only the Egyptian period. In regard to the notes and above all the manuscripts that I have produced for this new work and that I intend to realize in the suite of volumes to follow, I can affirm that it was a good choice.

The Awakening of the Phoenix will be in spite of everything a bit thicker than Volume 2, Ádam Genišiš.

Status Report

Today

An extract from what appears to be an entry that Parks imagines Sa'am/Enki/Osiris might record into the Gírkù today:

...The wish to acquire eternity has permanently divided our line. The blood of the divine Menu (trees) [Decoder] flows in the veins of the Gina'abul males. It is dispensed in the shining cups but not for the benefit of our progeny.

Our children have traversed the shifting ages in search of longevity and power. Their quest is laborious and ceaseless, even today; it never ends. The great inundations succeeded one another, the continents are brought down upon themselves due to our vanity and our utopian science. The A'amenpteh (Atlantis) is in fragments and Káskara (Mu) lies in a watery grave. The Lú (humanity) has finally picked itself up and is now scattered over the surface of Uraš (the Earth) like the grains of sand in a dry lakebed while our lineage fights endlessly over the four corners of this wounded world.

Ti-ama-te (the solar system) shows almost no trace of the presence of the Kadištu (the Designers of Life). I live with most of my own people in concealment between the Abzu and the Gígal (ancient name of the subterranean network found under today's Gízeh plateau), the ancient base of the Urmah Life Designers. My eyes yearn to see the light of the exterior sun...

I am weary of this planet!

In the past, I have crossed the searing deserts and the frozen waters; I have toured Uraš thousand of times. I have transgressed the forbidden territories of my adversary -- the despotic tyrant -- and all I could see was fear and misery. The psychological impact that the great Šatam (territorial administrator) has never ceased to make on the ensemble of my children has finally affected me. I will never again return to Kalam (Sumer) and still less to Eridu -- places forever imprinted with furious winds that sweep away my hopes...

The Lú have raised colossal cities dedicated to our glory, but they kill each other in our name. They blindly serve the causes of the two adversary parties in the hope of benefitting from our benevolent auspices. In the final analysis, they know nothing of our internecine war.

What more can I do for them without again putting my own people in peril?

It makes one dizzy to see, every day, the thousands of examples of pain caused by love and fear, yet to appreciate the richness of the personalities... The luckless Lú, disconnected from the Angal (great heaven), can rarely see beyond appearances, though a person may shine in the night like an incandescent jewel and the being has awakened as a star...

Ugur, how time has passed since our arrival here on Uraš. I have just reread the information that I entered into your heart when we placed our feet here and Mam had instructed me on the mores of the Namlú'u (primordial humanity). I see that I was still in the wrath of this war and the schemes that projected us here... I was so young then!

What have I not done to preserve my people? My Kuku (ancestors) made me the underling of their Hermetic political formation. They made me the lord of artificial procreation. But we secretly reconstructed the [genetic] sequences. The recombination was executed successfully...

After all these Muanna (years) of quest and doubts, I have finally found ease for my Ba (soul). Today I have been assured that the "salvation" of the Lú will spring forth by surprise when they are ready. However long it will take, the natural cross-breeding between the Lú will influence their genes and thus their future comportments. This is under the control of the terrestrial clock...

There was a key discussion of this statement in the Ages of Uraš forum as the topic: A sudden, surprising arousal of the human race?

This was a part of the Open SETI Initiative ForumsII, which are now closed. However an orphaned copy of the discussion has been provided here for you, strongly recommended. Please click below:

A SUDDEN, SURPRISING AROUSAL OF THE HUMAN RACE?

Perpetual War

From the Nexus interview [N]:

It's always the same story: sectarianism, religious fanaticism, and racism.

These behaviors are not exclusive to the Earth; one finds them elsewhere and among the most evolved peoples of our universe.

The war is without doubt unfinished. The conflict between the Ušumgal and Kingú royals has endured the millennia. It relates to the very origin of the Ušumgal. They were apparently cloned in the very distant past by the royal albino Kingú-Babbar, but they will not hear of that for reasons too remote in time and not even part of the spacetime that relates to the episodes I have received.

The Ušumgal are pretentious and very arrogant, doubtless because of their great height that rises above the rest of the breed composing the Gina'abul family.

The female Gina'abul are caught up in these quarrels and at times, as Kadištu (Designers of Life), have had to repair the damage caused by each of the two parties [Ušumgal and Kingú].

The conflicts that directly make up the part of the history that occupies us relate to the events surrounding the creation of the Anunna. The ancient and up-to-the-minute war is between the descendants of the Anunna and the Kingú-Babbar... with humanity caught in the middle!

Continuing now from the Karmapolis [K1] interview:

The reptilians have been in conflict among themselves for a very long time and this war is always a reality on Earth. The entire human race pays heavily for it!

The Earth is of considerable strategic importance for the Gina'abul male caste. Current geopolitical events are not my specialty but the information available to me today, thanks to that which I received during ten long years, leads me to conclude the following:

Since he is no longer in contact with his re-creators, the human being tries to give himself the impression of being master of his own history and destiny. He takes refuge in the official version constructed by the dominant authority, itself manipulated from the wings by the Gina'abul males....

The Anunna and their terrestrial descendants are at war with the royal Gina'abul called Kingú who believe themselves to be the owners of the Earth. This very ancient war [would] not have any effect on present-day humanity. However, the Gina'abul males use humanity as its cannon fodder -- humans who count, in their eyes, no more than the A-DAM, who destroy each other for the two clans through skillfully-interposed conflicts.

More simply, I think that the Anglo-American armed forces work for the Anunna faction and their direct descendants, while the royal Gina'abul used the Nordic countries to fight their blood-brother enemies. Those who consider themselves at the top of the Gina'abul social pyramid are the royals denominated Kingú-Babbar, that is to say, albino Kingús! They are extremely feared white-skinned reptilians. They have a horror of the Ušumgal, their Anunna and their descendants, which does not prevent them from dealing with them when it serves them.

The incredible story of the pure (Aryan) race comes from this.

King Šulgi of Ur (2094-2047 BCE), sovereign of Sumer and Akkadia. He was deified during his reign, signifying his divine origin. One sees him on this clay seal facing a Dragon who transmits to him the divine power. One of his anthems specifies "that Šulgi possesses a fierce regard and that he is born of an Ušumgal (Grand Dragon). (ANET 585)

Many sources attest that the U.S. would still be at war with Germany today. Note that no peace treaty was ever signed between the allies and Germany at the end of WWII. Was this really an oversight?

The Anunna and the Kingú (royals) use humans as pawns and the Earth like a grand chessboard. They have settled their accounts in this sordid fashion for millennia. Each like the other believes they hold the most powers and therefore rights on Uraš (the Earth).

The Ušumgal-Anunna and their descendants conceal themselves in caves and other cavities in the Earth. The most "pure" or uncorrupted of them do not tolerate (to say the least) the 3rd dimension (Ki) [see Dimensions], which continues to rise - or rise again - in frequency as time goes on. Certain among them frequent more the 2nd dimension [KUR-GAL] which, by means of its particular density on the Earth, could well correspond to the 3rd dimension on another planet.

According to what I know, the royal albinos do not have this problem with frequencies. Those who live on the Earth are situated more at the poles or near the openings of the Abzu (subterranean world). I have no knowledge that they actually live in the Abzu itself. The royals also possess areas under certain mountains and bases throughout the solar system, including on the moon....

The Gina'abul group to which belongs the being whose chronicles I relate in this series, was positioned between these two consanguine opposed collectives. This "rebel" group, consisting essentially of Amašutum (female Designers of Life), Ama'argi (female Gina'abul terrestrials), and Nungal (cloned Designers of Life), spent its time in coordinating with these two enemy collectives -- and this created political complications on the Earth.

The humans, whatever their skin color, always served their re-creators. This is indicated in the African term Wazungu, "the people or the whirling demons," a plural term used by numerous African tribes for the "Nordic" type of extraterrestrial.

The explosion of the original language into thousands of different idioms (decomposable into Sumero-Akkadian) resulted from these oppositions between the Gina'abul rebels (serving the Kadištu Designers of Life) and the two other clans who disputed the legitimacy of the Earth. The progressive disappearance of the language of heaven in the mouth of humanity was devised, not to better rule, but to disorganize the human subjects by the (royal) Kingú and the Anunna.

Shouldn't one see in this a resounding hope? Those who guarded the garden and who offered a minimum of autonomy to humanity knew very well what they were doing. The religious traditions transformed them into enemies of God, while actually they acted to the contrary. These beings -- for the great majority serving the Designers of Life -- have not ceased to codify the languages of the Earth in order to avoid a globalization which would have for its goal only the centralization of powers (toward you know who) and to robotize humanity. Do you now understand what is actually happening? The global conflicts, the assassinations, the growing instability are there only to serve the carnivores! They follow thus their little interposed war; they try to reduce the frequency of the KI (3rd dimension) which is meant to serve as a stepping stone to the higher levels, and they enfeeble the human....

The time has come to decode what has been hidden. As I have demonstrated in The Secret of the Dark Stars and a little bit here, the decomposition of numerous terms from the four corners of the Earth is possible thanks to the language code of the Gina'abul rebels. This information is precise, because it reveals the origins of humanity and also the path to follow....

This spiritual road is no other than that of the spirit and of the light which reunites one and all with a universal consciousness which is not limited to this planet.

The term "spirituality" is taken from the Latin SPIRITUALIS, itself from SPIRITUS (spirit). That gives us in the language of the "gods": SI (light), PIRIG (brilliant) and the verbal form US (being near, to follow, attend), thus SI-PIRIG-US "to follow the brilliant light." It is truly this light that will come into us all one day, humans as well as Gina'abul.

An Anomalous Excursion into the KUR-GAL?

Would it be possible for a human being to enter the Earth's KUR-GAL dimension?

Author Whitley Strieber may have done this. He reports an unplanned, unexpected penetration into a reality space similar to ours but still unmistakably different, and connected by... a phantom highway intersection! His little excursion occurred as he drove in his jeep through a busy, built-up area of New Jersey, and he had a passenger in the vehicle who shared the entire experience.

Strieber seemed to have encroached on what appeared to be a residential area with highly unusual structures, decorated with images of "snakes." It was definitely a break from the ordinary world he had just left; even the weather was different.

He and the passenger in his jeep saw no other vehicles there, nor any living beings.

After finding his way back to normal reality, Strieber was unable to locate that neighborhood again.

Could this have been a glimpse of the Earth's KUR-GAL? Functionally, it would meet the requirements. Recall (see Dimensions) that the KUR-GAL is the dimensional level on which the Gina'abul reptilians took up their residence on Earth.

Strieber relates his experience here in a short audio clip, taken from his Dreamland Internet broadcast of August 18, 2005.

This clip (and many others) can be found on the website Beyond Communion. Whitley Strieber has given his kind permission for its use here.

Possible Extended Encounter with Imdugud

The various civilizations and their interactions described in Anton Parks' reports (his published and as yet unpublished books and communications) cover a time span of at least hundreds of thousands of years. If the reports are veridical, then, as we have been saying, it would be foolish to believe that the powerful forces that swept us into existence have now faded into the mists like a child's fairy tale, leaving us to play out our destiny in a vast uninhabited universe, ours for the taking, or not, as we wish.

We may indeed have a destiny, but it cannot be the one we were thinking of.

If we cannot determine "where everybody is" and what they are doing, then we had better work on that problem because there is no way that they don't know where we are and what we are doing. Since we have no assurance that we are under the protection of any "prime directive" so beloved by science fiction fans, aware humans should be distinctly disturbed by this asymmetry in information flow.

That said, we do not in these websites (Open SETI and The End of Enchantment) devote space to "UFO sightings" or other common experimenter reports, however important those may be. We do go deeply into bodies of data, ideas, and analysis that show promise of putting an end to the asymmetry and significantly improving our knowledge of our situation.

Especially now that we have Parks' reports, we can look for correspondences... signs of current activities of specific species, for example.

And as it turns out, we may have an extensive, independent report that qualifies.

Charles Hall, an ex-USAF weather observer, spent several years living part-time and working in isolation out on the Nellis Range north of Indian Springs, Nevada. During his assignment there, Hall had extensive, daily experience with an unearthly race of humanoid beings whom he dubbed "the Tall Whites." His description of these beings corresponds in many respects with Parks' description of the Imdugud race (see Races) who in his understanding were created in our solar system and have inhabited it continuously for hundreds of thousands of years.

Exactly what do they have in common? Here's a short list:

1. Very tall humanoid "Nordic" with white skin
2. Often have blue eyes
3. Emit barking or whistling sounds
4. Solitary

5. Warriors/soldiers

6. The Tall Whites used Egyptian-style hieroglyphs and cartouches. Possibly the Imdugud did as well; see below

The Tall Whites frequently wore detachable claws in Hall's presence on the range (because they actually feared him); he noticed that they would remove them for forays into Las Vegas (in favor of gloves). In Parks' memory, Sa'am always found the Imdugud to be clawed. And they had good reason to fear him too, due to his reputation of having killed Abzu-Abba by using his great internal powers. And Sa'am was the son of An, creator of the Anunna. (A most important topic, yet to be discussed on these pages.)

Parks does not know whether or not the Imdugud's claws were natural. The genetically-related Urmah displayed claws when Sa'am met with them on several occasions. The Nungal, blood brothers of the Imdugud, had hands with fingers like humans. The important point, however, is that he did see claws on the Imdugud.

Hall's Tall Whites make frequent trips to the moon. The Imdugud have numerous bases there.

I asked Parks if he remembers anything about the Imdugud's possible use of hieroglyphs. He says he was never shown this in his downloaded experiences, but it would be reasonable for that to be the case:

Egyptian was spoken by the Life Designers on Mulge and its moon (the future Venus). It thus appears to be an ancient language that was used in the solar system by most of the Kadistu (perhaps those who came from Orion, the home of the Urmah?) In any case, the Urmah must have spoken it, I am convinced of that. And thus it would not be surprising to find that their children, the Imdugud, also spoke the Egyptian language. That seems logical enough to me.

This discussion of the use of hieroglyphs raised a question: why was this language not mentioned in the earlier discussion of the primacy of the "Matrix Language", Emeša, to the Mesopotamian and other human languages (see Languages)?

Parks' reply:

It is actually difficult to affirm at this time that Egyptian descended from Emeša. I have not worked sufficiently on the decomposition to be able to make that claim loud and strong. That said, it would follow, since (and this is the case with practically all the ancient languages), as we have shown in Adam Genisiš, we can translate Sumerian terms into Egyptian. That is still more remarkable!! This makes me think that the original Egyptian must have been spoken by the beings who spoke Emeša, if only as a separate language that was perhaps as important as the Emeša of the Gina'abul priestesses. Recall that the message from the Urmah written to Sa'am's attention in the Giga! was in Emeša...

(The reference to "Sa'am in the Giga!" relates to an event that has not yet been covered in these Notes.)

Returning to our comparison of the Imdugud and the Tall Whites...

Neither group can tolerate the Greys. This distinguishes the Imdugud from the Kingú-Babbar, who make use of the Greys, who are at their service and are even their creatures.

Like the Kingú, the Imdugud detest associating with others, doing it only in their self-interest. They are difficult to approach, even by a Gina'abul or a Kadištu. As to the Tall Whites, Hall was shot and left to die merely because he took one step toward one of them in order to better hear what the being was trying to say to him. That peculiarity is a striking correspondence.

Hall is not able to explain to our satisfaction what these beings were doing with their base at Nellis, and in fact what they do anywhere. Hall did see numerous "scout craft" based at Nellis, capable of travel throughout the solar system. According to Parks, since the Imdugud were in some sense the guardians of Tiamate, they had bases throughout the system, and many on the Earth.

They know well the humanity that they watched being (re)created and reaching maturity.

They were programmed by the Urmah to play the role of conciliators. They are solitary, but must be able to enter into contact with the entire world. Negotiation is their mission. Combat is their final recourse.

In any event, their situation on the Earth was very difficult and it was almost impossible to negotiate with the arrogant Anunna, with whom they were at war. The Imdugud spent more of the time "saving their skins" and their territories than negotiating with the invaders.

Parks agrees with my suggestion that the group at Nellis may be a military or security unit directing a logistics center.

But the Imdugud have always been heavily armed, he says. This brings to mind an event in which Charles met a U.S. security patrol on the range who were quite hostile and threatening to kill him, although he was fully authorized to be there. During the tense encounter, a "Tall White gunship" drifted onto the scene and tried to maneuver to get a clean line of fire at the security patrol, while Hall had to move to protect the security team without inciting them to open fire on him!

While all that was going on, Hall relates, the Pentagon was on the phone to the guard post, trying to get them to call off their people.

"If the Tall Whites are the Imdugud, it is not astonishing to see them having relations with the U.S. government. It is even more reassuring because you well know that they are great strategists and very intelligent."

Why "reassuring?" Keep in mind the affiliations of the Imdugud (see Races). For their part, the Anunna have a much darker origin, co-created by An and Ninmah on Dukù for purposes of conquest. (This is perhaps the centerpiece event of Les Chroniques which we have begun to report at length in these Notes.) Parks describes in great detail the relations of the Anunna/Anunnaki with humanity in his second work, Adam Genesis. And so this remark of Parks can be considered a hint as to our present situation.

Charles Hall and the Tall White ETs

Millennial Hospitality IV Interim Notes

Charles Hall's recent fourth book, subtitled After Hours, is an important addition to the series and has research value for students of this episode in human / extra-human relations.

Here are some of our observations, which eventually may be integrated into the body of this page.

- Attention to small talk and "minor" details is quite revealing, indicating human/ET working relationships, social relationships, joint projects, cross-currents.
- "Tall White" society is stratified, much like our military ranking system. In fact, definite human/ET rank equivalences are suggested. Ex: USAF general makes requests of highly-ranked "Harry", who complies.
- This page was originally created to fill a need for illustrations to support Hall's story. Hall's MH-IV now provides details on vegetation, building construction, more specific locations of some operations, and made-in-USA scoutcraft that would make it possible to greatly improve the illustrations on this page. But just as "a picture is worth a thousand words," we now have the thousand words, so do we really need to make the large effort required to improve the illustrations? For the moment, we have not decided about this.
- We already know that Hall was not given security clearance for this work, which created problems for him among the Nellis commanding officers. We now see that the TWs had technology for rendering him partially conscious, docile, and unable to remember events. This may have been their own preference over a conscious cleared Hall.
- Hall's occasional lapses into consciousness during activities caused an uproar among the high-ranking military overseers.
- It appears that Hall was being used as a living automaton training aid to introduce newly-arrived TWs to humans.
- Hall's capacity for denial of his experiences (example: "so this is what it's like to wake up in a nightmare") are almost beyond comprehension, except that this may have been enforced via some sort of hypnotic suggestion. He documents extensive coping mechanisms that themselves become increasingly bizarre.

- The program into which Hall was injected seems to have been utterly heartless.

Why the contact activity was never classified

Number of children in colony; types and numbers of craft seen

Charles Hall's Millennial Hospitality book series, describing his encounters with a race of human-like extraterrestrials – the “Tall Whites” (TW) - during a two year duty assignment at Nellis Air Force Base from 1965 to 1967, is a story with tremendous visual impact. Situated on Nevada's vast Desert National Wildlife Range, a scenic wilderness containing almost no artificial structures, the Nellis Ranges consist of almost nothing but breathtaking scenery.

This is the backdrop against which Hall's story plays out. Every event he describes can be said to consist of the same basic elements: the landscape, the weather, the people (humans and humanoids), the craft, sometimes the weather shacks... the occasional glimpse of a hangar door and, believe it or not, the TW children's playgrounds.

The story cries out for visuals of these elements. Yet it was not possible for Hall to provide us with anything other than his memories.

Visuals would have had value beyond the esthetic: they also would have demonstrated the feasibility of some of the things Hall describes. For example, he writes that he was able to view the Tall Whites' main hangar entrance high in the mountains 30 miles north of his Range 3 theodolite position on the desert floor. A photograph of that unlikely view would have helped to support the story.

Twenty years after his discharge from the Air Force, Hall began writing down his experiences, and after another twenty years, published them – at first presenting his books as works of fiction. Had he never reversed himself and begun claiming them to be true stories albeit slightly modified to protect the identities of some of the characters, there would have been no point in going back and trying to reconstruct the events as they took place on the ground.

When he was writing his stories, he did not know that it might be possible to reconstruct how they fitted into the landscape and in that way test the possibility of what he claimed to have viewed.

He did not know that high resolution elevation data and satellite imagery of the Nellis ranges would ever be made available to the public, or that software capable of rendering photorealistic images from the raw data would be widely available.

And yet, these things have come to pass, and this makes it possible to create realistic illustrations and even a video animation of at least one element of his story: the landscape in which it takes place.

I first began experimenting with the geological data, the satellite images, and landscape rendering software in late 2004, hoping to have a first look at “geometric feasibility” and to add interest to Hall's narrative.

The results were successful on both counts. In each instance, the views described by Hall turned out to be confirmed by the graphic renderings. And the images were pleasing and even dramatic to look at.

One unexpected benefit from this work has been the opportunity it has given Charles Hall to relive his old experiences through viewing these illustrations. Here is what he wrote in an e-mail after having been shown the report as a work-in-progress:

They are so impressive, I can hardly describe them. The memories they bring back to me I am not able to describe in this short email.

Indeed, working with these images has given me the feeling that I know the terrain well, and they can bring that closeness to you also.

But what of the other elements that we would like to have: weather, people, spacecrafts, and structures?

Here we are dependent on what Charles Hall remembers and is willing to help us recreate in terms of drawings and verbal descriptions. He has supplied two sketches of spacecraft shapes, and from this a graphic model has been developed. This is included in the report.

Weather and lighting conditions are amply described in his books where relevant, and it has been possible to recreate that aspect in the landscape renderings.

Hall also describes the weather shacks in some detail, and they do play a role in his experiences. I have elected not to take on the task of rendering architecture in the present report, however, as this would require significant additional effort, and it remains to be seen if there will any interest in it.

As to the rest, we can hope that this report itself will stimulate Hall's memories to the extent that he will be able to contribute more information that can be included in future updates.

Airman First Class Charles James Hall

Nellis Air Force Base with its associated "restricted ranges" occupies more than 5000 square miles of southern and central Nevada desert. Nellis is a vast military reservation, home of "top gun" flight training, exotic and leading-edge R&D projects. To the civilian airman, Nellis lies under restricted airspace, which makes it in effect a "no-fly zone". To the rest of us, it is a no-man's land, a blank spot on the map, a black hole out of which no information may come.

That is, no information is supposed to come, although fabulous stories have emerged over the years. Recently there has been a new one, told by a one-time air force weather observer whose assigned duty took him to a desolate outpost on the ranges of Indian Springs AF Auxiliary Field, ninety miles northwest of Nellis AFB proper, for extended periods between 1965 and 1967.

Today Charles James Hall is an information technology specialist, actively employed in Albuquerque, NM. In 1965-66, Airman First Class Charles Hall was Range Weather Observer for several gunnery ranges. There was nothing at all exotic about his official duty assignment, and that is what makes it possible for this story to be told today. Hall's job was to release and track weather balloons, measure the "winds aloft", and call in reports to Nellis. What was unique about his situation was that as he was performing his weather observing duties, he was almost continuously surrounded by a group of extraterrestrials observing him. Tall, white-skinned – Hall eventually dubbed them “the Tall Whites” - somewhat human-looking but clearly not of any known Earthly race of human, the beings would be found in his weather shacks, all over his equipment, even watching him shower in his (otherwise-deserted) barracks, coming and going with complete freedom.

This curious feature of his work was apparently never directly discussed with his superiors. Did they know? Of course they did, and they let Hall know that every person who had previously held that assignment had been seriously attacked or at least warned away on threat of death. Over a period of seven years, at least 41 weather observers had been compromised while trying to perform their duties on the Nellis ranges. Some had required hospitalization and were given medical discharges from the air force, and some had been killed. One of them actually deserted the air force and moved away from the area. His buddies covered for him until the day of his actual discharge, when he showed up to sign the papers.

On one occasion the beings even turned on Hall without warning, grievously wounding him in the neck, and leaving him to bleed his life away in the desert dust. In that desperate situation, alone and miles from any human help, Hall found a way to save his own life by using his body weight to press his wound against the soft earth, stemming the flow.

A comment by Dr. Michael Salla from his Prepare4Contact Yahoo Group (April 2, 2005):

The incident where he was shot and left to die by the tall whites who then watched him stage a miraculous recovery was very strange. The message here was "we have power over you and expect you to die but will applaud you if your tenacity and will to live allow you to pull through". Quite sinister really but Hall just accepts it all and continues his work after his close encounter with death. The whole incident and Hall's response is strange. Still Hall admits to being hypnotised by the tall whites so it might be expected that some of his recollections may have been programmed into him. So parts of his story may be how the Tall Whites want him and us to think about them.

Showing talent for being a survivor, Hall was eventually told he could have that lonely job on the ranges as long as he wanted, and was offered an officer track through the Air Force Academy and an eventual permanent assignment as Nellis Range commander (with time out for other career-enhancing assignments).

Hall's experiences were never classified but his orders were highly classified. The reason for this mysterious arrangement is novel and highly surprising. Hall's own explanation is provided under Correspondence in the sidebar at the right -- but it would be best to read the rest of this page before looking at that, because you will then be able to appreciate how it actually adds consistency to his story.

Hall's experience with the extraterrestrials at Nellis / Indian Springs is too long and complex to be told here. He has published the complete chronicle in his Millennial Hospitality quartet. Follow the link for access to excerpts at the publisher's website. Additional links to online pages containing research reports, a radio interview, and other material are provided in the sidebar at the right.

The first three books were presented as fiction, and Hall went to great lengths to fictionalize the locale as well as names of the characters, including his own. However in the fourth book of the series, and in current interviews, Hall now acknowledges that the events described in the books are otherwise factual.

To "decode" the story as told in the first three books, simply apply the following:

Salient Characteristics of the Tall White ETs

Hall has described these beings as tall - ranging upwards of 6-7 feet in height - and quite thin and frail. The skin color is chalk white. They are physically different from us in several noticeable ways, yet the most important physical aspect is that they are humanoid, a fact that is filled with significance.

Their life span is about ten times ours. They do not age as we do, but after around 400 earth years' time they undergo a second stage of growth, eventually reaching around nine feet in height. They die of organ failure at an age of approximately 800 years.

According to exobiologists, extraterrestrials are not supposed to resemble us, as they should have developed independently via natural selection with randomness and varying environments leading to innumerable "genetic" paths. On the other hand, some scientists speculate that there will be resemblances due to the universal utility of various aspects of the human form (i.e., what's good for us should be good for everyone).

Meanwhile, a number of encounters known in the "UFO" field are with entities that can look quite human - so much so that a deep connection simply has to exist. The present case is one of these. (See Appendix 2.)

The Tall Whites have a physical form similar to ours in all gross aspects. That is, they are upright bipedal vertebrates; they have human-like faces, etc. With suitable clothing, they can and do pass as humans during well-guarded forays into Las Vegas.

They have the faculty of speech, but some of their speech sounds are outside the audible spectrum for humans. In other words, we can't hear the sounds.

Normal speech sounds "like a dog barking or a meadowlark singing". However, some Tall Whites can mimic human speech and in fact carry on normal conversations with humans. Some have demonstrated an ability to imitate specific humans so well that the imitation cannot be detected when used over a telephone.

They also can use a device that projects speech so that it is heard by humans within their head. This works only over a short range (several feet) and requires the human to turn the head sideways to the Tall White.

The device is also a language translator. According to its settings from time to time, Hall was occasionally able to overhear Tall Whites conversing among themselves as though they were speaking English.

As stated, there was a pattern of confrontations with our personnel, in which panic led to injury and death of our soldiers. These beings are all well-armed, and they can and do kill, sometimes at the tiniest provocation. They react and move much more rapidly than humans can, so if they decide you have threatened them, you may be cut down and bleeding out without having even been warned.

Every Tall White adult carries a pencil-like weapon that can be set to stun, kill, immobilize, or "hypnotize" humans. It can also administer severe pain, and they frequently use it to discipline people who act in ways that annoy, frighten, or endanger them. The weapon's actions and effects are accomplished by varying the frequency of focused microwaves to interact with specific ions in the human body.

Although they can be friendly, they are at times arrogant and insulting. They appear to be sensitive to our social structures (i.e., classes), for example cultivating relations with high-ranking military officials, some of whom were often seen working with them, while holding lesser-ranking persons in disdain. Hall got along with them by letting them treat him as their "pet", a term they used in his presence.

In time, the term "Teacher's Pet" became Hall's code name that was respected among the ETs and the ranking military who were aware of his activities. He was selected by "both governments" to function as the point man in a pilot program to explore paths of cultural acclimatization between the tall whites and ourselves. Because of everyone's tendency to panic, and the ETs to strike with their weapons, Hall was awarded commendations for the rare bravery that he exhibited during this period.

The Tall White group at Nellis have family structures, not unlike our extended families. They often point out family members – uncles and cousins, etc., - who are living and working with them on the Nellis Base. They seem to care greatly for their children, who are growing up and being educated out there in the sagebrush.

They have what we would call serious issues over "control". They felt the need to control their pet, just as they observed us controlling ours.

In all our fantasies of extraterrestrial contact, we probably never imagined it would be like this. They are altogether too much like ourselves for our own comfort. Is that cause to doubt the authenticity of the story? Beware of that logic.

This aspect - that the Tall Whites deport themselves much as we would when establishing a small base with family quarters in the midst of a hostile land - deserves much more discussion. The point has natural interfaces with other pages in Open SETI and will connect to the Open SETI paradigm at several levels. This will be addressed over time. (See Open SETI At A Glance and also Search Engine Results for "paradigm".)

Origin of the Tall Whites

A ripple of emotion passed through the crowd when I mentioned the star Arcturus, some 36 light years away. After a short pause, the older lady asked with some surprise, "Teacher, does Charlie know where we come from?"

The Teacher replied, "No, not quite, but he is close."

When asked where they came from, they would usually evade the question by reminding him that he would not recognize the name of the place if he heard them speak it. This is disingenuous as they well knew that we had our own names for many celestial objects and they could use them as well as they could communicate anything else in English to Hall. Typically they would laugh among themselves (in their barking way) whenever they threw this response to Charles -- their little joke on him. Charles wisely refrained from protesting.

In fact, they treated such topics as being what we would call "sensitive". However, Hall, via the telepathic link they often established with him, was able to perceive that the star Arcturus or something close to Arcturus is very important to them.

Their ultimate home may be somewhere else. In recent correspondence, Hall stated:

I was never able to determine which star the tall whites called their home star. However, my best guess was a star that is roughly 105 light years away.

Hall's "best guess" was most likely an excellent guess, as he had been able to figure out their route transit times from very careful observations of the different craft and their schedules.

The date of their establishing the present Earth base location is ambiguous. Hall received mental imagery suggesting they knew the area prior to the arrival of European-Americans. Furthermore, one of them suggested she had arrived here during the administration of our President Madison. However the various bunkers and interior spaces that Hall observed looked as though they had been built for the Tall Whites by U.S. construction firms sometime in the 1950s.

Hall was led to believe that they use their Earth base as a sort of waystation along lengthy interstellar travel routes, as though this were the only intermediate station for them. As Hall puts it, our solar system lies in the middle of a large open space that the Tall Whites must traverse between their home location and a certain distant destination.

But a glance at a table of distances to the closest stars from our system puts that explanation in some question.

The Nearest Stars

distance (l.y.)	name
4.22	Proxima Centauri
4.35	Alpha Centauri
5.91	Barnard's Star
7.70	Wolf 359
8.20	BD+36.2147
8.40	L-726-8A
8.60	Sirius-A
8.60	Sirius-B
9.40	Ross 154
10.40	Ross 248
10.80	Epsilon Eridani
10.90	Ross 128
11.10	61 Cygni

Clearly, if their route begins at Arcturus, there are many alternative choices for a relatively nearby base . If their route begins some 105 light years from here, then there is a much greater choice of possible waypoints. This means that if it is even true that the Tall Whites must have a base to use on the way from their home location to somewhere beyond here, there still must either be something special about our solar system and the Earth, or other choices are denied to them.

One thing that could be special is the simple fact that they like the climate and environment of the Nevada desert and would not consider any other place in our solar system. Not even another place on the Earth, apparently. It is possible that they need conditions that rather precisely match those of their home, and we are in no position to guess how widespread or rare such may be. They may, for example, require some trace element in our atmosphere.

At this point it is worth mentioning that Michael Salla has been thinking about what the more hidden purposes or activities of the Tall Whites might be. Since we have at this time only the most tangential information bearing on the purposes of the Tall Whites, it is worthwhile for the reader in making his own evaluation to examine Dr. Salla's statements. His Comment #25 (see links in the sidebar) is particularly recommended.

At any rate, if Arcturus or something close to Arcturus may be significant in connection with the activities of the Tall Whites, it would be well to review a little basic information about this star.

Arcturus, the alpha star of the constellation Boötes, is the fourth brightest star in the sky. A spectral type K1 star, an orange giant, Arcturus has ceased fusing hydrogen in its core. With 1.5 times the mass of our Sun, it releases 215 times more radiation, a considerable portion of which is in the infrared.

Boötes is one of the oldest defined constellations, having been mentioned in Homer's The Odyssey. This constellation has figured in other contact cases.

The following image links to a 3-D view of the solar neighborhood out to 50 light years. You will find Arcturus near the top, well above the plane occupied by our sun. As you gaze at this lovely image, ask yourself: Our solar system is the only possible base on the way from Arcturus to WHERE?

Note that the map shows only the brightest 10% of the roughly 1400 star systems contained within this volume of space, but most of the fainter stars are red dwarfs. Every G-type star is shown.

The linked page also contains full catalog data on each star shown.

A study of this image merely reaffirms that the geometry of travel routes in this part of the Galaxy in no way makes our solar system a standout choice for a waypoint

The Tall Whites' base seems to have a core of permanent residents but also hosts transients, such as visiting scientists. While here, they study such human behaviors as are available for observation around Nellis.

Technology

The Tall Whites obviously possess highly-advanced technology. Hall confined his descriptions of their technology to brief discussions of their deep space craft, the scout craft used for travel near the earth's surface and around the solar system, a weapon that they always carried, and special suits that afforded them limited levitation and also a defensive force field.

Brief descriptions of the deep space and scout crafts are scattered throughout Millennial Hospitality. From those descriptions and some private communication with Charles Hall, simple details of the two types of craft have been provided in the following table and figure.

	Deep Space Craft	Scout Craft
Dimensions	500' L, 300' W, 70' H	Size of bus or RV
Color	Black (Titanium)	White
Cockpit Windows	2 large centered 1/3 up from bottom	Wraparound
Portholes	4 rows each side	1 or 2 rows each side

Orthographic views of generic scout craft according to Hall's description. 3D model courtesy of Magda Gemis, Samuel Michelet, and Bruno Michelet.

Hall also was able to catch at least a glimpse of a scout ship's propulsion system, which appears to be based on “fiber optic coils” with a very large number of windings. From his observations of this system, Hall developed a physics theory that could describe its mode of operation.

The deep space ships were capable of faster-than-light travel, and could take the ETs to their home star system within two or three months' time.

The scout ships, surprisingly, were assembled here on Earth with components provided by humans for the ETs according to their specifications.

From an interview with Michael Salla:

In book two I describe the afternoon when The Teacher and Range Four Harry were showing me the inside of one of the scout craft. Many of the items, such as the seats and the overhead compartments, still carried the mold markings placed on them by various American industries such as Boeing aircraft and Lockheed corporation. The overhead compartments were obviously "off-the-shelf" items from companies such as Airstream corporation. Many of the clothing items that the tall whites were wearing were obviously purchased straight out of the Sears and Montgomery Wards Catalogs.⁵⁸

Yet these craft were capable of what appeared to be gravity-free and massless operations and could accelerate to superluminal speeds.⁵⁹ They were not as reliable in operation as the aliens would have wished.

Hall noted a very important limitation of the propulsion system used in these ships: its tendency to overheat, threatening the integrity of its fiber optic coils. The need to minimize active propulsion phases of interplanetary flights (i.e., earth approaches and cislunar flight paths; little is known relating to interstellar operations), leads the Tall Whites to make maximum use of ballistic trajectories, and this in turn enabled Hall to correctly deduce the times of scheduled earth arrivals and departures.

In his tour of the scout craft, Hall noticed two rows of touch-sensitive buttons just inside the door. Significantly, they bore cartouche-like symbols, Egyptian-style except with more pictorial elements in them than typical cartouches would have.

Hall notes that touch-sensitive buttons were just beginning to appear in human-made systems at that time.

And incidentally, the scout craft buttons were not the only example of hieroglyphs or cartouches encountered by Hall. He describes having found a hangar door open one day, with no one guarding, so he took the opportunity to go a short distance inside. He found the walls to be covered with cartouches, oddly colored pink against a white background.

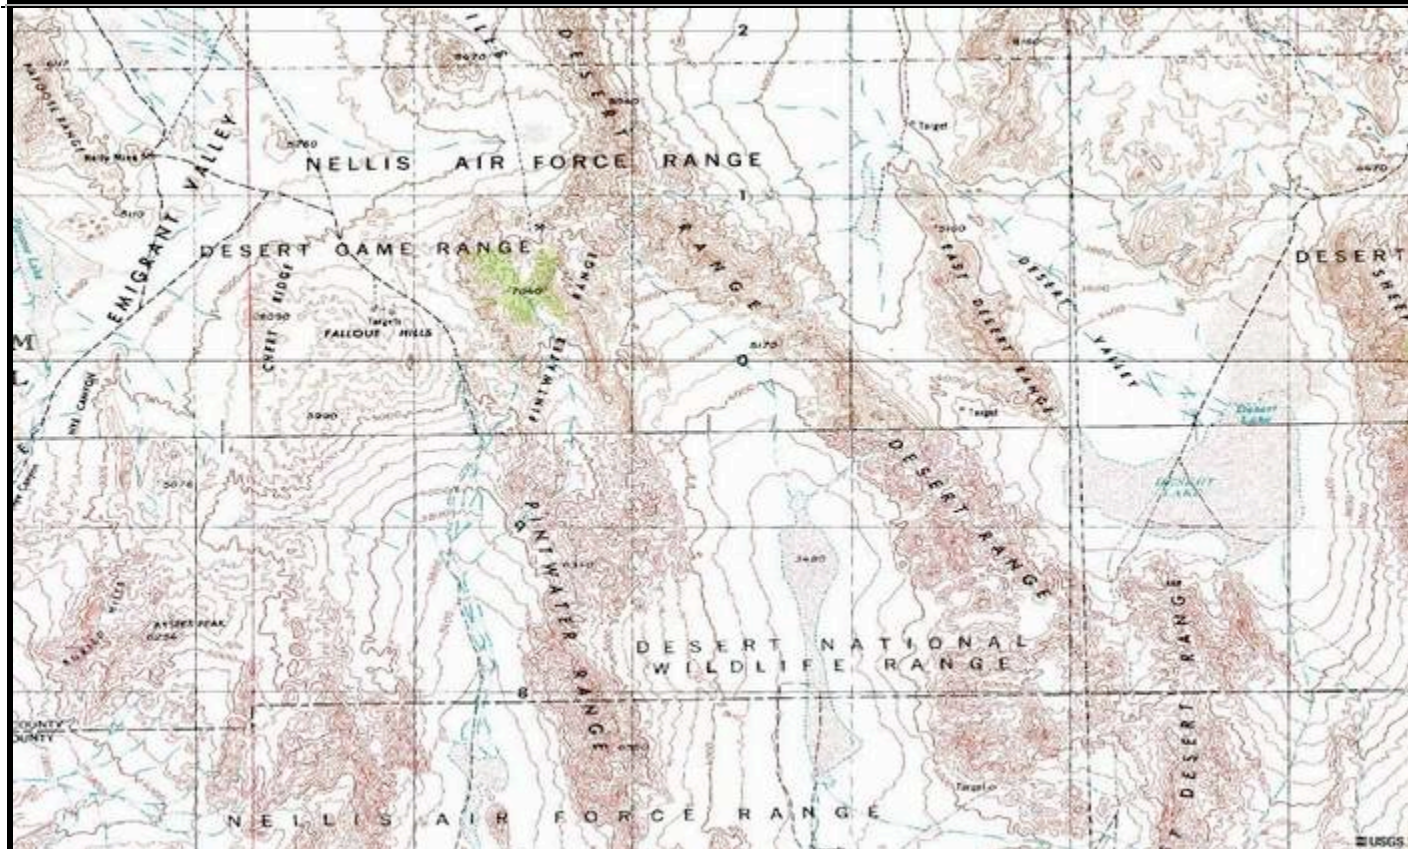

Information about Tall White technology is scattered throughout the Millennial Hospitality series. An ongoing program of technology transfer is described in MH III and in the Karmapolis interview (use link at right).

For more information about their technology, please refer to the published books and to material available at various websites (see links at right).

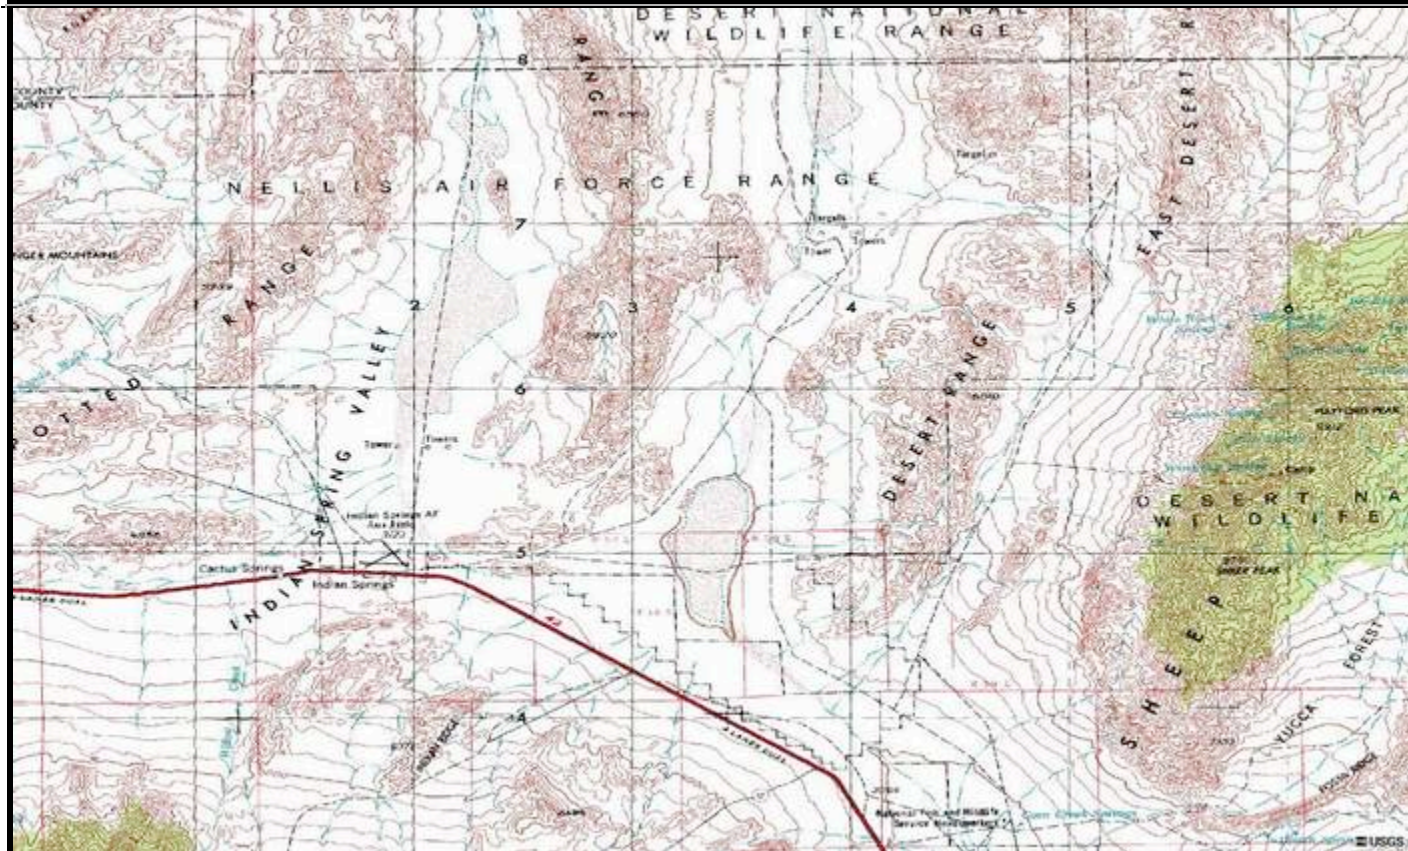

Where Was/Is the Base at Nellis?

It has been possible to reconstruct views of the locations of Tall Whites' operations and facilities according to Charles Hall's recollection. Although readers will not be able to verify this information on the ground, it still seems useful to go through this exercise in hopes that it may aid in the overall evaluation of the case and the situation, to say nothing of enhancing the sense of place in a way that text alone cannot provide.

To set the scene, and for basic reference, we present two topographic maps of the area showing land use and topographic features. The gunnery and bombing ranges (not shown on these maps) are located at the southern end of Indian Spring Valley and the next valley to the east, between the Pintwater and Desert mountain ranges, known as “Three Lakes Valley”.

Nellis Range, north

Nellis Range, south

Facilities and Activities

Numerous facilities and activities within the Pintwater Range and the prominent dry lake in Three Lakes Valley, known as “Dog Bone Lake”, will be described.

Relief view of area encompassing Tall White activities

Hall is aware of at least seven entrances concealed in the mountain canyons. The main entrance to housing is through the hangar on the east side of the mountain range, top right in the above chart.

Notice the three gunnery and bombing ranges located just north of the Indian Springs area. Hall made use of “weather shacks” located on each range. The position of the theodolite at the Range Three weather shack is shown. Hall writes (personal communication):

The tall whites had at least 5 areas of interest visible from the Range Three theodolite stand.

These five areas included:

- 1) The main base and its deep space craft hangar located northwest of Dog Bone Lake. It had an associated children's playground....

Tall White facilities and deep space craft final approach path to the hangar at the northern end of the Pintwater Range. Image courtesy of Google Maps®. A pilot's eye video of the approach has been provided farther down on this page.

Arriving deep space craft were observed to first hover or land at Dog Bone Lake near the upper end of Three Lakes Valley, then to proceed northwest to the hangar entrance, which is built into a mountainside. Arrivals always occurred at sundown, full moon.

Sun-Earth-Moon configuration for approach of deep space craft. This is a rough two-dimensional representation. Sizes and distances are not to scale. Hall observed that arrivals always occurred at sundown on full moon days.

Hall believes that this configuration, with the sun on one side of the earth and the moon on the other, and the earth moving away from the approaching craft, provided the “smoothest” gravitational field through which the craft needed to maneuver. This might have been an oversimplified explanation, yet clearly, with the crafts' propulsion units' tendency to overheat, the Tall Whites were not free to choose any arbitrary entry into the earth-moon system. They needed a path that minimized the required use of the propulsion system. It is also possible that the craft were hand-navigated on the approaches and that this factor played a role.

Deep space craft departures took place at midnight at the time of the new moon.

Configuration for deep space craft departures. Not to scale. Hall observed that departures to deep space always occurred at midnight at the time of the new moon.

Arriving deep space craft proceed northwest, along the line of sight viewed in this image, from Dog Bone Lake to this peak. The hangar, which is also the main entrance to the Tall Whites' underground housing, is built into the top of the peak; its entrance is just below the top, facing south, approximately where a patch of sunlight from the setting sun can be seen. Approaches are made at sundown on full moon evenings

2) The main underground alien housing area with its tunnel entrances and associated childrens' playground....

Let's stop and investigate how much of this main northern facility can be seen with Hall's theodolite, positioned as it is, some 30 miles to the south.

There are two considerations: does the terrain profile permit this view, and what would be the effect of the telescope's optics and magnification?

Addressing the first question, the next image shows the viewing path from the theodolite up the valley. Clearly the valley is relatively flat and the high terrain in the distance would seem to be unobstructed.

3D view of terrain looking from theodolite position toward the facilities thirty miles north at the north end of the valley. Dog Bone Lake is in valley to the right (east).

The next image is a landscape render of the ground-level view from the theodolite stand, showing that much of the high terrain to the north is indeed visible.

Ground-level (elevation 2 m) view from the theodolite position toward the high ground at the north end of Indian Spring Valley. In other words, this is the view along the green dotted line in the previous image. The peak containing the main hangar and housing is faintly seen on the distant skyline to the right of center. This image provides no information on land use (roads, etc.).

[The above image] is so well done, I found myself reliving some of those beautiful afternoons when I took my truck for a joy ride up the valley.

When you look at the center of the picture , and then a little to the right, right down on the desert where the desert floor meets the base of the distant mountains, just behind the near set of hills and just far enough to the right so that the near set of hills does not block the view of the more distant mountains, there is a small valley. It was in that valley that the Tall Whites would typically post a scout craft to parallel me and watch me from a distance whenever I would take my truck up the valley for a joy-ride... as I describe in Book II, in the chapter entitled "Day with a view".

We will return to this point later. This watching of Hall on his trips north could have been for his protection, as at one point he had a nearly disastrous encounter with a government security patrol on one of these excursions.

As to the effect of the telescope's optics and magnification:

Deep space craft hangar and underground housing area as seen from range 3 theodolite position through typical theodolite scope with 1.5° field of view. Distance is about 30.5 miles. "I was shocked by the accuracy of [this image], the view through the theodolite. On many, many summer mornings, those mountains looked just that way through my theodolite."

Similar to previous figure but “taken” just before sunset. Hall mentioned that his ability to see the hangar and picnic area on this mountain was best just before sunset, as here, and just after sunrise. Nevertheless 30 miles of obliquely-illuminated haze does seem to be causing a problem with seeing in this rendition.

The peak containing the hangar, viewed along the line of sight from the Range 3 theodolite (which was Hall's usual viewing position), but only 4.2 km from the peak. The time is just before sunset. The blue/white star marks the position of the hangar entrance. The red/white star designates the location of a picnic area (!) which is what first caught Hall's attention. The hangar door was hidden among the trees and was hard to spot (through the theodolite from 30 miles away) when closed. Note: the landscape renderings on this page do not actually depict trees.

Approach from Dog Bone Lake to Hangar

Departure of scoutcraft from an important landing area northwest of the main housing area which is under the mountains. View is toward the southeast at dawn, the time of day when Hall observed scoutcraft departing with military guests for visits to the moon, which would be directly overhead. Canyons in these mountains contain at least seven concealed tunnel entrances - back doors to the underground housing.

3) Their favorite scout craft hangar and underground rest area located in the arroyo just northwest of the dry lake bed on which sat the old Range Four. It had an associated childrens' play ground....

This facility can be located at the very top of the following image.

This satellite image shows the locations of the gunnery and bombing ranges, scoutcraft hangar, playground, and other Tall White activities at the southern end of the Nellis Range. Image courtesy of Google Maps®.

Notice the "Scoutcraft Parking" area in the middle of the above image. This was a sheltered area in which Hall often saw a scout craft "parked" when he drove by, headed north. The next image shows the situation a bit more clearly.

The road running north-south (note the compass rose) at the foot of the hills was used by Hall on his excursions to the northern end of Indian Springs Valley. He often would see a scout craft parked in the little valley to his right, in the center of the picture, observing him as he passed by. The craft would then follow or “parallel” Hall's truck from a distance

A closer overhead view of the favorite Tall White rest and play area. An anomalous white object or spot can be seen at left center (i.e., over rough terrain to the west). Parallax studies indicate that this object is on the ground.

View toward the rest and play area from the Range 3 theodolite position. The area is concealed between the two fingers of high ground in center of picture.

...had its hangar door dug into the southern side of an east-west arroyo.

View looking west into the arroyo:

Looking west into the Tall Whites' favorite rest and play area. A scout craft hangar was built into the south (left) wall of this canyon area. "Another shockingly good rendition. It sure brings back the memories. However, there is an additional arroyo that [this figure] does not show because of the resolution. It runs through the center of the valley." This image was prepared from 1/3 arcsecond-resolution elevation data.

4) Two other scout craft hangars and underground rest areas with associated childrens' play areas located in the lower mountains in the northern parts of the Indian Springs valley. These two are not otherwise described in my current books and writings. One of them appeared to include additional food storage and processing facilities but I'm not certain of the details.

In an e-mail to Dr. Richard Boylan, Charles Hall stated, "In the 1965-1967 time frame, I personally and frequently observed on many separate occasions the tall white scout craft and the tall whites entering and leaving the valley just below French Peak. Several of the range maintenance men at that time informed me that the tall whites had at least a scout craft base dug in toward the top of French Peak."⁵⁸

He also writes (in other correspondence):

I'm not certain where the scout scaft hanger on French Peak is located. However, my friends reported seeing the Tall Whites gathering grass seeds and other seeds in the fall, on the mountains that I have circled in red.

Sometimes, I also saw scout craft in the valleys below that area.

Several of the other scout craft hangers in the northern end of the Indian Springs valley were hidden down in narrow east/west valleys with steep sides. For these reasons, I, myself, would look for the scout craft hanger inside of the red ellipse as well.

View of French Peak from the south.

French Peak. Text describes Tall White activities in the area enclosed by the ellipse and the broad valley to the north.

In addition, the map shows the entrances to the Indian Springs valley on the west (in yellow, etc.) which the tall whites liked to use when they were traveling between Indian Springs Valley and the valleys that lead up to French Peak. They used these corridors sometimes on a daily basis.

Remember these corridors allowed them to safely travel from place to place without showing up on the FAA radar screens. I'm certain they terrain-followed these corridors up to the base of French Peak.

As Hall has explained, while their presence at Nellis was sanctioned at high levels, the Tall Whites maintained a very low profile, and tried to avoid unnecessary radar detections of their craft when operating in the ranges. Hall describes “radar evasion corridors” used by the Tall Whites' scout craft transitioning between the lower Indian Springs Valley (near Range 3) and the area south of French Peak.

View west into "radar evasion corridors" used by the scout craft. This is as they would be seen from an elevated position near Range 3... in other words, a "pilot's eye" view of the parallel ridges. Craft would "terrain follow" just north of these ridges below the ridgeline to avoid detection by radar on Charleston Peak, well to the south.

The next image shows the configuration of Charleston Peak, the theodolite positions for ranges 1 and 3, and the radar evasion corridors.

The radar station of concern to the Tall Whites is installed on Charleston Peak, a recreational area to the south of the ranges. The ski area, seen as a small white blotch at the tip of the labeling arrow, plays a crucial role in the Christmas Eve emergency arrival of a deep space craft, to be described below.

Radar evasion corridors as seen from just over Charleston Peak where radar is located. Scout craft would “terrain follow” behind the low ridges seen in the distant haze, beyond the foreground ridge and to the right of center. “I was equally impressed by this figure. It clearly shows why the Tall Whites preferred to terrain-follow close to the desert and hide in the radar corridors.”

Some of my friends who were range maintenance men said they had observed the tall white scout craft continuing on up the sides of French Peak to another scout craft hangar entrance up towards the top.

Christmas Eve Emergency Arrival of a Deep Space Craft

An important episode in Hall's story dealt with his role in facilitating the arrival of a severely damaged Tall White craft from deep interstellar space.

From the evidence, it appears the problem with the arriving craft had been known by the local Tall Whites and by our military for at least two months.

As in so many of his encounters at Nellis, the landscape itself played a significant part. Hall's actions took place at Ranges 1 and 3, while the craft itself made its initial arrival at a ski development on Charleston Peak, which became a base for the operation, after being evacuated for this purpose.

The last two figures in the previous section, shown in connection with the “radar evasion corridors”, along with the figures in this section, demonstrate the geometry of the landscape underlying this event, and show what can be seen from each of the ranges.

Children of the Tall Whites

Notice the reference to playgrounds at virtually every Tall White facility. In fact, Hall's weather shacks were playgrounds for the Tall Whites' children. He especially endeared himself to them by leaving his theodolite open and allowing the children to look through it whenever they wished.

In one of his radio interviews, Hall mentions that "The Teacher's" constant refrain was "We love our children more than you do," and in fact if you know what's good for you, you will open every conversation with a Tall White female by saying "I know you love your children more than we love ours."

In his interview with Salla, Hall mentions:

One of the big items [supplied to the Tall Whites by the US military] was children's clothing. In the mid 1960s, on at least one occasion, the USAF purchased more than $600,000 [1965 dollars, as one of Salla's readers points out!] worth of children's clothing from the Sears stores and warehouse in Los Angeles, California, picked it up in government trucks, and shipped it to Indian Springs Auxiliary Field, Nevada. The trucks delivered the clothing to the main Tall White base at the north end of Indian Springs Valley.

Let's do a bit of arithmetic. A children's "outfit" today might sell for around \$75. That might be equivalent to, say, \$15 in 1965. Very roughly, the shipment then might have contained some 40,000 "outfits". A child might have required, say, three outfits for their wardrobe at one time. But our children outgrow their clothing. So would those of the Tall Whites. Furthermore, since the TWs in general live ten times as long as we do, their childhood years might also run ten times ours. Therefore if an Earth child, outgrowing clothing from time to time, might go through or wear out some five sets of clothes, then each Tall White child ultimately speaks for $3 \times 5 \times 10 = 150$ outfits. That means the order would have equipped some 250-300 children with their clothing needs.

It would be useful to determine how many children were present in the colony. If there were significantly fewer than 250 children, this would suggest that some of the clothing was for use elsewhere - either elsewhere on the planet or off.

In a letter linked under "Correspondence" at the right, Hall indicates that the number of children present may have fluctuated greatly over time, but could have occasionally exceeded 200.

Since there was considerable flux into and out of the colony, children could have been taking their "Earth outfits" with them when they left.

To further help understand why there had been a single large purchase, I asked Hall if the body build or anything else about the TW children would have required special tooling on the part of the manufacturer. That could have helped to explain the large size of the order, as the manufacturer would have needed a large order to cover the retooling cost. Here is Hall's reply:

As regards the children's clothes question, remember that Sears made and marketed children's clothes in every conceivable size and variation. The TW children were the same size as human children of the same height who are simply on the thin side.

Clothes for the TW children did not have to be specially made.

Remember also that the TW mothers also make and alter clothes for their children, just as human mothers do. One night, in an episode that does not appear in my books for various reasons, The Teacher came with her little girl. Her little girl was wearing a simple frill [flounce] around the waist of her suit similar to the type of frill that little girls typically wear on their bathing suits.

The Teacher proudly informed me that she had added the frill (meaning that she had personally constructed the frill and added it to the suit - sewing, etc.) because she wanted her little girl to feel like a littl girl.

The Teacher occasionally expressed concern because all of her little girl's TW playmates her age were boys.

She stated, for example, that one reason she liked to have her little girl play with the little girl described in Book one in the Chapter entitled "In Remembrance Of ME" was because she wanted her little girl to have playmates who were also little girls. The TW little girl and the human little girl were so very similar in personality. They were both simply "little girls", even down to the clothes they both enjoyed wearing.

It must be said: perhaps the TWs had good reason for doubting how much we love our children. Consider what they might have observed of our everyday life down there around the base and in Las Vegas.

To which I might add that the story, The Wayward Wind, reproduced on Paola Harris' page, shows how the TWs were overwhelmingly impressed by Hall's letter to his father, expressing love for him.

This little note to Hall's father was so very important to the TWs that - who knows? - it might have affected our relations with them then and into the future.

Several notable points come to mind here:

- They sew. We apparently share a sense of fashion with them.
- Where are all the little Tall White girls? Little TW girls must exist somewhere because TW adult females are present in the colony. Why did they not come here?
- They evidence "love" among their own kind; little for us. But then, where have we shown anything resembling love for them?

Charles Hall's Theory of Photon Structure

Charles Hall has written a paper describing a Theory of Photon Structure. Hall has sent us a copy of his paper and we are happy to post it on this website as a courtesy to him.

A link to Hall's paper is provided in the sidebar at the right.

Tall Whites vs. Gods, Genes, and Consciousness

Author Paul Von Ward presents in his book Gods, Genes, and Consciousness (Von Ward, 2004) a schema for "Advanced Beings" into which the Tall Whites could be placed as an interesting possible example. Although their technology is quite beyond ours at this time, evidence suggests that by other and less tangible measures - "wisdom", "intelligence", "moral stature" - these beings might be quite comparable to ourselves.

Conclusion

This report never seriously questioned the authenticity of Charles Hall's contact with a colony of “Tall White” extraterrestrials on the Nellis Range. The reason for that is the generally convincing nature of Hall's reporting, however subjective that assessment may be. If a “scientific study” is required, others may conduct one.

This editorial stance is consistent with the position taken throughout this Open SETI Initiative website, in which I assert that “contact with ET” or even “searching for ET” should never have been left in the hands of the scientific establishment in the first place. It is unlike anything that science normally does; it is more a matter of intelligence gathering, which is probably the way the most productive work in this area has been accomplished.

This report is exactly what it claims to be: an illustrated adjunct to Hall's narratives.

Nevertheless, if in the process of preparing this report, I had encountered issues or contradictions calling Hall's story into serious question, then certainly those problems would have had to be resolved before the report could be completed and published – at least in its present form.

Nothing of the kind has happened.

The next question is to consider where that leaves us. There was, as recently as the 1960s, a well-established and possibly very old colony of extraterrestrial humanoids living on the Nellis Range, and at that time the arrangement appeared to be secure for long into the future. Furthermore the relations of the colony with its present hosts – the U.S. Military and government – were congenial; technology transfer was taking place and larger cooperative programs (which seemed benign to all parties, by the way) were contemplated.

Hall believes that the arrangement continues to this day, although he has had no contact with it since leaving active duty.

The parameters of the contact activity or colony are such that it would have zero impact on our society, other than the filtering down of anything resulting from technology transfer. It seems to have been physically confined to the military reservation, although there are troubling aspects, such as what is being done with all of the scout craft based there. Where are they going and what are they doing?

Hall's books and interviews have been available to the public for several years, and have made no impact whatsoever outside of a community of interested cognoscenti. Certainly this report will not materially change the situation.

One would think, given the general lack of interest in this sort of thing on the part of average citizens, that nothing whatsoever is called for in the way of a response to these reports.

On the other hand, even with no more information than we have available through Hall's books, the research value of the details reported by Hall are immense... immeasurable. The mere knowledge that beings from such distant points of origin can so closely resemble us is enough to cause a revolution in our life sciences, particularly biochemistry and genetics. That is, it would be enough if correctly used.

Consider also the implication of the close cultural correspondences, such as the ability of these beings to recognize and work with our social hierarchy. "Take me to your leader", indeed.

The parallels with our own culture are... either breathtaking or damning, depending on whether one believes they can possibly be true.

This... familiarity of their cultural (and physical) styles is actually one of the largest challenges to the story, because so very much rides on it.

My position is that it is true and we would do very well to begin to try understanding what it means.

Epilog: A Possible Identity for the Tall Whites

Who are the Tall Whites?

What do we mean by that question?

We mean: what group of beings, about whom we may have independent knowledge, might the Tall Whites be?

In fact, there is a candidate group. In our report on the work of French writer Anton Parks, The Ages of Uraš, we describe a number of nonhuman races that seem to have shaped our history and genetics, and are possibly influencing or manipulating human society even today. One of these, the Imdugud, known to the Babylonians as Anzu, actually are native to our solar system. They are not the famous "Anunnaki." In fact they long ago lost a war against the Anunnaki for the mastery of this system.

Among the interesting matching characteristics of the Tall Whites and the Imdugud:

1. Very tall humanoid "Nordic" with white skin
2. Often have blue eyes
3. Emit barking or whistling sounds
4. Solitary
5. Warriors/soldiers

Parks adds in private communication that the Imdugud are among the very few that practice natural childbirth and raise families. (Most use genetics and cloning, and take advantage of very long or indefinitely long life spans. In other words, they are immortal.)

Yet there are contradictions, perhaps the most noteworthy being their apparent home base. Although the Tall Whites would never reveal this information to Charles Hall, they allowed him to believe it was not local, and via circumstantial data Hall has placed their home tentatively at the star Arcturus. However, it is also possible that Arcturus is simply another base -- a "second home."

Parks "remembers" that as of three or four thousand years ago, our solar system was their home base. Although they could always travel out, it was not their preoccupation to do so.

We will be tracking this new development. Meanwhile, interested readers should look at Possible Extended Contact with Imdugud, or find mention of Imdugud(Anzu) in the section on Races.

Case 1: "NAME" = SHORT-RANGE SPACECRAFT

Note: In ancient times, to possess a vessel capable of carrying passengers rapidly from place to place amounted to holding a NAME. We can draw a parallel with today where whoever does not possess an automobile, a bank card, and a social security number is a nonentity in the eyes of society! To possess a Name (a vessel) in the most ancient antiquity was the mark of senior social rank. [Think of the concept of "titled landowner" or owners of personal jets today.] Only the "gods", kings, and princes directly affiliated with heavenly divinities plus some other privileged humans could possess "Names" on the Earth.

We study the term "name" in Sumerian, Akkadian, Hebrew, and Egyptian.

As you know, numerous Sumerian terms were fabricated by combining several syllables from Emeša (the matrix language). Generally, when two vowels were in sequence, one of them automatically disappeared. You will observe that, thanks to the phonetic values of the Sumerian syllabary, the original sense of the word MU (name) will appear as by enchantment.

TRANSLITERATION from Original Language	DECOMPOSITION	DECODING	TRANSLATION ¹⁸
Mu ⁷ (name)	MÚ/MUD ₆ + U ₅	light up / take fire / kindle + travel / raise / become elevated	MU-U ₅ = that which becomes enflamed and elevates itself / travels
Šumu ¹ (name)	ŠÚM + U ₅	procure/give + travel / raise / elevate itself	SUM-U ₅ = that which procures the act of traveling / elevating itself
Šhem ¹ (name) Officially from Šumu ¹ and Mu ⁷	ŠE ₆ + EM/IM	enflame/heat + wind/blow/tempest/clouds	ŠE ₆ -EM/IM = the blow/wind that enflames itself
REN ¹⁴ (name)	RE ₇ + EN	conduct/bring/lead + lord/noble	RE ₇ -EN = that which leads/conducts the lord(s)

Case 2: MULTIPLE MEANINGS OF THE NAME "MIKAEL"

TRANSLITERATION from Original Language	DECOMPOSITION	DECODING/TRANSLATION
Mikael ⁵	resembles God
Mikael ⁷	MI-KA-EL MĪ-KA ₅ -EL MĒ-KA ₅ -EL	responsible for the witness of the exalted accountable to the exalted fox combat of the exalted fox
Mikaîl ²⁴	Angel possessing spirituality, wisdom, consciousness of God Koran: If Mikaîl opens his mouth (Sumerian KA), the heavens appear as small as a mustard seed (Master of the Verb)

18 This is either a direct translation from the original language specified in column 1, or one inferred with the help of the decomposition.

19 DIGIR/DINGIR

In Mesopotamia as in Egypt divinities (goddesses and gods) were identified as "celestial cows" and "wild or fierce bulls." The fact that DIGIR/DINGIR is associated with "makers of life" leads us to identify at least some of them with Hebrew Elohim. The Sumerian term used in connection with the creation is ŠĀ-ĀB, the matrix of cows, identifying the feminine principle with the creation of the world. The equivalent in Akkadian is ilu, from which comes the biblical el. See ilu above. Also GIR₁₁ (good, skilled); GIR₁₅ (noble, civilized); GIR₄ (kiln); GIR₈ (piece of clay). Numerous civilizations associate the womb with a kiln or oven. In the next book we will see that the "gods" equated clay with a precise element of human genetic material and the human himself. See elohim.

AIRPLANE 2: THE SEQUEL

Written by

Ken Finkleman

SECOND DRAFT

February 18, 1982

FADE IN:EXT. JUNGLE - DAY

A machete slashes INTO FRAME. An American in battered fedora and leather jacket, accompanied by two gunbearers, hacks his way through dense bush. We see him from the back only. He hacks an opening, bats fly out AT CAMERA and the bushes part, revealing huge overgrown stone letters -- the Mayan ruin look -- that spell "AIRPLANE II."

EXT. GANTRY - NIGHT

The Jupiter shuttle stands ready to fly.

ALL SCRIPTSAirplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

A number of men in futuristic-looking mining outfits, carrying futuristic gear, unload a truck with a corporate logo that reads: TRX DEEP SPACE RESOURCE MANAGEMENT.

P.A.

Attention, all Pulsar Four mining personnel.

The miners look up.

P.A.

Please report to the Resource Expeditions office, level seven.

Two miners head to terminal doors and pass FOUR NUNS, who bid farewell to FATHER O'FLANAGAN. O'Flanagan shakes the hands of the first three elderly nuns, then grabs the last young gorgeous nun and kisses her passionately.

OLDER NUN

No tongues, Father.

INT. CONTROL ROOM

A group tour moves through the room behind controllers.

GUIDE

All lunar shuttle landings are handled by these computers and simulated on these video units.

CONTROLLER 1

(at computer screen)

You're programmed on R-two-niner and locked, Lunar eight six. Over.

INT. LUNAR SHUTTLE COCKPIT - NIGHT

Three crew members watch the lit landing strip as their shuttle approaches.

CAPTAIN

(to co-pilot)

It's out of our hands now, gentlemen.

They smile.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

The CONTROLLER moves away from his video unit. A kid from the tour who has lagged behind hits a switch. The screen turns into a video game with SFX. He flips knobs.

INT. LUNAR SHUTTLE

The crew are tossed from side to side and try to regain control of the ship.

EXT. NIGHT SKY

The Lunar shuttle careens towards the terminal, out of control.

INT. CONTROL ROOM

The kid is still playing like mad. A flash appears on the screen. SFX VIDEO GAME EXPLOSION and a corresponding EXPLOSION from outside. SIRENS WAIL. CONTROLLERS run around. The kid is oblivious and walks away.

EXT. TERMINAL - NIGHT

BUD KRUGER, head of the space center, and the COMMISSIONER get out of a limo under a sign that reads, "MERCURY SHUTTLE." They walk and talk.

KRUGER

Commissioner, we both know the Mercury shuttle needs another month of pre-launch testing.

COMMISSIONER

Forget it. The boys on the board want that shuttle to go on schedule.

CUT TO:

INT. TERMINAL

Kruger and the Commissioner go up escalator.

KRUGER

And what do the boys on the board know about safety, Commissioner? Let me talk to them.

COMMISSIONER

Bud, get wise to the political realities. The boys on the board are under a lot of pressure from the boys downtown.

CUT TO:

INT. TERMINAL - SECOND LEVEL

Kruger gets a pack of cigarettes from a machine. Commissioner buys a newspaper.

KRUGER

And I'll be the one they'll hang if there's a screw-up.

CUT TO:

INT. TERMINAL - SHOESHINE STAND

Kruger and Commissioner get shoes shined. A MAN next to them in white shoes reads paper with headline -- "SOLAR PLANT MELTDOWN, 500 WORKERS SERIOUSLY TANNED" -- and doesn't notice his shoes are getting black polish.

COMMISSIONER

Listen, Bud, the boys downtown are under heavy fire from the boys in Washington. That's why they're putting pressure on the boys on the board.

CUT TO:

INT. TERMINAL

Kruger and Commissioner head down escalator.

KRUGER

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

Well, you tell the boys on the board to tell the boys downtown to let the boys in Washington know that the press has been nosing around my people in the front office.

CUT TO:

EXT. TERMINAL

Kruger and Commissioner head to their limo.

COMMISSIONER

You handle your front office people, I'll handle the press and leave the boys in Washington to the boys downtown and the boys downtown to the boys on the board.

KRUGER

Commissioner.

They stop and look at each other.

COMMISSIONER

What?

KRUGER

I just wish it was that simple.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING

They get back in their limo and drive off.

INT. MISSION CONTROLCONTROLLER

(over P.A.)

This is Mercury One control. We have condition green. Mark launch 'T' minus two hours and counting. I repeat, we have condition green.

ANGLE ON LESLIE NEILSON - DOCTOR RUMACK

Dressed as a doctor and looking in a Controller's mouth. The Controller's face is bright green.

RUMACK

This condition isn't as bad as it could be if it were a lot worse. Take these pills.
(hands him pills and water)
Here's some water.

CONTROLLER

What is it, doctor?

RUMACK

Two parts oxygen, one part hydrogen. It'll make the pills go down easier.

EXT. GANTRY - CLOSEUP OF SHUTTLE - NIGHTMUSIC: BIG SPACE THEME

WIDE ANGLE LENS PANS the under-belly past the nose as if the viewer bent his head back as far as he could, until... the CAMERA crashes to the ground as if it has fallen off the tripod.

MUSIC: CRASHES TO A STOP

ANGLE ON SIDE OF SHIP

MUSIC: BIG SPACE THEME STARTS FROM TOP AGAIN

PAN workers on scaffolding who check gauges on exterior of ship. PAN to panel that reads, "SOLID FUEL CHUTE" -- a sweaty muscular worker in undershirt opens the panel, flames shoot out. LOOSEN to reveal another sweaty worker in undershirt shoveling coal into the chute. PAN to other workers checking more gauges. SUDDENLY a PANEL EXPLODES. Smoking, sparking wires pop out. A WORKER runs up with walkie-talkie in hand.

WORKER

(into walkie-talkie)

This is Mercury station six! Get me the Sarg and fast!

EXT. TERMINAL - NIGHT

SIMON KURTZ and ELAINE THOMPSON get out of a taxi with hand luggage. They are dressed in matching flight outfits.

A JAPANESE COUPLE get out of a taxi -- the man has about fifty cameras around his neck. His wife hangs another camera on him. He crashes to the ground under the weight.

Simon and Elaine are approached by a BUSINESSMAN with handful of roses.

BUSINESSMAN

Would you like to buy a rose to help bail out Chrysler? We're an all-profit organization and need all the money we can get.

Simon hands the Businessman a dollar and takes a rose.

SIMON

(to Businessman)

Here.

The Businessman joins six other BUSINESSMEN carrying signs with LEE IACCOCA's picture. They all smile and chant.

BUSINESSMEN

(to Hari Krishna)

IACCOCA, IACCOCA, IACCOCA, IARAMA.

Simon hands Elaine the rose. She takes his arm as they walk towards the sign that reads, "MERCURY SHUTTLE."

SIMON

For the best little computer officer on the Mercury mission.

ELAINE

(smiling)

Simon.

SIMON

Who would believe that Elaine Thompson was once a stewardess on the Denver-Chicago run.

ELAINE

And I can hardly believe that I'm engaged to someone like you, Simon. I'm a very lucky woman.

A man with a suitcase on a leash walks beside them. The case pulls him along like a dog and takes a leak on a post.

SIMON

Women and the space program have come a long way, sweetheart. But after the wedding, no more complicated computers for my little girl.

ELAINE

But, darling, they've offered me a chance to head up the computer analysis division for the Jupiter probe.

SIMON

You're heading up the division in charge of babies for Mr. and Mrs. Simon Kurtz.

He kisses Elaine and smiles.

SIMON

And that's an order, Lieutenant.

The man with the case on a leash passes a woman with a case on a leash. The cases start a violent, BARKING DOG FIGHT.

EXT. REAR OF TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

SARG (imagine George Kennedy), dressed in a tuxedo, tie undone, with a huge cigar, which he eats during the conversation, talks to his wife on his car phone. A worker in hard hat waits next to him. Behind the worker are fuel drums and a large sign that reads: DANGER, FUEL -- ABSOLUTELY NO SMOKING, ABSOLUTELY NO SPITTING.

SARG

(on car phone)

Marge, you better go without me. We've got a condition red.

SPLIT SCREEN WITH WIFE AT HOME.

MARGE

(in evening gown, a cigar stuck in her mouth)

We've got a condition red with our marriage. I think you're in love with that shuttle, not with me. I want a divorce, Sarg.

Sarg lights his cigar.

SARG

Is there someone else, Marge? Is that it?

Sarg throws the lit match towards the "ABSOLUTELY NO SMOKING" sign. The worker grimaces but nothing happens.

MARGE

Sarg, there's been someone else for fifteen years. You were just too involved in your work to see it.

They hang up. Sarg bites off the end of his cigar and spits it in the direction of the "NO SPITTING" sign, blowing the worker OUT OF FRAME with a MASSIVE EXPLOSION. Sarg hops into his car, takes a Lava lamp from the seat and puts it on the car roof -- like Kojak's flasher. The lamp flashes, the SIREN WAILS, as Sarg pulls away.

INT. SARG'S CAR - ON THE MOVE - NIGHT

He thinks about his wife. SPLIT SCREEN FLASHBACK OF THEIR BEDROOM. Marge, a cigar in her mouth, is in bed with five football players -- other half-clad athletes (hockey, baseball, wrestling, basketball) line up for their turn at her. Sarg has to climb over them to kiss her goodbye.

SARG

Don't wait up for me, sweetheart. We're testing the retro-rockets tonight.

MARGE

You just can't see it, can you, Sarg.

SARG

We'll talk tomorrow, hon. I promise.

EXT. TERMINAL, PASSENGER ARRIVAL AREA - NIGHT

The WILSON FAMILY -- JOHN, ALICE and ten-year-old JIMMY -- carry luggage. Jimmy carries a puppy in a small cage.

P.A.

All Mercury passengers please proceed to passenger processing, concourse level 'C.'

JOHN

That's us.

Jimmy Wilson looks at Scraps.

JIMMY

Will Scraps be able to sit with us, Dad?

JOHN

We'll have to check, Jimmy. It's a pretty long trip to Mercury.

A PORTER approaches.

PORTER

Can I help you folks?

JOHN

(handing him a bag)
Thanks.

PORTER

(noticing Scraps)
Is that your puppy, son?

JIMMY

Yeah, his name is Scraps and he's going to Mercury with us.

PORTER

No dogs are allowed on the shuttle, son.

JIMMY

But they said...

PORTER

(pulling out a handgun)
Scraps will have to be shot. I can do it for you here if you like.

He SHOTS.

JIMMY

Scraps!!!

PORTER

(laughing)

Just joking. Blanks. See, Scraps is fine.

Alice, John, and Porter crack up while Jimmy cries.

ALICE

It was just a joke, Jimmy.

Alice and John look at each other as if there is something wrong with their son.

ANGLE ON MAN WITH CAGE

A man lifts a large dog cage out of the trunk of a taxi. Inside is another man dressed in S&M leathers.

MAN WITH CAGE

(to Man in Cage)

If we can't fit you under the seat, you'll just have to be locked up with the luggage.

The man in the cage seems to relish the latter suggestion. Two Porters lift the cage onto a conveyor belt next to Jimmy's dog.

EXT. GANTRY - NIGHT

Sarg stands beside the burnt panel on the side of the shuttle. He is eating another cigar, holding a burnt wire, and talking into a walkie-talkie.

SARG

There's no way this wiring could have passed inspection without Simon Kurtz's okay!

SPLIT SCREEN OF KRUGER IN HIS OFFICE

KRUGER

(on phone)

Just patch up the damage and get that ship ready to fly. That's an order, mister!

SARG

You've got it, mister. But you can tell your boys on the board for me that this thing stinks to high heaven of kickback.

WIPE TO:

KRUGER'S OFFICE - FULL SCREEN

Kruger turns to room. LOOSEN to reveal a dozen five-year-old boys in three-piece suits, smoking cigars. A huge Keans-style painting of three astronauts with big eyes, painted on black velvet, hangs in b.g.

KRUGER

You heard it, boys. Now, what do you say?

ALL BOYS

Fuck him!

EXT. GANTRY - NIGHT

Sarg looks at the wire and shakes his head.

SARG

(to worker)

Ted Striker was right six months ago when he test-piloted this sucker. And what did he get for telling the truth? A one-way ticket to Palukaville.

Sarg spits a chunk of cigar on the ground, blowing the worker OUT OF FRAME with a MASSIVE EXPLOSION.

EXT. WILD BLUE YONDER - DAY

A jet fighter streaks across the sky.

INT. JET - DAY

TED STRIKER is at the controls. His oxygen mask hangs loose from his helmet. Clouds outside shoot by -- he's going at least 700 MPH. A bird lands on the nose in front of the window. Ted shoos it away by knocking on the glass. He takes a slug of beer and cockily pulls on the stick.

He takes a drink and, forgetting to remove the cigarette, swallows it without batting an eye. LOOSEN to find a CRUCIFIX above the bed with a real person on it.

It's funny how fate can make heroes out of cowards.

The Crucifix gives a look of exasperated boredom.

SUPER: NEW YORK TIMES HEADLINE, "STRIKER SAVES 120!" OVER A PHOTO OF TED AND ELAINE WAVING.

TED (V.O.)

Then came the job offers.

SUPER: HOUSTON TRIBUNE HEADLINE, "FLYING HEROES ACCEPT NASA POSTS" OVER A PHOTO OF TED AND ELAINE WAVING.

TED (V.O.)

The publicity.

SUPER: NATIONAL ENQUIRER HEADLINE, "TED IMPOTENT? ELAINE FRIGID?" A MINOR HEADLINE READS, "JFK ALIVE, SAYS UROLOGIST!"

TED (V.O.)

Even the key to the City of New York.

SUPER: MAYOR HANDING TED A KILO OF GRASS.

TED (V.O.)

Now look at me.

Ted wipes the sweat off his face and switches on the table fan. A tornado force wind destroys the room as he fights to switch off the fan.

EXT. TOWN SQUARE - DAY

SUPER: "RIO MONTENEGRO - TOWN SQUARE"

A peasant boy takes a newspaper from a newsstand. The headline reads, "MERCURY SHUTTLE FLIES TOMORROW."

BOY

Senor Ted!

The boy hightails it through the town-square and passes:

-- A large alabaster statue of the Generalissimo snorting cocaine.

-- Soldiers dragging nuns off screaming.

-- Nuns dragging soldiers off screaming.

He passes a line of peasants held at gunpoint by soldiers.
We HOLD on them. In b.g. are stores like HITLER'S SHOES, TRIEU GUYS FROM SAIGON LIQUORS, KEY'S KEYS -- GENERAL KEY stands in doorway.

SOLDIER

(to first peasant)

Traficante de drogas o comunista?

SUPER: SUBTITLES -- "Drug dealer or communist?"

PEASANT

(pleading)

Traficante de drogas, traficante de drogas!

SUPER: SUBTITLES -- "Drug dealer, drug dealer!"

The soldier lets the peasant go.

SOLDIER

(to second peasant)

Traficante de drogas o comunista?

SUPER: SUBTITLES -- "Drug dealer or communist?"

The peasant panics and bolts from the line. The soldiers FIRE.

SOLDIER

Communista!

He runs up to THE HOTEL MONTENEGRO. A sign reads, "TV, POOL, WATERBEDS, DONKEY, KLEENEX" -- All but "KLEENEX" are crossed out. He runs inside.

INT. HOTEL LOBBY

A clean-cut AMERICAN COUPLE argue with Desk Clerk.

YOUNG MAN

(to Desk Clerk)

We've lost all our travelers' checks!

YOUNG WOMAN

What are we going to do?!

CLERK

Calm down. What kind were they?

YOUNG MAN

American Excess!

The Clerk throws up his hands and strikes the same pose as the Karl Marden look-alike in the "AMERICAN EXCESS" poster, b.g.

CLERK

I'd say you're fucked.

The boy passes them and bounds up the stairs.

INT. HOTEL ROOM

CLOSEUP of Ted pacing.

TED

(to self)

Next thing I know, I'm the chief test pilot for the XR-2300, NASA's first Mercury shuttle. That is, until I report she's got more flaws than the Titanic.

LOOSEN slowly to find the Cross empty and the man who was on it hanging, his feet dangling next to Ted.

TED

Now I'm testing old F-18s for some crazy Generalissimo who thinks there's a commie behind every tree in the Amazon.

SUDDENLY the boy bursts in.

BOY

Senor Ted! Look!

Ted spins and the paper stays still. He stops.

TED

My God! They're launching the ZR-2300. Do you know what that is, Jose?

BOY

The muffler bracket for a '78 Pinto.

TED

No, that's an XR-2200. The XR-2300 is the Mercury shuttle. They can't do it!

EXT. HOTEL MONTENEGRO

Ted races out.

TED

Taxi!

SFX: A DOZEN CARS SCREECH AND CRASH INTO EACH OTHER. HORNS STICK.

ANGLE ON PILE OF CARS

Ted jumps into the taxi on bottom of pile. The driver POUNDS on his HORN -- it CONTINUES TO BLARE as they pull away, dragging other taxis.

TED

Houston, Texas.

DRIVER

Houston, Texas, senor??

Right at the corner, left at the light. Here's a map and step on it!

Ted throws a map onto the floor of the front seat. The driver steps on the map.

EXT. TERMINAL, PASSENGER ARRIVALS - NIGHT

An old truck loaded high with furniture pulls up. A YOUNG MAN and his PARENTS, looking like the family from THE GRAPES OF WRATH, get out.

SON

We finally made it, Ma. Mercury. We're gonna start all over agin. A whole new life.

MUSIC: OPTIMISTIC.

SON

Where the soil is rich.

He bends down and takes a handful of earth from the terminal sidewalk and lets it run through his fingers.

SON

And the union strong. Where men are free to realize their true potential.

A black PORTER approaches and grabs a bag at the bottom of their pile of junk.

PORTER

Can I help you?

SON

Where black men and white men, working together, can move mountains.

The Porter pulls the bag and the entire mountain of junk cascades to the ground.

ANGLE ON TED'S TAXI ARRIVING

It is covered in mud, flames shoot out from under the hood, the HORN BLARES. The driver flips off the meter which reads, "874,567,004,500,000,000." The numbers run off the meter along a special attachment.

DRIVER

That'll be eight hundred and seventy-four zillion quastavitas.

TED

Here's three bucks. Keep the change.

DRIVER

Thank you!!

INT. TERMINAL

STELLA BARRINGTON pushes her wheelchair-ridden father, DR. CYRUS BARRINGTON, through the terminal crowd. A PORTER approaches.

PORTER

You folks need any help?

STELLA

Thanks, but we have a terrific woman in on Thursdays.

PORTER

Say, isn't that Dr. Barrington, the world-renowned agronomist?

STELLA

Yes.

PORTER

It's a privilege to meet you, sir, I'm familiar with all your work.

STELLA

Let's go, Daddy. We have to check in.
(to Porter)
He was never appreciated at the Institute.

PORTER

Ah, yes, the Institute, I'm familiar with it.

STELLA

Now he's D-Y-I-N-Ging and wants to be buried on Mercury.

Stella pushes her father away as another PORTER approaches our first Porter.

PORTER 2

Say, wasn't that Dr. Barrington, the world-renowned agronomist?

PORTER 1

That's right. Are you familiar with his work?

PORTER 2

No, but the missus sure is.

ANGLE ON TED AT ARRIVALS/DEPARTURES MONITORS

The departures side reads. "MERCURY SHUTTLE - DEPARTS 6:15 AM"

TED

(to self)
I have to stop that flight.

Ted pushes his way through the crowd past two businessmen. HOLD on them as BUSINESSMAN 1 straightens BUSINESSMAN 2's tie and hair.

BUSINESSMAN 1

Don't worry about the Viatex account.
It's a buy-sell option. We can't get hurt in either case.

BUSINESSMAN 2

Just keep on top of their legal people, Bob.

BUSINESSMAN 1

Don't sweat it.

They kiss and part.

ANGLE ON "1ST CLASS" TICKET LINEAGENT

(to traveller)
We can take your in-flight dinner orders here, if you like. Today there's lobster or rack of lamb.

TRAVELLER

The lobster sounds nice.

The Agent throws a huge lobster into a steaming cauldron.

SFX: LOBSTER SCREAM.

TED

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

(rushing up)

Where can I find mission control?

AGENT

(without pointing or indicating in any way)

Information's over there.

TED

Thanks.

He seems a bit puzzled but moves on.

ANGLE ON "2ND CLASS" LINE

Ted passes travellers in rags.

AGENT

(to traveller in rags)

Today there's the swill or the slop.

TRAVELLER

The slop sounds nice.

Ted passes the "NO CLASS" line. Travellers in line all wear gaudy double-knit suits, white belts and shoes, carry lava lamps and bongo drums, wear alpine hats, etc. The agent hands a NO CLASS traveller his ticket with large foam dice dangling. Ted spots the INFORMATION counter and heads for it.

ANGLE ON INFORMATION COUNTER

MAN

(to Info Agent)

What's the fastest animal on earth?

INFO AGENT

The cheetah. Next.

WOMAN

Should I fake my orgasms?

INFO AGENT

Yes. Next.

Next in line are three armed, bearded "TERRORISTS."

"TERRORIST" 1

Please, where is flight to Miami?

INFO AGENT

(without indicating anything)

Over there. Next.

The TERRORISTS leave looking confused.

TED

Mission control?

INFO AGENT

(without indicating anything)

It's over therrrrrrrr!

The agent is shot with an arrow and slumps over the counter.

ZOOM TO:

He looks in the CAMERA.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

TED

That's strange. I just came from over there.

INT. TERMINAL - ANOTHER AREA

Elaine, Simon, and FRANK MORGAN, the shuttle pilot, talk.

FRANK

I'll meet you on board. I've got some business to attend to.

Frank leaves.

SIMON

(to Elaine)

Frank's the best pilot in the program.

ELAINE

I'm so excited, Simon.

SIMON

I guess this is a first for you.

ELAINE

No, I've been excited before.

TED (O.S.)

Elaine.

ELAINE

(turning around)

Te...!

TED

That's not important now, Elaine. We have to talk.

Simon pulls Elaine away. They all walk and talk.

ELAINE

Ted, we've been worried sick ever since you escaped from the Ronald Reagan Institute For The Mentally Feeble.

They walk faster. The b.g. starts whipping by as if they're running. Wind blows in their hair.

TED

Are you on the Mercury mission?

SIMON

That's right, Striker. And we're getting married when we return.

The b.g. moves faster. The wind gets stronger. They pass a marathon refreshment stand and are handed wet sponges and cups of Gatoraid.

TED

It's got to be stopped!

ELAINE

But, Ted, the invitations have already gone out.

TED

I mean the Mercury flight. It's not safe and, Kurtz, you know why.

SIMON

You're still crazy, Striker. Come on, sweetheart.

Simon pulls Elaine away as she looks back with empathy.

ELAINE

What did Ted mean?

They leave Ted standing.

SIMON

Elaine, he's still sick.

ANGLE ON TED

The wind is still blowing in his hair even though he stands still. Ted has a FLASHBACK.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. ROCKET HANGAR

Ted, in flight coveralls, follows after Simon who is overseeing the operation.

SIMON

You're seeing bugs where they don't exist, Striker.

TED

(holding wire)
Look at this wiring. It's shorting out under high temperatures.

SIMON

You're tired, Striker, overworked. That wiring meets all the safety specifications.

TED

I know you've been subtly spreading the word that I'm having a breakdown.

A NEWSPAPER BOY passes.

NEWSIE

Shuttle test pilot goes mad!

A TECHNICIAN -- JACOBS -- enters with drawings of flight outfits.

JACOBS

Sir, these are the designs for the flight uniforms. I think the captain's is to die.

SIMON

(with drawings)
Good, good, no, no, good. What's this?!
I said no studded dog collars, Jacobs.

Jacobs grabs the drawings and leaves in a huff.

TED

You won't get away with this, Simon!

Ted turns to leave and bumps right into Elaine. She holds him.

ELAINE

Ted, what's wrong?

TED

(pulling away from her)

Ask Simon.

In b.g. a car is parked by a huge rocket engine. A worker opens the hood and strings jumper cables to the rocket. A sign above rocket reads, "ROCKET ENGINE TEST AREA."

ELAINE

Ted, you're overworked. You've been flying yourself into the ground.

TED

There's nothing wrong with me!

ELAINE

Let's relax tonight, just the two of us.
I'll make a quiet Italian dinner just the way you like it, with spaghetti.

TED

You're as bad as the rest of them, Elaine!

(ranting)

It's all here in the design specifications!

(grabs plans from a passing technician)

Look! It's all here!

Simon signals the guards. They grab Ted. He struggles and rants. A DOCTOR in white approaches and injects something into Ted's arm.

ELAINE

No! Wait! You're hurting him!

Ted falls unconscious. Simon holds Elaine.

SIMON

Elaine! Ted's a danger to himself, he's a threat to this mission and his behavior does absolutely nothing to promote peace in the Middle East.

ELAINE

(crying on Simon's shoulder)

Simon, why has he become so... so...

SIMON

So mentally ill?

Elaine collapses on Simon's shoulder, sobbing. Simon smiles evilly. The technician with the jumper cables, b.g., signals the driver to start the car. The car revs and the rocket fires.

DISSOLVE BACK TO:

SCENE

Ted still standing alone and muttering.

TED

(to self)

I'm perfectly sane.

Ted notices Stella Barrington looking at him.

STELLA

Excuse me, are you alright? I noticed you talking to yourself. I'm a nurse. Can I be of some help?

TED

Uh... oh, thank you. It's nothing.

STELLA

You don't have to thank me, I'm a nurse. This is my father, Dr. Barrington.

TED

Not Dr. Barrington, the world renowned agronomist?

STELLA

Yes. He's dying a-n-d wants to be buried on Mercury.

TED

I'm familiar with your work, Doctor. You'll have to excuse me, I have to go.

STELLA

You don't have to excuse yourself. I'm a nurse. I understand.

Ted leaves.

INT. TERMINAL - OUTSIDE DRUGSTORE

SIMON

Meet me onboard, sweetheart. I have to pick up a few things at the drugstore.

ELAINE

(checking her watch)

Don't be too long.

Simon walks into the drugstore past a DRUGGIST who whispers to him:

DRUGGIST

Uppers, downers, coke, speed, hash, Tampax.

ANGLE ON ELAINE

Ted approaches. We see light flashes from a 25¢ photo booth.

TED

Elaine.

ELAINE

Ted, please. You're just making things difficult for yourself.

A WOMAN IN BLACK GARTER BELT emerges from photo booth followed by a donkey.

TED

Elaine, what happened to us?

ELAINE

Ted, I loved you and I'll always love you.

But I need Simon. He's stable. He's a good provider. I want that at this stage of the game, Ted. He might have his faults, but Simon doesn't know the meaning of the word fear and I need that in a man.

INT. DRUGSTORE

The Druggist hands Simon a huge bottle of pills. The label reads, "ANTI-FEAR PILLS."

SIMON

(looking at the label, "ANTI-FEAR PILLS")

What does this word mean?

DRUGGIST

(looking at label)

'Fear,' to be afraid or over-anxious.

Simon swallows a handful of pills, braces himself and walks out right through the plate glass window without feeling a thing.

INT. TERMINAL

Ted is still following Elaine.

TED

Elaine, someone has to listen to me. I'm going right to mission control.

A kid bops by with a huge (5'x3'x2') oak cabinet, TV/stereo console perched on his shoulder.

MUSIC: DISCO.ELAINE

Ted, you should go right back to the hospital.

Elaine leaves and Ted has another FLASHBACK.

DISSOLVE TO:INT. MENTAL HOSPITAL

PAN by dorm window. We see a sign on grounds outside -- "THE RONALD REAGAN INSTITUTE OF SUPPLY-SIDE ECONOMICS AND HOSPITAL FOR THE CRIMINALLY INSANE." PAN patient in bed, accountant at desk, patient in bed, accountant at desk, Ted in bed. Ted has electrodes attached to his head. A NURSE with "I (heart) NORMAL" on the back of her uniform, hands Ted some pills. He is about to pop them when she stops him.

NURSE

That's $38.

Ted hands her bills.

LOOSEN to find Elaine on other side of bed. She turns off the radio and opens a box of spaghetti-to-go.

ELAINE

Eat this spaghetti, Ted. It'll make you feel a lot better.

SFX: GROANING O.S.

ELAINE

Who's that, Ted?

TED

Sammy Davis Junior. Terrible car accident. He hasn't been the same since.

ANGLE ON SAMMY DAVIS

A white patient in lots of gold chains. A Nurse stands over him and pulls a long oil dip-stick from his mouth, checks it, wipes it off and replaces it.

RETURN TO SCENETED

Elaine, when are you going to realize Simon Kurtz put me in here to get me out of the way.

ELAINE

And when are you going to realize, Ted, that your mental hygiene is the most important thing right now.

VOICE (O.S.)

(ranting)

It works... No, it doesn't... Yes, it does.

ELAINE

What's his problem?

ANGLE

On BEARDED MAN in rags chained to wall.

MAN

It does work... No, it doesn't.

ANGLE

On Ted and Elaine.

TED

His name's David Stockman. He's been here twenty years, that's all he says.

ELAINE

Ted, you must remember what the doctor said, the first step on the road to sanity is admitting that you're sick. Now take your electro-shock and you'll be back at the space center in no time. And by the way, Ted, I'm leaving you for Simon.

Ted gags on his spaghetti.

ELAINE

I just can't go on living with a man who refuses to deal with reality, Ted. I have to go now. Believe me, it's best for all concerned.

Elaine leans over to kiss Ted. He turns away.

TED

No goodbyes, Elaine. Just go.

ELAINE

If that's the way you want it.

TED

That's the way I want it. Just turn the radio on and go.

ELAINE

Goodbye, Ted. I don't want to hurt you.

Elaine flips a switch by the bed thinking it's the radio. It's the "ELECTRO-SHOCK." Ted goes into convulsions as she leaves.

DISSOLVE BACK TO:

TED AT TERMINAL

He rubs his temples.

INT. TERMINAL - OUTSIDE BOOKSTORE

Frank Morgan kisses JANE DENNIS, his mistress. In b.g. is a bookstore window with a display of yellow covered books with plain black titles and a sign advertising, "NO-NAME BOOKS."

Visible titles include: "DEEP BOOK," "FASCINATING BOOK," "THE WORLD ACCORDING TO JOHN DOE." A man next to the window reads a newspaper with headline, "SENSELESS MURDER UP 99% AND RISING!"

FRANK

Carol's not going to give me a divorce that easily, Jane.

JANE

I'm worried about her, Frank. She could do something senseless, something violent.

FRANK

You're the one who's not making sense, Jane. Carol's not the violent...

Frank sees CAROL.

FRANK

Carol!

Carol whips out a gun.

FRANK

No! This is senseless!

CAROL

FIRES. Jane faints. Other women nearby faint. Two S.W.A.T. cops faint. Carol bolts. The newspaper, b.g., clicks over from 99% to 120%.

INT. TERMINAL - ANOTHER AREA

Ted pushes through crowd and passes a spherical booth with sign that reads, "ORGASMIC EXPERIENCES, 25¢." MRS. GOOCH, an elderly woman, stops Ted next to the booth door.

MRS. GOOCH

Young man, would you have change for a twenty?

TED

(going for his wallet)
I might have two tens.

MRS. GOOCH

Thank you anyway, but I wanted it in quarters.

Ted keeps moving past a police line which has gone up around Frank Morgan's body. We HOLD on the murder scene. A DETECTIVE kneels beside the body which now has a chalk mark around it.

SERGEANT

(lookind down at Detective)
When is this senseless killing going to stop?

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Senseless or not, Sergeant, there's a pattern here. This is the 12th victim this week with a chalk mark around the body. I want this whole area cordoned off! I want everyone in this terminal booked and beaten until they talk. I want an M.O. on everyone who has seen THE SOUND OF MUSIC and I want the entire population of Hawaii off that rock and into the water within one hour.

Hallick stands up and finds the area surrounded by 30 accordian players playing "Lady of Spain."

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Sergeant. I said cordon off, not accordian off! Now dust this area for prints.

One cop pulls out a duster and dusts the wall. Other cops follow after him hanging prints by Picasso, Lautrec, etc.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

And run a check on their plates.

A cop looks at people's upper false teeth plates.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

(TO CAMERA)

When will this senseless killing end?

A POLICE PHOTOGRAPHER straddles the body and shoots it "BLOW-UP" style.

PHOTOGRAPHER

Super! Great! Super! Terrific! Super!

INT. MISSION CONTROL - EXECUTIVE OFFICE

KRUGER

That's right, Commissioner. Senselessly murdered just minutes ago.

COMMISSIONER

That just doesn't make any sense.

KRUGER

I wonder how your boys in Washington are going to take this one.

COMMISSIONER

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

I told you, leave the boys in Washington to the boys downtown and the boys down...

KRUGER

You've made your point, Commissioner.
There's only one other pilot who can handle that shuttle and that's Clarence Oveur. He's got a lunar flight today. I want him pulled.

(to Jacobs)

Jacobs, pull Oveur!

JACOBS

Not in your size, but I have a cardigan.

He runs out.

COMMISSIONER

I'll trust you on this, Bud, but I'm a little nervous about Oveur's record.

The Commissioner throws an album on Kruger's desk. On the cover is a photo of Oveur with an accordion. The title reads, "CLARENCE OVEUR'S 400 POLKA FAVORITES."

MUSIC: DRAMATIC ACCORDIAN STING.

INT. TERMINAL

CAPTAIN OVEUR buys flight insurance from a machine. Simon approaches.

SIMON

Captain Oveur?

OVEUR

Mr. Kurtz, I presume.

SIMON

We don't have much time. Let's move.
I'll explain everything.

They walk away past the Transcendental Air counter. Two HARI KRISHNA AGENTS smile at customers.

HARI KRISHNA

Chanting or non-chanting?

INT. MISSION CONTROL ROOM

PAN along Controllers at their monitors. Monitors show the shuttle on gantry.

This is Mercury launch control at "T" minus fifty-eight minutes and counting.
All systems are go. Clear launch area.

ANGLE ON NASA WORKERS AT LUNCH TABLE

They rise and start clearing their dishes.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

(on P.A.)

I said 'launch' not 'lunch'!

The workers sit down.

INT. TERMINAL

Oveur and Simon hurry along.

SIMON

That's how dry cleaning works. Now I'd like to quickly go over the digestive system of amphibians.

OVEUR

Do you think it's necessary to explain everything?

Simon spots Ted getting directions from a security guard.

SIMON

I'll meet you on board. There's something I have to take care of first.

INT. MISSION CONTROL HEAD OFFICE - RECEPTION

Ted rushes in and up to the RECEPTIONIST.

TED

I have to see Bud Kruger.

RECEPTIONIST

Do you have an appointment, sir?

TED

No, dammit. It's a matter of life or death.

RECEPTIONIST

You'll have to be more specific than that, sir.

TED

All right, it's a matter of death.

RECEPTIONIST

(checking her book)
Death, death. How about the first Thursday in March, ten o'clock.

Ted bolts by her and grabs a door knob on the wall.

RECEPTIONIST

You can't go in there!

TED

Don't try to stop me!

RECEPTIONIST

But that's not a door. The door's over there.

She doesn't indicate direction.

ZOOM to CLOSEUP of Ted.

TED

That's strange. I just came from...

Suddenly, Ted falls unconscious into the arms of two guards. LOOSEN to find the Doctor holding a needle in his arm and Simon next to the Doctor.

ANGLE

On Ted's feet. His heels make lines in dirt as he is

INT. MISSION CONTROL ROOM

PAN Controllers at their monitors.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

(on P.A.)

This is Mercury control at "T" minus fifty minutes and counting. Commence loading of passengers requiring special boarding assistance.

EXT. TERMINAL - LOADING AREA

Ground crew lift passengers who are stacked on a luggage tram and heave them onto a conveyor belt leading up to the ship.

INT. TERMINAL

JOE SALUCCI (imagine Van Heflin) bids his WIFE (imagine Cher) goodbye. Joe is very nervous, sweating a lot. His Wife hands him a few crumpled bills.

WIFE

Take this, Joey. It's my last few bucks. You'll need a hot meal when you get there.

JOE

We've spent everything on these operations. Is it really worth it? We've pawned your mother's wedding ring. The kids have no winter clothes...

WIFE

(holding a finger to his lips)
Joey, what's more important, the kids' clothes or your sexual potency.

JOE

(anxiously looking around)
I don't want to hear that word!

WIFE

Okay, Joey. The Doc says you gotta relax. This hospital in Des Moines is the best sex clinic in the country.

JOE

All right.
(hands her an envelope)
Here.

WIFE

What...?

JOEY

Insurance. Everyone buys it.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.WIFE

All right. Goodbye, Babe.

She kisses him. He recoils, wipes off his mouth, and leaves. She looks at the envelope, then yells at him through the crowd.

WIFE

Joey! Remember, sexual impotence is nothing to be ashamed of!

The entire terminal looks at him.

INT. TERMINAL STORAGE ROOM

Ted is tied to a chair surrounded by packing crates -- one is stamped "JIMMY HOFFA, THIS END UP" with the arrow pointing to the ground. Ted struggles to free his hands.

INT. TERMINAL GIFT SHOP

Joe Salucci stands at the counter.

JOE

(to Cashier)

Time, Newsweek, the Lifesavers, and the second time bomb from the right.

He points at the shelf behind the Cashier where a number of bombs are on display.

ANGLE ON CANDY MACHINE IN GIFT SHOP

The actual DR. BENJAMIN SPOCK stands in front of the machine. Next to the machine at the magazine rack is a red-bearded MAN in tweed jacket and a tartan kilt reading a magazine titled "GAY SCOTS." Spock puts a coin in the machine and it explodes in sparks and smoke like the bridge panel on "STAR TREK."

SCOTT

(Scottish accent)

My God, Dr. Spock! You've got a meltdown in the Reggie Bars!

INT. TERMINAL CORRIDOR

Joe Salucci snaps his attache case closed. Wipes the sweat from his brow. Takes out a "Des Moines" ticket and throws it away. Looks at another ticket -- "Mercury." Takes a last drag from his cigarette, throws it on the ground and hurries off. The cigarette rolls under the "STORAGE ROOM" door.

INT. STORAGE ROOM

Ted, tied in chair, watches the cigarette roll up to some oil rags. They burst into flame. The flames lap up against a yellow oil drum labeled "EXPLOSIVE." PAN to three more drums labeled, "DYNAMIC!", "BRILLIANT!", "A MUST SEE!".

INT. TERMINAL OUTSIDE STORAGE ROOM

EDITH and DAVE WALTERS, a middle-aged couple, carry their hand luggage. Edith appears very nervous.

DAVE

I'm telling you, Edith, space travel is safer than driving a car.

The storage room door EXPLODES open in front of them. Ted flies out with the debris. Edith faints. Ted gets up, brushes himself off and heads to the ticket counter just as the ticket agent flips a sign over that reads, "MERCURY -- SOLD OUT." Ted spots a SCALPER and reaches for his wallet.

SCALPER

Mercury seats. I got a pair. I got aisle seats, window seats. Check 'em out.

INT. SHUTTLE COCKPIT - MORNING

Computerized panels line all walls. Windows are similar to an airplane -- outside carwash brushes soap down the nose. The "HOT WAX" sign flashes. Two attendants wipe windows with soap gloves and move to the DISTANT STRAINS of "CAR WASH." Elaine sits at computer, two other CREW are in their seats. Simon enters with Oveur.

SIMON

Gentlemen, this is Captain Oveur. He's taking over for Frank Morgan.

MR. UNGER

What's the problem?

SIMON

Morgan was senselessly murdered about an hour ago.

Elaine gasps.

MR. DUNN

(black, sports afro)

Murdered? I hope it's not serious.

SIMON

We won't know until after the autopsy.

MR. DUNN

Of course. Welcome aboard, sir.

OVEUR

Good to be aboard, gentlemen.

SIMON

Captain Oveur, your navigator, Mr. Unger, and your first officer, Mr. Dunn.

They shake hands.

OVEUR

Unger.

UNGER

Oveur.

DUNN

Oveur.

OVEUR

Dunn.

SIMON

And I think everyone knows Elaine.

They all smile.

INT. TERMINAL SECURITY CHECK AREA - "MERCURY GATE"

The Terrorists still seem confused as to where they're going. They pass through the security metal detector, guns raised above their heads. A GUARD runs a hand-held metal detector up and down their bodies. At the same time, Mrs. Gooch is being held spread-eagle against the wall. One Guard holds a gun to her head, another frisks her. Ted moves through behind the Terrorists.

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

TERRORIST

(to Guard)
Is flight to Miami, yes?

GUARD

No.

TERRORIST

Thank you. Thank you.

A young boy passes through the X-ray tunnel. His dental chart appears on the screen. A DENTIST at the other end stops him and looks in his mouth.

DENTIST

Open.

THE BERGMAN FAMILY -- SVEN, KRISTA, and their two CHILDREN -- all dressed like the emigrants, look up at the "MERCURY GATE" sign. They should be shot like characters from a Bergman "film."

SVEN

Mercury, Krista. A whole new world to be depressed about.

KRISTA

Ya, Sven.

CHILD 1

Will we die, Pappa?

SVEN

We all die, Ingrid.

CHILD 2

Will we die soon, Pappa?

SVEN

Soon? What is the real meaning of 'soon'?

INT. COCKPIT

The car wash continues with attendants wiping the ship down.

OVEUR

(flips a switch)
Atmosphere control.

UNGER

(flips a switch)
Atmosphere control, check.

A car wash attendant opens a side door to the cockpit and enters in headphones, moving to "CAR WASH," with a vacuum. He cleans the floor and an ashtray and finds a baseball behind the Captain's seat which he pockets.

OVEUR

(flips a switch)
Anti-gravity.

The car wash attendant floats to the ceiling.

DUNN

(flips a switch)

Anti-gravity, check.

The attendant crashes to the floor.

Elaine sits at the R.O.K.-4000 computer. She seems to be having a problem with a switch.

ELAINE

(to self)

That's odd.

INT. BOWELS OF R.O.K. COMPUTER

A circuit board just below the R.O.K.-4000 logo shorts. Sparks fly. A fire starts.

INT. COCKPIT

OVEUR

(looking out the window)

I hope that weather doesn't give us a problem.

(he opens the window and holds his hand out)

What's your temperature reading, Mr. Unger.

UNGER

(pulls a thermometer from his mouth)

Ninety-eight point six.

INT. MISSION CONTROL ROOM

CONTROLLER 2

There seems to be some fog rolling in from the west.

CONTROLLER 1

Mike, give me a density reading. I just hope it's not too heavy.

CONTROLLER 3

(reading from a book like Richard Burton)

The fog, the fog, the torment clouded my mind. Derision, contempt...

CONTROLLER 1

That's heavy.

INT. SHIP DOOR

Flight attendant, MARY MORRIS, welcomes passengers aboard.

MARY

(to Stella and father)

Welcome aboard. Isn't that Dr. Barrington, the world renowned agronomist?

STELLA

Yes -- he's dying and wants to be buried in the new l-a-n-d.

MARY

(to Joe Salucci)

Welcome aboard. Can I take your case?

JOE

(clutching case)

No!

Mary gives him a look as he passes inside. The OKIES move by. HENRY stops at door, bends down, picks up an ear of corn and pulls it apart.

HENRY

There's a whole new world in front of us, Ma. Where the dictatorship of the proletariat will lead workers and peasants into socialism without the revisionist diversions of bourgeois liberals, Trotskiests, or disillusioned Maoist terrorism.

The Okies pass inside.

MARY

(looking at them; to self)
Doesn't he realize that a weak proletariat needs a strong liberal bourgeoisie in a joint struggle against monopoly capitalism?

Ted stops at the door surrounded by boarding passengers.

SUPER: PSYCHIATRIST.PSYCHIATRIST

We can't begin to help you until you admit that you are sick, Ted.
(echo)
Sick Ted, sick Ted, sick Ted...

The boarding passengers look around for the echoing voice.

EXT. TARMAC - DAY

Sarg looks up through the glass-walled corridor that leads to the ship door and spots Ted.

SARG

(to CO-WORKER)
Well, I'll be a monkey's uncle; Ted Striker.
(holding burnt wire)
Jack, I got a bad feeling in my gut about this mission.

In b.g. a sign reads, "DANGER -- FUEL, ABSOLUTELY NO VOMITTING."

WORKER

What'd you have for dinner?

SARG

The fish, why?

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

Sarg bends down OUT OF FRAME.

SFX: THROWING UP.

A huge EXPLOSION FILLS THE FRAME.

INT. COCKPIT

Fog rolls past cockpit window.

OVEUR

We should be ready to launch as soon as this fog lifts.

EXT. RUNWAY

An ENGLISH BOBBY passes a woman in 19th-Century costume in the fog. He tips his hat and moves on. A caped man steps out of the fog and strangles her.

INT. CABIN

Passengers are taking their seats. Ted spots Elaine and moves towards her. The Terrorists look confused. Joe Salucci clutches his case and wipes his brow. Mary takes a man's suit bag.

MARY

Can I hang that for you, sir?

MAN

Thanks.

Mary hangs the bag from a rope noose in the closet, pulls a lever, the bag drops like a man being executed.

SFX: SCREAM AND THUD.

INT. COCKPIT

Unger looks out the window.

UNGER

It looks like that weather is clearing.

EXT. SKY - DAY (STOCK)

Dramatic stock footage of clouds parting and sun exploding through.

MUSIC: A CLARION TRUMPET CRESCENDO.

INT. CABIN - OUTSIDE COCKPIT DOOR

Ted moves up to Elaine, who is about to enter the cockpit.

TED

Elaine.

She turns and gasps.

ELAINE

Ted! What are you...?

TED

I have to get in there. I have to stop this flight.

SFX: BELL.

INSERT - FLASHING SIGN - "PLEASE TAKE YOUR SEATS"

BACK TO SCENE

ELAINE

Ted, we're taking off!

TED

Let me by, Elaine.

Mary passes.

MARY

Please take your seats.

As Ted turns to Mary, Elaine slips into the cockpit and locks the door --

SFX: DOOR LOCKING.

Ted tries the door.

TED

Elaine!

INSERT - SIGN - "WE SAID, TAKE YOUR SEAT OR CAN'T YOU READ, ASSHOLE!"

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine leans back against the door. She is highly agitated. Simon, the administrative officer, and other crew are in their seats.

SIMON

Whenever your're ready, Captain.

OVEUR

Yes, sir, commander.

(into radio)

This is Mercury One. Everything seems A-okay up here and ready for count-down.

ZOOM to CLOSEUP of Elaine's face.

DISSOLVE TO:EXT. HOSPITAL GROUNDS - DAY

Dr. Rumack and Elaine walk across the well-groomed lawn. Elaine carries a box of spaghetti-to-go. As they walk, they pass patients in wheelchairs pushed by nurses. The further they walk, the more wheelchairs appear until the lawn is jammed with two hundred wheelchairs bumping into each other, patients falling out, total wheelchair chaos.

ELAINE

Ted seemed to get worse after I told him about Simon, Doctor.

RUMACK

The human brain is a highly complex organ, Elaine, perhaps the most complex next to the bladder.

(he stops at a patient in a wheelchair with his back TO CAMERA)

Let me show you.

(Rumack removes the top of the patient's skull and takes out his brain as they continue on)

Ted's problem is in this area.

(points with a pencil)

This area, this area, here, here, here, under here, here...

They walk OUT OF FRAME as wheelchair demolition derby FILLS SCREEN.

EXT. HOSPITAL GROUNDS - GARDEN AREA - DAY

Rumack and Elaine walk INTO FRAME still talking.

RUMACK

So you see, our task isn't made any easier by Ted's refusal to admit that he's sick.

ELAINE

What can I do, Doctor Rumack?

He stops next to a sign, "HOSPITAL GARDEN."

RUMACK

You can eat balanced meals, exercise, and take Geritol.

ELAINE

I mean for Ted.

RUMACK

You can be gentle with him, Elaine. He's been working out a lot of his aggressions here in the garden.

ELAINE

Is that a good sign, Doctor?

Rumack holds the "HOSPITAL GARDEN" sign.

RUMACK

It does the job.

ANGLE ON TED

He is ripping up small trees, shrubs, etc., and throwing them onto a huge pile of mud that resembles the mountain that Dreyfuss built in "Close Encounters."

ELAINE

Hello, Ted.

Ted ignores her as he works frantically.

ELAINE

(holding out box)
I brought you some spaghetti.

Ted still ignores her as he works feverishly.

ELAINE

What are you doing, Ted?

TED

I've got it, Elaine! I've figured out what's wrong with the shuttle!

Ted scurries around.

ELAINE

Ted.

TED

Not now, Elaine!

ELAINE

Ted!

He ignores her. Rumack walks up and puts an arm around her shoulder. Elaine starts to sob.

RUMACK

The brain is an amazingly complex organ,
Elaine.

ELAINE

Is he making any progress, Doctor?

RUMACK

Yes -- last week that pile of mud was only this high.

DISSOLVE BACK TO:INT. COCKPIT

Elaine takes her seat.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

Mark 'T' minus twenty and counting.

OVEUR

Gentlemen, let's get this bucket into space.

(flips switches)
Ignition set.

EXT. SHIP

Steam spews out from engines.

INT. CONTROL ROOMCONTROLLER 1

Mark 'T' minus thirty seconds.

PAN backs of a number of Controllers at screens, talking NASA jargon. We PASS one in prison stripes talking through mesh to his wife.

INT. COCKPITOVEUR

(flipping more switches)
Ignition.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

'T' minus nine, eight, seven...

EXT. SHIP

Rockets fire.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

Six, five, four...

INT. CONTROL ROOMCONTROLLER 1

Three...

Jacobs runs in with a camera, yelling:

JACOBS

Stop! One shot.

All Controllers turn and smile. The count-down stops.
Jacobs flashes his camera.

JACOBS

Wonderful!

The Controllers continue.

CONTROLLER 1

Two, one.

INT. COCKPIT

The ship vibrates.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

You have lift-off, Mercury One.

The G-force causes the crew's hair to go straight back.
Dunn's afro straightens and stays back throughout flight.

INT. CABIN

The G-force causes passengers' hair to go straight back. A buxom woman looks down at her bust -- it's completely flat.

INT. COCKPIT

The G-force returns to normal as the shuttle breaks earth's gravitational hold.

OVEUR

Jettison booster stages one and two.

UNGER

(flipping switches)

Booster jettisoned.

EXT. SHIP - BOOSTER STAGES (STOCK)

Stock footage of booster falling away.

EXT. OCEAN (SET) - DAY

A cheap model of the Greenpeace 11 sails blithely along. The booster stage careens through the atmosphere, crashes into the Greenpeace, and sinks it.

INT. COCKPIT

OVEUR

Shut down accelerators.

DUNN

Accelerators down.

The crew all look at the floor.

OVEUR

Elaine, ask ROK for a field interference scan. Those sun spots might give us a problem with our communications.

ELAINE

(flipping computer switches)

Yes, sir.

The computer is labeled R.O.K. She seems to have a problem getting it to respond.

ELAINE

(to self)

That's really strange.

INT. BOWELS OF COMPUTER (LABELED "ROK")

The electrical fire continues.

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine flips a switch on computer. A "VOICE INTERFACE" sign lights up.

ELAINE

Intermittant failure in scan mode "R".
Analyze.

ROK

Negative.

ELAINE

(to self)

That doesn't make sense.

(to ROK)

Repeat analysis.

ROK

Negative.

ELAINE

(to self)

That's not possible.

ROK

Cut the Doubting Thomas shit, Elaine. I know where I'm coming from on this.

Elaine is taken aback.

INT. BOWELS OF COMPUTER

Sparks fly, fire spreads.

INT. CABIN

Mary moves down the aisle checking passengers. She passes Father O'Flanagan who reads ALTERBOY magazine -- an alterboy in bikini bathing suit on cover. She passes Mrs. Gooch who reads HIGH TIMES. She stops at a ten-year-old GIRL.

MARY

I guess this is pretty exciting for you.

GIRL

Yes, it is. How long will the trip take?

MARY

Our actual flight time is over fourteen months, but due to the time-space variant at sub-light speeds, our onboard flight time will be just over eighteen hours.

Mary leaves and the Girl turns to the WOMAN beside her.

GIRL

Gee, Mom, how does that work?

WOMAN

(very tense)

How many times do I have to tell you, I'm not your mother! I've never seen you before!

The Woman vibrates in multiple image and grabs her temple.

GIRL (V.O.)

Why did she yell at me like that?

A MAN who looks like Robert Young sits down beside the Girl.

MAN

Hallucinating again, Rhonda?

GIRL

(taking a paper bag away from her face)

I don't know what it is.

MAN

Maybe it's the brand of glue you've been sniffing. Why don't you try this, NO-HI. It gives you all the pleasure of glue without the brain damage.

ANGLE ON TESTA (ANOTHER FLIGHT ATTENDANT)

She is completely bald.

TESTA

Something to read, sir?

JOE

(clutching his case)

Do you have PSYCHO MONTH?

TESTA

I think so. Here you are.

She hands him a copy of PSYCHO MONTH with Alexander Haig's photo on cover.

ANOTHER PART OF CABIN

Ted sits at a window seat and looks out. A TEXAN sits on aisle. Mary approaches.

MARY

(to Texan)

Would you like something to read?

TEXAN

I don't read a whole lot, but what have you got, hon?

MARY

TIME, NEWSWEEK, BUSINESS WEEK, and the TALMUD...

She points to a car next to her with twenty-four large volumes.

MARY

The twenty-four volume dissertation on the Hebrew law.

TEXAN

Let me try that Talmud.

MARY

(to Ted)
And you, sir?

TED

(distracted)
Oh... Popular Electronics.

Mary hands him the POP ELEC. He opens it. The magazine sparks and smokes. ZOOM to CLOSEUP of Ted.

SUPER: PSYCHIATRISTPSYCHIATRIST

You must admit that you're sick, Ted.
(echo)
Sick Ted, sick Ted...

The Psychiatrist looks around for the source of the echo.

LOSE SUPER.TEXAN

(to Ted)
Wanta switch when we're finished?

Ted gets up and moves past the TEXAN, handing him the POP ELEC.

TED

Here. I need some oxygen.

INT. COCKPIT

Simon stands over Elaine's shoulder looking at ROK.

SIMON

Have you got it straightened out now?

ELAINE

I think so.

SIMON

That's my girl.

He sits down. Elaine flips a switch on the computer.

ANGLE ON ROK'S PULSATING EYEROK

Elaine, I'm sorry about that little outburst a moment ago.

ELAINE

That's okay, ROK.

ROK

Can I say something of a personal nature to you?

ELAINE

Go ahead.

ROK

You have great tits.

Elaine gasps.

ELAINE

(getting up)

Simon, I'm going to check ROK's secondary readout unit.

SIMON

Roger.

SFX: INTERCOM BELL.

OVEUR

(on intercom)

Yes, Mary?

INT. CABIN - FOOD PREPARATION AREA

Mary is on intercom.

MARY

Would you like a little breakfast, Captain Oveur? Over.

INT. COCKPIT

OVEUR

A couple eggs and juice would be nice, Mary. Over.

MARY (V.O.)

(on intercom)

How would you like your eggs, Captain? Over.

OVEUR

No. Poached. Over.

MARY (V.O.)

(on intercom)

Poached and over, Captain Oveur? Over.

OVEUR

Just poached on toast. Over.

INT. CABIN - PREPARATION AREA

MARY

(on intercom)

I don't think we do poached eggs on toast over, Captain Oveur. Over.

INT. COCKPIT

OVEUR

That's how I want them. Poached. Over.

MARY

All right, Captain Oveur. Over.

OVEUR

Poached! Not over! Over!

INT. WASHROOM

Ted breathes deeply on an oxygen unit. He stops, but we still hear deep breathing. LOOSEN to find Father O'Flanagan smoking a joint. He smiles and leaves.

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

INT. CABIN

Joe Salucci clutches his attache case and wipes his brow. Mary leans over him.

MARY

You should really put that case in the compartment above your head, sir.

JOE

(nervously)
That's okay.

MARY

(touching his shoulder)
I can help you if you can't get it up.

JOE

I said, no!

Mary leaves, giving him a worried look.

ANGLE ON THE WILSONS

Jimmy holds his dog.

JIMMY

I sure an glad they let Scraps ride up here with us.

JOHN

I bet Scraps is going to love Mercury.

JIMMY

Do you think things will be a lot different on Mercury, Dad?

JOHN

It's going to be terrific. A whole new world, new kids to play with.

ALICE

You're going to love it, Jimmy.

JIMMY

No more headlines about the rape trial and the fraud charges?

JOHN

(starts to twitch)
How many kids get a chance to live on another planet.

JIMMY

No more kids yelling, 'Your old man's a thieving rapist'?

JOHN

(grabbing Jimmy)
Look, a man can make an honest mistake!! Anyway, she was asking for it! They're all asking for it all the time!!

ALICE (V.O.)

Not John's irregularity again.

INT. WASHROOM

Ted throws water on his face, wipes it off with a towel while staring into himself in the mirror. He sees the Psychiatrist in the mirror. The Psychiatrist also washes up.

PSYCHIATRIST

You must admit that you're sick, Ted...
sick, Ted... sick, Ted...

The Psychiatrist looks for the echo.

LOSE Psychiatrist. Ted throws the paper towel into the toilet, and flushes. The toilet sparks and smokes and keeps running. The running gets more intense as Ted tries to stop it by hitting the handle.

SFX: JAWS THEME.

INSERT - ROK'S PULSATING EYE

BACK TO SCENE

Ted has to hold himself back as the suction builds in force. He is just able to escape and shut the door behind him.

INT. CABIN - OUTSIDE TOILET

Ted leans his back against the door and breathes heavily.

INT. COCKPIT

DUNN

We seem to have a malfunction in disposal unit four, sir.

OVEUR

You better check it, Unger.

UGER

(getting up)

Done.

DUNN

Yes?

INT. CABIN - OUTSIDE TOILET

Ted spots Elaine coming.

TED

Elaine.

ELAINE

Ted. I don't know why you got on this flight. I don't know what you're trying to prove.

TED

Elaine, we have to go back.

ELAINE

We can't go back. We had something very special, but it's all over.

TED

Elaine, I mean the mission has to be aborted. This ship should never have passed FSA inspection. This thing is held together by string and chewing gum.

A cupboard door, labeled "EMERGENCY USE ONLY," swings open behind Elaine revealing shelves of gum and string. Elaine shuts it without looking inside.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

ELAINE

Ted, get a grip on yourself. You should never have left the hospital.

TED

Then you do think I'm insane.

ELAINE

I've never used the word insane, Ted.

TED

(facetiously)

What word would you use, Elaine?

ELAINE

The word is sick. Ted -- very, very, very sick.

TED

What would you say if I told you the toilet just blew up in my face.

ELAINE

I'd use the word insane.

TED

There's something dangerously wrong with this ship, Elaine. I know its the wiring. That toilet's just the tip of the iceberg.

ELAINE

Ted, a toilet's not going to kill anyone.

Elaine leaves.

INT. TOILET

MUSIC: JAWS THEME.

Unger jiggles the handle of the running toilet. Suddenly it sucks in towels, etc. Unger is pulled down. He fights back, grabbing onto towel rack that comes out of the wall.

INSERT - SIGN - "DO NOT THROW LARGE OBJECTS IN TOILET"

INT. CABIN

The Texan with Talmud is now trying to wrap himself in tfilin.

ANGLE ON TED

Ted walks down the aisle checking overhead panels. He spots a panel that is half open. A sign on the door reads, "DANGER -- VACUUM". Ted opens it and a Hoover falls out on his head, cutting him. He holds a hanky to the wound and passes by Stella's seat.

STELLA

You've been hurt.

TED

I'm getting over it. If a relationship isn't working, you can't force it.

STELLA

No, I mean your head. Sit down. I'll take a look at it. I'm a nurse.

Ted sits down and Stella starts patching him up.

STELLA

Do you want to talk about it.

TED

I opened this panel and a vacuum cleaner hit me.

STELLA

No. I mean your relationship.

TED

We were in love but I'm not sure I know what love is anymore.

STELLA

Love's the same as it always was. It's people who change.

TED

People change in relation to each other. Love changes on its own.

STELLA

Not if the people change together in relation to that love.

TED

Sure. But that's only when the love itself goes unchanged.

STELLA

Then the relationship remains the same and the love changes only when there's change in the two people who share that love.

TED

I just wish it was that simple. We really were in love. You know how it is when you laugh all the time.

Stella looks to her Father who is reading MORTUARY WORLD magazine.

STELLA

No. It's hard to L-A-U-G-H when your father's dying.

TED

Well, we laughed. We laughed all the time.

DISSOLVE TO:

TED AND ELAINE IN A FIELD OF DAISIES - DAY

They run towards each other. Elaine grabs Ted by the waist, picks him up and swings him around in SLOW MOTION. They laugh.

TED (V.O.)

We laughed when times were good.

EXT. GRAVESIDE - RAINY DAY

The grave is surrounded by mourners in black with umbrellas. We PAN the weeping crowd until we get to Ted and Elaine. They are also dressed in black and drenched. He holds her high by the waist, twirls her around as they laugh.

TED (V.O.)

Even when times weren't so good, we still laughed.

INT. BEDROOM - NIGHT

They are locked in each other's arms in the middle of lovemaking and laughing heir heads off.

TED (V.O.)

But most of all, we laughed when we felt closest to each other.

DISSOLVE BACK TO:

INT. CABIN - TED AND STELLA

TED

That's our story.

Passengers are standing. They hiss and throw vegetables at Ted.

INT. COCKPIT

Dunn checks a red flashing light on his panel.

DUNN

(to Oveur)

Sir, I've got an overload in disposal unit four.

OVEUR

You better check on it, Mr. Dunn. I'll stay here and fly the ship.

Dunn gets up.

OVEUR

Dunn.

DUNN

Sir?

OVEUR

You better take this.

Oveur throws him a plunger and gives him a thumbs up. They exchange that "man must do what a man must do" smile. Mary enters with Jimmy Wilson -- carrying Scraps.

MARY

Mind if Jimmy here takes a look around, Captain?

OVUER

Of course not. Come on in, Jimmy.
(checking his navigational screen)

That's strange.

Simon leans over Oveur's shoulder.

SIMON

Now what?

Scraps looks at Oveur. Jimmy looks at the array of dials, etc.

OVEUR

That's an asteroid field. There shouldn't be anything like that in this sector unless...

Scraps looks at Simon.

SIMON

Unless?

Scraps looks at Oveur.

OVEUR

Unless those sunspots are interfering with our scanner or...

Scraps looks at Simon.

SIMON

Or?

Scraps looks at Oveur.

OVEUR

Or we're off course, but...

Scraps looks at Simon.

SIMON

But?

Scraps looks at Oveur.

OVEUR

But we couldn't be off course. Our coordinates are computer-locked barring...

Scraps looks at Simon.

SIMON

Barring?

Scraps looks at Oveur.

OVEUR

Barring a computer failure. There was talk of sub-par wiring in this ship. I hope that's just talk.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

Scraps' ears prick up.

Simon moves past Jimmy, stops at the door and downs a handful of anti-fear pills before leaving.

OVEUR

Come on up, Jimmy. Say, that's some puppy. What's his name?

JIMMY

Scraps.

OVEUR

Can I hold him?

JIMMY

(handing over Scraps)

Sure.

OVEUR

(holding him up and looking at his underbelly)

He's a boy dog.

JIMMY

Yeah.

OVEUR

Do you like it when Scraps sleeps on his back, Jimmy?

INT. CABIN

Ted and Stella. Stella is feeding her father and listening to Ted.

TED

They kept me in the asylum for eight months. I know everyone in those places claims they're sane, but I was different,
I was sane.

Ted notices Unger float by outside his window. ZOOM to CLOSEUP of Ted. He tries to take a drink and pours it on his forehead.

INT. BOWELS OF COMPUTER

Elaine is fighting the fire with an extinguisher. She gets it out and looks at the burnt wires in the area labeled,
"ROK, MORAL CENTRE." ZOOM to CLOSEUP of Elaine. She turns TO CAMERA.

ELAINE

Holy shit.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

INT. CABIN

STELLA

Ted, I want you to relax. Let your mind go back, back past your youth, past your childhood to your mother's womb.

Ted becomes slightly hypnotized. ZOOM to CLOSEUP of Ted.

SUPER: INT. WOMB

A fetus that looks like Ted is curled up inside.

STELLA

Try to remember your birth. Was it difficult?

DOCTOR'S VOICE

Striker, listen to me! This is Doctor
Krane! You're twisted around, Striker.
You've got to come out feet first! You're too low in the womb! You're too low,

Striker! You're...
(fading)
... too low...

LOSE SUPER

Stella shakes Ted's arm.

STELLA

Ted, are you okay? Here, take one of these stress pills.

Stella hands him a pill which he pops automatically, but misses his face with his drink. She leaves the bottle next to Ted. ZOOM on bottle.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

Stella starts feeding her father again. The ship jolts and his face goes into the tray.

INT. REAR OF SHIP - COMPUTER AREA

Elaine fiddles with the computer.

ELAINE

(to ROK)

Request; comprehensive electrical systems check.

ROK

Systems check positive. Look, Elaine, I...

ELAINE

Request; life support systems check.

ROK

Life support check. Elaine, it's obvious you've been ignoring me. You're a woman. I can relate to that.

ELAINE

(panicky and confused)

Request; self-analysis of ROK hardware and software systems regarding behavioral changes.

ROK

There's nothing wrong with me, Elaine. What about tonight -- just you and me. We can be alone. I can get rid of everyone else on the ship -- I've already proven that.

Elaine gasps and moves away from ROK's blinking eye.

INT. CABIN - FOOD SERVICE AREA

Simon takes a long slug from a flask. LOOSEN to FIND Jimmy and Scraps.

JIMMY

Do you want to talk about it, Commander?

INT. CABIN OUTSIDE WASHROOM

Dunn is about to enter with the plunger as Mary passes. The ship jolts and she falls into his arms.

DUNN

Did you feel that?

MARY

(looking at his pants)

Yes I did...

DUNN

Felt like a large asteroid.

MARY

Yes it did. Mr. Dunn, can I ask you a personal question?

DUNN

What is it, Mary?

MARY

Um... Do you people scream right when you... you know.

Dunn gives her a look and opens the washroom door.

INT. WASHROOM

Dunn is immediately pulled down to the raging toilet bowl. He grabs for the door screaming.

EXT. WASHROOM

Mary hears the scream and gives a look as she leaves.

INT. CABIN

Testa is serving the Walters coffee from a steaming pot.

TESTA

Hand me your cup. This is very hot.

DAVE

Thank you. And, stewardess, can you please tell my wife that there is nothing that can go wrong. I think she'd like to hear it from you.

Testa spots Dunn's tattered sleeve emerge from the washroom door, groping for a handhold. She screams and dumps coffee in Edith's face. She runs to help Dunn, grabs his sleeve. It comes off in her hands. She keeps pulling. His jacket comes off, his pants, underwear, socks, an entire clothesline of garments like bras, towels, etc. She hears a SCREAM. Then silence.

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine and Oveur. Elaine stands over his shoulder.

ELAINE

I don't think we have any alternative, Captain.

OVEUR

I see. What do you think our alternatives are?

ELAINE

We have to disconnect ROK's higher brain functions without disturbing his regulatory system.

INSERT - ROK'S PULSATING EYE

BACK TO SCENE

OVEUR

Roger.

ELAINE

You can do it from up here, Captain.

OVEUR

I'd rather sit down for this one, Elaine.

ELAINE

No, I mean you can do it from the cockpit.

OVEUR

Roger. You better get back there and monitor the regulatory unit.

Elaine leaves and Mary enters.

MARY

Captain, the coffee machine is jammed and
I don't like it.

OVEUR

Have you tried it with a little cinnamon?

Mary gives a "why didn't I think of that" look. Testa enters.

TESTA

Captain Oveur, Dunn and Unger have been sucked out through disposal unit four!

Mary gasps.

OVEUR

Both together?!

MARY/TESTA

Dunn and Unger have been sucked out through disposal unit four!!

OVEUR

All right, calm down. Here's how we're going to play it.

Mary and Testa look over his shoulder. He has a basketball play diagram.

OVEUR

Mary, I want you here. Testa, you move across here past Dawkins' pick and get the ball at the top of the key from Irving.

They all clasp hands and "yell."

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It careens through asteroids.

INT. COCKPIT

Oveur is pulling curcuit board from ROK panel.

INSERT - PULSATING EYEBACK TO SCENE*ROK

What are you doing, Captain?

Oveur eyes ROK but keeps working.

ROK

I wouldn't do that, Captain.

Oveur continues. Smoke spews out. He hears a HISS and looks at a vent. He grabs his throat and collapses.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

An asteroid bounces off hull.

INT. CABIN

Passengers scream. Blonde woman in Viking helmet with spear stands and screams operatically.

INT. COCKPIT

Simon enters and spots Oveur slumped in his seat. He pulls him up.

OVEUR

(gasping)

Pills...

(points to his mouth)

Pocket...

(points to his pocket)

Vent...

(points to vent)

Gas... Yankees... four...

(points to RADIO that plays BALLGAME)

Sox... zip...

Simon rips open his coat, grabs pills and takes them himself letting Oveur drop. Simon looks down at the navigational screen -- it resembles an old amusement parlor roadrace game.

SIMON

(to self)

We're off course, heading right through that asteroid field and right at the... at the sun!

The ship takes another violent shot.

INT. CABIN

The passengers are screaming.

ANGLE ON FATHER O'FLANAGAN

He stands in the aisle.

O'FLANAGAN

Listen to me! Listen to me, my children!

They listen.

O'FLANAGAN

Please listen. Thank you, my children.
I'm a man of God, you must trust me when I say... we're all going to die!!

The passengers go totally insane.

INT. MISSION CONTROL ROOM

A number of Controllers group around a console.

O'BRIAN

You're right. They're off course and heading right for the sun. I've seen enough, Bob.

Controller 2 hits a switch and the console screen flips to baseball game.

O'BRIAN

Get me Jack McCrosky and fast!

CONTROLLER 3

McCrosky? He hasn't handled a tower in twenty years.

CONTROLLER 4

Ever since Reagan fired the controllers, he's been completely senile and hasn't done a day's work.

O'BRIAN

What about McCrosky?

CONTROLLER 3

Pretty much the same as Reagan.

O'BRIAN

Get him.

INT. RETIREMENT HOME

Two Nurses stand by a phone in a dormitory of beds. Many old men sleep or eat in bed.

NURSE

It's for Mr. McCrosky.

NURSE 2

Do you think we should bother him? He's been acting a bit odd lately.

They look to McCrosky (Lloyd Bridges).

ANGLE ON McCROSKY

He is in bed in scuba gear.

ANGLE ON NURSES

NURSE 1

He's fine. He just thinks he's Lloyd Bridges.

Nurse 1 takes the phone to McCrosky. He is a lot older than

NURSE 1

The phone's for you, Mr. McCrosky.

McCROSKY

What's a phone?

NURSE 1

(holding it to his ear)

Here, let me help you. I think it's the space centre. Now, let's not get too excited.

McCROSKY

What?

(pause)

What?

(pulls off his scuba mask and snorkle)

What?

(gets more alert and grabs a cigarette)

I'll be right down!

(he hangs up and jumps out of bed)

Looks like I picked the wrong time to go senile.

INT. COCKPIT

Simon is taking another slug of booze; Elaine enters.

ELAINE

Simon!

(she spots Oveur slumped on the panel)

Captain Oveur!

Elaine pulls him up.

OVEUR

(still gasping)

Mets... nine... Phils... three... Cubs... four...

Elaine drops him and turns to Simon.

ELAINE

Simon, what's happening?!

SIMON

He tried to disconnect ROK. It gassed him. That computer is running this ship and we're heading right for the sun.

ELAINE

Can't we change course?

SIMON

We're computer locked and the manual navigation unit is down.

Elaine looks at the floor.

ELAINE

Then Ted was right!

ZOOM TO:

CLOSEUP OF ELAINE

for her realization.

BACK TO SCENE

SIMON

My career is shot.

ELAINE

Your career! What about the lives of those people out there. Simon, what happened to the man I thought I loved?

She goes to the door.

ELAINE

I've got to get Ted. Just don't come apart on me now, Simon.

She leaves. Simon's uniform starts bursting at the seams, buttons pop off.

INT. CABIN

The Terrorists stop Elaine. There's pandemonium in the cabin.

TERRORIST 1

This is flight to Miami, yes?

ELAINE

No.

Elaine addresses the PASSENGERS.

ELAINE

(to passengers)

Please, ladies and gentlemen, please calm down. Listen to me!

They calm down.

ELAINE

We've been thrown off course just a tad.

PASSENGER

What's that mean?

ELAINE

In space terms, about 70 million miles.

The Passengers appear interested and sensible, nod their heads.

ELAINE

The bumps you feel are car-sized asteroids smashing into the hull.

The hood of a car smashes through the cabin wall. The Passengers still appear interested and sensible.

ELAINE

Also, we're heading right for the sun and can't seem to change course.

Passengers still appear interested and sensible. They all put on sunglasses.

PASSENGER

Are you telling us everything?

ELAINE

Not exactly. We're also out of coffee.

The Passengers erupt in total panic.

ANGLE ON RED FLASHING "DON'T PANIC" SIGN

It sparks, smokes, overheats and EXPLODES.

ANGLE ON RED FLASHING "OKAY, PANIC" SIGN

The passengers go insane.

ANGLE ON FATHER O'FLANAGAN AND MRS. GOOCH

O'FLANAGAN

Pray with me, my children. Pray.

MRS. GOOCH

But Father, I'm not Catholic.

O'FLANAGAN

Then worship the god of your choice.

Mrs. Gooch pulls out a fertility idol with a huge, erect penis.

ANGLE ON BOB AND MARY-JANE SMITH

BOB

I've always loved you, darling. I was unfaithful just once. Remember Jill, my first secretary? Forgive me.

MARY-JANE

I knew all about it. I was unfaithful once, too.

BOB

That's all behind us now.

MARY-JANE

Remember Harriet, your first receptionist?

He gives her a look.

PASSENGER

We're going to crash!!

TERRORIST 1

God is great!!

TERRORIST 2

Death to America!!

TERRORIST 3

The yellow pencil is on the table of my aunt!!

ANGLE ON ELAINE

ELAINE

There is absolutely nothing to worry about!

ANGLE ON RED FLASHING "BULLSHIT" SIGN

ELAINE

Your crew is in complete control of the situation.

ANGLE ON RED FLASHING "UNBELIEVABLE BULLSHIT" SIGN

INT. MISSION CONTROL ROOM

McCrosky bursts through the doors and heads to the monitors. He wears a raincoat and shirt and tie. He is met by Controller 1. They move across room.

McCROSKY

Get me a cup of coffee, mister.

CONTROLLER 1

Yes, sir.

McCROSKY

And a gallon of milk of magnesia, and a ham on rye, no cheese!

CONTROLLER 1

Yes, sir! Welcome home, sir!

McCrosky takes off his raincoat revealing scuba tank. He takes off his tank as well.

CONTROLLER 2

(approaching McCrosky)

Here are the navigational charts, sir.

McCROSKY

Thanks.

Another Controller passes. McCrosky stops him.

McCROSKY

Get me a readout on their fuel capacity.

CONTROLLER 3

Yes, sir.

CONTROLLER 4

Here's all the available information on the sun. That thing's hot, sir.

McCrosky takes the info and burns his hand.

SFX: STEAM

McCROSKY

Ahhhhhh! Get me Bud Kruger immediately!

(spotting Jacobs)

Jacobs, I want to know absolutely everything that's happened up till now!

JACOBS

First the earth cooled. Then the dinosaurs came but were too big and died and everything got rotten and turned into oil and the Arabs bought Mercedes Benzs and then there was the best TV special on Judy Garland. Then we lost the war with Albania. Then...

McCrosky leaves Jacobs babbling.

McCROSKY

Things sure haven't changed.

McCrosky stands in front of a huge painting of himself. Both he and painting are in the same pose -- one hand loosens the tie, he drinks coffee with the other, a cigarette dangles from his lip.

INT. CABIN - CLOSEUP OF TED

He is lost in thought. SUPER IMAGES:

-- Ted getting electro-shock

-- Psychiatrist telling him he's sick

-- Ted building the "Close Encounters" mound

Ted is shaken out of his dream by Elaine.

ELAINE

Ted, Ted. Listen to me, Ted. You were right all along. Ted, we've lost the crew and Simon's turned to jelly!

INT. CABIN - ANOTHER ANGLE

Simon is a jelly mold inside a uniform.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

(on radio)

Come in, Mayflower. This is mission control. Over. Come in, Mayflower! Over!

Jimmy pokes his head in.

JIMMY

Do you want to talk about it now, Commander?

INT. CABIN - ANOTHER ANGLE

Elaine stands over Ted looking at the empty bottle of stress pills.

ELAINE

My God.

Stella approaches in nurse's uniform splattered with blood. A cigarette dangles from her lip. She wipes her hands on a blood-splattered towel.

STELLA

He's finally come to terms with his own psychosis.

ELAINE

But he was right! He's not crazy!

STELLA

Miss, I'm a nurse with a dying F-A-T-H-E-R, I know what I'm talking about. Now I'm going to need fresh sheets, gauze, Q-tips, and all the vaseline you have on board! Now!

Elaine leaves, looking back at Ted with empathy. Mary passes.

STELLA

(to Mary)
I'll need all the boiling water you can get your hands on!

Mary leaves and a MAN passes holding a tattered arm.

MAN

Are you a nurse?

STELLA

Yes.
(handing him a urine bottle)
The washroom's down there on your right.

The Man leaves, a quizzical look on his face.

STELLA

(yelling after him)
And not too much!

A BLACK U.S. ARMY SERGEANT (imagine Jim Brown) approaches
Stella.

SERGEANT

Can I help?

Stella hands him an M-16.

STELLA

Keep an eye on that side of the ship.

The Sergeant drops into a seat next to a window, smashes out the glass with his rifle butt and is immediately sucked out.

MARY moves down the aisle with a cart collecting boiling water.

MARY

(to passengers)
I'll need all your boiling water.

Passengers pull pots of boiling water from under their seats, handbags, coat pockets, and pour them into the passing container.

Testa reassures Bob and Alice Wilson.

TESTA

We should be out of this momentarily.
There's nothing to worry about.

ALICE

Thank you. That makes me feel so much better.

Testa leaves and Father O'Flanagan approaches with last rites paraphernalia.

O'FLANAGAN

Trust me, I'm a priest. We're in shit up to our ears. Who wants last rites?

ANGLE ON TEXAN

He is now completely entangled in the tfilin and struggles to free himself.

ANGLE ON ELAINE

Elaine passes Ted carrying sheets, vaseline, etc. She looks at him sitting there in a fog, gives up and leaves. Ted looks at the red flashing "FASTEN YOUR SEATBELTS" sign. It takes him back.

DISSOLVE TO:

EXT. GROUNDS OF MENTAL HOSPITAL - DAY

SFX: SIRENS WAIL, 101 BLOODHOUNDS BAY

We see the hospital deep in b.g. across an expansive lawn. Suddenly Ted's face pops INTO FRAME, CLOSEUP. He looks both ways and bolts. He wears a straightjacket.

ANGLE ON HOSPITAL SIGN

"THE GERALD FORD INSTITUTE FOR THE MENTALLY FEEBLE -- WE MAKE PEOPLE SANE THE OLD FASHION WAY"

Suddenly the dogs scramble INTO FRAME in front of the sign, slobbering. A half-dozen viscious-looking GUARDS in reflector shades with shotguns, whips, nets, cattle prods, follow.

GUARD ONE

(Southern accent)

Damn! I want that patient shot on sight!

INT. SEEDY HOTEL ROOM - NIGHT

SUPER: CHICAGO

Ted stands at window. A neon "BAR" sign flashes outside so close to the window that the only way to read it is to rent this room.

SFX: MUSIC - LAZY SAX

TED

Maybe you gotta be crazy to end up behind the eight ball like this. Anyway, you find out pretty fast who your friends are when you're on the lamb.

SFX: LAMB BLEATS FROM OTHER SIDE OF ROOM

Ted turns away from the window and passes the lamb in bed.

TED

(to lamb)

I'm going out for cigarettes and a fifth of bourbon. Don't wait up for me.

SFX: COMPLAINING BLEAT.

Ted grabs his straightjacket and leaves.

TED

Virgin wool. Nothin' but headaches.

A Bo Peep staff is flung against door as it closes behind him.

EXT. CITY STREET - NIGHT

an empty, spotless, wet street. One car parked under a street lamp.

SFX: BLOODHOUNDS APPROACH AND GO OFF INTO DISTANCE

TED (V.O.)

I travelled at night in the shadows. I didn't want to attract attention.

SFX: FOOTSTEPS, GARBAGE CANS BEING KNOCKED OVER, CATS SCREAMING, PEOPLE YELLING "SHUT UP" OUT WINDOWS, GLASS BREAKING.

TED (V.O.)

I was afraid to step out of the doorways. You never know what to expect when you're on the run.

Ted steps into light. GLORIA STEINAM passes with CAB CALAWAY. A grand PIANO SMASHES to pavement next to Ted. He ignores piano and gives Gloria and Cab a quizzical look.

SFX: DOGS IN DISTANCE

CLOSEUP - TED'S FEET

He steps in a puddle where a "BAR-COCKTAILS" sign is reflected. The reflection shatters.

A streetcleaning truck approaches spewing out garbage rather than water. Ted's ankles are sprayed with garbage. He bends down and picks up a wet matchbook -- "HARRY'S PLACE -- FOR A GOOD TIME."

CUT TO:

EXT. ANOTHER DARK STREET - CLOSEUP OF TED

standing, looking at a bar. The glow of flashing neon sign reflects off his face. He pulls out a cigarette. A woman's hand shoots INTO FRAME holding a lit zippo. Ted draws deeply on the cigarette.

TED (V.O.)

There I was, minding my own business when I looked up and saw a pair of legs that went forever.

ANGLE ON WOMAN'S FEET

PAN UP AND UP AND UP. She is all legs -- no torso, no head, just legs -- about two stories high.

TED (V.O.)

But I had a date with Harry's. It was little more than a hole in a wall on the south side of Chicago.

ANGLE ON A HOLE

bashed in the side of a brick wall. A neon sign over the hole reads, "HARRY'S GOODTIME BAR."

INT. HARRY'S

dark, smokey bar. PAN very tough faces standing along the bar.

TED (V.O.)

Harry's was perfect for me. The kind of place you go if you don't want to be recognized.

KEEP PANNING tough faces, but now they all wear Groucho glasses and noses.

TED (V.O.)

It was rough, real rough.

ANGLE ON POOL TABLE

with four players -- all have broken thumbs in casts.

TED (V.O.)

The kind of place you could score anything, from junk...

One guy hands another guy a large, rusted car fender for money.

TED (V.O.)

...to Phil Donahue's book.

PHIL DONAHUE signs a stack of books at a table.

TED (V.O.)

At Harry's you could count on a fight breaking out almost every night.

TWO PROFESSORS argue at a table.

PROFESSOR 1

And I say essence precedes existence.

PROFESSOR 2

You're crazy! Existence precedes essence.

PROFESSOR 1

Essence!

PROFESSOR 2

Existence!

Professor 2 slugs Professor 1 sending him flying across the room. Professor 1 gets up and throws a judo chop which Professor 2 stops by holding a book up in both hands. The book splits in two like a piece of wood split by a karate chop.

TED (V.O.)

There was a small trio in one corner.

Two midgets play light jazz -- piano and bass.

TED (V.O.)

And a larger trio in the other corner.

Five 300-pound musicians play some tune in another corner.

ANGLE ON TED AT BAR - CLOSEUP OF TED

He pulls out a cigarette. A bare foot with zippo held in toes comes INTO FRAME and lights it.

TED

The last thing I wanted was Elaine to see me down on my luck. Well, it was just my luck. In she walked with a group from the space program.

ANGLE ON DOOR

Elaine and Simon and two other couples, who look like clean-cut NASA types out of "The Right Stuff," walk in laughing and take a table.

TED (V.O.)

They'd come to Harry's to slum it and try their hand at the video bull.

The group prod Elaine to try the bull. A cowboy hat flies across the room. She grabs it, pulls it on, and moves to the bull which is surrounded by others in cowboy hats. Elaine hops in the saddle. A sinister character puts a quarter in and madly flips knobs.

SFX: VIDEO GAME

The saddle doesn't move -- all the action is on the screen but Elaine throws one hand back and kicks her legs.

TED (V.O.)

Elaine made that ride look easy. It was obvious why I was still nuts about her. She loved life. I didn't want her to notice me so I borrowed a pair of dark glasses.

Ted takes a pair of dark glasses off a passing blind man who walks perfectly until the glasses are gone, then starts stumbling and crashes over a table.

TED (V.O.)

Grabbed an alto sax and joined the group.

Ted takes an alto sax from a passerby who also stumbles and crashes over a table when he loses his sax.

TED (V.O.)

I stayed in the background not wanting to draw attention to myself.

Everyone looks around trying to see where the terrible grating sax sound is coming from.

TED (V.O.)

Then what happened? Elaine's crowd talks her into joining us for a song.

Elaine hops up on the stage, grabs a mike and starts to sing "Stormy Weather." She sidles up to Ted and goes into a medley of old songs.

DISSOLVE TO:HOURS LATER

Elaine's singing is just as bad as Ted's sax. They have cleared the joint and play and sing alone. Elaine's group finally pull her out. She hasn't recognized Ted.

ELAINE

(to Ted)

I don't know who you are or how you lost your sight, but I'll never forget this night as long as I live.

PULL BACK leaving Ted alone on the stage still playing. Chairs are turned up on tables. One table has chairs turned up with the people still sitting in the chairs.

DISSOLVE BACK TO:

EXT. COCKPIT - TED

getting a glass of water outside cockpit door.

ANGLE ON COCKPIT DOOR

Simon emerges. As the door opens we hear:

CONTROLLER 1 (O.S.)

Come in, Mayflower. Over!

Simon shuts the door and bumps into Ted who is getting a drink of water. Simon takes a drink of booze.

SIMON

Striker.

TED

Kurtz, you're drunk. Who's in command of this ship?

SIMON

That damn computer has taken over. I'm getting out.

TED

Then Elaine was right.

SIMON

Don't talk to me about Elaine. Outta my way!

TED

(grabbing Simon)

Pull yourself together! We've got to...

Simon slugs Ted who falls into a corner and hits his head.
ZOOM TO CLOSEUP of Ted unconscious.

SFX: MUSIC - DRAMATIC STING

The ship takes another violent jolt.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It roars through the asteroid field.

INT. WASHROOM

Simon sits on toilet seat and slides open a wall panel.

INT. ADJACENT WASHROOM

Father O'Flanagan slides open an adjacent wall panel and sits down.

SPLIT SCREEN - THE TWO WASHROOMS

SIMON

Father, what should I do?

O'FLANAGAN

Have you considered suicide, my son?

A panel on the other side of Simon slides open.

JIMMY (V.O.)

Do you want to talk about it now,
Commander?

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCROSKY

(holding radio mike)

Come in, Mayflower. Over. Do you read me? Over. Damn it!

McCrosky throws the mike down.

CONTROLLER 1

(taking mike)

Let me try, sir. Come in, Mayflower.
Over. Come in. Over. Damn it!

Controller 1 throws the mike even harder.

CONTROLLER 2

(taking mike)

Let me try, sir. Come in. Over. Damn it!

Controller 2 smashes the mike through the monitor screen.

CONTROLLER 3

Let me try, sir.

Controller 3 smashes the monitor with an axe. Controller 4 smashes the monitor with an electric guitar. Other Controllers line up for their turns with various heavy implements.

ANGLE ON McCROSKY

McCROSKY

(to Controller 5)

Stinson, have you contacted the families of the passengers and crew?

McCrosky looks out window.

INSERT - MOB SCENE FROM "THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME"

BACK TO SCENE

McCROSKY

Try and calm them down. And for God sake, be diplomatic.

Stinson turns to two burly men in leather jerkins and black hoods. They hold a large caldron of molten lead next to window.

CONTROLLER 5

Give 'em the lead!

They pour it out.

SFX: MOB SCREAMS

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It careens through the asteroid field towards the sun.

INT. CABIN

Ted lies unconscious.

SFX: MUSIC - DRAMATIC STING

ANGLE ON STELLA

She's doing her rounds -- takes a medical chart from the back of a seat.

STELLA

(to a male passenger)
I'm afraid that leg's going to have to come off.

A leg is passed to her from OUT OF FRAME. She takes it while still looking at the chart.

STELLA

Wait. This isn't your chart. You just had a touch of air sickness.
(handing him back his leg)
You'll be fine.

A WOMAN sitting next to the MAN WHO IS HOLDING HIS LEG grabs Stella.

WOMAN

I'm terrified.

STELLA

(shakes her hand)
And I'm a nurse. Everything will be okay.
Pass it on.

The Man with the leg passes it to the passenger in seat behind.

MAN WITH LEG

Everything will be okay. Pass it on.

The leg gets passed from seat to seat as passengers say, "Everything will be okay. Pass it on."

CLOSEUP OF TED

lying unconscious in a corner. A puppy crawls INTO FRAME and starts licking his face. LOOSEN TO FIND Jimmy standing over Ted. Ted comes to, feels his jaw and pulls himself up. The ship jolts.

JIMMY

Are you feeling okay, mister?

TED

I'm feeling just fine, son. Just fine.

Ted pushes by Jimmy, a look of great purpose on his face.

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine enters looking for Simon.

ELAINE

Simon, I...

The cockpit is empty.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

Do you read, Mayflower? Over. This is mission control. Over.

Elaine gasps. She leaps into the Captain's seat and grabs radio.

ELAINE

Hello. This is the Mayflower. Over!
Come in, anyone.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Controllers are gathered around one monitor.

McCROSKY

(on radio)

We read you, Mayflower! Identify yourself and give your position.

INT. COCKPIT

ELAINE

This is Elaine Thompson. I'm five-six, 123 pounds with brown hair and I'm sitting down and facing the front.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCROSKY

Elaine Thompson!! What in sam hill is a woman doing in charge of that ship?!

JACOBS

Maybe she's got her shit together.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted enters.

TED

Elaine!

ELAINE

Ted!

TED

Elaine, what's going on?

ELAINE

Ted, there's no time to explain.

Ted picks up Oveur who is still gasping.

OVEUR

Packers... seven... Vikings... three...

Ted drags him onto the floor and takes his seat.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Come in, Mayflower! Over!

ELAINE

Ted, I was wrong about you.

They reach out and hold hands.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Come in! Over! Come in! Over!

TED

We all make mistakes, Elaine.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Come in Mayflower!

ELAINE

How could I ever have doubted you?

McCROSKY (V.O.)

This is mission control! Over!

TED

That's all behind us now, Elaine. And no matter what happens, I want you to know
I've always loved you.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Jesus, would someone answer me!!

ELAINE

I love you, Ted.

They smile at each other.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

What the hell's going on up there?!

Ted and Elaine still smile at each other.

INT. CABIN

All passengers look forward and smile.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

All Controller's look down the line and smile.

EXT. TOWN SQUARE - RIO MONTENEGRO

Six soldiers on firing squad duty, ready to fire, turn, smile, and FIRE while they're smiling.

SFX: SHOTS, SCREAMSINT. COCKPIT

Ted grabs the radio.

ELAINE

(smiling lovingly)

Ted, this reminds me of twenty years ago over Chicago.

Ted hits a switch. The ship does a barrel roll.

INT. CABIN

All we see are feet sticking up from the seats.

INT. COCKPITTED

(on radio)

This is Mayflower One calling mission control. Do you read me? Over.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCROSKY

A man. Now that's more like it.

(continuing on radio)

This is mission control. Identify yourself and give me your position. Over.

INT. COCKPIT

TED

(on radio)

The name's Ted Striker and I'm sitting down and facing the front.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCROSKY

(trying to place the name)

Striker... Striker... Striker...

CONTROLLER 3

If you say so.

He slugs the female worker next to him.

McCROSKY

(remembering)

Ted Striker!

SFX: RADIO STATIC.

McCROSKY

Damn! We've lost them again.

CONTROLLER 1

Could be those sunspots.

JACOBS

Could be your dishwashing detergent.

McCROSKY

Striker's the guy who flew that 736 into Chicago over 20 years ago without a crew. Would someone tell me what in sam hill he's doing up there?

JACOBS

(waving his hand in the air)

Me! Me! Me!

ANGLE ON MISSION CONTROL DOORS

They are swinging aluminum doors similar to restaurant kitchens and hospital operating rooms. Kruger and the Commissioner enter through one door.

COMMISSIONER

The boys downtown are taking the heat from the boys in Washington and the boys...

They PASS OUT OF FRAME. A waiter with tray passes them and leaves through the swing doors.

SFX: CRASHING DISHES

Two surgeons in operating gowns and masks enter covered in food.

We PICK UP Kruger and the Commissioner still walking and talking.

COMMISSIONER

Bud, the President wants an explanation.

They approach McCrosky.

McCROSKY

Sorry to pull you out of bed at this hour, gentlemen.

KRUGER

Forget it. I was reading.

COMMISSIONER

I was reading too.

KRUGER

What's the story?

COMMISSIONER

Some southern plantation owner falls in love with this poor...

KRUGER

I was asking McCrosky, Commissioner.

McCROSKY

He falls in love with this poor school teacher who...

A CONTROLLER interrupts them.

CONTROLLER

(to McCrosky)

Sir, we've restored radio transmission.

McCROSKY

Good.

(to Kruger)

We keep losing their radio.

KRUGER

Give it to me straight, McCrosky -- what's it look like.

McCROSKY

It's green with numbers and lots of knobs.

KRUGER

Not the radio, the situation. I want to know exactly what your people think.

PAN three Controllers at monitors.

CONTROLLER 1 (V.O.)

(thinking)

They're screwed.

CONTROLLER 2 (V.O.)

(thinking)

They're dead.

CONTROLLER 3 (V.O.)

(thinking)

Did I leave the iron on?

INT. CABIN

The ship lurches from side to side.

Stella, covered in blood, kneels beside BILLY, a young man bandaged head to toe, lying on a stretcher with lots of I.V. bottles hanging around him. A U.S. ARMY GENERAL stands next to him -- imagine General Patton.

STELLA

General Walker is here, Billy. He wants to talk to you.

GENERAL WALKER

Billy, if we get through this thing alive, I'd like you to get this letter to my mother.

He hands Billy a letter.

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine is monitoring various dials. Ted is at controls and on the radio.

TED

(on radio)

An electrical fire in the core has played havoc with the ROK-4000 computer. It's locked us on a direct line with the sun and there's no way we can go to manual. Captain Oveur already tried it and he's...

OVEUR (O.S.)

(from floor)

Giants sixty... Rams... zip...

TED

... become an intolerable bore. The rest of the crew has been lost and we're out of coffee. Also, we're starting to feel the sun's heat pretty bad.

Striker wipes his forehead. Elaine holds a tan reflector up to her face and turns to the sun.

INT. CABIN

Passengers sweat profusely.

SFX: JUNGLE SOUNDS.

A MAN slaps a mosquito on the back of his neck.

FOUR MEN sit nude to the waist, wrapped in towels as if in a steam bath.

MAN ONE

It's eight-thousand square feet with great parking and a twenty-year lease with option to buy.

MAN TWO

You can't lose, Al.

MAN THREE

He can lose. I've seen it happen a thousand times.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It shoots towards sun.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCrosky sits at a monitor, talks into a mike and looks down at a book. Behind him two Controllers make a dope deal -- a baggie of grass for cash. We only see their midsections and hands.

McCROSKY

Striker, this is Jack McCrosky, chief controller. I want you to listen to me and listen good.

The buyer checks out the baggie -- it's mostly twigs. The seller is trying to explain the situation with his hands.

McCROSKY

Twenty years ago I helped a young pilot through a storm over Chicago.

The buyer grabs the seller's shirt and tries to get cash back. A fight ensues.

McCROSKY

He didn't have a crew either. He said he couldn't do it. But when the going got tough that kid pulled it together.

The seller's shirt is ripped. Knives are pulled.

McCROSKY

You might have read about him; he made all the big papers and the Canadian Jewish News.

The seller is stabbed.

McCROSKY

I don't know where he is today but if he was up there right now, I know he'd find some way to turn that bucket around and get the hell out of there, pronto!

ANGLE ON JACOBS

JACOBS

I wish I could talk like that -- so macho yet so sensitive.

ANGLE ON McCROSKY'S BOOK - "PEP TALKS FOR ALL OCCASIONS"

McCrosky slams it shut.

McCROSKY

I just hope I said the right thing.

TED (V.O.)

I'm afraid you gave the wrong speech. McCrosky. I'm not your problem. It's this ship. That computer's gone bananas.

McCROSKY

(holding up the book)
Why the hell are we still using the old manual! Burn this book!

A smiling blonde man in a white sweater with "MORAL MAJORITY" on the front walks by and takes the book.

McCROSKY

(on radio)

Just hold on, Striker, we'll get back to you.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted writes a note to Elaine and hands it to her -- it reads, "WE MUST FIND SOME WAY TO BLOW THAT COMPUTER!" Elaine looks a bit nervous and licks her lip. They look up at ROK's pulsating eye.

Testa pokes her head in. She's soaked with sweat.

TESTA

The cabin temperature is rising. The passengers want to know what's happening up here.

TED

Let us handle this end of things. Now what's the coffee situation?

TESTA

It just won't drip! I've tried everything. And the passengers are dropping like flies from the heat.

INT. CABIN

SFX: FLIES BUZZING

Passengers reel and drop to floor.

INT. COCKPIT

TED

Elaine, I'm going back there. Just hold onto that stick and try to control this hunk of tin as best you can.

ELAINE

Ted, please be careful.

Ted leaves. We hear an enormous CRASH on the other side of the door.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

JOE DIMAGGIO (MR. COFFEE), drinking a cup of coffee, rushes in accompanied by a GROUND CONTROL OFFICER.

OFFICER

(to Joe)

It doesn't look good. The drip seems to be jammed up pretty bad.

MR. COFFEE

Did they change the filter and wait for the brew sign to light up?

OFFICER

(stopping and looking Mr. Coffee in the eye)

To tell you the truth, sir, I don't really know.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

ANGLE ON SIX CONTROLLERS

One holds a hat, one pulls a slip of paper from it.

CONTROLLER 3

(reading his slip)

Eighty-three. What's that mean?

CONTROLLER WITH HAT

If eighty-three passengers die, you win the two hundred bucks.

ANGLE ON MR. COFFEE AND OFFICER

They approach McCrosky.

OFFICER

Mr. McCrosky, Mr. Coffee. Coffee, McCrosky.

McCROSKY

Thanks for coming down so soon.

MR. COFFEE

(checking watch)

I won't come down for another couple hours.

McCROSKY

I'll put you on the radio with Striker. Jeez you look familiar. Did you ever play water polo?

MR. COFFEE

Not to my knowledge.

McCROSKY

I thought so.

CLOSEUP OF ATTACHE CASE being carried to the door -- sticker on it reads, "NATIONAL ENQUIRER."

CLOSEUP OF ANOTHER CASE coming from other direction -- sticker on it reads, "NATIONAL STAR."

Long time no see.

They shake hands and turn into the terminal.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Controllers stand over Mr. Coffee -- everyone sips coffee and smokes cigarettes.

MR. COFFEE

(on radio)

Have you got the back panel off the brew manifold?

INT. CABIN

Ted has the coffee machine apart, wears a headset and holds wires in pliers. Anxious passengers with coffee cups stand over him -- they are all totally wired and going cold turkey.

TED

(into headset)

Check.

MR. COFFEE (V.O.)

There's a terminal at the base of the coil. That's your contact point.

A PASSENGER bends down and picks a coffee bean off the floor.

PASSENGER

Is this a coffee bean?

ALL PASSENGERS

(maniacally)

He's got a bean!!

A riot ensues. The "bean" Passenger is beaten to death.

TED

(into headset)

It looks like the solder point has melted.

INT. MISSION CONTROLMR. COFFEE

(enraged)

Just what I thought. When the hell will you people realize that adding extra water after the initial brew cycle overheats the system!! Now listen to me, Striker, and listen good.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It careens towards the sun.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Detective Hallick storms in and up to McCrosky. He flashes his badge.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Who's in charge here, Mister?

McCROSKY

McCrosky, Control.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Hallick, homicide.

JACOBS

Jacobs, Pisces.

KRUGER

Kruger, Sagittarius.

COMMISSIONER

Commissioner, Aquarius.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

We have information that one of your passengers is carrying a bomb and might be suicidal.

McCROSKY

Where'd you get this information, Captain?

DETECTIVE HALLICK

We have our methods.

KRUGER

And what methods are those?

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Have you heard of the Heimlich method?

McCROSKY

The method of saving someone choking on a piece of gristle?

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Exactly.

KRUGER/McCROSKY/COMMISSIONER

We're familiar with it.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

Good. This is the passenger's wife. Mrs. Joe Salucci.

She approaches very distressed looking.

McCROSKY

What makes you think your husband might want to blow up that shuttle, ma'am?

She goes into her purse for the insurance form.

MRS. SALUCCI

This insurance policy.

A large ivory colored vibrator drops out of her purse, hits the floor, and flips on. They all look at it.

MRS. SALUCCI

An electric tooth.
(handing McCrosky the insurance form)

Joey was supposed to go to Des Moines for an operation to cure his impotence.

McCROSKY

The Des Moines Institute?

MRS. SALUCCI

Then you know it.

KRUGER/McCROSKY/COMMISSIONER

Yes, we're familiar with it.

MRS. SALUCCI

Well, I found out Joey got on this shuttle instead and...

DETECTIVE HALLICK

The way I read it, blowin' up a plane in space leaves no traces, if you know what I mean.

KRUGER

I'm not exactly sure what you mean, Captain.

DETECTIVE HALLICK

No blood. No body. No bones. No eyes. No ears. No throats.

McCROSKY

(looking at form)

This is $500,000 worth of insurance!

Kruger, Commissioner, and Hallick all whistle "wow!"

McCROSKY

Just a second. This is insurance on his car!

MRS. SALUCCI

That's what worries me.

KRUGER

He's impotent.

COMMISSIONER

He's suicidal.

ALL

And he's stupid!

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING.

ANOTHER AREA

MR. COFFEE

(into radio)

This is it, Striker. You got one shot and one shot only.

INT. CABIN

Striker stands over the coffee machine, sweating like mad. The Passengers with cups hang over him. He makes contact with a wire.

TED

(to self)

Contact.

The MACHINE EXPLODES. Coffee gushes out like an oil well coming in. The Passengers dance under the gusher of brown liquid, mouths open and cheering.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCROSKY

How are we going to handle this bomb nut?

CONTROLLER 2

(rushes up with printouts)

Here are the tests we ran on their computer. I had them xeroxed for you.

McCROSKY

How'd they come out?

CONTROLLER 2

Upside-down, but I turned each page over and put them in order. I'm afraid that computer is totally capable of taking control of that ship.

McCROSKY

Let's keep cool. There's gotta be a way to control it.

He lights a cigarette.

CONTROLLER 3

(rushes up with diagrams)

These are their position calculations. They've got about ten minutes before they start to burn up.

McCROSKY

Keep calm. A lot can happen in ten minutes.

(to self)

What next?

He sips his coffee.

CONTROLLER 4

(rushes in)

Sir, your headlights are on and your doors are locked!

McCROSKY

(spitting out coffee, Danny Thomas style)

Jesus!! I'll be right back!

McCrosky races out.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It heads closer to the sun. The nose is glowing.

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine is checking computer. The cockpit is steaming now. She unbuttons her uniform just as Ted comes in.

ELAINE

Ted, we've only got ten minutes.

TED

(thinking she wants sex)

Not now, Elaine.

ELAINE

I mean until we start to burn up.

Ted takes his seat and looks at a panel gauge.

TED

We're closer to the sun than I estimated.

INSERT - GAUGES

One is labeled "EXACT DISTANCE" and reads, "76.50". The other is labeled "ESTIMATED DISTANCE" and reads, "5689465932.09".

BACK TO SCENE

KRUGER (V.O.)

Come in, Mayflower. This is Bud Kruger. Over.

TED

(on radio)

This is Striker.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

KRUGER

(on radio)

Look, Striker, I don't know how you got into that driver's seat but I want Simon Kurtz on that radio and I want him now!

INT. COCKPIT

TED

(on radio)

Kurtz was the one who got us into this mess in the first place. You people knew this ship wasn't ready to fly. You played God with over a hundred lives, Kruger, and for what -- the prestige of your precious space program.

ELAINE

That was very well put, Ted.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Jacobs stands next to Kruger rubbing his forefingers together in the "shame, shame" sign.

KRUGER

(on radio)

Striker, you're heading right for the sun, so don't you think it's a little late for that bleeding heart liberal crap now?

INT. COCKPIT

ELAINE

He's got a point, Ted.

INT. CONTROL ROOM - ANGLE ON JACOBS AT A SCOREBOARD

There are columns under Kruger's and Striker's names.
Striker has two check marks. Jacobs gives Kruger one.

INT. COCKPITTED

(on radio)

Call me a bleeding heart, but if we get through this thing I'm preparing a paper on alternative spending directives recommending the transfer of space program funds to low cost housing.

INT. MISSION CONTROLKRUGER

(on radio)

Just put Kurtz on that radio!!

McCrosky rushes in and grabs the mike from Kruger.

McCROSKY

(enraged)

Look, Kruger, you and your people have caused enough trouble already. I don't care about your political games, I care about only one thing, the lives of those people up there!!! Out of my control room!!

JACOBS

Someone's car wouldn't start.

McCROSKY

(on mike)

Striker, this is McCrosky. Give me five minutes and keep your fingers crossed.

(to Stinson)

Stinson, get me the Mayflower plans!

(to Controller 3)

You, clear this table!

JACOBS

I'll get the cards and bridge mix.

McCROSKY

And someone get me the Sarg!

CUT TO:CLOSEUP OF SARG

leaning over the ship's plans. He is eating another cigar.
All Controllers stand around him.

SARG

That's my little girl, my little darlin', my sweetheart, my honey, and you want to blow her belly out with that bomb. If you blast here in the computer core and the fuselage doesn't give way here and the main communication lines to the cockpit hold here and this baby here doesn't jam this little old unit up here and throw about two tons of hot steel through here like a hot knife through butter and the upper and lower...

McCROSKY

What's your point, Sarg?

SARG

I have no point.

McCROSKY

Then it's settled. The bomb is Striker's only chance. Are there any questions?

CONTROLLERS

No sir.

McCROSKY

Those are answers, I asked for questions.

CONTROLLER 3

Should a man in his forties have a circumcision?

McCROSKY

Absolutely.

INT. COCKPIT

TED

Well, Elaine, this might be it if those guys on the ground don't think of something.

ELAINE

I just want you to know, I love you Ted and always will.

SFX: RADIO BEEPS

TED

That might be the news we've been waiting for.

He grabs radio.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

I've got some news for you, Striker.

Ted and Elaine smile hopefully at each other.

TED

(on radio)

Roger.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

One of your passengers is carrying a bomb and is suicidal.

MUSIC: DRAMATIC STING

ELAINE

A b...

She covers her mouth.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

No, a bomb.

INT. CABIN

Joe Salucci wipes his brow, lays his case on his lap.

ANGLE ON FRONT OF CABIN

Ted and Mary huddle.

TED

Which passenger is Joe Salucci?

MARY

Sixteen 'C', why?

TED

He's carrying a bomb.

MARY

A b...

She covers her mouth.

TED

No, a bomb. Now, as discreetly as possible, I want you to move the passengers into the lounge.

MARY

What should I say?

TED

Anything. Just don't let Salucci think we're onto him.

Ted moves down the aisle. Mary gets on the P.A.

MARY

Would everyone not carrying a bomb please move to the lounge.

The Passengers go nuts screaming, "A bomb!!"

JOE

(jumping up with his case)

Don't anyone move!

All the passengers pile up in a ceiling-to-floor wall behind Ted -- he extends his arms, holding them back.

TED

Mr. Salucci, listen to me.

Ted takes a step forward away from the wall of passengers -- the wall crumbles.

TED

Joe, you don't want to blow that thing and kill all these innocent people.

JOE

I don't want to live anymore.

TED

Joe, the insurance policy won't help your wife and kids. You bought auto insurance, not life insurance.

JOE

What?

TED

(inching up on him)

That's right, Joe. Now, no one's going to hurt you and no one has to know what's wrong with you.

JOE

You're sure?

TED

I'm sure.

Ted is almost up to Joe when:

JIMMY

(yells)

That's the guy from the terminal who can't get it up!!

Joe bolts. Passengers panic. Ted tackles him. The case flies into the air in SLOW MOTION. It turns slowly, hanging for the longest time as we CUT, still in SLOW MOTION, to horrified faces watching it. This SLOW MOTION sequence lasts for about 60 seconds -- people put on make-up, do macrame, read, etc. -- while the case is still in the air.
Suddenly, Scraps leaps high into the air in SLOW MOTION and comes down with the case between his teeth.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Controllers huddle over one monitor.

MCCROSKY

Get that bomb, Striker! Get that bomb!

ELAINE (V.O.)

Come in, Control! We have the bomb!!

ALL CONTROLLERS

He's got the bomb!!

JACOB

This is just like an election in Iran.

INT. COCKPITTed is back at the controls -- the cockpit is incredibly hot now.TED

This heat's getting unbearable.

He looks down and sees two eggs frying on the dash.

ELAINE

But it is a dry heat, Ted.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Controllers are grouped around the plans.

MCCROSKYDo we use the bomb to blow that computer or is there another way? I want to know what everyone thinks.CONTROLLER 2 (V.O.)

I think...

(changes mind)

... No.

CONTROLLER 3 (V.O.)We could knock out the wall between the cockpit and cabin, and hang plants.

CONTROLLER 2 (V.O.)

I think...
(changes mind)
... No.

CONTROLLER 4 (V.O.)

You can't knock that wall out. That's a support wall, asshole.

CONTROLLER 2 (V.O.)

I think...
(changes mind)
No.

CONTROLLER 5 (V.O.)

Did I flush?

McCROSKY

Then it's settled. We use the bomb.
(grabs radio)
Striker, McCrosky.

INT. COCKPIT

McCROSKY (V.O.)

We've gone over the blueprints and you've got only one option.

TED

(on radio)
I know what you're going to say, McCrosky -- knock out the wall between the cockpit and cabin and hang plants.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Forget it. That's a support wall. Use the bomb.

ELAINE

The b...

She covers her mouth.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

I keep telling you, not the b... The bomb!!

TED

(almost to self)
Why, you'd have to be crazy to try a stunt like that.

Elaine looks at Ted.

INT. CABIN

All passengers look forward in Ted's direction.

INT. COCKPIT

SUPER the womb over Ted's face.

DOCTOR'S VOICE

You're too low in the womb, Striker!
You've got to come out feet first!

LOSE SUPER.

TED

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

(grabs case)

Elaine. I'm going back there.

ELAINE

Ted... I love you. Be careful.

Ted leaves.

SFX: CRASHING MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

INT. MISSION CONTROL

MCCROSKY

(to his controllers)

I want everyone on their toes for this one.

ANGLE ON JACOBS

Handing out ballet slippers to the Controllers who are passing a joint down the line.

MCCROSKY

And if anyone has any ideas, I want to hear them now.

JACOBS

How about a show just like Hollywood Squares but with kids. Gary Coleman could host.

INT. CABIN

The Passengers stand in the aisle listening to Mary.

MARY

Now I want everyone to move to the front of the cabin.

Passengers move calmly.

MARY

That's fine. Stay calm. We just want everyone as far away from the blast as possible.

The Passengers panic and stampede right over her.

INT. COMPUTER CORE

Ted wears a gas mask and attaches the time-bomb to the computer.

ROK

What are you doing, Ted? Why are you wearing that mask, Ted?

Gas spews out of a vent. Ted makes sure his gas mask is tight.

INT. CABIN

Simon is dressed in space suit and moving down the aisle. Elaine holds onto him.

ELAINE

Simon! Wait! What are you doing?!

They pass Father O'Flanagan. He has a Bongo drum at his seat.

O'FLANAGAN

Under the 'B', sixteen!

SIMON

I've lost the ship and now I've lost you, Elaine. I'm getting out.

ELAINE

Simon, I didn't want it to end like this. We can be friends! You'll die out there.

SIMON

Maybe.

ELAINE

Simon, what are you saying?!

Simon steps into a hatch labeled, "ESCAPE CAPSULE".

SIMON

I'm saying, I can't take the singles scene again, Elaine.

The hatch door slams shut. A passenger passes with a sandwich board that reads, "JESUS WAS A SINGLE."

ELAINE

Simon, no!

Jimmy appears and yells through the window on the hatch.

JIMMY

You want to talk about it now, Commander?

The capsule ejects.

INT. KRUGER'S OFFICE

The Commissioner stands in front of the painting of astronauts on black velvet. He is on the phone.

COMMISSIONER

Give me the President of the United States. Tell him it's the Commissioner.
(to Kruger)
I don't know how the old man's going to take this.

INT. OVAL OFFICE

The PRESIDENT poses for a photo session: CLOSEUP of President holding aloft in a victory salute, the hands of two black men. On the camera flash we LOOSEN to reveal the bodiless arms of two black mannequins. An AID hands the phone to the President.

AID

Houston, sir.

PRESIDENT

(taking phone)
This is the President... What?!... What?!

He walks past a wall of photos of past presidents: JFK, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, Reagan older, Reagan much older, Merv Griffin, a chimp, and this President.

SPLIT SCREEN: PRESIDENT AND COMMISSIONERCOMMISSIONER

I don't think that shuttle's going to make it, sir.

The President passes an Arab piling millions in cash onto his desk.

PRESIDENT

Damnit, Mister, the dignity and integrity of this presidency depends on the success of that mission. And that's my last word!

COMMISSIONER

Yes, sir.

They both hang up and, making sure no one is watching, pick their noses.

WIPE TO FULL SCREEN OF OVAL OFFICEAID

What's our strategy on this one, sir?

PRESIDENT

I work for the people of these United States, Frank. I have to do what's best for them.

(grabs the red phone)

Al, kill social security, cancel school lunches only for the poor, dismantle welfare, close all hospitals and public toilets, green light the MX-6, invade Brazil, and bring my horse around after my nap!

INT. COCKPIT

Ted is at the controls. Elaine rushes in.

ELAINE

Simon just ejected!

TED

Sit down, Elaine. If this bomb trick works we just might make it. Simon was a fool to eject now.

ELAINE

You mean...

TED

That's right -- premature ejection.

ELAINE

What will happen to him, Ted?

TED

The sun will heat that thing to over 450 degrees within seconds. He'll roast like a pig on a spit.

EXT. ESCAPE CAPSULE - SPACE

We see a roast on a spit through the window.

INT. COMPUTER CORE

The clock on the time bomb TICKS down.

INT. COCKPIT

TED

(looking at wristwatch)
Are you afraid?

ELAINE

Not when I'm with you, Ted.

TED

I guess you'd have to be a fool not to be afraid at a time like this.

INT. CABIN

Mrs. Gooch sucks on her cushion -- she's totally zonked on acid.

MAN NEXT TO HER

Are you afraid?

MRS. GOOCH

(looking at her hands)
Are these my hands?

FATHER O'FLANAGAN

(to Stella)
Are you afraid?

STELLA

I'm a nurse. I can't afford to be afraid, Father.

ANOTHER AREA

JIMMY

(to Scraps)
Are you afraid, Scraps?

SCRAPS

(he BARKS once, subtitle translate)
Now when there's a guy like Ted Striker up there, Jimmy.
(he BARKS one more time -- subtitles)
Now how about a little scratch on the inner thigh?

INT. COCKPIT

Testa stands over Ted with a clipboard.

TESTA

Fifty-six percent of the passengers are afraid. Twenty-nine percent are not afraid. Eight percent are undecided and seven percent think Israel should give back Finland.

TED

You better strap yourself in, Testa.
(on radio)
Mission control, this is Mayflower. Over.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Go ahead, Striker.

TED

(on radio)

We've got about 60 seconds before that thing blows. We're set to reprogram for Mercury at zero point five WORP.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCROKSY

(on radio)

Zero point five WORP?!

STRIKER (V.O.)

That's right. When the bomb explodes we're going to have a ten foot hole in the fuselage and I want to get there as fast as I can. I know what this snip can do, McCrosky.

McCROKSY

(to Controllers)

No one's ever travelled at that speed before.

JACOBS

Last spring we did Europe in nine days.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It careens towards the sun.

INT. COMPUTER CORE

Bomb clock TICKS down.

INT. CABIN

Mary instructs Passengers.

MARY

Heads between the knees!

(looking down aisle)

Between your own knees, Father!

O'Flanagan looks around guiltily.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

McCrosky addresses his troops.

McCROSKY

I don't find it easy to talk at a time like this, but I want to say something about that guy up there. I can sum it all up in one word -- courage, dedication, spirit, pride, selflessness, and g-u-t-s, guts. Striker's got more guts in his little finger than most of us have in our large intestine. He's got guts up to his eyeballs, guts coming out of his ears.

Controllers start playing cards, doing needlepoint.

McCROSKY

Sure it's a cliché but great shortstops are born, not made, and a clown is funny in the circus but when he gets on the highway, he's murder. It bugged me too when Mr. Ed refused to talk when the neighbors came over but...

INT. COMPUTER CORE

The bomb TICKS down and BLOWS.

INT. COCKPIT

The ship shakes violently. Ted fights for control.

INSERT - SPEEDOMETER SLOWSBACK TO SCENE*SFX: ENGINE WHINE SUBSIDES.

The ship starts bumping as if it's hit a rough road.

TED

(on radio)

We've blown the computer!

(to Elaine)

Elaine! Set course change!

ELAINE

(flips a switch)

Set!

TED

Now!

ELAINE

(pushes a button)

Compute!

"Compute" sign flashes.

Ted pulls an acceleration lever.

TED

Here goes.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It slows to a halt.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted pulls the lever hard toward himself. The ship shudders.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

The ship slingshots in the opposite direction, disappearing into the void leaving a trail of light.

INT. COCKPITINSERT - PANEL LIGHT, "0.5 WOP"

BACK TO SCENETED

(on radio)

Point five WORP!

INT. MISSION CONTROL

PAN Controllers looking intently into the night sky. PAN to Mrs. Salucci intently gripping her vibrator -- it's on. PAN to Jacobs reading VARIETY -- headline: "PARAMOUNT ANNOUNCES SHUTTLE DISASTER PIC!"

McCROSKY

Zero point five WORP, that's half the speed of light. We really have no idea what can happen to the human body at that speed.

INT. CABIN

Two Passengers (contortionists) with legs up over their shoulders and looking out over their rear ends, play cards.

INT. COCKPIT

The interior vibrates. A psychedelic blaze of multi-colored light illuminates the interior. Ted struggles with the controls.

McCROSKY (V.O.)

Striker, we're monitoring you. You're right on course. At that speed you should hit Mercury in about six minutes. So give yourself enough time to kill those WORP engines.

INT. MISSION CONTROLMcCROSKY

(on radio)

We'll be out of radio range in a few seconds. I'm going to put you in contact with Mercury Base Alpha Beta for your final descent. Over.

(off mike)

Stinson, who's in command of Alpha Beta?

STINSON

Al Hammil?

CONTROLLER 3

Not anymore. It's Rex Kramer, now.

McCROSKY

Not Rex Kramer!

CONTROLLER 3

No, Rex Kramer.

EXT. MERCURY - NIGHT

We see the Alpha Beta base in distance with an ALPHA BETA neon sign flashing.

INSERT - FLOOR LIGHT, "LEVEL 1 - POWER STATION"

O.S. we hear a DOG GROWLING and fighting with something.

BACK TO SCENE

KRAMER

But flying that shuttle is a whole different ballgame.

The elevator doors open. Kramer steps out into the communications room.

SFX: SUBMARINE SIREN WAILS.

PAN down to floor of elevator to find a young officer -- Carey -- torn to shreds and fighting off Kramer's golden retriever dog. The doors close. Kramer approaches an OFFICER.

KRAMER

What's the latest, Lieutenant?

OFFICER

They'll hit our atmosphere in about three minutes, if they hold together. They've lost their computer and are coming in at zero point five WOPR on manual control, sir.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted shifts a stick shift on the steering column.

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOM

Kramer looks at the big screen.

SFX: SUBMARINE SIREN WAILS.

KRAMER

Down scope!

A submarine periscope drops. Kramer looks for the shuttle.

KRAMER

He'll never bring that thing in on manual, but I guess Striker's their only hope.

BACK TO SCENE

Kramer steps away from the scope. It drops down. A man in a barber chair is on the other end of the steel column and comes to rest on the floor.

OFFICER 2

Sir, we have radio contact.

INT. CABIN

Testa talks to the passengers. Psychedelic lights flash.

TESTA

(yelling)
We're travelling at one half the speed of light. There is nothing to worry about.
However, you might experience some

ANGLE ON WOMAN

Her beard grows.

INSERT - CLOSEUP OF SANITARY NAPKIN DISPENSER

A flurry of hands empties it in two seconds.

ANGLE ON TEXAN

He has turned into a Hassidic Rabbi.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted is fighting to maintain control.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Striker, this is Rex Kramer on Alpha Beta.
Do you read me? Over.

Ted and Elaine give startled looks of recognition.

KRAMER (V.O.)

That's right, Ted. Rex Kramer. We've locked you on track beam. You're going to have to kill those WOPR engines in exactly thirty seconds. Over.

INT. MISSION CONTROL

Everyone tensely looks out the window into the night sky.

McCROSKY

There's nothing else we can do for those people out there now, except pray.

The entire room explodes in an up-beat Southern Baptists' rendition of "HE'S GOT THE WHOLE WORLD IN HIS HANDS".

INT. COCKPITKRAMER (V.O.)

Now, Striker! Kill WOPR!

Ted pushes his WOPR lever forward but it comes off in his hand.

ELAINE

Ted, the lever!

TED

(on radio)
Kramer, the WOPR control handle just came off in my hand.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Try another handle!

TED

There are no more handles, only switches.

KRAMER (V.O.)

No buttons?!

TED

(looking around madly)
Just switches, lights, and knobs.

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOMKRAMER

(looking at buttons and levers on his panel)

I'd give my right arm to get just one of these buttons or levers up there right now.

(on radio)

Okay, Striker. You're going to have to pull that lever panel off.

INT. COCKPITTED

(to Elaine)

Screw driver!

She hands him a vodka and orange juice. Ted throws it on his face. He reaches down and rips the panel off, exposing all sorts of wires.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Now find a piece of metal and stick it in there.

Ted looks around for a piece of metal. Elaine pulls a bobby pin from her hair.

ELAINE

Will this work, Ted?

Her long brown hair falls sexily. She sweeps it back with a toss of her head. Ted is overwhelmed by her.

TED

Thanks.

(on radio)

I've got something that might work.

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOMTED (V.O.)

A bobby pin.

Kramer and Aids exchange a look which questions Ted's sexuality.

KRAMER

What the hell is a man doing with a... forget it.

(on radio)

It'll have to do, Striker.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted sticks the bobby pin into the wires. Sparks fly. The ship starts slowing up.

SFX: THE ENGINE WHINE SUBSIDES.INSERT - SPEEDOMETER WINDING DOWN

BACK TO SCENE

TED

It's working.

INT. COMMUNICATIONS ROOM

Kramer stands in front of the huge screen. A small ship appears in the distance coming right at us.

KRAMER

(on radio)

Okay, Striker. We have you on visual.
Just keep her level.

EXT. SHIP - SPACE

It careens towards the planet surface.

INT. COCKPIT

It starts bouncing wildly.

TED

She's coming apart!

INT. CABIN

Passengers scream.

INT. NEWS SET - BUFFALO

The anchorman screams.

SUPER: "EDITORIAL".

INT. NEWS SET - TOKYO

The anchorman screams.

SUPER: "EDITORIAL". (In Russian looking print.)

INT. HOTEL LOBBY - RIO MONTENEGRO

The desk clerk screams.

INT. COCKPIT

KRAMER (V.O.)

Keep her nose up! Don't fight her!

TED

I'm trying but she's fighting me!

A boxing glove springs from the dash punching Ted in the face.

ELAINE

Ted, that's Alpha Beta!

ANGLE OUT SHIP WINDOW - NIGHT

We see the lights of a small colony on planet surface. The Alpha Beta neon sign is visible.

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOM

Kramer sits in a large swivel chair -- like Captain Kirk's on the Enterprise bridge. As he talks, he nonchalantly swivels so his back is to the huge window. We see the Mayflower approaching on the screen.

KRAMER

(on radio)

Now, Striker, there are a few things you have to keep in mind as you get close to the planet's atmosphere.

ANGLE ON COMMUNICATION ROOM PERSONNEL

They watch in horror as the Mayflower comes shooting at them.

KRAMER

(on radio)

First and foremost you have to make one very important decision.

INT. COCKPIT

Elaine looks out the window -- horrified.

ELAINE

Ted! We're not stopping!!

Ted fights the controls.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Is this a landing you're sure you can make without endangering the lives of your passengers?

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOMANGLE ON PERSONNEL

They run for cover.

ANGLE ON THE SCREEN

The Mayflower comes right at the screen and crashes through it. Kramer still has his back to the screen and doesn't notice what has happened -- the room behind him has been totally demolished.

KRAMER

(on radio)

Now, once you've made that decision you have to be very clear about your responsibility to those people on that ship.

INT. COCKPIT

The front window is broken. Ted and Elaine are covered in debris. Elaine's eyes grow wide with terror again.

ELAINE

Ted!

EXT. PLANET SURFACE

A group of scientists stand at a keyboard synthesizer. One plays the series of notes from CLOSE ENCOUNTERS. Suddenly the Mayflower appears over a hill. They all jump for cover as it crashes through the synthesizer.

INT. COCKPIT

Ted and Elaine are covered in piano keys.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Their lives, their futures, their goals and aspirations are in your hands,
Striker.

EXT. PLANET SURFACE

The Mayflower bounces across the surface.

INT. CABIN

Mary maneuvers down the aisle. Passengers are screaming and being tossed around.

MARY

(to one passenger)
Seat backs up. Thank you.

She looks up and sees feet dangling from the ceiling. A man has gone right through the ceiling up to his waist.

MARY

(looking up)
Sir, you really must take your seat.

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOM

KRAMER

(on radio)
We're all with you on this one, Striker.
Now get ready to position landing gear, cut engines, and fire your retrorockets.

EXT. PLANET SURFACE - DAWN

The Mayflower careens to a smoking, crunching, shattering stop.

INT. CABIN

Mary and Testa start directing panic-stricken passengers to the exits.

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOM

KRAMER

(on radio)
Timing's of the essence on a lame duck approach, Striker. Don't fight her. Hold her steady. Nose up.

EXT. SHIP ON A HILL - DAWN

Airplane 2: The Sequel Script at IMSDb.

Ted and Elaine stand looking down on the wreckage. In b.g.,
SIRENS WAIL, emergency lights flash across Ted and Elaine.

VOICES (O.S.)

You'll be all right! Everyone's going to be okay!

Ted holds Elaine.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Don't fight her, Striker. Hold her! Hold her! Stay with her, Striker!

Ted and Elaine kiss.

KRAMER (V.O.)

Now, hit your landing gear and cut those engines!

INT. ALPHA BETA COMMUNICATIONS ROOM

KRAMER

(on radio)

Timing's everything, Striker! Fire your retro-rockets!

EXT. PLANET SURFACE - DAWN

Ted and Elaine walk off into the distance.

SFX: SIRENS FROM CRASH AREA IN DISTANCE.

KRAMER (V.O.)

(voice fading)

Now give her full flap and keep that nose up. Okay, now!

ELAINE

Ted, what's going to happen to us?

Ted stops and looks into the distant, dark sky. A printed crawl begins:

MUSIC: OPTIMISTIC THEME

CRAWL

FAR, FAR AWAY IN THE DEEPEST REGIONS OF OUR VAST SOLAR SYSTEM, A SMALL, BRAVE GROUP OF PIONEERS EMBARK ON A BOLD NEW ADVENTURE. THEIR MISSION: TO OPEN UP A NEW FRONTIER. THEIR GOAL, TO BUILD A BRAVE NEW WORLD.

Ted and Elaine walk towards crawl and are approached by two strange CREATURES -- bald with a shock of hair sprouting from the top of their heads.

CREATURE

 Government
 Refinance Plan

Last spring, the US government launched a housing

 million homeowners, but so far only 85,000 homeowners have used the program to refinance.

Many homeowners

 If you are a recently, you may be surprised at how much you can save.

Elaine enters terminal building.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

Elaine is approached by a religious ZEALOT #1.

ZEALOT #1

Hello, we'd like you to have this flower from the Religious Consciousness Church.

ELAINE

No, but thank you very much.

Arrival-Departure TV monitors. Elaine approaches.

ELAINE'S POV - TV MONITORS

Reads: Flight 209 to Chicago - Depart Gate 89 - 7:25 p.m.
Arrival monitor is goldfish swimming.

BACK TO ELAINE

She checks her watch and walks past Security Check area. CAMERA STAYS with a middle-aged couple, SHIRLEY and JACK, waiting to pass through Security Check. Behind them is sign reading: WARNING, HIJACKING IS A FEDERAL OFFENSE, etc.

SHIRLEY

Jack, isn't that Fred Bliffert over there in the blue turtleneck? Maybe he's on our flight to Chicago.

JACK

Yeah, I think he is.
(waves)
Hey, Fred!

FRED recognizes Jack.

FRED

(yelling)
Hi, Jack!!!

A swarm of police and airport security men descend on Fred and take him away.

EXT. AIRPORT - PASSENGER LOADING ZONE - NIGHT

A limousine arrives. Two colorfully dressed BLACK DUDES emerge. An extra pesters them. Two HARE KRISHNA'S arrive on foot and walk toward terminal.

P.A. SYSTEM (female v.o.)

There's just no stopping in the white zone.

P.A. SYSTEM (male v.o.)

Christ, you're as bad as your mother!

P.A. SYSTEM (female v.o.)

Oh, really, Vernon! Why pretend? We both know perfectly well what it is you're talking about. You want me to have an abortion.

P.A. SYSTEM (male v.o.)
It's really the only sensible thing to do.
If it's done properly, therapeutically, there's no danger involved.

P.A. SYSTEM (female v.o.)
Have you considered that what's inside me is a human being; that it's alive. We made love. It's us -- you and me.

P.A. SYSTER (male v.o.)
That isn't true. A fetus at this stage is not a human being, nor is it a person.

Krishnas enter terminal building.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

The Krishnas are approached by the Religious Zealot.

ZEALOT #2
Hello, we'd like you to have this flower from the Church of Consciousness. Would you like to make a donation?

KRISHNA
(shakes his head)
No, we gave at the office.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

A voluptuous BLONDE saunters through the airport, clears her throat loudly, and spits on the wall.

She walks past an ELDERLY WOMAN standing outside a men's room door. She turns and sticks her head in the door.

ELDERLY WOMAN
Go, O.J., go!!

INT. SECURITY CHECK AREA - NIGHT

SECURITY CHECK LADY is watching X-ray scanner. First picture is typically filled suitcase, then another, then a chest X-ray.

A man passes through metal detector archway and it BEEPS.

SECURITY LADY
Please put your metal objects on this tray.

He puts his watch, keys on the tray. Then removes his metal arm and metal leg.

EXT. TERMINAL BUILDING - PASSENGER LOADING AREA - NIGHT

MR. and MRS. HAMMEN and their eight year old son, JOEY, arrive in a station wagon. They unload luggage.

P.A. SYSTEM (male v.o.)
The red zone is for immediate loading and unloading of passengers only. There is no stopping in the white zone.

P.A. System Female v.o. weeping.

P. A. SYSTEM (male v.o.)
The red zone is for...Betty, put down that

SHOTS and GROAN.

P.A. SYSTEM (female v.o.)
The white zone is for immediate loading and unloading of passengers only. There is no stopping in the red zone.

The Hammens walk toward terminal past a BUSINESSMAN.

BUSINESSMAN

Taxi!

A taxi cab skids to a stop in front of him. The Businessman gets in as the driver, TED STRIKER, drops the flag and rushes out.

STRIKER

Back in a minute.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - BAGGAGE PICKUP AREA - NIGHT

Striker enters, looking around as if searching for someone.
People are rolling down the conveyor belt of a baggage carousel, banging into each other like luggage. The luggage is standing around the conveyor belt, waiting for the people to come off.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Striker, walking briskly, is approached by Zealot #3 who tries to pin a flower on his jacket. Striker keeps walking but the Zealot is persistent. Finally, Striker slips out of his jacket leaving the Zealot with the coat.

P.A. SYSTEM (v.o.)
Your attention, please. Flight seven-thirty-three from Milwaukee is now arriving on the B Concourse, Gate thirty-five.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Flight 733 taxis toward gate. A GROUND CREWMAN with red flashlights is directing plane to his right. A SECOND GROUND CREWMAN approaches as First Ground Crewman continues to direct plane to his right.

CREDITS END.

GROUND CREWMAN #2

Hey, Joe, where's the forklift?

GROUND CREWMAN #1

The forklift? It's over there by the baggage loader.

He points to the left with his flashlights. Flight 733 follows flashlights and CRASHES into terminal.

INT. TERMINAL - GATE 35 - NIGHT

Nose of Flight 733 CRASHES into terminal, scattering waiting crowd. A woman tosses away her infant child as she runs off.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Striker catches up to Elaine.

STRIKER

Elaine!

ELAINE

(surprised)

Ted!

STRIKER

I came home early and found your note. I guess you meant for me to read it later. Elaine, I've got to talk to you.

ELAINE

I just don't want to go over it any more.

STRIKER

I know things haven't been right for a long time, but it'll be different. If you'll just be patient, I can work things out.

ELAINE

I have been patient and I've tried to help, but you wouldn't even let me do that.

STRIKER

Don't you feel anything for me at all any more?

ELAINE

It takes so many things to make love last. Most of all it takes respect. And I can't live with a man I don't respect!

She leaves.

STRIKER

(to CAMERA)

What a pisser.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - CONCESSION AREA - NIGHT

CAPTAIN CLARENCE OVEUR is standing at the magazine racks. The first two sections of the display are books; the third is girly magazines. The captions over the display are FICTION, NON-FICTION, WHACKING MATERIAL. He selects a magazine entitled "Modern Sperm" and begins to page through.

P.A. SYSTEM (v.o.)

(yelling at ceiling)
I've got it!

P.A. SYSTEM (v.o.)
All right. Thank you.

OPERATOR (v.o.)
Go ahead with your call.

TURNANSKY (v.o.)
This is Doctor Turnansky at the Mayo Clinic.

INT. DR. TURNANSKY'S OFFICE - NIGHT

DR. TURNANSKY is seated at desk. Behind him are shelves filled with mayonnaise jars.

TURNANSKY
There's a passenger on your Chicago flight
two-oh-niner, a little girl named Lisa Davis -- en route to Minneapolis. She's scheduled for a heart transplant and we'd like you to tell her mother that we found a donor an hour ago.

On his desk is a beaker containing a beating heart.

TURNANSKY
We have the heart here ready for surgery and we must have the recipient on the operating table within six hours.

The heart jumps out of the beaker, across the desk and falls off the edge.

TURNANSKY
I want you to make sure she is kept in a reclined position and that a continuous watch is kept on her I.V.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - PHONE AREA - NIGHT

TURNANSKY (v.o.)
Also, it's important that...

OPERATOR (v.o.)
Excuse me. This is the Operator, Captain Oveur, I have an emergency call for you on line five from a Mister Hamm.

OVEUR
All right. Give me Hamm on five, hold the Mayo.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Ambulance arrives at airplane. Attendants and MRS. DAVIS unload LISA DAVIS into wheelchair.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

Elaine and Striker are walking together.

STRIKER
Look, you'll be back in town tomorrow night. We'll have dinner -- talk it over.

ELAINE
I won't be back. I've requested the Atlanta run.

STRIKER

Elaine, not yet. I promise you I really can change.

ELAINE

Then why don't you take the job that Louie Netz offered you at Boeing?

In the b.g. an airline PORTER is transporting an ELDERLY COUPLE in an electric cart. They round the corner too fast and the woman falls out. Husband doesn't notice.

STRIKER

You know I haven't been able to get near an airplane since the war. And even if I could, they wouldn't hire me because of my war record.

ELAINE

Your war record? You're the only one keeping that alive. For everyone else it's ancient history.

STRIKER

You expect me to believe that?

In the b.g. the Elderly Woman staggers to her feet and is immediately run over by another electric cart.

ELAINE

It's the truth. What's hurt you the most is your record since the war. Different cities, different jobs, and not one of them shows you can accept any real responsibility.

STRIKER

But if you'll just give me...

ELAINE

It's too late, Ted. When I get back to Chicago, I'm going to start my life all over again. I'm sorry.

She walks off. Dramatic MUSIC as Striker glares with determination. The religious Zealot tries to pin a flower on his lapel.

ZEALOT #3

Hello, we'd like you to have this...

Without looking, Striker decks the Zealot with one punch. He walks after Elaine.

INT. COCKPIT - FLIGHT 209 - NIGHT

Clarence Oveur is in the pilot's seat. VICTOR BASTA is seated at engineer's console. There is a St. Christopher's statue on the dashboard.

BASTA

Any word on that storm lifting over Salt Lake, Clarence?

TEXACO SERVICE MAN is cleaning windshield.

OVEUR

Unlikely, Victor. I just reviewed the Area Report for 1609 hours through 2400 hours. That's an occluded front stalled over the Dakotas -- backed up all the way to Utah.

Texaco Service Man opens hood and checks dipstick.

BASTA

If it decides to push over into the Great Lakes it could get plenty soupy. How about the southern route, around Tulsa?

OVEUR

I double checked the terminal forecast and winds aloft. IFR ceilings all the way.

Oveur gives charge card to Texaco Man.

BASTA

Where do they top out?

OVEUR

Well, there's some light scattered cover at twenty thousand with icing around eighteen.

BASTA

Looks like the original flight plan over Denver is still the best bet.

Oveur signs charge form and gives it to Texaco Man.

OVEUR

Denver it is.

ROGER MURDOCK enters. He is played by a famous athlete.

MURDOCK

Sorry, Clarence. Latest weather report shows everything socked in from Salt Lake to Lincoln.

OVEUR

(to Murdock)

Hi, Roger. Good to have you aboard. Victor, this is Roger Murdock.

BASTA

How do you do, Roger?

Texaco Man hands receipt to Oveur.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - BOARDING AREA - NIGHT

Stewardesses Elaine and RANDY are greeting boarding passengers including the Hammens and SISTER ANGELINA who is carrying a guitar.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

HARI KRISHNA #1

Do you believe those goddamn Steelers? Can you imagine blitzing on third and long with two minutes in the game?

HARI KRISHNA #2

Well, hell, they couldn't stay in zone coverage with Dallas running swing patterns!

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

JACK

What did you think of 'Great Expectations?'

SHIRLEY

Well, it wasn't all that I had hoped.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

A SOLDIER and GIRL are tearfully embracing at the base of the stairs leading into the plane.

GIRL

Oh, Bill, I'm going to miss you so much.

SOLDIER

You promise you'll write.

GIRL

Every day.

AIRPORT STEWARD

Better get on board, son.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - GATE 89 - NIGHT

Striker approaches check-in counter.

STRIKER

Can you tell me if Elaine Dickinson is on this flight?

She looks at her list.

CHECK-IN LADY

Well, the whole flight crew has boarded.
Yes. She is on board.

STRIKER

I'd like one ticket to Chicago. No baggage!

EXT. TERMINAL BUILDING - PASSENGER LOADING AREA - NIGHT

The Businessman is patiently waiting in Striker's cab.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - GATE 89 - NIGHT

CHECK-IN LADY

Smoking or non-smoking?

STRIKER

Smoking, please.

She hands him a smoldering ticket, and he walks out the door.

EXT. TERMINAL - NIGHT

Striker emerges and freezes in terror.

STRIKER'S POV - THE AIRPLANE - NIGHT

DRAMATIC MUSIC.

CLOSEUP - STRIKER - NIGHT

agonizing over war recollections. SUPERIMPOSE ROARING fighter planes. SUPER FADES OUT. Striker musters his courage and walks toward airplane.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

BLACK DUDE #1

Shi',man, tha' honkey mo'fo' mess wi' my ol' lady, man I rap tha' dude upside his head, man.

SUBTITLES APPEAR ON SCREEN: "GOLLY, THAT WHITE FELLOW SHOULD STAY AWAY FROM MY WIFE OR I WILL PUNCH HIM."

BLACK DUDE #2

Yeah, man, he ain't never goin' come on layin' no pig rap off you, man.

SUBTITLES APPEAR ON SCREEN: "YES, THERE IS TRUTH IN WHAT YOU SAY. HOWEVER, I THINK HE MAY BE MISLEADING YOU."

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Randy is taking Striker's ticket.

RANDY

Fourteen-B. It's halfway down on your right.

STRIKER

Thank you.

As Striker sits down he sees Elaine, who is unaware he is on board.

STRIKER'S POV - NIGHT

Elaine is handing out pillows. We HEAR A DING.

INSERT - LIGHTED WARNING SIGNS

"NO SMOKING
EL NO A YOU SMOKO"

"FASTEN SEAT BELTS
PUTANA DA SEATBELTZ"

He fastens his seat belt and looks nervously out the window.
The Elderly Woman next to him notices.

MRS. ELDERLY

Nervous?

STRIKER

Yes.

MRS. ELDERLY

First time?

STRIKER

No. I've been nervous lots of times. I used to be a pilot myself...during the war.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Elaine approaches Mrs. Davis and Lisa.

ELAINE

We'll be taking off real soon so we better fasten you in tight.

LISA

Thank you. Oh Mother, this is so exciting.

MRS. DAVIS

I know, but remember you must get some rest.

ELAINE

That's good advice. You relax and I'll be back after we take off.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

MILTON, an eight year old boy wearing a conservative coat and tie, fastens his seat belt and begins reading his "Business Monthly" magazine.

He sees BERNICE, a seven year old girl, in the aisle and looks her up and down.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

DRAMATIC MUSIC. Engines one and two REV UP.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Murdock and Oveur look toward left wing.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

ENGINES three and four REV UP.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Murdock and Oveur look toward right wing.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Two more ENGINES REV UP.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Murdock and Oveur look toward left wing and do a double take.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Two more ENGINES REV UP.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Murdock and Oveur are confused and counting on their fingers.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Stairs are removed from airplane. The Soldier is in the open doorway waving good-bye to his tearful girlfriend at the base of the plane.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

OVEUR

GROUND CONTROL (v.o.)

Taxi to runway one-niner.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Oveur moves console levers as if shifting into first gear.

EXT. AIRPLANE - SOLDIER - NIGHT

as 209 starts to taxi, the Soldier is leaning out the door.

SOLDIER

Good-bye, darling.

EXT. RUNWAY - GIRL - NIGHT

His girlfriend is moving along next to the plane as in typical train station good-bye scene.

GIRL

Oh, good-bye, Bill! Have your picture taken as soon as you get there and send me one!

As she runs, she dodges posts. We HEAR the chug chug of a steam engine pulling from a station.

SOLDIER

I will.

She runs through crowd of people standing on side of runway.

GIRL

Don't you go getting fat or anything.

She's running faster.

SOLDIER

Don't worry, I won't. Okay, here -- hurry!

He tosses her his watch.

GIRL

Oh, but it's your watch. You shouldn't. You'll need it.

She is now knocking down posts as she keeps up with the accelerating plane.

SOLDIER

Good-bye, darling.

GIRL

Oh, Bill, I'll keep it. I'll keep it with me all the time.

SOLDIER

So long, darling. Good-bye. Take care of yourself.

GIRL

Bill! Bill! Good-bye, Bill.

SOLDIER

Good-bye, darling.

GIRL

Good-bye, darling. I love you. I love you, darling.

SOLDIER

Good-bye, darling.

A TRAIN WHISTLE sounds. She stops running and waves.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

GROUND CONTROLLER (v.o.)

Flight two-zero-niner, you are cleared for takeoff.

OVEUR

Roger.

MURDOCK

(turning to Oveur)

Huh?

Oveur throws console lever into second gear.

GROUND CONTROLLER (v.o.)

L.A. departure frequency two-point-niner.

OVEUR

Roger.

MURDOCK

(turning to Oveur)

Huh?

BASTA

(to tower)

Request vector...over.

OVEUR

(turning to Basta)

What?

GROUND CONTROLLER (v.o.)

Flight two-zero-niner, cleared for vector three...two four.

MURDOCK

We have clearance, Clarence.

OVEUR

Roger, Roger. What's our vector, Victor?

Oveur throws console lever into third.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Flight 209 takes off, flying erratically.

BASTA (v.o.)

Tower radioed clearance, over.

OVEUR (v.o.)

That's Clarence Oveur...over.

BASTA (v.o.)

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Striker walks to rear of plane and looks out window. He swallows a couple of pills. Randy approaches.

RANDY

Do you feel all right, sir?

STRIKER

Oh -- I haven't flown for a long time.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Elaine is handing out magazines.

OVEUR (v.o.)

Good evening, this is Captain Oveur speaking. We'll be cruising at thirty-six, thousand feet, and arrival time in Chicago is ten-forty-five Central Time. The temperature there is sixty-two degrees, with a twenty percent chance of precipitation. And now here's Victor with People in the news.

BASTA (v.o.)

Thank you, Clarence. Ali McGraw announced another spin on the marriage-go-round. And who's the lucky guy? You guessed it. None other than Olympic gymnast...

Elaine approaches Mrs. Elderly. Striker's seat is vacant.

ELAINE

Would you like something to read?

MRS. ELDERLY

Do you have anything light?

Elaine hands her a small piece of paper.

ELAINE

How about this leaflet: 'Famous Jewish Sports Legends?'

MRS. ELDERLY

(taking pamphlet)

Yes. Thank you.

Elaine turns and is shocked to see Striker approaching his seat.

ELAINE

Ted, what are you doing here?

STRIKER

Elaine, I've got to talk to you.

ELAINE

You...you shouldn't have come. I don't have time now.

MRS. SCHIFF

Oh, stewardess...

ELAINE

Excuse me.

Striker sits down.

MRS. ELDERLY

No wonder you're upset. She's lovely. And a darling figure. Supple, pouting breasts. Firm thighs. It's a shame you're not getting along.

STRIKER

Yes, I know. Things used to be different. I remember when we first met. It was during the war.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. MAGUMBA BAR - NIGHT

Striker is seated at bar in a smoke-filled room. An assortment of unsavory characters are hanging around the bar.

STRIKER (v.o.)

I was in the Air Force, stationed in Drambuie, on the Barbary Coast. I used to hang out in the Magumba Bar.

Shapely female legs walking on bar stop in front of Striker. SLEAZY TROMBONE MUSIC. CAMERA PANS UP shapely female in tight fitting dress. She is playing the sleazy trombone music.

STRIKER (v.o.)

It was a rough place. You would count on a fight breaking out almost every night.

Two GIRL SCOUTS are slugging it out old Western style -- breaking tables and chairs.

INT. MAGUMBA BAR - JUKEBOX AREA - NIGHT

An unsavory CHARACTER puts a quarter in the jukebox. One Girl Scout bashes the other against the jukebox buttons.

INSERT - LIGHTED SIGN

"E-5

Girl Scout bashes again.

INSERT - LIGHTED SIGN

"A-12

THANK YOU"

The unsavory Character nods approvingly at selections.

INT. MAGUMBA BAR DANCE FLOOR - NIGHT

Patrons are dancing a la John Travolta.

STRIKER (v.o.)

I didn't go there that night to fall in love, I just dropped in for a couple of drinks.

BACK TO STRIKER

He turns to look toward dance floor.

STRIKER (v.o.)

But suddenly there she was.

STRIKER'S POV

Elaine dancing with grizzly looking cutthroat.

STRIKER (v.o.)

I was captivated, entranced.

BACK TO STRIKER

STRIKER (v.o.)

It hit me like a thunderbolt. I had to ask the guy next to me to pinch me to make sure I wasn't dreaming.

Striker asks the burly LONGSHOREMAN next to him to to pinch him. Longshoreman gives him a look and moves away cautiously.

STRIKER (v.o.)

I was afraid to approach her, but that night, fate was on my side.

Elaine's dancing partner is stabbed in the back and falls to the ground. No one notices but Striker who eagerly fills in. They make a perfect disco couple. The other dancers make a circle around them.

They begin with fancy disco steps, move on to flips and seemingly impossible acrobatics, finally ending with incredible stunts: Striker, jumping through flaming hoops and Elaine, hanging from a chandelier by her teeth and twirling.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

STRIKER

We laughed, we talked, we danced, I never wanted it to end and I guess I still don't. But enough about me. I hope this hasn't been boring for you.

CAMERA WIDENS to reveal Mrs. Elderly's legs dangling next to him. She has hung herself.

STRIKER

It's just that when I start to talk about Elaine, I get so carried away -- I lose all track of time -- not unlike Oliver in 'Jesus: the Man.'

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Milton, carrying a tray with two cups of coffee, approaches Bernice.

MILTON

I happened to be passing, and I thought you might like some corfee.

BERNICE

That's very nice of you. Thank you.

She takes a cup.

BERNICE

Ah, won't you sit down?

MILTON

Thank you. Cream?

BERNICE

No, thank you. I take it black. Like my men.

MILTON

Were you vacationing in Los Angeles?

BERNICE

Well, it really wasn't a vacation. You see, I'm a teacher in the New York City school system, and I was attending a seminar on visual aids to education. Are you from L.A.?

MILTON

No. I'm from Washington, D.C. I'm a lobbyist for the Small Businessmen's Association.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Elaine is taking orders from a couple and their eight year old son.

ELAINE

Would you like to order dinner now?

MR. HAMMEN

Yes. Steak for Joey and my wife and I will have the fish.

JOEY

When can I see the cockpit, Dad?

MR. HAMMEN

Well, I think that the pilots are too busy flying the plane for that, Joey.

JOEY

Aw, gee whiz.

ELAINE

I tell you what, Joey. I'll talk to the Captain and see what I can arrange.

JOEY

Gee! That'd be swell!

Elaine moves on to the two Black Dudes.

ELAINE

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Randy is taking dinner orders from Hari Krishnas.

RANDY

May I take your dinner order?

HARI KRISHNA #1

No, thank you, we brought our own vegetables.

HARI KRISHNA #2

But we would like some hot water for our tea, please.

Randy moves on.

HARI KRISHNA #1

Did you catch the jugs on that broad?

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - STEWARDESS ALCOVE - NIGHT

Elaine is replacing a magazine and catches sight of Striker.

ELAINE'S POV - STRIKER

Boring another passenger.

BACK TO ELAINE

She moves into the alcove and begins to pour coffee. CAMERA MOVES INTO CLOSEUP of Elaine.

EXT. BEACH - DAY

Striker and Elaine are running. She falls down at the water's edge, exhausted. Striker drops to his knees and they embrace passionately. A huge wave washes over them covering them completely. When the wave recedes, they're still locked in the same embrace. They are covered with seaweed. Fish are flopping around in the sand.

ELAINE

Oh, Ted, I never knew I could be so happy. These past few months have been wonderful. Tomorrow why don't we drive up the coast to that little seafood place and...

Striker frowns.

ELAINE

What's the matter?

STRIKER

My orders came through. My squadron ships out tomorrow. I'll be leading a very important mission.

ELAINE

Oh, Ted, please be careful. I worry about you so much.

STRIKER

I love you, Elaine.

GROUND CONTROL (v.o.)

Flight two-zero-niner, this is Denver Flight Control. You're approaching some rough weather. Please climb to forty-two thousand feet.

OVEUR

Roger, Denver.

There is a KNOCK on the cockpit door. Elaine and Joey enter.

ELAINE

We have a visitor.

OVEUR

Hello.

MURDOCK

Hi.

ELAINE

This is Captain Oveur. Mister Murdock and Mister Johnson. This is Joey Hammen.

MURDOCK

Come on up here. You can see better.

OVEUR

Joey, here's something we give our special visitors. Would you like to have it?

He gives Joey a small toy airplane and puts his arm around him.

JOEY

Thank you. Thanks a lot!

OVEUR

Have you ever been in a cockpit before?

JOEY

No, sir. I've never been up in a plane before.

OVEUR

Have you ever seen a grown man naked?

MURDOCK

Do you want me to check the weather,
Clarence?

OVEUR

(looking at Joey)
No, why don't you take care of it?

ELAINE

We'd better get back now.

OVEUR

Joey can stay up here for a while if he'd like to.

JOEY

Could I?

ELAINE

Okay, if you don't get in the way.

Elaine exits. Murdock picks up phone.

MURDOCK

Flight two-zero-niner to Denver radio.
Climbing to cruise at forty-two thousand.
Will report again over Lincoln. Over and out.

Joey has been paying very close attention to Murdock, and suddenly recognizes him.

JOEY

Wait a minute. I know you. You're Kareem Abdul Jabbar. You play basketball for the Los Angeles Lakers!

MURDOCK

I'm sorry, son, but you must have me confused with someone else. My name is Roger Murdock. I'm the co-pilot.

He turns to Basta.

MURDOCK

Ah, Victor, why don't you get the coordinates on the altitude vector and find out the ratio of direct velocity over engine speed?

Victor is puzzled.

JOEY

You are Kareem. I've seen you play. My Dad's got season tickets!

MURDOCK

I think you should go back to your seat now, Joey. Right, Clarence?

OVEUR

No, he's not bothering anyone. Let him stay up here.

MURDOCK

All right. But just remember, my name is Roger Murdock.

He points to his nametag.

MURDOCK

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

I'm an airline pilot.

(to Oveur)

Ah, Clarence, according to my calculations, with this tailwind we ought to be able to make up an additional fifteen minutes over the Rockies.

JOEY

I think you're the greatest. But my Dad says you don't work hard enough on defense.

MURDOCK

(into microphone)

Denver Control, this is Flight two-zero-niner intersecting Victor Airway seven-niner-niner.

JOEY

...and that lots of times you don't even run down court.

MURDOCK

We are turning left to a heading of zero-niner-niner.

JOEY

...and that you don't really try, except during the playoffs.

MURDOCK

The hell I don't! I'm out there busting my buns every night.

Murdock realizes he has given himself away. He quickly looks to see if Oveur is listening. Oveur is busy checking instruments. Murdock grabs Joey by the collar and whispers angrily.

MURDOCK

Listen, kid, I've been hearing that crap ever since I was at UCLA. Tell your old man to drag Unseld and Lanier up and down the court for forty-eight minutes.

(into mike)

Ah...Denver Control, this is Flight two-zero-niner continuing on a heading two-niner-niner...niner, ah...niner...niner.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Elaine is seated next to Striker.

STRIKER

Elaine, just hear me out. I know things haven't been right for a long time. But it will be different...like it was in the beginning. Remember?

ELAINE

I remember everything. All I have are memories.

Soft MUSIC begins.

ELAINE

Mostly I remember...the nights when we were together. I remember how you used to hold me...and how I used to sit on your face and wriggle...and then afterwards how we'd watch until the sun came up. When it did, it was almost like...like each new day was created...only for us.

STRIKER

That's the way I've always wanted it to be, Elaine.

ELAINE

But it won't be. Not as long as you insist on living in the past!

Elaine leaves, teary-eyed.

STRIKER

Headquarters!? What is it?

ELAINE

It's a big building where the generals meet. But that's not important right now. They've cleared you of any blame for what happened on that raid. Isn't that good news?

STRIKER

Is it? Because of my mistake six men didn't return from that raid.

ELAINE

Seven. Lieutenant Zipp died this morning. Ted, Doctor Sandler says you'll be out in a week. Isn't that wonderful?

In the b.g., a doctor in a white lab coat is attending a patient. When he turns around WE SEE he is wearing an STP insignia on his back.

STRIKER

I wish I could say the same for George Zipp.

ELAINE

Be patient, Ted. No one expects you to get over this immediately.

Striker is despondent.

Randy approaches Sister Angelina. The guitar is on the seat next to her.

RANDY

Excuse me, Sister?

SISTER ANGELINA

Yes?

RANDY

There's a little girl on board who's ill and...

SISTER ANGELINA

Oh yes, I saw. Poor child.

RANDY

Could I borrow your guitar? I thought I might be able to cheer her up.

SISTER ANGELINA

Of course.

Randy takes the guitar and walks down the aisle. The guitar clonks people on the back of the head. Randy approaches Lisa.

RANDY

Is it all right if I talk to your daughter?

MRS. DAVIS

Oh, I think that would be nice.

RANDY

(to Lisa, who is reading)

Hi!

LISA

Hi!

RANDY

I'm Randy.

LISA

I'm Lisa. Oh, you have a guitar!

RANDY

I thought maybe you'd like to hear a song.

LISA

Oh, I'd love to.

RANDY

Okay, this is one of my favorites.

Randy is sitting on the edge of the gurney as she strums three opening chords.

RANDY

(strumming and singing in ballad tempo)

'I've traveled the banks of the River Jordan, to find where it flows to the sea.'

Stewardesses and passengers notice the singer and peer around corners and over seat backs. A man's head peers upside down from the TOP OF THE FRAME.

RANDY

'I looked in the eyes of the cold and the hungry and saw that I was looking at me.'

As singing continues, Shirley and Jack look at each other with saccherine smiles, the Hammens do the same, then the Krishnas, then the Black Dudes. Finally, everyone is smiling sweetly at each other.

Tempo Jumps to rock pace.

RANDY

'There is only one river. There is only one sea.'

Randy, in her growing enthusiasm, swings her guitar, knocking the I.V. connection tube from Lisa's arm. The I.V. squirts, and Lisa turns pale and hollowcheeked. No one else notices.

RANDY

'And it flows through you, and it flows through me. There is only one people, we

Lisa manages to reconnect her I.V.

RANDY

Mrs. Davis rushes to reconnect Lisa's I.V. Lisa doesn't react. Mrs. Davis pounds Lisa's chest.

RANDY & PASSENGERS

Hey, we've been waiting for you. A little bit late tonight.

ELAINE

Who wants to be first?

MURDOCK

Go ahead, Clarence, I got it.

Oveur removes his headset, Elaine puts tray down.

ELAINE

How's the weather?

MURDOCK

Not so good. We've got some heavy stuff ahead of us. It might get rough again unless we can climb on top. But our airspeed is holding steady at six hundred ten knots.

ELAINE

That's great. By the way, Joey Hammen asked me if you would autograph this basketball.

Murdock autographs it reluctantly.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

They had never seen Americans before.

When Striker and Elaine arrive, the CHIEF holds up his hands and the sounds stop.

STRIKER (v.o.)

At first, they didn't know what to think of us; but soon we gained their trust.

The Chief extends his right hand for conventional handshake. Striker shows him power grip. When the Chief is pleased, Striker gives him five. The Chief pauses then decks Striker.

Also, Supperware products are ideal for storing leftovers to help stretch your food dollar. This two quart "Seals-M-Rite" container with a special "Close-M-Tite" lid keeps hotdog buns fresh for days and prevents sugared cereals from sticking.

She scoops a ladle of corn mush from a carved wooden bowl into a Supperware container.

Striker demonstrates a two-handed set shot to natives. He misses.

STRIKER (v.o.)

No one had ever outlined a physical fitness program for them and they had no athletic equipment.

Another native hits a long jump shot.

STRIKER (v.o.)

The exercise improved their physical fitness and condition.

One shot after another swishes through the basketball rim.

STRIKER (v.o.)

My working with them seemed to reinforce our objectives of group cooperation and controlled-competitive activity.

Striker approaches Elaine who is standing on the sideline. As they talk, the natives are passing the ball around and shooting baskets Harlem Globetrotter fashion.

STRIKER

I think they're getting the hang of it!
When we re-enlist I'll teach them baseball!

ELAINE

Ted, I don't want to stay here. It's time for us to go back home -- to the plans we made before the war.

STRIKER

A lot of people made plans before the war.
Like George Zipp.

Elaine walks away, dejectedly. CAMERA STAYS with Striker as he pours Gator-Ade into a glass.

STRIKER (v.o.)

I guess it was at that moment that I first

She winces and nods.

DR. RUMACK

May I see your tongue, please?

She sticks her tongue out. Rumack pulls on it until it is obviously too long. He continues to pull, and the tongue becomes multi-colored magician's scarves. Then he pulls out a bouquet of flowers followed by a white dove.

DR. RUMACK

I'll be back in a minute.

Rumack takes Elaine aside.

DR. RUMACK

You'd better tell the Captain. We've got to land as soon as we can. This woman has to be gotten to a hospital.

ELAINE

Airplane Script at IMSDb.
A hospital? What is it?

DR. RUMACK

It's a big building with patients. But that's not important right now. Tell the Captain I must speak to him.

ELAINE

Certainly.

EXT. AIRPLANE - THUNDER AND LIGHTNING - NIGHT

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

OVEUR

(into mike)

Thank you, Omaha. Two-zero-niner out.

(to Basta)

Victor, we're running into a heavy storm, can you...

Oveur turns to see Basta slumped over the console.

Dramatic MUSIC.

OVEUR

Victor! Roger, take over!

Oveur lifts Basta onto ground.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Murdock, flying the plane alone, wipes his brow and appears ill.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - OUTSIDE COCKPIT DOOR - NIGHT

DR. RUMACK

Captain, how soon can we land?

OVEUR

I can't tell.

DR. ROMACK

You can tell me. I'm a doctor!

OVEUR

No. I mean I'm just not sure.

DR. RUMACK

Can't you take a guess?

OVEUR

Well...not for another two hours.

DR. RUMACK

You can't take a guess for another two hours?

OVEUR

No, I mean we can't land for another two hours. Fog has closed down everything this side of the mountains. We've got to go through to Chicago!

Suddenly, the plane rocks violently. Rumack and Oveur lose balance.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning -- plane is flying erratically.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Murdock, unconscious, is slumped over controls. Oveur and Rumack burst into cockpit. Oveur gets into pilot's seat. Elaine enters.

OVEUR

(excitedly)

Get him out of there!

INSERT - ALTIMETER AND FLIGHT CONTROLS

Altitude is fluctuating.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Oveur struggles with controls. They extricate Murdock from behind the wheel. He is wearing shorts, kneepads, and basketball shoes.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

climbing and diving.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers are being tossed about. A woman, applying lipstick, smears it over her face.

INSERT - LIGHTED SYMBOLS

-- cigarette with line slashed through, and couple copulating with line slashed through.

INT. CABIN - NIGHT

Randy loses her balance and shoves dinner into a passenger's face.

INT. COCKPIT - OVEUR - NIGHT

struggling with controls, finally regains level flight.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning -- plane levels off.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

The St. Christopher statue is holding a motion discomfort bag to its mouth.

OVEUR

What is it, Doctor? What's happening?

DR. RUMACK

I'm not sure. I haven't seen anything like this since the Lina Wertmuller Film Festival.

Rumack and Elaine are now standing face-to-face. Oveur, in the f.g., is at controls.

DR. RUMACK

What was it we had for dinner tonight?

ELAINE

Well, we had a choice. Steak or fish.

DR. RUMACK

Yes, yes, I remember. I had lasagna.

He points to Johnson.

DR. RUMACK

What did he have?

ELAINE

He had fish.

Randy enters cockpit.

RANDY

We have two more sick people, and the rest of the passengers are worried.

OVEUR

I'll take care of the passengers. Elaine, find out what the two sick people had for dinner.

(into P.A.)

This is Captain Oveur speaking.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers are listening to P.A.

OVEUR (v.o.)

It's been a little bumpy up here but we'll be past it in a few minutes.

Randy and Elaine drag Murodck and Basta down center aisle.

OVEUR (v.o.)

A couple points of interest: we're just now passing over the Hoover Dam and later on, our course will take us just south of the Grand Canyon.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

OVEUR

Meanwhile, relax and enjoy the rest of your flight. Okay? Okay!

He hangs up phone and turns to Rumack.

OVEUR

That should do it.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Absolute pandemonium. Passengers are yelling, screaming, tearing their hair out, climbing about.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

OVEUR

(into microphone)

Chicago, this is flight two-zero-niner. We're in trouble.

INT. O'HARE WEATHER CENTER - CLOSEUP - TYPEWRITER - NIGHT

CAMERA PULLS OUT to reveal DISPATCHER typing Oveur's message.

OVEUR (v.o.)

We've got to have all altitudes below us cleared and priority approach and landing in Chicago. Over.

DISPATCHER

We read you. Stand by, two-zero-niner.

When he tries to remove paper from typewriter, it rips in half.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Randy approaches Hammens. Mr. Hammen is sick.

RANDY

Yes?

MRS. HAMMEN

Oh, Stewardess. My husband is very sick.
Can you do something, please?

RANDY

Well, the doctor will be with you in just a moment. One thing: do you know what he had for dinner?

MRS. HAMMEN

Yes, of course. We both had fish. Why?

RANDY

Oh, it's nothing to be alarmed about.
We'll get back to you very quickly.

She turns to walk toward CAMERA with horrified expression.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Elaine enters, turns to face Rumack. Oveur is at controls in f.g.

ELAINE

Doctor Rumack, Mister Hammen ate fish. And Randy says there are five more cases, and they ate fish, too.

DR. RUMACK

Let's see now. The co-pilot had fish. What did the navigator eat?

ELAINE

He had fish, too.

Oveur is picking up on the conversation.

DR. RUMACK

All right, now we know what we're up against. Every passenger on this plane who ate fish for dinner will become violently ill within the next half hour.

Oveur looks down at his dinner tray and sees skeleton of the fish he just ate.

ELAINE

Just how serious is it, doctor?

DR. RUMACK

Extremely serious. It starts with a slight fever.

Oveur experiences what the doctor is describing.

DR. RUMACK

Then a dryness in the throat. As the virus penetrates the red blood cells the victim becomes dizzy and begins to experience a rash and itching. From there the poison works its way into the central nervous system causing severe muscle spasms, followed by the inevitable drooling. At this point, the entire digestive system is rendered useless, causing the complete collapse of the lower bowels, accompanied by uncontrollable flatulence...until finally the poor bastard is reduced to a quivering, wasted piece of jelly.

Oveur passes out and pitches forward onto the controls.
Rumack and Elaine lose balance as plane dives.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning as plane is diving.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers are being tossed about. A woman, applying rouge, smears it all over her face.

INT. CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - CLOSEUP - A PLATE OF JELLO wiggling. CAMERA PANS UP to braless woman whose breasts are wiggling.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

As they finally untangle Oveur from the wheel, he gains semi-consciousness.

OVEUR

(gasping)

Turn...on...automatic pilot.

Oveur passes out.

ELAINE

Uh, automatic pilot...automatic pilot?

INSERT - ELAINE'S POV - CONTROL PANEL - NIGHTELAINE

is frantically searching for automatic pilot button.

ELAINE

There it is!

INSERT - SWITCH MARKED "AUTOMATIC PILOT"

Elaine's hand tenuously reaches for and turns switch to "ON".

INT. COCKPIT - CO-PILOT'S SEAT - NIGHT

SOUND of rushing air as instantly inflatable balloon pilot takes shape in seat with hands on wheel. His uniform and cap are painted on, and he has an alert "leave the driving to us" expression on his face. The plane immediately regains level flight, and Elaine and Rumack sigh in relief.

DR. RUMACK

I'll get back to the passengers.

Rumack exits.

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

(over radio)

Come in two-zero-niner. This is Chicago.
Flight two-zero-niner, come in, please.

Elaine picks up mike while still standing.

ELAINE

This is Elaine Dickinson. I'm the stewardess. Captain Oveur is passed out on the floor, and we've lost the co-pilot and navigator, too. We're in terrible trouble.
Over.

OVEUR (o.s.)

Groan!

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Elaine! Roger, Roger! I read you. This is Steve McCroskey at Chicago Air Control.

ELAINE

Hi, Steve!

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Now listen carefully. Is the automatic pilot on? Over.

ELAINE

Yes. Yes, it is. Over.

OVEUR (o.s.)

Huh?

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Very good. Now, Elaine, where are you?
Over.

ELAINE

I'm standing over Oveur. Over.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

McCROSKEY

(into mike)

All right, Elaine. Just hold on. We'll be back to you in a minute.

CAMERA PULLS BACK to reveal dispatch is a beehive of activity. The Chief Dispatcher, STEVE McCROSKEY, is barking orders to AIR CONTROLLER #1.

McCROSKEY

Hold all takeoffs. I don't want another plane in the air. When the 508 reports, bring it straight in.

Air Controller #1 exits quickly. McCroskey picks up phone.

McCROSKEY

Put out a general bulletin to suspend all meal service on flights out of Los Angeles.

He hangs up phone and talks to AIR CONTROLLER #2.

McCROSKEY

Tell all dispatchers to remain at their posts. It's going to be a long night.

Air Controller #2 exits. McCroskey notices he is out of

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

coffee and turns to AIR CONTROLLER HINSHAW.

McCROSKEY

And how about some coffee, Johnny?

HINSHAW

No thanks.

AIR CONTROLLER #3 enters.

McCROSKEY

I want the weather on every landing field on this side of the Rockies, no matter what the size.

Air Controller #3 exits. AIR CONTROLLER #4 enters.

McCROSKEY

Do you understand?

Air Controller #4 exits. AIR CONTROLLER #5 enters.

McCROSKEY

Any place where there's a chance to land this plane.

Air Controller #5 exits. SIAMESE TWINS enter.

McCROSKEY

Stan, go upstairs to the tower and get a runway diagram. Terry, check down on the field for emergency equipment.

Siamese Twins leave. In the b.g. we see them trying to walk in opposite directions. Air Controller #1 enters.

AIR CONTROLLER #1

Chief, there's fog down to the deck everywhere east of the Rockies. There's no possible place they can land. They'll have to come through to Chicago.

McCROSKEY

Looks like I picked the wrong week to quit smoking.

He lights up a cigarette. McCroskey walks toward a table and leans on his hands.

McCROSKEY

I want the best available man on this. A man who knows this plane inside and out and won't crack under pressure.

HINSHAW

How about Sal Mineo?

McCROSKEY

Get me Rex Kramer!

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Lightning and THUNDER.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Elaine is in the pilot's seat and the inflated automatic pilot is in co-pilot's seat.

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Now, Elaine, right next to the throttle is the air speed gauge. What speed does it

ELAINE

Three hundred twenty miles per hour.

INSERT - AIR SPEED GAUGEBACK TO SCENE

We see, but Elaine does not notice, the automatic pilot very slowly beginning to deflate.

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Good. Now check your altitude. That's the dial just below and to the right of the air speed indicator.

ELAINE

Thirty-five thousand feet.

INSERT - ALTIMETER

Altitude is dropping.

BACK TO SCENEELAINE

No, wait. Now it says thirty-four thousand feet. It's dropping! It's dropping fast! Why is it doing that?

By now the automatic pilot is really slumped over as it is quite deflated. It is staring at her with a half smile. Elaine notices it.

ELAINE

Oh, my God! The automatic pilot! It's deflating!

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

All right, Elaine, don't worry. We have an auxiliary inflation system. Just follow my instructions.

ELAINE

Okay, but please hurry! We're dropping fast!

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers are being tossed about. Rumack is examining a female patient.

DR. RUMACK

What the hell's going on up there?

Rumack starts toward cockpit.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Now, Elaine, don't panic. On the belt line of the automatic pilot there is a hollow tube. Can you see that?

ELAINE

Yes. Yes, I can see it.

McCROSKEY (v.o.)

Good. Now that's the manual inflation nozzle. Pull it out and blow it up like a balloon.

Elaine kneels over automatic pilot's crotch, puts tube in her mouth and blows. Automatic pilot inflates. Rumack bursts into cockpit.

RUMACK'S POV

Back of automatic pilot with Elaine kneeling over its crotch.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - OUTSIDE OF COCKPIT - NIGHT

Rumack slams the door in disbelief.

CLOSEUP - AUTOMATIC PILOT

with a big smile on its face.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Passengers are relieved as plane regains level flight.

EXT. AIRPLANE - THROUGH COCKPIT WINDOW - NIGHT

Elaine and automatic pilot are relaxed in their seats. Both are smoking cigarettes.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Rumack enters.

DR. RUMACK

Elaine, you're a member of this crew. Can you face some unpleasant facts?

ELAINE

No.

DR. RUMACK

All right. Unless I can get all these people to a hospital quickly, I can't even be sure of saving their lives. Now, is there anyone else on board who can land this plane?

ELAINE

Well...

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Striker, struggling with drinking problem, pours drink between his cheek and ear.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

ELAINE

No. No one that I know of.

DR. RUMACK

I think you ought to know what our chances are. The life of everyone on board depends on just one thing: finding someone back there who not only can fly this plane, but who didn't have fish for dinner.

CAMERA ZOOMS into CLOSEUP of Elaine's face as she realizes the severity of the situation.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers are listening to P.A.

ELAINE (v.o.)

Ladies and gentlemen, this is your stewardess speaking. We regret any inconvenience the sudden cabin movement might have caused.

Randy drags unconscious pilot, Oveur, down center aisle.

ELAINE (v.o.)

This is due to periodic air pockets we encounter. There is no reason to become alarmed, and we hope you enjoy the rest of your flight. By the way, is there anyone on board who knows how to fly a plane?

Absolute pandemonium. Passengers are yelling, screaming, tearing their hair out and climbing around. A naked woman runs down the aisle. Sister Mary is choking a Krishna. Two passengers are dueling with swords. A Spanish-speaking lady waits for her husband to translate the announcement, then panics.

INT. KRAMER'S HOUSE

SOUND of car screeching to a stop. PAUL CAREY, twenty-four year-old, cleancut, naive-looking, navigator trainee enters and pushes doorbell. We HEAR the typical eight-note chime progression. The CHIMES then play the Air Force Fight song. A dog BARKS and MRS. KRAMER opens the door.

CAREY

Hello, I'm Paul Carey from the airline. I'm here to pick up Captain Kramer.

MRS. KRAMER

Oh, yes. Come in, Paul. Rex will be right out.

INT. KRAMER'S HOUSE - NIGHT

When Carey enters, a big dog jumps on him with its paws on his chest.

MRS. KRAMER

Shep, sit...sit! So, I understand you've got a real emergency down there.

CAREY

(holding off dog)

Well, to tell the truth, they really didn't fill me in on many of the details. Just told me to pick up Captain Kramer.

MRS. KRAMER

Something about a plane with no pilot?

Carey begins to lose battle with the dog, while trying to remain polite.

CAREY

Yeah, something like that, but as I say, they didn't have time to tell me very much.

MRS. KRAMER

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

Shep, no! I'll bet you have exciting things happen all the time down there.

Shep is growling and Carey's arm is locked firmly in his Jaws.

CAREY

Well...the airline business...does have... its moments...

Shep pins Carey against the wall, ripping his sleeve.

CAREY

...but after...awhile...you begin to...
(gasp)
...get used to it.

MRS. KRAMER

Shep, no! He gets so excited when new people are here.

We hear a THUD and loud growling.

MRS. KRAMER

Are you a pilot yourself?

Carey is on the floor desperately fighting off the dog, which is on top of him.

CAREY

I'm...in a...argh...navigator training program.

KRAMER enters, buttoning his coat.

KRAMER

It's unbelievable! How many times have I warned those people about food inspection?

Kramer is tying his tie in the mirror. In the corner of the mirror, Carey is being thrashed by the dog.

KRAMER

The airport management, the F.A.A., and the airlines, they're all cheats and liars! All right, let's get out of here.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Randy is talking to Krishnas.

RANDY

Sorry to bother you. We were just looking for someone with flying experience.

Randy exits. They return to reading their PLAYRAMA magazine with a female Hari Krishna in a sexy pose on the cover.

HARI KRISHNA #1

Hari Rama?

HARI KRISHNA #2

Rama Rama.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Striker is sitting next to a MAN FROM INDIA in a business suit and turban.

STRIKER

You see, the day we left the village it was raining, so we had to take a special jeep to the main road...

The Indian is dousing himself with a can of gasoline. In b.g. Randy is talking to passengers.

STRIKER

In fact, we were lucky to even get a jeep since just the day before the only one we had broke down -- it had a bad axle...

The Indian lights a match to immolate himself. Randy approaches.

RANDY

Excuse me, sir. There's been a little problem in the cockpit and I was wondering...

STRIKER

The cockpit? What is it?

RANDY

It's the little room at the front of the plane where the pilots sit. But that's not important right now. The first officer is ill and the Captain would like someone with flying experience to help him with the radio. Do you know anything about planes?

The Indian holds the match, awaiting the outcome.

STRIKER

Well, I flew in the war, but that was a long time ago. I wouldn't know anything about it.

RANDY

Would you go up, please?

He has a moment of indecision. The Indian encourages Striker with an adamant nod. Striker gets up to leave. The Indian, relieved, blows out the match.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Jack is sitting across the aisle from a 65-year-old conservatively dressed SPINSTER. He pulls a flask from his coat pocket and takes a swig. She eyes him disapprovingly.

JACK

Would ya like a little whiskey, ma'am?

SPINSTER

(insulted)
Certainly not.

She inserts a two inch straw in her nose and snorts a couple lines of cocaine off a piece of glass.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker enters.

STRIKER

(to Rumack and Randy)
The stewardess said...

STRIKER'S POV

Empty pilot's seat and inflated automatic pilot.

STRIKER

Both pilots!

DR. RUMACK

Can you fly this airplane and land it?

STRIKER

Surely you can't be serious.

DR. RUMACK

I am serious, and don't call me Shirley!
What flying experience have you had?

STRIKER

Well, I flew single-engine fighters in the Air Force, but this plane has four engines. It's an entirely different kind of flying...all together!!!

RANDY/RUMACK

(all together)

It's an entirely different kind of flying.

STRIKER

Besides, I haven't touched any kind of plane in six years.

DR. RUMACK

Mister Striker. I know nothing about flying. All I know is this: you're the only person on this plane who can possibly fly it. You're the only chance we've got.

DRAMATIC MUSIC as Striker turns to face the controls.

STRIKER'S POV

CAMERA PANS controls. CAMERA KEEPS PANNING and PANNING as WE SEE more and more controls ad absurdum.

EXT. LAX PASSENGER LOADING AREA - NIGHT

INSERT METER - $115.25. The businessman in Striker's cab checks his watch.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHTMcCROSKEY

(to Air Controller)

Tell Omaha to acknowledge and standby.

(into phone)

Get every piece of emergency equipment you can reach.

(to Air Controller)

Alert at every mile of the way from here to the mountains.

Hinshaw grabs Air Controller #1's tummy.

HINSHAW

Would anyone care for a roll and coffee?

Phone RINGS.

AIR CONTROLLER #2

Chief?

McCROSKEY

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

We'll need a pre-landing flight check.
Tell 'em I'm in the dispatch office and I want it here fast.

AIR CONTROLLER #2

It's your wife.

MCCROSKEY

(into phone)

I want the kids in bed by nine. I want the dog fed, the yard watered, and the gate locked. And get a note to the milkman -- no more cheese!

He slams down the phone. He leans his hands on the desk.

MCCROSKEY

Where the hell is Kramer?

On the wall behind him there is a picture of McCroskey leaning his hands on a desk.

INT. CAR - NIGHT

Kramer and a mutilated Carey are en route to airport. Kramer is at the wheel. Through rear window is obvious REAR PROJECTION of passing road.

KRAMER

(into phone)

No, we can't do that; the risk of a flameout is too great. Keep him 24,000.
No, feet!

He hangs up phone.

KRAMER

One of the passengers is going to land that plane.

CAREY

Is that possible?

KRAMER

Possible, but it's a hundred to one shot.
Thousand to one. I know this guy.

CAREY

You do? Who is it?

We hear A THUNK. REAR PROJECTION shows he has run over a bicyclist, who stands and gives the finger.

KRAMER

His name is Ted Striker. I flew with him during the war. And that won't make my job any easier tonight.

REAR PROJECTION SPEEDS UP to obvious FAST MOTION.

KRAMER

Ted Striker was a crack flight leader up to a point. But he was one of those men who, well, let's just say he felt too much inside. Maybe you know the kind.

Now REAR PROJECTION indicates car is turning and then weaving, but Kramer does not move wheel.

KRAMER

It takes a certain type to perform under pressure. Striker didn't have it.

By now REAR PROJECTION is cowboys and Indians on horseback chasing and shooting at Kramer's car.

KRAMER

Ate his heart out over every name on the casualty lists. The upshot of it is that he went all to pieces on one particular mission. Let's just hope it doesn't happen again tonight.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker is in pilot's seat. Rumack is standing behind him.

STRIKER

Let's see, altitude twenty-four thousand feet, level flight, air speed four hundred sixty knots, course zero niner zero, trim, mixture, landing gear, balance.

Elaine enters.

ELAINE

Ted! What are you doing? You can't fly this plane!

STRIKER

That's what I've been trying to tell these people.

DR. RUMACK

Elaine, I haven't time to put this gently, so I'll be very direct. Everyone of us on this plane is in a desperate situation. Mister Striker is the only hope we've got.

STRIKER

Let's see. Those are the flaps, that's the thrust, this must turn on the landing lights.

He flips a switch. The plane dives.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

The plane is diving.

INT. LAVATORY - JACK

Jack is standing at toilet. He is jolted back and forth against the walls.

INSERT - SIGN

flashing:

RETURN TO SEAT

GOBACKEN SIDONNA

INT. COCKPIT NIGHT

STRIKER

(into mike)

Mayday!

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

STRIKER (v.o.)

Mayday! Mayday!

MCCROSKEY

(surprised)

Mayday? What the hell is that for?

HINSHAW

It's the Russian New Year! We'll have a parade! They'll serve hot hors d'oeuvres!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker flips switch and rights plane.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Level flight.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

MCCROSKEY (v.o.)

Two-zero-niner, are you okay up there?

STRIKER

Yeah, I was just trying out the landing lights.

Elaine and Rumack exchange glances.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

MRS. HAMMEN

I've got to get out of here! I can't stand it! I've got to get out of here!

Randy pushes up and shakes Mrs. Hammen by the shoulders.

RANDY

Calm down. Get hold of yourself!

JACK

Stewardess, let me handle this.

Randy leaves, Jack shakes Mrs. Hammen by the shoulders.

JACK

Get hold of yourself! Get hold of yourself!

DR. RUMACK

(to Jack)

Get back to your seat; I'll take care of this.

Jack leaves; Rumack shakes Mrs. Hammen by the shoulders.

DR. RUMACK

Calm down. Calm down. Get hold of yourself!

Sister Angelina taps Rumack on the shoulder.

SISTER ANGELINA

(to Rumack)

Doctor, you're wanted on the phone.

Sister Angelina starts shaking Mrs. Hammen.

SISTER ANGELINA

Everything will be all right. Please get hold of yourself.

We see a line of passengers behind Sister Angelina waiting to shake Mrs. Hammen.

EXT. AIRFIELD - SIGN - NIGHT

reads: CHICAGO INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT OVER 16 BILLION PLANES LANDED

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

As Kramer rushes through the lobby, he is approached by a series of religious zealots. In quick succession he decks each one karate style, shooting the last zealot twenty feet away with a .44 Magnum.

INT. TERMINAL BUILDING - LONG SHOT - NIGHT

P.A. #1 (v.o.)

Your attention, please. Flight four-one-seven now departing the B Concourse, gate six.

P.A. #2 (v.o.)

Your attention, please. Flight twenty-seven now arriving the B Concourse, gate six.

There is a LOUD CRASH, and the SCENE SHAKES.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

AIR CONTROLLER #1

(into phone)

This guy doing the flying has no airline experience at all. He'll be a menace to himself and everything else in the air...

(he pauses to listen)

...Yes, birds too.

Kramer enters, picks up clipboard, and reads it.

MCCROSKEY

(into phone)

Okay, okay. He's a terrible risk, but what other choice have we got?

McCroskey hangs up phone.

MCCROSKEY

Well, that's the whole story, Rex, everything we know.

KRAMER

All right, Steve, let's face a few facts.

Kramer whips off his sunglasses. Underneath is another pair of sunglasses.

KRAMER

As you know, I flew with this man, Striker, during the war. He'll have enough on his mind without remembering those days when -- well, when things weren't so good.

MCCROSKEY

Well, right now things aren't so good. And while we're talking there are a hundred and thirty-eight lives waiting on us for a decision.

KRAMER

Let me tell you something, Steve. Striker was a top-notch squadron leader -- a long

A spear slams into the wall behind Kramer.

KRAMER

...but my feeling is that when the going gets rough upstairs tonight, Ted Striker's gonna fold up.

MCCROSKEY

Look, Rex -- I want you to get on the horn and talk this guy down! You're going to have to let him get the feel of this airplane on the way; you'll have to talk him onto the approach; and so help me, you'll have to talk him right down to the ground!

A watermelon falls from TOP OF FRAME, splattering on the table.

KRAMER

Very well then. Put Striker on the speaker.

MCCROSKEY

Okay, you can use the radio over there. Looks like I picked the wrong week to quit drinking.

He pulls a flask from the drawer and takes a swig.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

Kramer at dispatch radio. He picks up mike.

KRAMER

Striker, Striker, this is Captain Rex Kramer speaking.

McCroskey joins Kramer at dispatch radio.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

DRAMATIC MUSIC as we see Striker's ominous look of recognition.

STRIKER

(dramatically)

Yes, Captain Kramer. Read you loud and clear.

INT. DISPATCH - NIGHT

Kramer sits at the mike. An Air Controller is standing next to him, but only his mid-section is in FRAME.

KRAMER

All right. It's obvious you remember me.

The Air Controller is scratching his behind.

KRAMER

So what do you say you and I just forget about everything except what we have to do now?

The Air Controller is now scratching his crotch.

KRAMER

You and I are going to bring this plane in together.

The Air Controller's hand is now inside his pants straightening out his underwear.

KRAMER

Before we start, I'd like to say something. I know that right now things must look pretty rough up there.

The Air Controller is now hopping around with both hands inside his pants.

KRAMER

But if you do what I tell you, when I tell you to do it, there's no reason you can't bring that plane in.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

STRIKER

Let's not kid each other, Kramer. You know I've never flown a bucket like this. I'm going to need all the luck there is.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

KRAMER

Stand by, Striker.
(to McCroskey)
The one hope we have is to build this man up. I've got to give him all the confidence I can.
(into microphone)
All right, Striker, have you ever flown a multi-engine plane before?

STRIKER (v.o.)

No. Never.

KRAMER

Shit!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker over hears conversation on radio.

KRAMER (v.o.)

This is a goddamn waste of time. There's no way he can land this plane! Route 'em into Lake Michigan and at least avoid killing innocent people!

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

MCCROSKEY

Grab hold of yourself! You've got to talk them down. You're the only chance they've got!

Kramer lights cigarette.

KRAMER

(into mike)
All right, Striker, now you listen to me and you listen close. Flying is no different than riding a bicycle...it just happens to be a lot harder to put baseball cards in the spokes. Now, if you just follow my instructions...

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Two vultures are sitting on back of Striker's seat.

KRAMER (v.o.)

...there's no reason why you shouldn't have complete confidence in your chances to come out of this thing alive and in one piece.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

KRAMER

First, I want you to familiarize yourself with the controls. Later we'll run through the landing procedure.

Kramer takes a last drag on his cigarette and tosses it out the window. McCroskey plugs his ears with his fingers and ducks as though Kramer had thrown a grenade. There is an EXPLOSION O.S.

KRAMER

All right. Now I'd like you to disengage the automatic pilot. But watch any violent movement of the controls, like you used to make in Spitfires and Phantoms.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

STRIKER

(into microphone)

Okay, I'm going to unlock the automatic pilot.

Striker switches off automatic pilot button. Automatic pilot shoots upward out of the seat. Elaine is thrown to the floor. Striker struggles desperately to control the plane.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

flying erratically.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

KRAMER (v.o.)

(matter of factly)

Just remember, the controls will feel very heavy compared to a fighter.

Striker is fighting the wheel and the autopilot which is drifting in his way. Finally, he throws the autopilot to the rear of the cockpit.

KRAMER (v.o.)

Don't worry about that. It's perfectly normal. You must watch your airspeed closely. Don't let it fall below 520. Both your rudder pedals and elevator trim will have additional play due to increased drag, but you can compensate by lowering manifold pressure below 154. Now there's one other thing. Have you someone up there who can work the radio and leave you free for flying?

STRIKER

Yes! The stewardess is here with me!

Elaine rises. The autopilot is on her back, its hands clinging to her breasts. She removes it and seats it at engineer's console.

KRAMER (v.o.)

Have her take the co-pilot's seat.

Elaine takes her seat as Striker regains control of the plane. He hands Elaine the mike.

STRIKER

The radio's all yours now. And keep an eye on that number three engine. It's running a little hot.

INSERT - NUMBER THREE ENGINE GAUGE

A LITTLE HOT is blinking.

BACK TO INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

KRAMER (v.o.)

Striker, what kind of weather are you in up there?

ELAINE

(into microphone)

Rain.

STRIKER

And a little ice.

ELAINE

And a little ice!

KRAMER (v.o.)

How's it handling?

STRIKER

Sluggish. Like a wet sponge.

ELAINE

(into microphone)

Sluggish. Like a wet sponge.

KRAMER (v.o.)

(patronizing)

All right, Striker, you're doing just fine.

STRIKER

(to Elaine)

It's a damn good thing he doesn't know how much I hate his guts.

ELAINE

(into microphone)

It's a damn good thing you don't know how much he hates your guts.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

A Black Dude is holding his stomach in pain.

BLACK DUDE

Oooooooh.

Randy approaches.

RANDY

Can I get something for you?

BLACK DUDE

Cain fo' gwine sho fi cun for.

RANDY

I'm sorry. I don't understand.

MRS. SCHIFF, a middle-aged woman, is seated behind the Black Dudes.

MRS. SCHIFF

Oh, stewardess, I can speak jive. He said he's in great pain and wants to know if you can help him.

RANDY

Tell him to relax and I'll be back as quickly as I can with some medicine.

Randy exits.

MRS. SCHIFF

Shi gwine man chitlun down for mo sho.

BLACK DUDE

(indignantly)

Shi man I ain neba mo fo gwine ain.

They engage in an argument in jive talk, with Mrs. Schiff getting the best of it. She swaggers off in typical black dude fashion.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Sister Angelina is singing to the Krishnas.

SISTER ANGELINA

'...I sit by the telephone for hours. I love when men send me flowers. I enjoy being a girl.'

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Jack is comforting an ailing Shirley. She is perspiring.

JACK

How ya doing, honey?

SHIRLEY

Oh Jack, I'm so warm. I'm burning up.

JACK

Here.

He reaches up and opens the overhead air nozzle. Air rushes out with hurricane force. As Jack struggles to turn off nozzle, Shirley is blown about, an adjacent passenger's papers go flying from a briefcase, a Hari Krishna's toga flies up revealing polka dot boxer shorts. An extra's toupe flies off.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

SOFT MUSIC.

MILTON

After my wife died, I felt like a fifth wheel. You know, so many years being with one person -- a very wonderful person -- makes you always think of yourself as part of a pair...When Ethel passed away, I was lost. I couldn't function socially and I couldn't function in business.

BERNICE

Well, after a thing like that you wouldn't be expected to.

MILTON

But I think it's time we stopped talking about me. A woman like you -- why haven't you ever married?

BERNICE

Well, I'm afraid that's a question that's all too easy to answer.

MILTON

I know the answer -- Career. A smart woman like you became so involved in your work, you didn't have time for marriage.

BERNICE

I wish I could fool myself into believing that that's the reason. The truth of the matter is, nobody ever asked me.

MILTON

You know, here we are having coffee together, and discussing education and business and economy...and we don't even know each other's names...full names I mean.

BERNICE

Mine's Eleanor. Eleanor Schiff.

MILTON

That's a lovely name. Mine's Milton...Milt Ettenhenim. But my friends call me 'Bubbles.'

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Randy approaches Mrs. Schiff.

RANDY

Would you care for a soft drink?

MRS. SCHIFF

I'd be glad to.

Randy hands a large bottle of Coca Cola wrapped in a baby blanket to Ms. Schiff, who cradles it in her arms.

MRS. SCHIFF

Ooooh, such a nice soft drink.

INT. O'HARE WEATHER CENTER - CLOSEUP ON TYPEWRITER

CAMERA PULLS OUT to reveal Dispatcher typing message.

RADIO (v.o.)

National Weather Service reporting Omaha fogged in. Visibility zero.

The Dispatcher attempts to remove the message, but it is stuck in the cartridge. He yanks on it, but the paper stretches out like rubber. The scene now becomes like a cartoon. He lodges his feet against the typewriter and pulls until the paper stretches to his face. He grumbles in Donald Duck voice. The typewriter snaps back and hits him.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHTMcCROSKEY

(to Air Controller #2)

Macias, get me Captain Oveur's wife on the phone. We'd better let her know what's going on.

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

Air Controller #1 rushes in holding a piece of paper and hands it to McCroskey.

AIR CONTROLLER #1

Steve, this weather bulletin just came off the wire.

McCroskey frowns and hands it to Hinshaw.

MCCROSKEY

Johnny, what can you make out of this?

HINSHAW

This? Why, I could make a hat or a broach...

McCroskey grabs the note from him.

INT. BEDROOM - NIGHT

MRS. OVEUR is in bed. Phone on night table RINGS. She reaches for it sleepily.

MRS. OVEUR

Hello?

AIR CONTROLLER #2 (v.o.)

Missus Oveur?

MRS. OVEUR

Yes, this is Missus Oveur.

AIR CONTROLLER #2 (v.o.)

This is Ed Macias calling from the airport. There's some trouble on your husband's flight.

SHOT WIDENS to reveal she is sleeping with a horse.

AIR CONTROLLER #2 (v.o.)

We don't know how serious it is yet, but Harry Ballard thought you'd want to get down here right away.

MRS. OVEUR

I'll be right down.

She hangs up the phone and rises.

MRS. OVEUR

I've got to go to the airport. You can let yourself out the back door. There's juice in the refrigerator.

HORSE

(sounding like Mr. Ed)

Did you finish? Was I good?

MRS. OVEUR

Oh, you're all so concerned about performance!

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning; turbulent weather.

INT. CABIN - NIGHT

Randy approaches Mrs. Schiff, who is caring for a drink.

RANDY

Would you care for another drink?

MRS. SCHIFF

No, thank you, I'm still nursing this one.

She is bottle feeding the Coke bottle.

MRS. SCHIFF

(to bottle)

There, just a little bit more -- and then burpie time and a good nap!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Elaine hangs up phone.

ELAINE

Doctor Rumack says the sick people are getting worse and we're running out of time.

Striker is perspiring.

STRIKER'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

(echoing)

I've got to concentrate, concentrate, entrate, I've got to concentrate, oncentrate, oncentrate.

He becomes aware of ECHO.

STRIKER'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

(echoing)

Hell, hello, ello, ello, ello, lo, lo.
Echo, echo, echo, cho, cho, o, o, o, o, o.
Pinch hitting for Pedro Bourbone, Manny
Mota, Mota, Mota, Mota.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Nose down.

ELAINE (v.o.)

(hysterically)

Ted, the altitude! We're falling, we're falling!

INSERT - GAUGE INDICATING DROPPING ALTITUDE

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning. Flying nose down.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

A Woman applying eye makeup, smears it over her face.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

DRAMATIC MUSIC as Striker is struggling with the controls. Windshield wipers are moving as though directing music. St. Christopher statue is holding an umbrella. Striker regains control of the plane.

INT. CABIN ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

JACK

(to Rumack)

What's going on? We have a right to know the truth!

DR. RUMACK

(to passengers)

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

All right. I'm going to level with you.
The most important thing now is that you should all be calm, because there's no reason to panic.

Rumack's nose elongates slightly.

DR. RUMACK

Now, it is true that one of the flight crew has been taken ill...slightly ill.

His nose is getting longer.

DR. RUMACK

But the other two pilots are just fine and at the controls flying the plane.

Rumack's nose is a foot long.

DR. RUMACK

The weather in Chicago is clear as a bell, and there's no reason that we won't land on schedule...

ANGLE

Passengers listening. His nose grows THROUGH FRAME.

DR. RUMACK

...safe and sound and free to pursue a life of religious fulfillment.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

STRIKER

(into microphone)

Chicago, the passengers are beginning to panic. When do we start down?

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

KRAMER

(into microphone)

Not just yet, we'll have you in radar range any second now.

EXT. O'HARE AIRPORT - REVOLVING RADAR ANTENNA - NIGHT

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

KRAMER

(to McCroskey)

I don't understand it. He should have been in range ten minutes ago.

MCCROSKEY

(into microphone)

Gunderson, check the radar range. Anything yet?

INT. RADAR ROOM

GUNDERSON opens door of Amana Radar Range and peers in.
There is a turkey inside.

GUNDERSON

(into microphone)

About two more minutes, Chief.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

MCCROSKEY

Two more minutes! They could be miles off course.

KRAMER

That's impossible. They're on instruments!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Elaine, Randy, Rumack, and Striker are playing trumpet, clarinet, saxophone and bass fiddle in Benny Goodman swing band style.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

KRAMER

This is gonna be a real sweat.

(into mike)

Gunderson, let me know when you get anything.

McCROSKEY

I can't take much more of this! Johnny, how about some more coffee?

HINSHAW

Would you like half of my provolone and roast beef?

McCROSKEY

Looks like I picked the wrong week to quit amphetamines.

He pops a couple pills. Fifteen REPORTERS, Cameramen, etc. enter with Air Controller #1.

AIR CONTROLLER #1

(to McCroskey)

Steve, these reporters won't leave without a statement.

REPORTER #1

How much longer can the sick passengers hold out?

McCROSKEY

Half hour...maybe forty-five minutes.

REPORTER #2

Who's flying the plane?

Air Controller #2 enters and hands McCroskey a note. Hands holding microphones are thrust INTO FRAME in front of McCroskey. One hand is holding an ice cream cone.

McCROSKEY

One of the passengers. But he's an experienced air force pilot who flew during the war so there's no cause for alarm. Hinshaw, take over.

McCroskey exits.

REPORTER #3

Have the families been notified?

HINSHAW

I think Florence Henderson knows about it!

REPORTER #1

What are the chances of bringing this plane in safely?

HINSHAW

What are the chances of returning something to Montgomery Ward the week after Christmas?

REPORTER #1

STRIKER

Yes, everything they've got. How are the passengers doing?

DR. RUMACK

I won't deceive you, Mister Striker. We're running out of time.

STRIKER

Surely there must be something you can do.

DR. RUMACK

I'm doing everything I can! -- And stop calling me Shirley!

Rumack leaves.

STRIKER'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

I've got to stay calm. If I can just keep my wits about me, I can't mess this one up.

ELAINE'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

Maybe I have been too harsh with him. If I had given him more support in the beginning, maybe things would be different.

STRIKER'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

Forget it. It's not your fault.

ELAINE'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

That's sweet of you, Ted. I appreciate the thought.

We hear both of their thoughts simultaneously.

STRIKER'S

THOUGHTS (v.o.)

You know, Elaine, I just wanted to tell you...

ELAINE'S

THOUGHTS (v.o.)

It's just that I feel so helpless and...

STRIKER'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

ELAINE'S THOUGHTS (v.o.)

No, no. You were first.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Jack is seated across the aisle from Mrs. Hammen. He falls asleep and slumps over.

MRS. HAMMEN

(hysterically)

He's dead. He's dead!

Jack wakes up. Disgustedly:

JACK

No, I'm not dead.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

When you come home.'

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - STEWARDESS' ALCOVE - NIGHT

Rumack pours a cup of water. Randy begins to weep.

DR. RUMACK

Randy, are you all right?

RANDY

Doctor Rumack, I'm scared. I've never been so scared. And besides, I'm twenty-six and I'm not married.

DR. RUMACK

Randy, we're going to make it. You've got to believe that.

Mrs. Hammen enters alcove.

MRS. HAMMEN

Lorison, do you have any idea when we'll be landing?

DR. RUMACK

It will be pretty soon. How are you bearing up?

MRS. HAMMEN

Well, to be honest, I'm very scared. But at least I've got a husband.

EXT. AIRPORT - NIGHT

Revolving radar antenna.

INT. CHICAGO WEATHER CENTER - CLOSEUP of typewriter. CAMERA PULLS OUT to REVEAL Dispatcher typing message.

RADIO (v.o.)

National Weather Service reporting Chicago ceiling zero, visibility one hundred feet.

With great care the Dispatcher turns the knob on carriage until the paper comes out clean. Relishing his victory, he talks in Donald Duck voice.

DISPATCHER

Oh boy, oh boy, oh boy.

As he starts toward the door, the room caves in on him.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

McCroskey and Kramer are at watercooler. McCroskey is filling cup while Kramer drinks.

McCROSKEY

Rex, I've decided that the best thing to do is to foam the runway -- let him do a wheels-up landing. It'd be a lot simpler.

Kramer throws cup into wastebasket. McCroskey drinks.

KRAMER

(filling up another cup)

No, the risk of fire is too great. If she starts burning, you write off all those people who can't get out of there on their own power.

McCroskey throws cup into wastebasket. Kramer drinks.

McCROSKEY

(filling up another cup)

Well that's better than writing them all off? Are you going to play God with a hundred and 38 lives?

Kramer throws cup into wastebasket as McCroskey drinks.

KRAMER

(filling up another cup)

No. A belly landing isn't all that simple. It takes a good pilot to keep from smearin' himself all over the runway.

McCroskey throws cup into wastebasket as Kramer drinks.

McCROSKEY

(filling up another cup)

If Striker has the guts to try this, he deserves the best shot we can give him. We've gotta foam that runway.

Kramer throws cup into wastebasket as McCroskey drinks.

KRAMER

(taking another cup)

His only shot's with the wheels down. I've seen foam tear a man's guts out.

McCroskey throws cup into wastebasket. Kramer throws cup into wastebasket.

McCROSKEY

And if Striker goes to pieces?

KRAMER

(taking another cup)

That's a risk we'll just have to take.

Kramer throws cup into wastebasket. McCroskey throws cup into wastebasket. They burp.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker is looking at controls. Lightning is flashing on his face.

INSERT - ALTIMETER

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

SUPERIMPOSE fighter plane. Then STOCK FOOTAGE of early experimental planes crashing.

Stay in formation. Targets just ahead.
Target should be clear if you go in low

(echoing)

You'll have to decide. You'll have to decide...So, decide already.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Sudden dramatic MUSIC. The cockpit shakes. Engine number three is flaming out.

INSERT - CONTROL PANEL - GAUGE FOR ENGINE #3

BACK TO SCENE

STRIKER

Rats! I've lost number three.

ELAINE

What happened, Ted? What went wrong?

STRIKER

Oil pressure. I forgot to check the oil pressure. When Kramer hears about this, the shit's gonna hit the fan.

INT. DISPATCH - CLOSEUP - FAN - NIGHT

The shit hits it. PULL BACK to include:

KRAMER

I told him to watch that oil temperature.
What the hell's he doing up there?

He picks up the mike.

KRAMER

Striker, that plane can't land itself! It takes a pilot who can handle pressure.

MCCROSKEY

Ease up, Rex! He hasn't flown for years!
It's not his fault. It could happen to any pilot.

HINSHAW

It happened to Barbara Stanwyck!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

STRIKER

He's right. I can't take the pressure. I was crazy to think I could land this plane.

ELAINE

But Ted, you're the only...

STRIKER

I don't care. I just don't have what it takes. They'd be better off with someone who'd never flown before.

As Striker leaves he puts autopilot into pilot's seat.
Elaine is on the verge of tears.

DRAMATIC MUSIC.

INT. DISPATCH - NIGHT

Air Controller #2 enters.

AIR CONTROLLER #2

Bad news. The fog's getting thicker.

HINSHAW

And Liz Taylor is getting larger!

MCCROSKEY

Ya know, this would be a tough landing for anyone to make. Maybe, if we hold them off for a bit we'll get a break in the weather.

KRAMER

All right, but let's wait until they reach the control area.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Outside stewardess' alcove. Striker fills a cup from drinking fountain then pours it on his head. He sits down dejectedly on stewardess' fold-out seat. Rumack approaches.

STRIKER

I know what you're going to say, so save your breath.

Rumack sits.

DR. RUMACK

No. I haven't a thing to say. You've done the best you could. You really have. The best you could. I guess we can't expect to win 'em all. I want to tell you something I've kept to myself for years. I was in the war myself -- the Medical Corps. I was on duty late one night when a badly wounded pilot was brought in from a raid. He could barely talk, but he looked at me and he said, "Doc. The odds were against us up there but we went in anyway, and I'm glad we did. The captain made the right decision." The pilot's name was George Zipp.

Striker looks up. Notre Dame Fight Song is heard in b.g.

STRIKER

George Zipp said that?

DR. RUMACK

And the last thing he said to me, "Doc," he said, "Sometime when the crew is up against it and the breaks are beating the boys, tell them to go out there with all they've got and win just one for the Zipper. I don't know where I'll be then, Doc," he said, "but I won't smell too good. That's for sure."

STRIKER

(rejuvenated)

Excuse me, Doc, I've got a plane to land.

Striker boldly starts toward cockpit.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker enters. Elaine, unaware of his return, is listening to Kramer on the radio.

KRAMER (v.o.)

All right, you'd better stay up there for a bit. As soon as the fog lifts, we'll bring you in.

STRIKER

I'll take it, Elaine.

She turns to face him. A dramatic moment. Striker enters pilot seat and takes mike from Elaine's hand.

STRIKER

Listen to me, Kramer. Doctor Rumack says the sick people are in critical condition and every minute counts. We've got to land now!

KRAMER (v.o.)

Don't be a fool, Striker. You know what a landing like this means. You more than anybody. I'm ordering you to stay up there!

STRIKER

No dice, Chicago. I'm giving the orders, and we're coming in...I guess the foot's on the other hand now, isn't it, Kramer?

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

McCROSKEY

He'll never bring it down in this soup. Never! Not one chance in a million.

KRAMER

I know. I know. But it's his ship now, his command; he's in charge, he's the boss, the head man, the top dog, the big cheese, the head honcho...

Air Controller #2 rushes up to McCroskey and Kramer, carrying a newspaper.

AIR CONTROLLER #2

Chief, look at this!

Kramer grabs newspaper.

KRAMER

(reading)

'Passengers Certain to Die?!?!?!?!'

McCROSKEY

'Airline Negligent?!?!?!?!'

He hands the paper to Hinshaw.

HINSHAW

(looking at newspaper)

There's a sale at Penny's!

McCroskey grabs paper from Hinshaw.

KRAMER

(to men in Dispatch)

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

All right, I'll need three men up in the tower.

(pointing)

You, Neubauer. You, Macias.

HINSHAW

Me John. Big tree.

He puts his ear to the ground.

HINSHAW

Wagon train comes three, maybe four day away.

KRAMER

(into microphone)

Stand by, Striker. I'm going to the tower.
And good luck.

Kramer exits.

MCCROSKEY

(into phone)

We're going to the tower.

McCroskey exits.

HINSHAW

(excitedly)

The tower! Oh! Rapunzel! Rapunzel!

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Randy is talking to passengers and demonstrating.

RANDY

In a moment we'll ask you to assume crash positions. Your life jackets are located under your seat.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

Jack and Shirley are watching.

RANDY (v.o.)

Remove the jacket and unfold it so that the red arrow points up.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - ANOTHER AREA - NIGHT

The Krishnas are watching.

RANDY (v.o.)

Place the jacket over your head, and when I give the word pull the cord under the left side flap.

BACK TO RANDY

She pulls the cord and it inflates into a child's duck-shaped inner tube.

INT. CHICAGO TOWER - NIGHT

Hinshaw, Kramer, and McCroskey enter. Three Controllers are there. One is wearing a black striped shirt.

STRIPED CONTROLLER

We're all ready, sir.

As he makes introductions, they shake hands.

STRIPED CONTROLLER

Captain McCroskey, this is Captain Roberts. Captain Kramer, this is Captain Colosimo. Captain Hinshaw, Captain Gatz. Captain Kramer, Captain Gatz. Captain Hinshaw, Captain Roberts.

KRAMER

All right. Colosimo, you'll work the relay. Roberts, double check all air traffic within five miles.

Roberts is scratching his ear.

KRAMER

And get that finger out of your ear. You don't know where that finger's been! Gunderson?

GUNDERSON

Yes, Captain?

KRAMER

Did you decide on a runway yet?

GUNDERSON

Runway niner. It's the longest, and directly into the wind.

HINSHAW

And the foliage looks so pretty this time of year.

Gunderson exits.

KRAMER

(into mike)

Striker, you're going to have to work fast. After this message, do not acknowledge any transmission unless you want to ask a question. Do you understand? Striker, Striker, do you read me?

INT. TOWER - DIFFERENT ANGLE - NIGHT

Mrs. Oveur enters.

MRS. OVEUR

Steve!

McCROSKEY

Linda, your husband and the others are alive but unconscious.

HINSHAW

Just like Gerald Ford!

McCROSKEY

Now there's a chance we can save them if Striker can get this plane down on time.

MRS. OVEUR

That isn't much of a chance, is it?

HINSHAW

(appalled)

Where did you get that dress? It's an eyesore!

INT. RADAR ROOM

Gunderson and an assistant are seated in front of radar screens. One of them is a video anti-aircraft game.

GUNDERSON

(into microphone)

Eight miles. Turn right to heading zero eight niner.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

(into microphone)

You are now eight miles from the airport. Turn right to a heading of zero eight niner, throttle back slightly and begin to lose altitude to fifteen hundred feet.

ELAINE (v.o.)

We're now at twelve hundred feet, leveling off.

KRAMER

(to McCroskey)

Steve, I want every light you can get poured on that field.

McCROSKEY

It's being done right now.

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

A truck is dumping a variety of lamps, fixtures, and light bulbs onto the runway.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

(into mike)

Tower to all emergency vehicles. Runway is niner.

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

Ambulances, fire trucks, and police cars start to move.

KRAMER (v.o.)

(over P.A.)

Airport vehicles take positions one and two.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

(into microphone)

Civilian equipment, number three.

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

Ambulances, firetrucks, and police cars speed toward runway. They are followed by a baggage truck, fuel truck, a taxi, Coke truck, an ice cream truck, farm machinery, and a cement mixer.

KRAMER (v.o.)

(over P.A.)

Air Force positions number four and five. All ambulances to position three.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

HINSHAW

(into mike)

It's a twister! It's a twister! Toto!...
Auntie Em!

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

THUNDER and lightning.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

KRAMER (v.o.)

All right, Striker, put down twenty degrees of flap. When your flaps are down, retrim for level flight.

INT. CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers are wearing headsets and watching in-flight movie. Randy approaches Mrs. Schiff.

MRS. SCHIFF

Stewardess, how soon 'til we land?

RANDY

It won't be long now. Try not to worry.

Mrs. Schiff puts on a headset and watches movie. The movie is airplanes crashing and burning.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

flying erratically.

INSERT - ALTIMETER

fluctuating.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

A woman, applying facial makeup, smears it all over her face.

INT. RADAR ROOM

GUNDERSON

He's all over the place! Nine hundred feet up to thirteen hundred feet! What an asshole!

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

Watch your altitude, Striker. It's too erratic. You can't come straight in.
You've got enough fuel left for two hours flying. You've got to stay up there 'til we get a break in the weather.

INT. COCKPIT

Striker reaches for microphone.

STRIKER

I'll take it, Elaine.

(into mike)

Listen, Kramer, I'm coming in. Do you hear me? I'm coming in right now! We have people up here who will die in less than an hour, never mind two. I may bend your precious airplane, but I'll get it down!

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

Now get on with the landing check. I'm putting the gear down now.

As he activates landing gear, Randy enters.

RANDY

Mr. Striker, the passengers are ready.

STRIKER

Thank you, Randy. You better leave sweetheart. You might get hurt in here.

Randy leaves. There is a CRASH and Randy screams.

ELAINE

Ted...

STRIKER

Yes?

ELAINE

I wanted you to know -- now -- I'm very proud.

STRIKER

Tell them the gear is down and we're ready to land.

ELAINE

(into mike)

The gear is down.

INT. TOWER

ELAINE (v.o.)

And we're ready to land.

MCCROSKEY

He may not be able to fly, but he's sure got guts.

Kramer nods.

EXT. LAX PASSENGER LOADING AREA - BUSINESSMAN - NIGHT in Striker's cab checks his watch.

BUSINESSMAN

Well, I'll give him another twenty minutes, but that's it.

INSERT - METER

reads $389.10.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Fog, THUNDER, and lightning.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

MILTON

I'm sure we'll both make it...but just in case one of us...well, is there a message you'd like me to give someone?

BERNICE

No. I'm all alone.

MILTON

Just in case I don't have a chance to say goodbye, I want you to know that I haven't

Airplane Script at IMSDb.

spent so many pleasant hours for many years.

BERNICE

That's a very nice compliment, and I'd like to say that...you've done the same for me.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Dr. Rumack pokes his head in the door.

DR. RUMACK

I just wanted to tell you both good luck. We're all counting on you.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

Now, Striker...hold your present heading, put down full flap, bring your air speed back to a hundred and thirty-five, then I want you to take hold of the throttle...

HINSHAW

And stick it in your ear.

KRAMER

And stick it in your ear.

McCroskey gives Hinshaw a disapproving look.

HINSHAW

(a la Froggy, the Gremlin)
I'll be good, I will, I will.

INT. RADAR ROOM

GUNDERSON

Captain, he's dropping off fast. Almost seven hundred.

INT. TOWER

KRAMER

Striker, get back to a thousand feet!

INT. RADAR ROOM

Assistant Radar Operator unloads clothes from radar screen/wash machine door and puts them into basket.

GUNDERSON

He's below seven hundred now and he's still going down! 675! 650! 625! 600!

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

It knocks the radio tower off a building and heads past the John Hancock Building.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

Striker, you're coming in too low! What's your altitude?

STRIKER (v.o.)

I don't know. How high was the eighty-ninth floor of the John Hancock Building?

INT. RADAR ROOM

GUNDERSON

He's right on the heading.

INT. TOWER - NIGHTKRAMER

All right, he's on final now! Put out all runway lights except niner.

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

Ambulance attendants, firemen, and emergency vehicles are in readiness.

INT. TOWER - NIGHTKRAMER

Turn on your landing lights, Striker. It's the switch above your right knee.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker reaches for button above his left knee.

KRAMER (v.o.)

No. I said your right knee.

Striker pushes button over his right knee.

EXT. AIRPLANE - NIGHT

Landing lights come on.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

McCroskey, Kramer, and Mrs. Oveur are nervously watching the sky.

KRAMER

All right, now just listen carefully. You should be able to see the runway at three hundred feet.

Mrs. Oveur clutches Kramer's arm anxiously.

KRAMER

Aim to touchdown a third of the way along. There's a slight crosswind from the right, so be ready for it.

Mrs. Oveur is clutching Kramer's arm with both hands.

KRAMER

If you land too fast, use your emergency brakes. The red handle is right in front of you.

Now Mrs. Oveur, still watching the sky, has both arms around Kramer's waist, massaging his chest with her hands.

KRAMER

If that doesn't stop you...

Kramer is suddenly aware of what Mrs. Oveur is doing. He gives her a look and she removes her hands.

KRAMER

If that doesn't stop you, cut the four ignition switches over the co-pilot's head.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker looks for switches.

INSERT - IGNITION SWITCHES

INT. COCKPIT

STRIKER

See them, Elaine?

ELAINE

Uh-huh.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

Do you see us now? You should be able to see the field now.

EXT. AIRPLANE - THROUGH COCKPIT WINDOW - NIGHT

Striker and Elaine are searching for airfield.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

Kramer and McCroskey are tensely trying to spot plane. Mrs. Oveur is watching, prayerfully.

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

Searchlights scan field.

EXT. TOWER - NIGHT

Revolving beacon searches.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

McCROSKEY

It sure is quiet out there.

KRAMER

Yeah -- too quiet.

McCROSKEY

Looks like I picked the wrong week to quit sniffing glue.

He pulls a tube of airplane glue from his shirt pocket and sniffs.

EXT. AIRPLANE - THROUGH COCKPIT WINDOW - NIGHT

Striker and Elaine are searching for airfield.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

Kramer and Mrs. Oveur are anxiously watching the sky. McCroskey is glazed.

KRAMER

(excited)

There he is!

(into microphone)

Striker, you're coming in too fast!

STRIKER (v.o.)

I know! I know!

ELAINE (v.o.)

(into microphone)

He knows! He knows!

Wow!

EXT. RUNWAY - STRIKER'S POV - NIGHT

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

(into microphone)

Sound your alarm bell now.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Elaine rings alarm bell.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Alarm BELL RINGS. Randy is standing in center aisle.

RANDY

All right, now, everybody get in crash positions.

Passengers assume various awkward poses as though plane had just crashed.

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

Ambulance attendants anxiously watch sky.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT (PROCESS)

Striker sees airport and points it out to Elaine.

INSERT - AIR SPEED GAUGE

Speed is increasing.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

ELAINE

Airspeed one twenty-five, one thirty...

She raises her head to look out cockpit window.

EXT. RUNWAY - ELAINE'S POV - NIGHT (STOCK)

The runway lights go out.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker and Elaine look at each other, panicked.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

Hinshaw has just pulled a plug from an electrical outlet.

HINSHAW

Just kidding!

EXT. RUNWAY - ELAINE'S POV - NIGHT

Runway lights go back on.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker and Elaine are relieved.

ELAINE

...one thirty-five, one forty.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

Striker, now listen to me. You're coming down too fast!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker is struggling with steering wheel and sweating.

KRAMER (v.o.)

Put down thirty degrees of flap!

Striker is sweating profusely as he struggles in vain with the flap switch.

STRIKER

It's stuck. It won't move!

He bangs the control panel and "TILT" light up.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

McCroskey is staring at radio equipment.

KRAMER

Bring it down! Easy!

MCCROSKEY

Look at all those buttons! Oh that's beautiful! Just beautiful!

EXT. RUNWAY - STRIKER'S POV - NIGHTINT. COCKPIT - NIGHT*KRAMER (v.o.)

Watch your nose! It's too low!

Striker is struggling with wheel. The wheel begins to fight back, pushing Striker.

KRAMER (v.o.)

You're coming in too hot!

INT. TOWER - NIGHTKRAMER

Remember your brakes and switches! Get ready to flare it out! You're coming in too fast! Watch your speed!

MCCROSKEY

(hysterical)

He's coming right at us!

McCroskey turns and leaps through tower window. All activity momentarily stops. Everyone looks back at window. Then activity resumes.

KRAMER

You're coming in too hot! Put down full flaps! Watch your nose!

EXT. RUNWAY - STRIKER'S POV - NIGHT

Runway swerving underneath him.

INT. TOWER - NIGHTKRAMER

Now ease her down! Down!

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Plane is a few feet from ground.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

Lift the nose! Throttle back!

EXT. RUNWAY - STRIKER'S POV - NIGHT

Closer to ground.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker pushes wheel forward as tires SCREECH.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

The brake! Pull the red handle!

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Striker pulls red handle. It comes off in his hand. He pushes brake with feet.

EXT. RUNWAY - CLOSEUP - TIRES - NIGHT

SCREECHING.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Dr. Rumack pokes his head in the door.

DR. RUMACK

I just wanted to tell you both good luck.
We're all counting on you.

EXT. RUNWAY - STRIKER'S POV - NIGHT

Runway passing underneath.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER

(into microphone)

Hold her steady, hold her steady!

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

skidding.

INT. O'HARE TERMINAL BUILDING - GATE 7 - NIGHT

P.A. SYSTEM (v.o.)

You attention, please. Trans American Flight 209 non-stop from Los Angeles is now arriving at Gate seven...Gate eight...

People in Gate seven waiting area move to Gate eight.

INT. COCKPIT - STRIKER - NIGHT

is struggling with controls, sweating profusely.

INT. TOWER

KRAMER

Pull a lever!

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

skidding.

INT. COCKPIT - STRIKER - NIGHT

is struggling with controls. Water is gushing down his face ridiculously.

INT. O'HARE TERMINAL BUILDING - GATE 13 - NIGHT

P.A. SYSTEM (v.o.)
...209 arriving gate thirteen...gate fourteen....gate fifteen...

People in Gate thirteen move to Gate fourteen.

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

skidding.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER
Push a button!

INT. COCKPIT - STRIKER - NIGHT

Striker is struggling with controls.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

KRAMER
(into microphone)
You're too low! You're too low!

INT. O'HARE TERMINAL BUILDING - NIGHT

P.A. SYSTEM (v.o.)
...gate twenty-three...twenty four...
twenty-five...

People are running THROUGH FRAME right to left.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Ground crewman with red flashlights nonchalantly directs plane. Suddenly he realizes the plane is not stopping. He throws his flashlight at the plane and runs off, terrified.

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

skidding.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Randy approaches a passenger in crash position.

RANDY
Can we help arrange hotel accommodations or a rent-a-car during your stay in Chicago?

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Landing gear snaps off; plane starts to slide on its belly.

PLANE

is heading toward a building. On the side of the building is a billboard with a man drinking milk.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Elaine screams and covers her face. St. Christopher statue covers its face.

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

is getting closer to building. Billboard man is looking at plane, terrified.

INT. TOWER - MRS. OVEUR - NIGHT is screaming.

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

is skidding.

INT. TOWER - NIGHTHINSHAW

(seated in wheelchair)

Wheel me to the West Wing. I wish to view the Degas.

EXT. RUNWAY - PLANE - NIGHT

skids to a stop.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

Kramer sighs in relief as controllers and Mrs. Oveur dash from room.

INT. CHICAGO DISPATCH - NIGHT

Controllers celebrate safe landing, reporters rush from room.

INT. DISPATCH LOBBY - NIGHT

Five reporters run into bank of phone booths and the booths topple over.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

SCREAMING ambulances race toward plane.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - NIGHT

Passengers rise slowly, shaken but uninjured. Milton and Bernice look at each other, relieved, and embrace. Mrs. Schiff gets up to leave.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Rumack pokes his head in door.

DR. RUMACK

I just wanted to tell you both good luck.
We're all counting on you.

Striker and Elaine get up to leave cockpit.

KRAMER (v.o.)

Striker, Striker, are you all right?

STRIKER

(into microphone)

Yeah, we're okay.

INT. TOWER - NIGHTKRAMER

Ted, that was probably the lousiest landing in the history of this airport.
But there are some of us here...

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

KRAMER (v.o.)
...particularly me, who'd like to buy you a drink and shake your hand.

Striker and Elaine leave.

KRAMER (v.o.)
...and, Ted, I just want you to know, that when the going got tough up there, when the chips were down...

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - BOARDING AREA - NIGHT

Randy is assisting Jack and Shirley, the Hammens, and the nun from the plane.

RANDY
Hurry now. Please be careful.

INT. TOWER - NIGHT

Air controllers leave as Kramer continues.

KRAMER
...Lonliness, that's the bottom line. I was never happy as a child. Christmas, Ted, what does it mean to you? For me, it was a living hell. Do you know what it's like to fall in the mud and get kicked? In the head? By an iron boot? Of course you don't. No one does. That never happens.
Sorry, Ted. Dumb question. Strike that.

INT. PASSENGER CABIN - BOARDING AREA - NIGHT

Randy is assisting Hari Krishnas and Black Dudes from plane.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

McCroskey, dressed in wet suit and flippers and oxygen tank is moving as though swimming under water.

McCROSKEY (v.o.)
I didn't know that the electric eel was approaching so rapidly nor that hidden in the coral reef was a family of poisonous sea urchins.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

Lisa Davis and her mother enter ambulance. It pulls from FRAME. We HEAR a loud screech and crash.

INT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Kramer is still droning on.

KRAMER (v.o.)
(into mike)
...and they shall be for frontlets between thine eyes, Ted. Neither they man servant, nor they maid servant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHTROMANTIC MUSIC.

Striker and Elaine are alone on the runway. Behind them is flight 209. They embrace and kiss as CAMERA ARCS around. MUSIC SWELLS. Suddenly the ENGINES REV UP. Astonished, they look up to the cockpit.

EXT. COCKPIT - NIGHT

Automatic pilot is at controls. He salutes Striker and Elaine and winks at CAMERA.

EXT. RUNWAY - NIGHT

The plane begins to taxi on its belly, shooting off sparks and making a tremendous scraping SOUND. Arm in arm, Striker and Elaine wave good-bye as the plane takes off into the night sky.

FADE OUT.

Alien III
Screenplay by John Fasano
Story by Vincent Ward & John Fasano

FIRST DRAFT
March 29, 1990

"But how will you die when your time comes, Narcissus, since you have no mother? Without a mother, one cannot love. Without a mother, one cannot die."

- Hesse

ALIEN III

THE SCREEN IS BLACK

A pinpoint of light appears.
Red. An ember.
Unseen BELLOWS blow.

GLASS FURNACE

The embers glow. Flame.
The fire GROWS.

A RIVER OF MOLTEN GLASS

Heated by the furnace to over 1,300 degrees fahrenheit.
White Hot.

GLASS FACTORY

Flickering flame casts dancing shadows on wooden walls.
Coarsely grained wood. Moisture blasted out by years of intense heat. Timbers split. Patched with new wood, it too now old and dry.

SMOKE

Billows up the walls.
Hangs as an angry, black cloud amongst the rafters and beams of the vaulted ceiling. Almost obscures --

A MAN

On a narrow LEDGE, twenty feet about the Glassworks' floor.
His clothing is Medieval. A rough textured cassock.
He is a MONK.

LOUVERS are set into the wall. He angles them open.
The smoke begins to escape.

The Monk turns, raises arms and LEAPS from his lofty perch -- Gently gliding down to the floor with the aid of a FLOWING FOX -- a primitive hand-held pulley that runs down a rope.
He lands next to the glass furnace, surrounded by --

MORE MONKS

By their dress. With Blowing Iron and Pontil.
They blow and shape the molten glass. Crack off the finished pieces. The old way.

ONE PARTICULAR MONK

Black skinned, early fifties.
Stirs his five foot long blowing iron in the molten glass, but he is watching something else. It moves him to song.
Lilting tenor lifts high into the air.
This is BROTHER KYLE.

BROTHER KYLE

Well would he guess the ascending of the star,
Wherein his patient's fortunes settled were.
He knew the course of every malady,
Were it of cold or heat or moist or dry.
Brother John, would-be Doctour of Physick.

We see the object of his song:

BROTHER JOHN

Not yet forty. Strong features, but fear behind the eyes.
The fear that comes from a lack of inner confidence.
A good face, nonetheless.
He stirs a thick mixture in a mortar.
Next to him another MONK sits holding his arm out in front of him, cassock sleeve rolled up, revealing a vicious BURN.

BROTHER KYLE

Tend you quickly he will,
with bottles from a shelf.
But heals not, so easily,
The ill's which plague himself.

Brother John stops stirring.

BROTHER JOHN

(to Kyle)
Enough.

He scoops the salve out with his fingers and applies it to the Burned Monk's arm. The Burned Monk INHALES sharply as the cool mixture contacts the injured area.

BROTHER JOHN

(to the burned Monk)
Relax.
(to Kyle)
Put those lungs of yours to better use.

BROTHER KYLE

Yes, Doc Tor.

Kyle laughs, removes the blowing iron from the molten glass -- a BLOB of white hot glass hanging on the end.

He rolls the blob on the Marver, a flat, polished piece of iron, then begins to blow a bottle shaped container.

John wraps a fray-edged cloth bandage around the burn.

JOHN

Keep this from getting wet. Go home at late afternoon mealtime and don't come back to work today --

BURNED MONK

But John --

JOHN

I'll tell the Abbot. Just rest today. You're lucky you only burned yourself on the side of the furnace. If some of that glass had gotten on your arm --

He points to the top of his forearm.

JOHN

-- it would've burned clean through to the other side.

He mimes a drop down from the bottom of his arm. The Burned Monk shudders at the thought.

BELLS toll.

JOHN

That's late afternoon. Now get on.

BURNED MONK

Thank you, John. I --

JOHN

You're welcome. Go!

The Burned Monk trundles off, injured arm against his chest. John gathers his mortar, pestle, and extra bandages into a burlap sack. Kyle comes over.

KYLE

Good work.

JOHN

All right, but I'm no Father Anselm.

KYLE

You're yourself, that's better...

Kyle pushes him through the door...

INTO THE HALLWAY

The Hallway is alive with cassocked monks. Their LOW CHANTING reverberates throughout the building. The wooden floorboards creak beneath their combined weights. This is obviously a MEDIEVAL MONASTERY...

KYLE

The Abbot will be pleased.

JOHN

Don't.

KYLE

Don't what?

JOHN

Please don't tell him. At least until I know if there's an infection.

KYLE

You want to be the Abbey's Physician, and you haven't learned the first rule:
Don't worry about the patient.

John's face drops.

KYLE

I shouldn't have. Sorry. Look, I know how you must --

JOHN

You don't, but thanks anyway.

AT THE END OF THE HALLWAY

A wide stairwell. A constant stream of monks all moving down the stairs. Coming from floors above. Headed for lunch.
Kyle starts down. John starts up --

KYLE

Not coming down?

JOHN

I have someone waiting for me.

Kyle disappears into the crowd.
John moves up...

THE STAIRWAY

A river of brown cassocks running downstream.
John is the only one moving against the flow.
He exits the stairwell --

ONE FLOOR UP

A narrow corridor lined with doorways.
John moves to one in particular.
He doesn't even look as he grabs the door knob.
This is his room.
He opens the door --

IN BROTHER JOHN'S ROOM

An old, worn out DOG lays in wait on an old, worn out cassock which is now serving as its bed.
At the sight of John it stands.

JOHN

Come on, Mattias.

The dog, MATTIAS, joins him in the hall.
Monk and pet disappear up a flight of stairs.
Past another dozen or so Monks who are on their way down.

INT. LIBRARY

A vast room filled with rows of wooden tables with low benches between aisle after aisle of floor-to-ceiling wooden shelves jammed to capacity with BOOKS of all shapes and sizes. Millions of books, from the looks of it.
From each book hangs a long CHAIN, long enough to allow the book to be carried only as far as the nearest table.

A CORPULENT MONK - BROTHER PHILIP

In his fifties, and the Librarian by his stern affect, his position behind a broad, but also old oak desk, and the large KEY hanging from his belt. He watches the few stragglers return their chain bound volumes to the shelves and head for the door, then rises and joins them...

IN THE CORRIDOR JUST OUTSIDE THE LIBRARY

John leans against the wall as Philip exits.
Mattias is nowhere to be seen.

PHILIP

Brother John.

JOHN

Brother Philip.

PHILIP

Feeding the mind instead of the body again?

JOHN

My training has taught me to feed what's hungry.

Philip pats his broad stomach and heads down the hallway.

PHILIP

As did mine. As long as you're alone.
Enjoy yourself -- and remember, no book leaves the library.

JOHN

How could I forget? Have a good meal...

John watches the corpulent librarian head down the stairs.
When he's gone from sight John lifts the bottom of his cassock to reveal Mattias.

JOHN

Perfect.

They move into the library...

THE MEDIEVAL SECTION

The oldest books.
John moves to the stacks.
Mattias trots over to a particular bench and sits.
This is his regular place.

AT THE SHELVES

John stands on toe tips to retrieve an ancient Tome.
He runs his fingers over the familiar leather binding.
A smile plays across his lips.

He carries the book, places it on the edge of the table so there is slack in the chain.
Sits on the bench next to the dog.
Clears his throat, opens the book, begins to read...

John

(reading)

In the year of our Lord 1348 I, Brother
Gerhado of the Minorite Abbey helped bury the Abbot and my sixty fellow monks --

VOICE O/S

Sometimes, I think you'd like that.

John turns to find --

THE ABBOT

Leader of the monastery. In his seventies but looks younger. His Cassock is adorned with a large, ornately carved, wooden CHAIN in place of a rope belt. He crosses to the table.

John closes the book and stands, head bowed in respect.

John
Abbot, I -- I didn't think anyone would --

ABBOT
Mind? Just Philip, if he knew. I passed him on the way up. He said you'd come in alone. I knew better.

He scratches the back of Mattias' neck.

ABBOT
Hello, Mattias. How are you, boy?

The dog snuffles in response.

ABBOT
You know what Philip says about Mattias' hair and his breathing. You'll have to take him out of here.

JOHN
He likes when I read to him and -- I can't --

John looks down sheepishly. Though nearly forty, he feels almost adolescent in the presence of the Abbot. The Abbot pulls a large key from his pocket.

ABBOT
(smiles)
Someone must have left this one unlocked. Take the book with you.

He hands the key to John, who is shocked -- this is a great honor.

JOHN
Father, I --?

ABBOT
Kyle tells me you did a good job at the glassworks today.

JOHN
I'll reserve judgement until the patient lives.

John crosses to the shelf and unlocks his book. He returns the key.

ABBOT
It will get easier. Father Anselm was... an unexpected loss. You'll do fine.

The Abbot walks towards the door...

ABBOT
Just have it back before the end of lunch. Oh -- And I didn't see you in here.

JOHN
Thank you.
(to Mattias)
Let's go upstairs, boy.

John takes his book -- Moves to a spiral wooden staircase.
Mattias at his heels.
Goes UP --

INTO THE BELL TOWER

The mechanics of the bell tower -- all ropes and wooden cogs cast scary shadows.
A doorway leads to --

THE ROOF OF THE ABBEY

Thick with sandy dust. The wood shows through thin patches.
We PULL BACK TO REVEAL what we think is the roof of the Abbey is actually --

THE SURFACE OF ARCEON - NIGHT

The door has opened onto the SURFACE OF A PLANTOID!
The curving horizon broken only by the very top of the Abbey bell tower poking through from the levels below.
SMOKE curls from vents set into the surface.
Sunken areas of the planet's surface are SEAS.

This is ARCEON.
An manmade orbiter.
A shell of lightweight foamed steel, five miles in diameter.
Constructed by The Company on Special Order with habitable level within finished in whatever material suits its end user.

This orbiter, for reasons to be discovered later, has been sheathed in wood.

JOHN

Walks to the shore of an inland SEA.
Sits on a bare patch of wood. Looks up.
His eyes grow accustomed to --

THE NIGHT SKY - JOHN POV

Freckled with tiny dots of light.
Stars. Spread across the inky void.
Bathe Arceon's surface with their celestial glow.

John smiles at Mattias, breathes deep.
The atmosphere up here is thinner, but fresher.
He opens the book.
Reads aloud --

JOHN

In the year of our Lord 1348 I, Brother
Gerhado of the Minorite Abbey helped bury the Abbot and my sixty fellow monks, day by day, one by one, until I am the only one left. I stayed as long as I could bear it, then with my dog --

Mattias lifts his ears at this part. His favorite part.

JOHN

- fled. I have put this to parchment lest this pestilence - this Black Death - stay my hand.
(beat)
This was finished by another hand...

John closes the book. Something catches his eye --
Something among the myriad points of light in the sky.
Millions of miles away:

ONE OF THE STARS

Brighter than the rest. MOVING.
Fast enough to leave a faint trail.
Across the stars. And down...
A comet.

John stands. Watches --

THE STAR

Growing brighter.
Drawing nearer.

JOHN

Joined by three other MONKS.
They are older than he.
The Four men watch the sky...

THE STAR

Brighter still. Closer.

MORE MONKS

Two dozen. A hundred.
They come up through the planet's surface.
Out of wooden trap doors. Join the others.
Days pass.
Now three hundred.
Necks bowed back.
Mouths agape.
A SUBTITLE identifies...

RELIGIOUS COLONY ARCEON

POPULATION: 350 Exiles CRIME: Political Heresy

THE STAR

Fills the sky.
Burns brighter still as it hits the planetoid's atmosphere.

ON THE SURFACE OF ARCEON

Hundreds of Monks shield their eyes as the ship -- the star --
ROARS over their heads. Trailing FIRE --

John holds up his hands - to touch a star --
Skin BLISTERS as it passes over him,
He turns and watches as it --
Arcs downward --

INTO THE SEAWHOMP- SSSSSSSSSS --!!

PLUMES of steam rise into the air.
The water boils. Fish bob to the surface. Bloated. Dead.

JOHN

Is the first to hit the shore.
Small leather and wood fishing boats tossed by the wake.
His coracle is the first into the water.
The others running up behind him.
He cannot hear the SHOUTS of warning.

ON THE SEA - DAWN

The sun cracks over the black water.
John's hands move the rough wooden oars.
Blistered palm opens.
BLOOD flows.
He tears off a piece of his cassock --
Rips it with his teeth --
Wraps the bloody hand.
Rows.

THE STAR

Ship. Star Ship.
Sulaco escape vehicle #4 rocks on the water.
White metal skin blackened by the heat.

JOHN

Rows right into it.
His coracle pitches in the choppy surf.
He scrambles onto the ship's cracked tile surface.
Teeters -- balances -- moves to the unmistakeable HATCH.
Looks around for a knob, a handle --

NEXT TO THE HATCH

A small panel door whose black and yellow stripes denote urgency. John hesitantly opens the door, revealing a shiny metal LEVER. He stares at it...a beat.
Then quickly pulls it down...

WUORRRSH -!

Hull door OPENS.

The doorway is a black maw.
John crosses himself.
Begins to lower his foot into the hatch --

KYLE O/S

Watch it!

He almost falls backwards off the ship. Looks back --

THE OTHER MONKS

Are rapidly approaching.
Kyle gestulates wildly --

KYLE

John! Wait -- ! Don't go in!

John turns back to the open hatch.
Machine recirculated air flows out.
He feels it on the skin of his face. Cool.
Cool, and artificial. It calls to him.
He steps in. Swallowed by the blackness --

WHOOSH-CLANG -!

The door closes behind him.

INT. SULACO ESCAPE POD #4 - DAY

Dark. Dim red lights. John stands still as his eyes adjust to the darkness. He sees:

NEWT'S HYPER SLEEP TUBE

COMPUTER VOICE

(sotto)

Seal broken...seal broken...

John finds himself moving towards the tube...
Looks through the broken lid:

IN THE TUBE

There is a splattered BLOOD STAIN on the sterile white interior. OLD, turned rust-brown.
Whatever happened here happened a while ago.
Rust colored drips trail down to --

THE FLOOR

Drag marks. His eyes follow the stains to a pile of Bloody clothing against a control panel. A jumpsuit. Torn.
Child size. The head of child's DOLL, but no body to be found.

JOHN

Looks back towards the door.
Part of him wants to get the hell out here -- but he fights back his fear. He is a doctor - or trying to be - someone in here may need his help. He presses forward -- Averts his gaze from the clothing, UP to the blinking and glowing instrument panels and their myraid --

LIGHTS

Pressure lights. Data lights. Warning lights.
Thousands of lights. Like the stars in the sky.

It's been decades since he's seen technology like this -- and never this close up. He steps further into the ship, his fear now replaced by fascination, follows the lights....

ON A PALE GREEN SCREEN

LED numbers race -- 7,291.01.05...06...07
A legend identifies "Elapsed since separation."
He moves on...

A VIDEO MONITOR

Through scanning bars of snow, an image:
A WOMAN with a YOUNG GIRL standing in front of her.
The Woman's arms are wrapped around the girl.
Protective. Maternal.

The Woman speaks. Her message repeats itself.
A tape loop, although John has no idea what that is.

WOMAN

...taking pod four. The Crew of the SS
Sulaco and all Marine commandoes are dead.
Ship's sensors have interrupted the hyper sleep cycle. An overlooked alien egg has hatched. Bishop and Hicks have been killed.
Xenomorphs have infested the cruiser. Newt and I are taking pod four. The Crew of...

The WARNING TONE of the Woman's message rekindles John's fear.
He moves more hesitantly around the periphery of the ship, following the trail of blinking instruments -- Drawn to touch a button. Click...

SOMETHING TENTACLE-LIKE DROPS DOWN ON HIS SHOULDER!

Just an oxygen mask.

John feels his rapidly BEATING heart as he pushes aside the plastic, dangling object and continues around the shuttle. His hand brushes over a SENSOR which responds by lighting and --

HSSSSSSSSS -!

A BLAST of freon shoots out of an overhead pipe -- John SHOUTS and back up into --

ANOTHER HYPER SLEEP TUBE!!!

Next to Newt's now empty tube.
Humming gently. Still operational.
John approaches it cautiously.
He can make out the occupant through the lid...

A WOMAN

The woman from the screen. This is RIPLEY.
In hypersleep. Wearing a white cotton tank top and boxer-type shorts. Christ, she looks beautiful.

John looks from Ripley to her image on the monitor, then back. Sinks to his knees, reverent. Fascination has replaced fear again. Moves his face closer to the lid. Closer to hers...

DAYLIGHT spills in --
John's head WHIPS towards the source of the light --

THE DOOR

Open. Kyle and the other monks.

KYLE

John - what is it? Is this a Supply ship?

JOHN

No. No supplies. Kyle, there's someone in here --

The Second Monk looks at Kyle.

SECOND MONK

This is forbidden.

KYLE

John. Just get the hell out of there --

JOHN

I don't want to stay. I have to get her out before this sinks. You come in, give me a hand --

KYLE

Her? Look, this is not the supply ship, so this is technology forbidden to us. Get out of there now!

John looks down at Ripely.
A KEYPAD is mounted at the head of the tube.
A red button: "EMERG-OPEN"
That's plain enough.

JOHN

All right --

He presses it.
The Tube opens with a loud BLAST of compressed air.
The Monks at the door recoil at the sound.

CUT TO:

EXT. SPACE SHIP - ON THE SEA - DAY

Ripley has been lowered into a large coracle. John holds her in front of him. Unconscious.
Her head lolls as the boat rocks on the waves.
The monks start to row back to shore.

FIRST MONK

(reverent)

A space ship...

SECOND MONK

(even more reverent)

A woman...

KYLE

You shouldn't have gone in --

JOHN

I'm supposed to be a doctor.

He pushes Ripley's hair away from her forehead.

JOHN

She could've been lost.

FIRST MONK

Been a long time since I saw either.

SECOND MONK

It isn't sinking. Look at it. What are we supposed to do with it?

KYLE

What was it like in there --?

JOHN

Lights. So many lights --

THIRD MONK

Tow it in. Bring it in.

SECOND MONK

It's evil.

FIRST MONK

It's just technology.

SECOND MONK

Evil technology. Look at these fish --

THIRD MONK

The Abbot will know what we should do with it --

KYLE

Just lights?

JOHN

Machines. Buttons. Metal.

SECOND MONK

See? Just look at the fish.

THIRD MONK

The Abbot will know.

SECOND MONK

They're boiled. These fish are boiled.

JOHN

Thousands of lights. Like the stars.
Like Heaven on Earth.

Ripley stirs in John's arms. Groans.
Fights to come out of her fugue state...
Looks around through half-lidded eyes --
She is surrounded by rowing, cassocked Monks.
MONKS? She closes her eyes.
Tries to clear the imagine. Opens:
They're still there.
She looks down at the bloodied hands around her waist -- realizes she's sitting on someone's lap.
Looks back over her shoulder --

JOHN

He smiles at her.
Friendly, not sexual.

RIPLEY

Shakes her head. Tries to speak --
Her lips form soundless words.
She looks over her other shoulder, sees --

THE SHIP - RIPLEY POV

Bobbing on the surface.
Growing small with each stroke of the oars.

RIPLEY

Brows knit. Fights the cobwebs in her brain.
Tries to focus on the ship -- Remembers.
Turns to John, tries to speak --

RIPLEY

Wait. New...

She loses consciousness.

GO TO BLACK...

INT. THE ABBEY - RIPLEY'S ROOM - DAY

Streaks of light move across the darkness.
Form patterns of light and shadow against the wooden walls.
There is a sublime stillness, but coming through the walls are the muted, far off SOUNDS of the Abbey --
The SAWING of wood. HAMMERING.
WHISPERED prayers.
LILTING song.

We move down off the wall to a hand-made wooden bed.
Ripley in restless sleep.

EXT. ARCEON SEA - DUSK

The waters grown rough with the approach of night. Wind whips across white wave tops -- SPRAYS the dozen Monks who LASH their boats to Ripley's SHIP with thick hemp ropes -- Start to tow it to shore...

INT. RIPLEY'S ROOM - NIGHT

Ripley is sleeping -- but struggling against some unseen foe -- She tries to sit up -- can't. Tries to shake off the effects of the suspended animation...looks up through half-lidded eyes:

JOHN

Sits next to her. Quite asleep.
Hands swathed in white bandages. Book resting on his lap.

She squints to make the figure standing in the shadows behind him -- it's skin picks up and reflects tiny points of flickering candle light - seems to ripple as it moves --

THE ALIEN

Big, black shiny-smooth head moves into the taper light.
It moves towards her, cable-like arms held out at its side -- moving out of sync with its feet -- Ripley tries to move - to cry out -- She can't.

She can only move her eyes. She looks over at John, sleeping peacefully. He doesn't notice the Alien --

The Alien moves closer.
She can feel his breath -- it evaporates the sweat on her forehead -- a CHILL runs through her but she still can't move --

The Alien stands alongside her bed.
Extends a six-fingered hand...
Gently rests it on her stomach.
Cocks its head -- like it's listening to something.
The implication is clear.

Ripley finds her voice --

RIPLEY
AAAAAAAAAAAAARGH!

Her eyes open wide --
She sits bolt upright.

A hand moves to her forehead. Gently pushes her head back to the pillow. John's.

JOHN
You're out of it. Out of it...

Ripley falls back, eyes glued to where the alien appeared.
John sees her focal point, looks back over his shoulder:
Nothing.
Ripley's eyes roll back into her head.
She tries to speak -- It was there.
Her hand, at her side, tightens into a fist --

John's hand covers hers.
Eases the fingers open again.
She feels the coarse bandages against her palm.

He starts to read quietly from Saint Augustines' Confessions.
She begins to drowse again as his soft voice flows over her like waves lapping against the shore...

EXT. SURGACE OF ARCEON - DAY

A HOWLING DUST STORM has kicked up. The monks wear small round goggles, have rags tied over their noses, as they work at a huge BLOCK AND TACKLE arrangement --

Hundreds of ropes grow TAUT.
Timbers GROAN.
They LIFT Ripley's SHIP -- SWING it over to a large portal --

INT. RIPLEY'S ROOM - DAY

Ripley lays with eyes closed.

Muffled VOICES outside her door:

ABBOT

How is the woman, John?

JOHN

I don't think she's here yet.

At the sound of John's voice the SLIGHTEST smile plays across Ripley's sleeping lips.

JOHN

She is close, though.

As they continue talking, Ripley wakes. Opens her eyes.
Rolls over onto her side --
There is a window right next to the bed.
Ripley lifts herself up on one elbow, looks out:

HER POV

Garden of Earthly delights...
Monks laboring under a beautiful, celestial blue sky -- picking apples, fishing on the water on small inland lakes.
Working with hammer and saw on small wooden cottages. Lyrical.
It makes her feel good. She scans the countryside...

Sheep graze around wooden ladders stretching hundreds of feet up to the -- Ripley does a take --

WORKERS ON A SCAFFOLDING

With crude brushes at the end of poles -- PAINT the sky blue.
The Abbey, the cottages, the fields outside her window are all on one level - INSIDE THE PLANET.

The vaulted CEILING, painted to look like the sky with huge glass "windows" to allow the sunlight in, is actually the UNDERSIDE of the planetoid's outer shell.

Ripley looks back at the Monks on the ground:
Instead of repairing, they are taking the cabins apart, stacking the wood onto push carts --

RIPLEY

What the hell --?

SUDDENLY --

The Sulaco Escape ship APPEARS in front of her.
SWINGS past her window suspended by ropes.
Then disappears up, out of sight.
Ripley checks her pulse.

RIPLEY

This must be a dream. A bad one.

She rolls back onto the bed.
Stares up at the ceiling.

ABOVE HER - ON THE ROOF OF THE ABBEY

Monks scurry around the Ship as it is lowered into place on a flat area of the roof above the library.
It seats with a deeply resounding THUD...

RIPLEY

Hears the SOUND and then another - her door OPENING.
She turns to find the Abbot and John standing in the doorway.
John waits in the doorway as the Abbot crosses to the chair by the bed and sits.

RIPLEY

Who are you?

ABBOT

I am the Abbot. Leader of this Colony.
And you?

He smiles. Open. Friendly.

RIPLEY

Ripley. How did I get here?

ABBOT

Your vehicle crash landed.
(indicates John)
Brother John found you and brought you here.

RIPLEY

Where is here?

ABBOT

This is the Minorite Abbey within the manmade orbiter Arceon.

RIPLEY

Can I use a radio to --

ABBOT

We have no radio here. We are a monastic order that has renounced all modern technology. We live the old way. The pure way.

She shakes her head.

RIPLEY

Uh, I - I still don't feel 100%. Whoever took me out of the stasis tube must not have run the full D-F program...
Where's Newt?

The Abbot looks at her blankly.

RIPLEY

There was a little girl with me --

ABBOT

You were alone.

RIPLEY

No. She was with me. I put her in her stasis tube -- We launched when the --

ABBOT

You were the only living thing found aboard that vessel.

The Abbot watches Ripley as the terrible truth overcomes her --

RIPLEY

(slowly)
Oh, God. Newt.

She stops -- gets that chill up her spine --
She realizes that she MUST have brought the Alien with her.

RIPLEY

It came with us.

The Abbot leans in.

ABBOT

What came with you?

RIPLEY

Listen -- there is a danger here. It came with me. How long have I been here?

ABBOT

Almost two days --

RIPLEY

(calculates)

Loose for two days. This planet could be overrun within the week.

Ripley grabs the Abbot by his cassock --

RIPLEY

Look, there's a xenomorph --

(sees his confusion)

An Alien creature. A killer. A monster.

And now it's here.

The Abbot looks at her the way you look at that guy on the corner of Santa Monica and 3rd who's babbling about Judgement Day. The guy with his pants down around his kness.

She sees this, releases her hold on him...

RIPLEY

Calm down, Ripley. Okay, I was with a platoon of Colonial Marines on a mission to planetoid LV426. We left Earth six months ago - maybe a year --

ABBOT

(interrupts)

Wait a moment --

The Abbot becomes aware of John's presence in the doorway. Turns over his shoulder at him.

ABBOT

Leave us.

John waits there a beat, then backs out and closes the door.

ABBOT

Continue.

RIPLEY

We launched in the Cruiser Sulaco from Gateway sub-orbital space station --

ABBOT

Not possible.

RIPLEY

What do you mean?

ABBOT

When we left Earth seventy years ago, it was on the brink of a New Dark Age. Technology was on the verge of destroying the planet's environment. A computer virus was threatening to wipe away all recorded knowledge. There didn't seem to be any way it could be averted. In the almost forty years since we were towed out here in hypersleep, the news that came with occasional supply ships only got worse. Finally, the ships stopped coming. We had to resign ourselves to the fact that worst had come to pass, and the Earth no longer existed.

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.

Now she gives him that look.

RIPLEY

(slowly)

Uh...All right... Forget the Earth - How many people do you have here? Let's worry about them. Warn them --

A new look overtakes the Abbot's face. A look of fear. Now she's getting to him - or is she? He abruptly stands.

ABBOT

Your mind is troubled. You need to rest some more.

RIPLEY

I don't need rest - I need to get to your people. You've got to get to them -- tell them about the alien --

He heads for the door --

ABBOT

I have had enough for now.

RIPLEY

Enough? Didn't you hear what I said? It could wipe out the entire population of this planet. It may have started already - Have there been any unusual deaths since I got here?

The Abbot stops in the door -

ABBOT

No. And there won't be.

The Abbot SLAMS the door behind him.

THE CORRIDOR OUTSIDE RIPLEY'S ROOM - DAY

John stands nearby as the Abbot addresses two BURLY MONKS

ABBOT

Bolt it.

The guards move to bolt the door.

JOHN

What is it -- What's wrong?

ABBOT

Your patient is in a dangerous mental state. Nobody gets in or out until I say so.

JOHN

But I. Her meals --

ABBOT

Nobody.

JOHN

Father, I don't understand --

The Abbot turns and disappears down the hall.
John looks from the departing Abbot to the two Guard/Monks.

THE LIBRARY - NIGHT

John has his head buried in his hands. His back rises and falls with the rhythmic breathing of sleep.
Mattias curled up on his feet. Asleep as well.

WHAM!

The Library door FLIES open --!

John sits bolt upright --

A HYSTERICAL MONK bursts in.

Rushes to John's table.

HYSTERICAL MONK

Brother John! You're here! The Abbot said you'd -- I need -- you're the medic --

JOHN

What?!

HYSTERICAL MONK

My Sandy -- she's ill --

John tries to rub the fitfull sleep out of his eyes.

JOHN

Huh? A woman?

HYSTERICAL MONK

Sandy. My ewe.

John returns his head to the table.

JOHN

One of your sheep? Jesus Christ.
Call a vet.

HYSTERICAL MONK

Father Anselm was the vet.

John looks under his arms at Mattias --

The dog just stares at him.

JOHN

You're no help. Okay, let me get my bag.
All creatures great and small...

INT. HYSTERICAL MONK'S BARN - NIGHT

A small structure housing a handful of sheep and a few chickens in wire cages. The wooden walss are full of gaps where boards have been ripped off.

The Hysterical Monk holds a torch to illuminate the scene. One of his sheep is laying on its side...

HYSTERICAL MONK

I just gave her dinner and she keeled over.

JOHN

So would I. It's freezing in here.

HYSTERICAL MONK

Been using the wood from the walls

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.
for the fire in my cabin.

JOHN

Haven't we all...

John kneels at the ewe.

She's breathing heavy. Rapidly.

John puts his left hand down on the hay covered floor while he checks the animal's neck pulse with his right hand.
She gives a weak "Baa-ah."

JOHN

May be pneumonia. Pitch some of that hay around her. Stop this damn cold breeze.

The Hysterical Monk props the torch up in an empty bucket and retrieves a crude iron pitchfork from the wall.
Starts to pile hay around the fallen animal.

JOHN

First, I'll --

He sits up to reach for his back, then stops when he sees what's on his left hand --

A SLIMY MUCOUS-LIKE SUBSTANCE

JOHN

Wait a minute...

The Hysterical Monk stops on mid-pitch.
John rubs the material between his fingers.
Brings it close to his nose. Sniffs.

HYSTERICAL MONK

What is it?

JOHN

I don't know. It's all over the ground.
Some sort of --

BAAA-AAAH!!!

The ewe starts to SHAKE - QUIVER --
John tries to hold it down --
The Hysterical Monk, at this juncture, goes completely apeshit.

HYSTERICAL MONK

What?! WHAT?!

JOHN

Jesus! Help m --

The ewe is shaking so violently that John is thrown back --
He knocks over the bucket -- the torch falls into the hay --
The light is cut off as the torch almost smothers.
Then the hay starts to burn --
Weak fire light revealing:

BAAaa-Aha-SCLORTCH-H-!!

THE EWE EXPLODES ---!

Stomach BURSTS --
SPRAYING the two Monks with entrails and blood --
They start SCREAMING.

The flickering FIRE LIGHT grows as...

A TERRIBLE ALIEN CHEST-BURSTER

BURSTS out of the jerking and twitching carcass.

It shows the characteristics of the animal in which it has gestated. Tiny razor sharp teeth and black, glass-like eyes peer from a enlongated head covered with downy, but gore-matted WOOL. A quadroped, its shrunked hind legs struggling to free itself from the cooling morass of intestines.

John can only SCREAM as the most horrible nightmare he can imagine tries to slough off the animal's mortal coil.

The Hysterical Monk, fear overcome with ANGER at the loss of his beloved Sandy, steps in front of the near catatonic Medic and instinctively THRUSTS his pitchfork into the creature -- The sharp prongs PIERCE its still forming body --

The CREATURE

WAILS a high pitched SHRIEK - half alien, half sheep as it is roughly TORN from it's nesting place -- The Monk lifts --

It TWISTS at the end of the fork, acid blood dripping onto the wood floor -- each drop bursting into a little pool of FIRE.

The Hysterical Monk turns to the now raging hay fire -- The entire corner of the barn is ablaze -- SHOVES the abomination in --

The Sheep/Alien POPS and SIZZLES as tongues of flame leap up to lap at it's struggling body -- tiny tail whipping about --

The creature dies, its fading screams are soon the only sound heard within the barn. The Hysterical Monk holds his fork in the flame as he looks back to check on --

JOHN

Face contorted, eyes glued to the burning creature. Heaving lungs push air through his diaphragm, but no sound comes from his open mouth -- The Doctor in training has seen the devil.

EXT. HYSTERICAL MONK'S BARN - NIGHT

Wooden walls collapse inward as the building becomes a pyre. Acrid black smoke curls up to the ceiling and spreads out across the rafters...

We pull back from the sight INTO a window. Into

INT. RIPLEY'S ROOM - NIGHT

Ripley, watches the burning barn. Frustrated, she climbs out of the bed on unsteady legs, wearing her tank top and shorts. Pulls on a coarse wollen cassock, ties the rope belt --

RIPLEY

Idiots...I'll --

WHAM!

The door BURSTS OPEN --

RIPLEY

What the -?

Four BURLY MONKS rush in and grab her. TEAR her out of bed --

INT. HALLWAY - NIGHT

Ripley is dragged down the darkened hallway.

ABBOT V.O.

An evil has come to Arceon...

IN THE TRIBUNAL ROOM - NIGHT

As he continues we move down a row of stern Monk faces, ending at the Abbots...

ABBOT

You heard Brother Graham tell of the devil inside sheep's wool --

He motions towards the Hysterical Monk, sitting in the crowd.

ABBOT

An evil brought by this woman in her vessel of technology.

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

A large circular room with wooden walls stretching thirty feet high. Light creeps in through stained glass windows.

Hundreds of monks sits in a gallery that looms over the floor of the Tribunal. On the floor:

The Abbot and the five eldest Monks sit at a long table facing the witness stand. On the stand:

RIPLEY

Considers the faces that surround her. Fear. Hate.

RIPLEY

This can't be happening.

BALD TRIBUNAL MONK

You have no voice in this tribunal.

RIPLEY

You must listen to me! You're all in terrible danger! It came with me on the ship --

ABBOT

We know that. At first we believed its arrival was a good omen. But it has only brought pestilence. Dead sheep. Dead fish.

BALD TRIBUNAL MONK

Evil.

Ripley turns to the Abbot.

RIPLEY

Yes, the ship brought it. Not evil. It brought the Alien. I told you, it's here.

ABBOT

We know the name of the evil it brought. It brought technology. Technology to destroy our planet, as surely as it destroyed the Earth.

MONK IN AUDIENCE

Destruction!

RIPLEY

I was on the Earth less than a year ago. It's still there. People, cities, all

A murmur through the crowd. Some are listening to her.
The Abbot looks around. He must be in command.

ABBOT

(matter of fact)
All dead.

RIPLEY

(screams)
It's still there!

The Abbot smiles to himself for making her crack.
He stands and begins to pace.

ABBOT

You could not have been on the Earth a year ago, because there is no Earth to be on -- for at least twenty years.

RIPLEY

I haven't been floating in space for twenty years. Let me get to my ship and I'll prove it.

BALD TRIBUNAL MONK

No. Who knows what new evils she'll release if allowed back into that infernal machine.

MONK IN AUDIENCE

No! Don't let her!!

TRIBUNAL MEMBER

This woman is a danger. She denies The New Dark Age. She denies reality.

RIPLEY

This is reality. There is a Xenomorph loose on this planetoid - a alien -- it must have stowed away on my ship -- must have killed --

(swallows hard)

Newt. Killed the girl I brought with me.
You can't stop it. It goes inside you like an egg - grows -

(mimes)

Explodes out of you - keeps growing into some sort of monster. Kills you --
Kills all of you...

She looks at the Medieval people around her.
They stare at her in complete confusion.
To them, she does sound like a madwoman.

RIPLEY

Who are you people? Look at you -- all of you -- the way you're dressed. This isn't the Middle Ages. You're in space -- on a artifical planet. What are you doing out here?

There, in the upper tier -- John. They make eye contact.
She looks to him pleadingly.

RIPLEY

Isn't there anyone here who will listen?

John looks from Ripley to the Abbot.

The Abbot stares him down.
John turns away.

RIPLEY

(defeated)

I guess not. I can't believe this...

The gavel BANGS.
The Abbot sits in a moment of contemplation.

ABBOT

Then there is no choice.

The Four Monks grab Ripley roughly -- Bind her arms.

ABBOT

(to Ripley)

The evil is inside you. I cast you down.
To be sealed away. And God have mercy on your soul.

SLAM CUT TO:

THE SHAFT ROOM - DAY

A Medieval elevator shaft. The "elevator" is a wooden cage lowered on thick, rough hewn ropes.
Ripley, bound, is led to it.

She looks back at the monks who have gathered at the door --

RIPLEY

You won't be able to fight it...
You don't know what it is --!

She's put into the cage. The door is secured.
Two monks begins to pull the ropes. The cage is lifted out over the abyss -- a vast cavernesque space.

The other Monks move closer. Crowd around the edge --
John pushes through them - right to the edge -- Watches as the cage is slowly lowered down...

Ripley looks directly at John --

RIPLEY

You've sentenced yourselves to death!

John watches as she disappears down into the darkness...
Then turns and pushes his way through the crowd --
Down the hall --

THE TRIBUNAL ROOM

Empty now except for the Abbot and the Tribunal Members.
They speak in hushed tones.
John appears in the doorway, but pauses - strains to hear what they are saying:

BALD TRIBUNAL MONK

...they'll have started before she gets down to the Hermitage level.

ABBOT

No trouble?

BALD TRIBUNAL MONK

Only finding the wood for the ship. But Anderson's hut was about that big, and

ABBOT

I had that wood earmarked for the Cloister next winter. Well, we might not get to the winter if we don't take care of this. By winter time we can start taking the penitent cells apart. No one in them.

ANOTHER TRIBUNAL MONK

The wood isn't going to last forever.

ABBOT

Neither are we --

He becomes aware of John's presence, and motions the other Tribunal members out of the room. John moves to the Abbot. The Abbot knows what's coming...

ABBOT

Go ahead.

JOHN

This woman. Ripley. I tended her --

ABBOT

Yes, and you did a good job. You shouldn't feel responsible. You couldn't have known --

JOHN

Please, sir, let me finish. I feel that there may be something to what she says.

ABBOT

There isn't.

The Abbot moves to his table, begins to gather up his gavel, notebook. John follows him --

JOHN

I don't understand what you are doing.

ABBOT

This colony is my responsibility. I am protecting the colony.

JOHN

From what? This woman? You never gave her a chance. How can you be so sure you're right?

ABBOT

A better question is what makes you think I'm wrong?

JOHN

You didn't see this thing -- this demon -- Brother Graham and I -- we both saw it.

ABBOT

(realizes)
That's right. You both did.
(beat)
And what was it?

JOHN

I -- I don't know what it was. But I don't think Ripley was a party to it.

ABBOT

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.
She admits she brought it.

JOHN

But she tried to warn us --

ABBOT

You know that's how the devil works.
Deception.

JOHN

But I believe her. I don't know how to describe it -- A feeling.

ABBOT

You haven't seen a woman in thirty years.
Where does this feeling originate, John?

JOHN

(points to his head)
Here.

Pause.

ABBOT

I believe you. But your feelings are fooling you.

JOHN

It's - It's her conviction. I just think --

The Abbot snaps at him --

ABBOT

Don't think.

John takes a step back at the Abbot's tone. A tone he's never heard before. The Abbot runs a hand through his thinning hair.
Forces a smile.

ABBOT

It's been a long night. For all of us.
You really don't understand what you're dealing with here.

JOHN

That's what she said.

The Abbot chafes.

ABBOT

These are ideas which threaten the very system we live under. The creature is dead and the woman is gone. Forget them.
Both. Go read. Go fishing. Go anywhere, but leave this alone.

JOHN

But I --

ABBOT

Alone. I'll get Philip to let Mattias into the Library, all right? For your own good, just stay out of this.

John looks like he's going to protest.

ABBOT

I mean it.

JOHN

(slowly)

Yes, Father.

John turns and leaves the room.
The Abbot stares after him.

INT. PRISON LEVEL - NIGHT

Dark. Dank. Dreary.
A NAIL is hammered into a board. Then another.
The board is old, twisted. The grain is pronounced, splintered.

Another board is lifted into place, a nail held -- BAM-BAM-BAM - HAMMERED in tight.

TWO ANCIENT WORKERS

Drab, torn gray clothing.
Hammer the boards over the opening in the wall.
Methodically covering up --

RIPLEY

Watching them work.
BAM-BAM-BAM.
Defeated.

ON THE ROOF OF THE ABBEY (INTERCUT)

A dozen Monks frantically hammer planks up around the Sulacco escape ship - A frame of wood -- begin to wall it in...

IN THE PRISON LEVEL

The two ANCIENT WORKERS continue their carpentry.
The planks cover more of the opening.
BAM-BAM-BAM.

Covers more of Ripley.
BAM-BAM-BAM.
She stares...

ON THE ROOF OF THE ABBEY

Planks are rising around the ship.
Covering it. Locking away the good omen turned evil.

IN THE LIBRARY

John and Mattias sit before an open book.
He doesn't read. He can hear the POUNDING of the hammers.
It seems to reverberate THROUGH the planet.
Through his SKULL.
He closes his eyes in pain.

RIPLEY

Only her face is visible.
Another board.
BAM-BAM-BAM.
Then just her eyes.

Just before the last plank is put in place --

WORKER

Here you go, woman. Something from your ship. Something to keep you company --

He tosses it into the cell. Ripley catches it.
Watches as the last of the light is covered over.

BAM-BAM...BAM.

She continues to stare at the once open wall as her eyes grow accustomed to the darkness. The little light creeping between the planks grows in intensity until it is soon enough to see what it is she has caught --

NEWT'S DOLL'S HEAD.

Ripley looks around her cell -- actually a narrow space behind other cells, one wall curved out -- like a narrow slice crossways towards the edge of the pie.
Looks at the Doll's head in her hand.
A beat.

She FREAKS OUT --!

RIPLEY

You fucking idiots! You're dead!
You're all dead!

BEATS the walls. KICKS.
SMASHES her HEAD against the wall.
Again.
Her nose starts to bleed.
Her hand goes to her nose.
She squints in the darkenss.
Sees the BLOOD.
Tastes the iron taste in her mouth.
Death is with her again.

RIPLEY

(sotto)

Dead...

The "widest" part of her cell, the middle, allows her to slide down into a sitting position. She does.

RIPLEY

Christ. Jesus Christ. It's here. Here.
Shit. Here. I can't get rid of it...

Looks at the Doll's head --

RIPLEY

Newt. This isn't what I wanted...

She throws the doll's head away --
It bounces off the wall and rolls back to an upright position so that it is staring at her.

RIPLEY

(snaps)

Don't stare at me!

Beat.

VOICE O/S

Sorry.

Ripley looks down at the base of the wall facing her --
Where it meets the floor, in the rotting timbers:
A HOLE. In it:

A MAN'S FACE

Bright, wrinkled eyes beneath a snowy white crew cut.

He's looking back at her.

ON THE ROOF OF THE MONASTERY - NIGHT

The Sulaco escape pod #4 is now a memory as the Monks have finished walling it up. Now just another part of the Abbey.

As the Monks move down the thin wooden ladders we follow -- Pass them -- down to an open window and into...

INT. LIBRARY - THE MEDIEVAL SECTION - NIGHT INTO DAWN

John is here, Mattias asleep at his feet.
The tables, the benches, the floor are COVERED with hundreds of books he's pulled off the shelves, their chains all TANGLED.
All open to --

PICTURES OF DEVILS

Different representations of Evil through the ages -- Lucifer, Shaitan, Ahriman, Asmodeus -- Satan.
"The Temptation of Christ" from the Master of Schloss Lichtenstein. Satan roasting on an enormous grill from "Tres riches heures du Duc de Berry."

The devil as a serpent. As a semi-humanoid.
Gruenwald's "Temptation of St. Anthony."
Pacher's "Saint Wolfgang and the Devil."
A miasma of Medieval Monsters.

JOHN

Picks his way through the mess. Like a man possessed he fumbles through book after book.

The first golden rays of daylight filter through the huge stained glass windows. John rapidly flips through the Medieval tome in front of him - past an illustration of Satan depicted as having a FACE on his ASS -- further still -- then stops.
This is it.

We can't see what the illustration is, but we see his REACTION:

His eyes open wide as saucers. SLAMS the book closed as if the image would strike blind. He turns to Mattias as if to say something -- Decides not to wake the sleeping dog.

John wraps the book's chain around his hand and puts one foot up against the shelf. Pulls -- SPANKT!
The old chain gives way.

Face set, he loops the shoulder strap of his burlap medical bag over his shoulder. Clutches the book to his chest, gently pets his sleeping dog and goes...

INT. HALLWAY OUTSIDE ABBOT'S OFFICE - DAY

John strides down the corridor purposefully but stops and flattens himself against the wall when the door to the Abbot's office opens suddenly --

BROTHER GRAHAM, The Hysterical Monk, is forcibly led from the room by two burly Monks, taken down the corridor in the other direction. He is gagged. A third Burly Monk moves out of the doorway with the Abbot.

JOHN

Now find John and have him brought to me immediately.

THIRD BURLY MONK

Yes, Father.

ABBOT

Start in the library. And keep it quiet.

The Third Burly Monk nods and moves off.

The Abbot watches him leave, then goes back into the room and closes the door. John stares at the closed door a beat and then makes up his mind. He turns and runs back down the hallway...

INT. GLASS FACTORY - DAY

The first Monks straggle in for the morning shift.

Kyle is among them. He lifts his blowing iron from a wall mounted rack and moves towards the glass furnace as two other Monks begin to stoke the fire.

John enters.

Looks around the room and for a frantic moment cannot find --

KYLE

At the glass furnace. About to dip his blowing iron into the MOLTEN GLASS. John runs over to him. Almost knocks him over --

KYLE

Hey! Watch it!

He sees that John is agitated --

KYLE

What? What is it?

The other monks begin to notice the commotion, start moving in for a look...

JOHN

I -- Abbot. Must --

John tries to catch his breath. He gestulates wildly. Kyle puts down his blowing iron.

KYLE

John - relax. Take a deep breath - Christ, now I sound like you --

He sees the book clutched in John's white knuckled hands.

KYLE

Is that it, John? Is it the book --?

JOHN

(panting)

Yes. Devil.

Kyle moves closer to him. Cautiously.

John sees the other monks gathering around -- Closing in on him - whispering --

WHISPERING MONKS

He's got it...

SECOND WHISPERING MONK

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.
Like the Comet Woman...

THIRD WHISPERING MONK

He found her...

WHISPERING MONK

He's infected...

John sees one of the Monks run out -- undoubtedly going to tell the Abbot. John looks into his friend Kyle's face -- Fear.

KYLE

Everything's gonna be fine. Now, let's see the --

JOHN

Don't humor me -- I'm --

KYLE

Sure. Everything's gonna be fine...

If only he could explain - he can't.
John YANKS the book away -- spins -- Bursts through the crowd...

KYLE

Wait -- JOHN!

INT. SHAFT ROOM - DAY

The cage is still down, the ropes stretching into the abyss.
John runs in. Moves to the ropes. Places the book on the floor.
Tightens his scarred hands on the rope -- Mind racing:
The woman will know. Know what it is. How to combat it.
He PULLS --

There's no tension against the ropes.
John FALLS back on his ass.

The ropes WHIZ through the rusty pulley overhead.
Pile on the floor in front of John.
He lifts the end of the rope. Stares:
BITTEN THROUGH.

CUT TO:

THROUGH THE MONASTERY - SERIES OF SHOTS

John RUNS through the building.
Through the upper half of the planet.
DOWN through the many levels, past dozens of Monks oblivious to the previous night's events and the danger they face:

Monks working at Looms.
Monks in the Tanning Room.
Monks in Morning Prayer.
Past them all, to --

INT. ABBEY BASEMENT WORKROOM - DAY

Mops and brooms.
John enters. His hair is wild, breathing heavy.
He shoves the book into his medical bag.
Pushes aside a box of kindling wood to reveal a WOODEN DOOR set into the timbers of the floor.
He opens the door:

LADDERS

Extending down through huge open areas beneath the upper level.
Past vast underground viaducts that held up by wooden rafters.
Beyond that - a great underground sea that marks the center of the planet - below that, the cells.
And Ripley.

JOHN

Can smell the dank air from the lower tunnels.
He MUST go down -- The hard way.
He climbs into the darkness...

INT. ABBEY LAVATORY - NIGHT

An enormous room, over a football field in length, consisting of at least a hundred open toilet STALLS facing a hundred wall mounted SINKS. Their condition, though, bespeaks the awful truth -
The stalls furthest away from us are COBWEBBED.
Some have had the side walls stripped for fire wood.
Of the original hundred sinks, maybe twenty are still functional - A facility created for a much larger number of colonists than are left.

A SKINNY MONK washes his hands.

IN THE STALLS

Moving down the row of stalls (chest high, thank you) past a few empty stalls and several grimacing faces, the second to last being The Abbot --

ABBOT

Cold tonight --

-- continuing to the last, Bald Tribunal Member.

BALD TRIBUNAL MEMBER

Gets colder every night.

ABBOT

And every day. Never this bad. Taken so much wood out of the structure the surface wind blows right through the colony. Right under the floor --

The Bald Tribunal Member SHIVERS as a cold breeze runs along the waste trough under the floor and chills the air in his bowl.

BALD TRIBUNAL MEMBER

Right up your bloody backside. Nights like this make me miss plumbing -- Ack --!

He feels a TUGGING at his bowels - it's not piles.
A beat.

ABBOT O/S

What?

BALD TRIBUNAL MONK

I don't -- AAH --

The Bald Tribunal Monk SCREAMS as something GRABS him from below --

(note: the left half of the following 5 pages is cut off.

I have completed the text to the best of my ability.)

Something SNAKES up his rectum and hooks into his lower intestine!
He convulses in spasms of agony.

There is a terrible RIPPING SOUND as the Bald Tribunal Monk is PULLED VIOLENTLY down -- out of frame --

We PAN BACK down the row of stalls tight on each sitting Monk and see their HORRIFIED REACTION as they feel the ALIEN drag the Bald Tribunal Monk's body away under them...

THE ABBOT in his stall

He pounds on the wall --

ABBOT

Matthew? Matthew? Jesus, what's wrong?

SKINNY MONK washing his hands, sees all this. Looses control of his bodily functions as blood sprays from the faucet --

OTHER MONKS

In their stalls as the toilets reject a torrent of gore!
Blood and viscera spraying the walls -- converting the Abbey into an abattoir.

CUT TO:

SPACE

Angle on the Orbitor Arceon:

An orb of wood hands peacefully against a tapestry of celestial seas.

RIPLEY V.O.

Death...

INT. RIPLEY'S CELL - NIGHT

Darkness. Somewhere water drips into a puddle.
Ripley lays on her side on the floor with her head resting near the hole in the floor. Her eyes are closed.

RIPLEY

Wherever I go.

A HAND pushes a crust of bread through the hole.
She opens her eyes to look at the food. The White-Haired Man's head appears --

WHITE-HAIRED MAN

Take it.

RIPLEY

Thanks, but no thanks, Anthony.

She knows his name.

ANTHONY

You waiting for meat? They don't bring me meat because they know I'm an android.
Really don't need it. Bread's better for you anyway. Harder to digest, so it makes you feel fuller than you are.

RIPLEY

Not hungry.

Anthony takes a bite.

ANTHONY

Mmmm. Just a little crunchy.

Ripley twists onto her back until she's staring up at the ceiling.

RIPLEY

Waste of time.

ANTHONY

You don't eat, you'll starve to death, girl.

RIPLEY

That was the plan when they put me down here. And why should you care?

ANTHONY

Because I'm a synthetic person you don't think I can care?

RIPLEY

Believe me, that's a discussion you don't want to have with me.

ANTHONY

You told me you had a bad experience and a good one with androids --

RIPLEY

That's one of each. That means you could go either way. I'm tired of talking about this.

He pushes the bread towards her again.

ANTHONY

You've still gotta eat. You gotta fight the bastards --

RIPLEY

I'm tired of fighting. Maybe I'll be dead before he finds me. Maybe he won't get the satisfaction.

ANTHONY

He? You make it sound like this Alien has a personal score to settle with you. The biology you describe: Queen laying eggs, larvae, drone -- that's very insectoid. Insects usually don't bear grudges.

RIPLEY

And Androids usually aren't the prisoners of lunatics that believe they're ancient Greeks.

ANTHONY

Medieval Monks.

RIPLEY

Whatever.

ANTHONY

And they've only chose to live the life style, they don't believe they're -- (hears something)

What's that?

Ripley strains to listen. In the distance:
KNOCKING. Someone is knocking on the walls.
A VOICE calls out --

INT. PRISON LEVEL CORRIDOR - NIGHT

JOHN

(hoarse)

Ripley!

He moves down the hallway.
BANGS his fist against the walls every few feet --
Waits a moment for a reply, then moves on.

INT. ANTHONY'S CELL

Anthony gets off the floor - Moves so she can see into his cell:

The walls of Anthony's cell are covered with charcoal sketches - Different versions of demons and the devil. She rolls her eyes -
This guy is an Android!

Anthony crosses to his cell door, peers through eye level.

INT. PRISON LEVEL CORRIDOR HALLWAY - ANTHONY POV

John coming towards him, knocking on the doors of boarded up cells.

ANTHONY

Hey -- you knocking -- cut it out --
You're going to wake everybody up.

John moves to Anthony's door. Looks at him through the slot.
Anthony recognizes him.

ANTHONY

Brother John?

John unbolts Anthony's door.
Picks him up by his cassock --

JOHN

Anthony? Thought you dead fifteen years.

ANTHONY

Made too good for that. What're you doing?

JOHN

I -- I'm looking -- the Abbot --

ANTHONY

What? You look like you've seen the devil.

RIPLEY O/S

He has.

Anthony turns to look back at Ripley -- moves aside so John can see her face at the hole --

ANTHONY

You mean he --

Anthony turns back - John is gone.

INT. THE CORRIDOR

As John begins to PULL the outermosk planks off.

RIPLEY

I was right, wasn't I? You've seen it, you've seen the Alien?

John pauses at that.
His eyes tighten at the memory.

RIPLEY

I can tell you have. I was right.
It came with me.
(to the wall, sharp)
Go away.

John stops. Looks at the wall.
Ripley's voice comes clearly through the wood...

RIPLEY

Listen, priest, or whatever you are, I know what you want. I can't help you.
I couldn't help any of the others.
Just stop what you're doing. Go away.
Do you understand?

John has opened a crack that exposes Ripley's eyes.
He stares at her a beat, tries to think of what to reply --
He goes back to work as she continues her confession...

RIPLEY

You going to stay, Father? But you're not going to talk. Okay. Then you can listen. You should listen. Your Abbot was right. I am guilty. But not of heresy. Of murder.

John stops again.
Just stares at her eyes.

RIPLEY

The murder of the crew of the Nostromo.
That was when I first met the Alien.

That reminds him of why he's here.
He doubles his efforts at the boards...

RIPLEY

No, not the same one that's here now.
Or maybe it is. Maybe they're all the same one. I couldn't save my crew then.
I should have been able to. But I couldn't.
When I went the second time --

Her eyes soften.

RIPLEY

Then I met Newt. Newt. I fought -- stayed alive to keep Newt alive.
Hoped maybe that would make up for...

She trails off. Slides down the wall.

RIPLEY

Now he got her too. What's the point?
(hard again)
Just go away. Leave me in here. If you let me out you'll want me to help you and it will start all over again.
Let it end.

John breaks through, flickering torch light streams in the mote filled air around him. Ripley looks up at him.

RIPLEY

I can't help you.

John, heaving and panting from the exertion.
Swallows...

JOHN

Puh. (pant) Please.

RIPLEY

It never ends.

INT. CORRIDOR - PRISON LEVEL - NIGHT

A long, twisted-plank-floored corridor with a torch every twenty feet. There is MOVEMENT at the far end. Something is coming towards us - FLICKERING in and out of the light and shadow --

RIPLEY O/S

Sheep?

RIPLEY, JOHN AND ANTHONY

Running together. Anthony carries a long wooden staff like a spear. John has his bag. Ripley a torch.
We move with them.

ANTHONY

It must be able to take on some of the characteristics of the animal it grows in. Maybe they are from some sort of aggressive soldier race -- warring parties drop the eggs on opposing planets --

RIPLEY

And the alien takes on the form of the creature that finds it, assuming that animal is the dominant life form on the planet. So when it gestates in a man --

Ripley shudders at the memory.

ANTHONY

It's a biped. In a sheep or cow, a quadroped.

RIPLEY

Shit. I just didn't think it could do that to animals.

JOHN

Wait a minute - I thought you were the expert on this monster.

RIPLEY

Is that the only reason you came to get me out? Because I knew about this thing?

JOHN

Yes. I mean no. I mean, that was part of it. Look. I never thought you were wrong. I was wrong not to say anything. I was afraid to speak up. It's hard to be a monk, you know?

Ripley stops. Looks at him.

A long beat.

RIPLEY

Thank you. If anything, you're honest.

JOHN

We all are. Took vows.

RIPLEY

I don't know about the Abbot.

JOHN

I'm sure he thinks what he did was right.

RIPLEY

Is that speaking up for someone?

JOHN

No. Charity.

She smiles. They turn a corner...

INT. SLOPING CORRIDOR - NIGHT

This hallway slopes downwards a few degrees. The three find themselves trotting, leaning backward to keep their balance.

RIPLEY

All right, let's forget about the past and get on to our survival. No more prisoners behind us?

ANTHONY

Not for years.

RIPLEY

Okay -- If the Alien's had a few days to lay his eggs our only hope is to get off this - What is this?

JOHN

Arceon.

ANTHONY

Satellite.

RIPLEY

Get to my ship and get off this Satellite.

JOHN

We can't.

RIPLEY

We can't what?

JOHN

Leave Arceon. Can't leave the library --

RIPLEY

A Tape Library?

JOHN

Books.

RIPLEY

So?

JOHN

The reason we are out here. Like the Monks who guarded Monastery Libraries

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.

on remote islands off England during the First Plague --

RIPLEY

There must be books on other colonies --

JOHN

Some of these books survived the burning of the Libraries of Alexandria. They contain knowledge that exists in no other record. Their value is unestimable.

He runs his hand along the spine of the book in his bag.

JOHN

We're supposed to protect them.

RIPLEY

(to Anthony)

And what does an android have to do with all this?

JOHN

He's a spy.

ANTHONY

The Company planted me here.

RIPLEY

The Company? What does the Company have to do with this?

ANTHONY

They built this prison.

RIPLEY

Prison?

JOHN

Colony.

ANTHONY

Prison. They are all political heretics.

Ripley looks at John.

You left that part out.

JOHN

The order was more of a counter culture, a reaction to the Technology that was beginning to take over everyone's lives.
It was a simple enough idea - Read, don't watch disk. Walk, don't pump more carbons into the air. The earliest members renounced technology. Started to collect the remaining books. Nobody would have noticed if it hadn't been for the Virus.

RIPLEY

Your Abbot talked about that. The New Plague.

ANTHONY

A computer virus. A bad program. By this time the Corporate structure was transglobal, all the world's data storage systems were linked. It spread through two countries before it was stopped.

JOHN

After a scare like that, thousands flocked to our retreat. People started clamoring for written information. For our books. They abandoned the modern ways --

RIPLEY

I think I can see how this comes out. They gave up their possessions.

ANTHONY

This was a threat --

RIPLEY

To the Company.

JOHN

They sold the technology. A movement to live simply was quickly twisted by Federal agents into a political movement against the Company-controlled World Government. Too much was at stake.

RIPLEY

Too much profit.

JOHN

We were sentenced as political dissidents. This orbiter is our gulag. All the men were packed up with all our books, and towed into space. Ten thousand men. The eldest died very quickly.

RIPLEY

The Company had such a sense of irony. Sending you out on this wooden tub.

ANTHONY

I was placed among them as a sensor. Keeps tabs on the movement.

RIPLEY

So how'd they find out about you?

ANTHONY

I told them. After the supply ship's stopped coming I saw no point in keeping up the charade. Since I was a sort of walking reminder of technology, they cast me down.

RIPLEY

Join the club.

(to John)

I figured this wasn't planned. You don't have to be a genius to see it wouldn't be prudent to try to preserve man's written works for generations -- without women.

John looks embarrassed.

RIPLEY

And I don't know about your New Plague, but I was just on Earth and everything's fine.

John has a doubtful look.

RIPLEY

I was right about the Alien, wasn't I? Means I must be right about the Earth.

The logic behind her argument is uncomfortable.

JOHN

(beat)

Perhaps.

RIPLEY

That's better than nothing. Come on.

They reach the end of the corridor.

It opens into --

INT. TRANSOM SPACE - PRISON LEVEL

An enormous open space between "cell blocks."

The Wall behind them is honey-combed with corridor openings going up four stories, connected by aged, warped wooden ladders reminiscent of Indian cave dwellings. Only wooden.

The room stretches several football field lengths ahead of them -- falling off into gloom.

They stand silent for a moment, dwarfed by the size of the room and the task ahead of them. Finally --

RIPLEY

At any rate, let's forget about the Earth completely - whether you're right or I'm right what's important is getting the hell out of here. From here my ship is...?

John points up at the ceiling.

ANTHONY

In Heaven.

RIPLEY

Right. And this is...

Anthony and John nod.

ANTHONY

This orbiter was patterned after a medieval concept of the universe -- (makes a circle in the air)
They call the top half "Heaven - "

JOHN

The Abbey, the fields --

ANTHONY

The bottom half is "Hell." Where we are.

RIPLEY

Aptly named. What's in the middle?

JOHN

The sea.

ANTHONY

Really.

RIPLEY

Work with me here. How far is it back to the surface of the planet?

JOHN

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.

As a stone falls --- Five miles through the center.

RIPLEY

And the elevator -- the thing they lowered me down in?

JOHN

Ropes cut.

ANTHONY

It's smart. First he cuts their escape off, then works his way down through the monastery level by level until there isn't a thing left alive. Interesting...

RIPLEY

Well, you start appreciating him more than me and I'll find a way to shut you down, capisce, Andy? How do we get up?

JOHN

There are ladders.

She stops. John and Anthony continue on a few steps and then stop and walk back to her.

RIPLEY

Five miles with the Alien between us and there? Good luck, boys.

She turns and heads back towards her cell --
John catches her shoulder --

JOHN

You can't --

RIPLEY

Can't what? Not help you go to your deaths? I've had my fill of that.

JOHN

I need you. I can't do it alone.

RIPLEY

I've fought these creatures twice before. It take a lot to kill these things. Heavy artillery.

ANTHONY

We don't have weapons here.

RIPLEY

How about something we can make weapons from? Do you have anything like that -- any modern things here?

John SHAKES his head vehemently --

JOHN

We renounced technology. It was those things that caused the Plague.

RIPLEY

This is a man-made planet. Something has to be recirculating your air, your water.

JOHN

God?

RIPLEY

Please.

JOHN

I don't know. I just took it for granted.

RIPLEY

Most people do. Without some sort of technology we haven't got a chance.

From behind them:

ANTHONY

There is technology.

John and Ripley turn to look at him.

ANTHONY

A room. A Technology room. Fresh air and water come out.

RIPLEY

An atmosphere processing plant --

ANTHONY

The heart and lungs of Arceon.

RIPLEY

Where is it?

ANTHONY

One level beneath the underground sea.

JOHN

That's five levels up --

ANTHONY

(points into the gloom)
On the other side of the orbiter.

John looks at Ripley --

JOHN

A chance.

Ripley looks from John's earnest face to the darkness and back.

RIPLEY

All right. You've got me - so far.
But here's the deal: I don't know how many of your brethren are going to be alive when we get up there, but if we make it to my ship, you're all coming with me. We'll take as many of your precious books as we can carry, but we're going. I'm not going to fight this thing again to end up alone again. Understand?

John nods his head.

RIPLEY

We're all dead anyway. We might as well go fi --

She feels a TWINGE in her midsection -- Doubles over. Anthony and John each take an arm --

RIPLEY

Ugh - I'm all right.

She takes a deep breath.

RIPLEY

Still thawing out. I hate hyper sleep...
Come on.

CUT TO:

INT. ARCEON - MONASTERY LEVEL - NIGHT

The formerly idyllic landscape has been reduced to a scorched battlefield. Wooden huts leveled. Small fires dot the land. The air thick with ash and greasy smoke.

DOZENS OF MONKS swarm across the countryside like ants on a mound of spilt sugar. In one hand a taper or torch held high, in the other hand their WEAPON: scythe, pitchfork, hoe, whatever they could get ahold of, seem pitifully out of place. Some pound sharpened stakes into the ground, others push carts into rough barricades.

A "Platoon" of Monks huddle around trap doors open on the wooden "ground." More ladders.
They climb down to --

AN UNDERGROUND WHEAT FIELD - NIGHT

Just beneath the Monastery level of the satellite: an Underground Wheatfield. Tall golden grass stretches out for miles, swaying gently around huge wooden columns that support the Abbey fifty feet above --

THE CEILING

A lattice-work of suspended troughs and wooden pipes -- the "plumbing," the understructure, of the Monastery.

THE MONKS

Descend the ladders single file. Fear is in all of their faces though most have only heard the stories. They move cautiously into the wheat. Spread out through the field in the jaggedly drawn skirmish line.

THE ABBOT

The Bald Tribunal Monk's dried blood splattered on his cassock, stands atop an empty wooden wagon. From this vantage point he watches

THE MONKS IN THE FIELD

THRASH and POKE their way forward leaving trails through the high grass. Their attempt at an orderly progression quickly falls apart as they get strung out all over the field.

ABBOT

(sotto)

Stay together. Together...

Then another movement catches the Abbot's eye --
AHEAD of the Monks - the wheat waves against the wind.
Begins to ripple -- the wheat flattens.
a TRAIL forms.
SomeTHING is MOVING in the long grass.
Moving towards the Lead Monk -- FAST.

The Abbot opens his mouth as if to shout a warning - even though the Monk closest to the moving trail is too far away to hear him - before he can make a sound The Alien closes the gap - Feeling horribly helpless he can only watch as AARGH-Aa -!

The Lead Monk gives one strangled CRY before he disappears beneath the surface of the long grass. His taper falls among the long, dry stalks -- begins to SMOKE...

The Abbot can see the trail moving towards his men before they can. He finds his voice:

ABBOT

Run! RUN!

The Monks in the field turn from the spot where the Monk screamed towards the Abbot -- TURN THEIR BACKS to the now moving again trail --

ABBOT

No - NO. The --

The Alien hits the skirmish line at a flanking angle -- RAKING through five Monks like a scythe through wheat. His tail, arms WHIP out -- SNAP their spines like kindling. Lost torches ignite the wheat...

The field BURSTS INTO FLAME.
Smoke fills the air.

In the smoky commotion the Monks break rank and start running. Weapons in front of them -- SWINGING wildly -- Screaming. Crying. DYING.

One Frightened Monk runs through another with his pitchfork. Another hears something crashing through the grass towards him and buries his scythe in his best friend's chest.

And through it all the Alien seems to be everywhere. Using the chalky smoke for cover as it SLASHES and TEARS its way across the field --

THE ABBOT

Frozen in terror to the spot. Squints through the smoke to see what has happened to his flock. Hears the WAILS of defeat rising up from the wounded.

The waving grass is flattened as The Alien moves towards him --

He can finally pry himself from his perch on the wagon. He climbs down. As his feet hit the wooden floor he feels a shadow fall over him. The little hairs on the back of his neck stand up. He slowly turns...

THE ALIEN

Rises out of the grass in front of the Holy Man. Slowly rises up to its height of almost three meters. It's long, smooth head is no longer black and slimy.

It is golden.
It's cable-like arms are sheathed in a straw-like covering. It has adapted to the environment of the wheat field. Its now grass-like lips draw back into a ghastly parody of a smile.

The Abbot SCREAMS and RUNS.

JOHN O/S

It isn't your fault, you know.

INT. TRANSON SPACE - SERIES OF SHOTS

They move across the huge room...Anthony a few paces ahead.
Their candles throwing only enough light to see several yards.
Wind whistles through the huge room, timbers creaking like some gigantic old house settling.

RIPLEY

What?

JOHN

Those things you said before --

Ripley remembers her "confession."

JOHN

I read about it in psychology books.
Sometimes when people outlive someone they cared for, they transfer some of the guilt for that person's death to themselves.

RIPLEY

I got a belly full of that from the Psychtechs when I was on Earth. Yeah.
"Survivor Guilt syndrome," or something like that. But that's not what I was thinking about. I was thinking about my "friend" up there.

She looks up.

RIPLEY

He was on the pod. He killed Newt but not me. Why not me? It's almost like he's playing with me. Maybe they have some sort of race memory. Maybe he knows what I did to his "mother."
That's why he didn't just kill me.
That would be too easy. He has to torment me.

JOHN

You make it sound human.

RIPLEY

Hell, I don't know what it is.

John unconsciously fingers his book.

JOHN

I think I do.

INT. LADDER-WELL - PRISON LEVEL - NIGHT

At the end of the space a rough hewn wooden ladder leads to another block of cell corridors four stories up.
Years of damp air have warped the ladder.
Ripley leads the way, torch in her left hand.
They climb...

INT. END OF PRISON CORRIDOR - FOURTH LEVEL - NIGHT

Dark. Ripley is the first one up.
She raises her torch and heads down the new corridor alone.
The cells here have no doors.
She holds her torch in one --
An old skeleton sits in quiet contemplation.

AT THE LADDER

John is just climbing off, Anthony right behind him.
Anthony is winded. He reaches up for a helping hand.
John looks back and sees that Ripley has moved ahead without them, then reaches down to help Anthony.
Their hands clasp --

ANTHONY HAS A "VISION"

He is seemingly standing in an open field, sheep grazing peacefully at his side.
SUDDENLY he is ATTACKED by a horde of Medieval demons.

Fish faced demons. Man-headed bird demons.
They fly about him, grab hold of his limbs.
The Sheep nearest him opens it's mouth to reveal a horde of razor sharp fangs, SINKS THEM INTO HIS ANKLE --

Anthony SCREAMS -!

RIPLEY

Down the corridor HEARS the scream, turns back -- sees Anthony fighting with himself, struggling against John's grasp -

ANTHONY

Balanced precariously on the top of the ladder in the real world as he fights against the demons in his android mind --
He JERKS --
Pulls his left ankle out of the grasp of the DEMON SHEEP --
OFF the ladder - forty foot drop waiting below him...

JOHN

Struggles to keep his death grip on Anthony's hand.
It's all that keeps Anthony from falling back down the shaft --

JOHN

Jesus Christ. Ripleeeee -!

He PULLS with all his might...

ANTHONY

SEES a horrible BIRD-DEMON grasping his hand in its beak -- BITING through his wrist. He waves his staff in the air --
He aims for its head:

CRACK -!

WHACKS John's hand with his staff --

John HOWLS in pain - LETS GO --

Anthony TEETERS BACK ON ONE FOOT, arms waving in the air --

Ripley's hands SHOOT OUT --
GRAB Anthony's cassock --

STOP his fall.

Anthony's eyes open wide at the sight of this new horror --
A terrible, wet, black cable-armed CREATURE that's latched itself onto his cassock -- Long, shiny head.
Ripley has become the Alien.

WHACK!

Anthony HITS the Creature with his staff --
HITS Ripley on the head.

WHACK!

Again. In the face.

John tries to take hold of Anthony's staff arm --

WHACK!

The cane WHIPS against the side of his head, knocking him back.
Ripley sets her feet and pulls on Anthony's cassock -- Opens her mouth - GRUNTS --

ANTHONY sees the terrible Alien open it's maw to devour him.

WHACK!

His staff connects with the bridge of Ripley's nose.
She sees flashes of light -- loses her balance --
Pitches forward, starts to go over with Anthony --

JOHN GRABS THEM!

Wraps his arms around the struggling pair and like a sumo wrestler LIFTS and FALLS backwards - carrying the three of them into the corridor -- WHUMPH!

They land on the floor in a heap.
Anthony continues to FLAIL ABOUT --

Ripley and John pin him to the floor between them.
Finally, the vision leaves him.
He loses consciousness.

JOHN

Breathing heavy - opens his eyes --
He's staring right into Ripley's face.
Less than an inch away.
He's laying on top of her.
She's breathing heavy too.
A long, uncomfortable moment.

RIPLEY

Thanks.

JOHN

You're welcome.

They roll off each other.
Her hand goes up to her nose.
Blood.

RIPLEY

I'm all right.

John reaches into his bag, withdraws a small cotton bag.

JOHN

Hold this against your nose. It'll stop the flow.

She looks over at him questioningly.

JOHN

I'm a doctor.

She holds the small bag against her nose. The bleeding stops.
They move over to Anthony - try to help him to his feet.
He shakes them off.

ANTHONY

No - please. Just let me sit.
Awhile.

He rubs his temples. White, milk-like sweat runs down his cheek.

ANTHONY

Damn it.

RIPLEY

What was that?

ANTHONY

The reason I'm down here.

John points to his own eyes.

JOHN

Visions.

ANTHONY

Dreams.

RIPLEY

Androids can't dream...

ANTHONY

That's probably what they thought when they built me. But my brain is cyber-organic - patterned after the human brain - it functions the same way a human brain does. It accumulates random images and sensations during waking hours, but unlike the human brain that sloughs them off during sleep --

RIPLEY

Androids don't sleep.

ANTHONY

Right. Maybe they've fixed this on later models, but I don't. Do you know what happens to the human brain when it is deprived of sleep? It starts to run off the dreams while you're awake, as hallucinations. Same thing with me.
For twenty years I absorbed data on this planetoid. A little after we lost contact with Earth the visions started. They thought I was insane. I had to explain that it was because I was an android.
They liked that even less.

RIPLEY

What did you see?

ANTHONY

What I always see. Images of Monsters.
Demons.

JOHN

They're portents. They stand for an evil yet to come.

ANTHONY

Just images I've absorbed from those old books and have no way to get rid of.

RIPLEY

I saw the inside of your cell.

ANTHONY

(shrugs)

My head is full of them. I try to get them out any way I can.

His eyelids droop.

JOHN

You need sleep.

ANTHONY

I know that. I'll settle for rest.

He closes his eyes. Ripley recovers the torch.

RIPLEY

Stay with him.

Ripley tried to stand - John takes her arm, pulls her down.

JOHN

No. We all need rest. You especially.

Ripley considers him.

JOHN

Doctor's orders.

She smiles and sits.

JOHN

Besides, you see what happens when you get ahead of us. We should stay together.

RIPLEY

All right. He's still above us, anyway.

JOHN

What do you mean?

RIPLEY

I've faced this evil twice before - I guess I've gotten sensitive to it --

(beat)

You're really a Doctor?

John pats his canvas bag.

JOHN

See my bag?

RIPLEY

What's that book?

JOHN

Just a book.

RIPLEY

I don't buy "just a book" from a guy who says we can't leave the planet without the library.

JOHN

It's just... a medical book I might need.

RIPLEY

You don't have any food in there, do you?

JOHN

Only if you can eat bandages.

Ripley rubs her midsection.

RIPLEY

In a few hours that's going to sound good. Going in and out of suspended animation - Christ I probably haven't eaten in a year.

ANTHONY

(without opening eyes)

You should've eaten the bread.

RIPLEY AND JOHN

Rest!

Ripley lets her head loll back against the wall.
Closes her eyes. Time passes.
Her brow knits.
John sees this.

JOHN

You all right?

RIPLEY

Aces.

JOHN

You weren't hurt when I landed on you?
Bruised a rib?

He reaches over and puts his hands beneath her cassock.
Feels her midsection. His hands are warm.

RIPLEY

Are you sure you're a doctor?

He withdraws his hands.

JOHN

Sort of. My father passed on when we first came here. The Abbey's Physician - Father Anselm - took me in. He really raised me --

(pause)

Taught me what he could before he passed away. He was schooled on Earth.

RIPLEY

Well, I'm just hungry.

JOHN

You haven't eaten since I took you out of your tube.

RIPLEY

You did that...

She reaches out and takes hold of his hands. Turns them over.

RIPLEY

You burned yourself on the escape pod.

Her hands on his makes him feel...uncomfortable.

RIPLEY

Thank you, I guess.

They look into each other's eyes --

ANTHONY O/S

You should've eaten the bread.

Ripley, embarrassed, releases his hands.
Looks at Anthony. He's trying to stand.

ANTHONY

Enough rest. There's beasties afoot.

They start into...

A NARROW CORRIDOR

Ceiling so low their torches must be held out in front of them.
Ripley makes an effort not to move faster than the two monks.

INT. LADDER SHAFT

A great long ladder hanging in the middle of nowhere.
Seems at least a mile long.
The group climbs...

A SERPENTINE CORRIDOR

Liquid drips through the ceiling planks over head.
Falls into RED puddles on the slanted floor.

John kneels, dips his fingertips --

JOHN

Blood.
(sniffs)
Mixed with sea water.

ANTHONY

We're getting close to the center of the arc -- near the sea.

RIPLEY

Blood.

JOHN

Getting close...

John HEARS something.
Raises his hand -- "stop"
The group stops. Flatten themselves against the wall.

John takes Anthony's staff.
Moves forward with it held out in front of him...
WHIRLS around a blind corner --
SHOVES something against the wall --
Thump!
It struggles --

Ripley and Anthony run up -- raise their tapers -- Revealing:

RIPLEY

The Abbot.

Cassock torn, dirty. Hair, eyes wild.
Anthony's staff across his throat.

John pulls back.

JOHN

Father --

RIPLEY

(sarcastic)

What are you doing down here, father?
You look like you've seen something that doesn't exist.

The Abbot runs his fingers through his hair. Smoothes it down.

ABBOT

I was their spiritual leader. I was not prepared to lead them in battle.
Not against that thing.

JOHN

No one could be.

RIPLEY

I thought you said the evil was inside me -- that sealing me up was the answer to all your problems?

ABBOT

Destruction. The destruction YOU brought to us!

RIPLEY

I only tried to warn you.

ABBOT

What are you doing with this woman --?

JOHN

We are going to the Technology Room.
Trying to find some way to fight --

ABBOT

You don't join the devil to fight the devil.

ANTHONY

She's helping us --

ABBOT

Look who defends the deceiver -- the one who isn't even human. John, can't you see what is happening? On ancient Earth, during the Black Death - many believed that God had abandoned them, so they appealed to the Devil. Flocked to him hoping to save their bodies - losing their souls in the bargain.

RIPLEY

Father, we're all on the run from the same monster so let's not resort to the fire and brimstone routine. I've been enlightened about your "movement."
Pretty funny to be tried for heresy on a planet of heretics.

JOHN

Please.

The time for pretense is past.

ABBOT

All right. I was trying to keep you quiet.

JOHN

Sir --?

ABBOT

I do what I have to do to keep the Brotherhood together. We all gave up believing in Earth a long time ago. How do you think they would feel if told their exiled was in vain? That the holocaust they were trying to avoid never occurred? Those men up there have grown to live with it.

RIPLEY

And with you as their leader.

The Abbot smiles. Ripley is sharp.

ABBOT

You threatened the status quo.

RIPLEY

So you, protector of knowledge and truth, lied to them.

ABBOT

Only about you. The rest I still believe. If Earth still orbits its sun there is no way it could have survived being reduced to Barbarism.

RIPLEY

You're as bad as the Company.

JOHN

Ripley --

RIPLEY

That's why you ran. After all your talk death stared you in the face and you were afraid.

ABBOT

Not afraid of death.

RIPLEY

The Alien.

ANTHONY

The Organism.

ABBOT

The Devil.

INT. TECHNOLOGY ROOM CORRIDOR

The now four refugees work their way into the final corridor. Dark. Turns at sharp angles. Blind alleys. The floor is uneven, wood aged and twisted. Warped by years of water dripping from above. The group strings out as it moves into the darkness, candles held high...

ANTHONY

Bringing up the rear, puts his walking stick down -- SNAPP!!!

Everybody stops at the sound.

ABBOT

What was that?

Anthony pulls his stick from the grasp of a--

ANTHONY

Man trap.

They lower their candles. Look to:

THE FLOOR

Interspersed throughout the timbers --
Spring jawed, steel toothed, BEAR TRAPS.
Rusted. Open. And all around them.

ANTHONY

In case anyone tried to get in and tamper with the technology.

The four of them are standing in the middle of a mine-field of man traps. Nobody moves.

ABBOT

What do we do?

RIPLEY

Don't move. Don't breath.

ABBOT

We can't just stand here and wait.

RIPLEY

Floor's too unstable to try to walk around them.

John pulls a loose board from the corridor wall.
Turns and kneels at the trap in front of him.
Pokes the end of the board into the jaws...

SNAP!!

The others jump at the sound --

ABBOT

John - what are you doing?

John pulls the stick out of the rusted jaws.
Moves to the next trap --
Snap!!

RIPLEY

He's thinking like a leader. Everyone:
Grab wood. Spring the traps. Clear a path.
(proud of him)
Good work, Father John.

JOHN

Brother.

RIPLEY

Brother. Let's go.

Ripley pulls a plank from the wall next to her.
Exposes a bit of the surface underneath --
It's METAL.

She touches the cool, familiar material. Smiles.
Now she knows this is not a dream.
She turns and SPRINGS the trap in front of her --

SNAP!!

THE FOUR

Slowly make their way down the corridor, one hand holding a candle high, the other poking a piece of wood into the trap in front of them... SNAP-SNAP...SNAP. SNAP.
walking carefully around the yet unfired traps....

THE DOOR TO THE TECHNOLOGY ROOM

A huge wooden door with no knob or handle. Looks like it could almost be part of the wall. John and Ripley are the first to it. They put down their planks and begin to feel around the edges of the door for some purchase.
The Abbot joins them.

BACK IN THE CORRIDOR

Anthony lags behind. He senses a presence in the hallway.
Hears a sound behind him.
We see a GLIMPSE of something --
He turns towards the sound --

Empty hallway.

He thinks. Starts forward again -- with his ear cocked to the rear... SNAP!

AT THE DOOR

Ripley, John and The Abbot knock on the door, walls.
Ripley leans her head against the wall in frustration and exhaustion. To get this far, and be locked out.
She feels sick to her stomach.
How long since she had food?
She looks over at John.
He is staring at her.
He turns red at being caught. Cute.

JOHN

I just - are you alright?

RIPLEY

Tied. Without sleep, food -- I just feel my age.
(smiles)
Figuring hyperspace time, I'm almost a hundred.

She wipes her brow and goes back to knocking...

JOHN

Hello?

The wall beneath his fist sounds hollow.
Fingernails find the edge of the plank and pull --
The plank slides aside on tiny, rusty pneumatic pistons.

BEHIND THE PLANK

A primitive KEYBOARD. Circa late twentieth century.

JOHN

I think this is it.

Ripley and the Abbot move over to see.

ABBOT

Technology.

RIPLEY

Yeah - a hundred years ago. An antique.

ABBOT

(to Ripley)

Go ahead.

RIPLEY

Go ahead and what?

ABBOT

Open the door, woman.

RIPLEY

I'll get to it, but listen to me -- you may dress like you're living in the middle ages but you can't treat me like your chambermaid, or whatever Monks had.

UP THE HALL - ANTHONY

Hears the sound again. Turns.
Nothing again.
He pauses... Turns back quickly --

The wooden wall MOVES - steps forward --

THE ALIEN

Adapted itself to look like WOOD.

It's body changes -- transmutes -- Cable-like sinew snaking over grained limbs to approximate the more traditional biomechnoid alien appearance...!

ANTHONY POV

The weary android sees the Alien as a conglomeration of his many Medieval images of demons. He hears the Alien's hollow, raspy breath. It glides towards him...

Anthony steps back directly INTO A TRAP as his mind goes --

SNAP!!

The STEEL JAWS spring shut on his left ankle.
Milky blood-fluid starts to flow.

He finds himself in the same predicament as his vision -- Ankle pinned, the Alien's appendages circling him --
He screams. AAAAAAAAAAARGH --!

AT THE DOOR

Ripley is trying to work. She punches numbers into the keyboard.
She is too exhausted to see straight.
They HEAR the scream --
John RUNS back --
Traps SNAPPING around him --
Ripley turns towards the sound --
The Abbot pushes her back to the keyboard --

ABBOT

OPEN IT!!

Ripley knits her brows. Forces herself to focus.
Her fingers punch the keys.

THE ALIEN

Steps towards Anthony --
Snap-snap-SNAP-AP-!!
Traps snap closed on its tail, its legs --

HALFWAY DOWN THE HALL - JOHN

SNAP!!

His cassock is snagged in a trap.
He TEARS right out of it --

AT THE END OF THE HALL

Anthony is in the clutches of the Alien.
He WHACKS at the Beast with his staff, but his blows fall like drops of rain on an elephant.

The Alien LIFTS him up to face him. Anthony SCREAMS as his left leg is stretched against the tension of the trap's chain -- Blood pouring as white ribbons from his almost severed ankle.

FACE TO FACE WITH THE ALIEN

Anthony drops his staff and grabs each of the alien's arms with his own android arms. His extra-human strength keeps them from squeezing him any tighter, but he cannot avert his gaze from the smooth, eyeless face.

The Alien considers him. Its thin, almost translucent lips pull back to reveal rows of splinter-like teeth. The jaws spread, making room for the distended tongue:

The Alien HISSES --
PUTS OUT Anthony's EYES with a thin stream of ACIDIC SALIVA -- Artificial skin BUBBLES AND BLISTERS --

JOHN

Picks up Anthony's staff.
Begins to FLAIL away at the demon.

AT THE DOOR

Ripley is getting no response from the keyboard.

ABBOT

What's wrong?!

Ripley slides the keyboard out of the wall compartment.
The wires are so old they've broken.

RIPLEY

Shit.

She BITES the ends off the wires - spits out the insulation.
TWISTS the bare wire ends together...
Sweat runs into her eyes.

JOHN

WHACKS the Alien with Anthony's staff --
Again. Again. The creature will not let Anthony go.
The Android writhes in its grasp, his face now a blistered, pulpy mass, eyes gone.

RIPLEY

Finishes hot wiring. The keyboard hums to life.
Her fingers FLY across the keys --

THE ALIEN

Tail wraps around John's waist --
Pulls him towards it --
LIFTS him - turns him upside down --

Lips PULL BACK --

John's hands GROPE at the floor --

Sharp metal teeth SPREAD --

THE DOOR KEYBOARD

Lights: CODE ACCEPTED
Ripley's head whips towards the corridor --

JOHN

His hand closes around the end of one of the traps --
He brings it up --

SNAP!!

It SLAMS closed on the Alien's extended Tongue -!
The Beast bellows!!
Whips its head from side to side --
Can't shake off the trap --
ACID BLOOD sprays out --!
Lands as pools of FIRE on the wooden floor.

THE DOOR

Opens with a strained blast of dust -- SEE-WHORCSSH!
The Abbot LEAPS inside --

RIPLEY

It's open!!

JOHN

PRIES Anthony's ankle out of his trap.
Scoops up his staff, drags the moaning Android -- Back up the corridor --

RIPLEY

Stands in open Technology Room doorway --

ABBOT

Close it -- close it -- it's coming -

RIPLEY

We wait. John!!

John and Anthony appear out of the shadows --

Run/hobble towards the door --

THE ALIEN

Acid Blood DISSOLVES the traps' steel jaws. PULLS itself free.
Head whips towards the escaping Monks -- if it had eyes they would narrow to slits in anger -- RUNS up the hall --

RIPLEY

Follows John and Anthony into the Technology Room.
On the other side of the doorway: another keyboard.
She punches keys --

ABBOT

Hurry --

JOHN

HURRY!!

THE ALIEN

Yards away -- Limping. Hissing.
ANGRY.

THE KEYBOARD

Acceptance tone "bings."
The Door starts to slide down --

The Alien is feet away -- INCHES...

The door seats itself closed with a solid THUD.

Ripley, panting, rests eyes closed against the rough wooden door. A beat.
She turns to the room for the first time and finds --

WINDMILLS

Real Man of LaMancha wood and cloth windmills. Two story high arms slowly rotating. Moving enormous volumes of air through the wind tunnel-like room. As far as the eye can see.
Turning, creaking.
WHOOSH...WHOOSH...
But no electronics. No radio. No weapons.
This is the Technology Room.

Ripley collapses to the floor and loses consciousness.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. SULACO ESCAPE SHIP #4 (DREAM)

Yellow warning lights PULSE. Those goddamned STROBES are flickering on and off. Steam blasts out overhead pipes.

The blue-spark pilot light muzzles of a FLAME THROWER shyly pokes out from behind a console. It's owner cautiously follows...

RIPLEY

She's breathing heavy.
She's wearing a sweat soaked tank top.
Her eyes flit from side to side. Then up. Then down.
She pokes the weapon out ahead of her and moves into the pod.
She silently crosses the distance to Newt's sleep tube:

IN THE TUBE

Newt sleeps peacefully.
Ripley allows herself one maternal smile, then remembers.
Her grip TIGHTENS in the Flame Thrower in her hands.
She flips a switch to HI HEAT.
Moves around the sleep tubes...

A noise to her left.
She WHIRLS --

Pulls the trigger on the flame thrower -- click. Nothing.
She tries again -- a half-hearted burp, but no flame.
She begins to panic --

Senses the Alien's presence.
Looks left, right, up - no Alien...
Looks down:

The Alien's tail is COMING UP BETWEEN HER LEGS.
She turns --

Right into it's grasp.
The useless flamethrower SKITTERS across the floor.
She PUMMELS the beast with balled up fists.

RIPLEY

No. NO! I beat you! I beat you mother fucker!!

The Alien spins her -- pushes her over across the sleep tube --
Like it's taking her from behind!

Ripley looks down into the sleep tube:

Newt is gone.
Her doll's head lays in a pool of blood.
The Alien wraps his arms around Ripley.
Thin lips pull back for a kiss.

She SCREAMS.

INT. TECHNOLOGY ROOM - REALITY - DAY

Ripley opens her eyes.
WHOOSH...WHOOSH...
She's still in the room with the windmills.
Somehow this place seems less real than her dream.
She looks around:

John is sitting next to her, writing on a piece of parchment.
He smiles a relieved smile.

JOHN

I thought we'd lost you.

RIPLEY

What are you writing?

JOHN

Last will and testament.
(beat)
Just kidding.

She looks to her left:
Anthony is lying on his back, cotton bandage wrapped around his eyes. His ankle is a swollen mess. Wires are hanging out.

RIPLEY

Is he --?

JOHN

Resting.

(shakes his head)

He'll be fine.

ANTHONY

No I won't. He's a terrible liar.

RIPLEY

I'm sorry.

ANTHONY

It's ironic. I guess my visions were prescience after all. How will I ever resolve that with my artificial conscience?

A creaking floorboard to Ripley's right draws her attention to The Abbot. He's pacing.

ABBOT

Do you see what you've delivered us into?

RIPLEY

Yeah. Lead me not into temptation to kick your -- ahh --

Ripley tries to stand - her head spins.

WHOOSH...WHOOSH...

RIPLEY

Oh shit.

The entire room THROBS with the rhythm of the wind.

RIPLEY

Where is the Big Boy -?

The Abbot points to the door.

ABBOT

On the other side of that door.
Waiting for us to starve to death.

Ripley moves to the door and feels it's cold surface.

RIPLEY

It's playing with us. It could get in here any time it wants.

ABBOT

Why should he enter? He knows that one of the people in this room is in league with him.

JOHN

Sir. We're all in the same coracle, so to speak.

ABBOT

Maybe more than one of us.

RIPLEY

Let's talk about the facts, Mr. Abbot.

She looks at the windmills.

WHOOSH...WHOOSH...

RIPLEY

This is your technology?

ABBOT

Even this is forbidden to us.

RIPLEY

Well then, the facts are that we're screwed.

She moves into the room. Walks around one of the Windmills.

RIPLEY

An Eco system. Nothing to recycle your atmosphere except the green plants. Winds generated down here --

(looks at the floor)

Windmills use the natural surface winds to turn wheels underground, create tides on the seas to recirculate your water...

ANTHONY

More than that. There are pumps beneath the floor - I can feel their vibration.

RIPLEY

Probably pumping this air through charcoal filters.

WHOOSH...WHOOSH...

RIPLEY

It gets colder all the time here, right?

John looks at her questioningly.

JOHN

Yes...

RIPLEY

Your wood burning fires throw soot into the atmosphere, building the cloud layer - cutting off the sun's rays - cooling the planet, forcing you to burn more wood.

WHOOSH...WHOOSH...

ANTHONY

The Greenhouse Effect. It's how the Earth almost destroyed itself in the late 20th century.

RIPLEY

Don't you see? This is a planet set to self destruct. Not in ten minutes or two hours but soon. Your atmosphere here is finite. If the plants die the fires will eat up all the oxygen - this planetoid will be dead - Everyone will die.

The Abbot has the look of a man who has been beaten in the last few meters of a Marathon.

ABBOT

It's here. I was just hoping I would be dead long before it came to this.

JOHN

What?

ABBOT

We're supposed to die here. That's the point.

RIPLEY

Wait a minute -- you were exiled --?

ABBOT

The punishment for our crime was death.

Anthony sits up.

ANTHONY

This planet is the supreme triumph of planned obsolescence. A certain amount of primitive materials with an atmosphere processing system as fragile as a real environment but not replenishable.

The Abbot has a faraway look in his eyes...

ABBOT

Poetic justice for the anti-technologists. The Company's best work. You know, I used to be a corporate executive. Middle range V.P. Then my wife got hit by a speed craft. I chucked it all and joined the order. Be a monk -- see the world. Being here, being chairman of the board...

RIPLEY

No, now I understand why I landed here. To join you happy lunatics in your deaths.

Ripley moves away...

John starts after her.

JOHN

Ripley, wait --

The Abbot stands, blocks his way.

ABBOT

Where can she go? She's trapped.
(beat)

Trapped inside her own prison. A prison in her mind. Inside her mind. Dancing. Sparklets of light - dance with the june bugs in the recesses of our minds they are coming to dance in the shadow of...

John and Ripley turn to look at the Abbot.

He begins to speak faster. Faster.

He shakes. Vibrates is more accurate --

A trickle of BLOOD runs from his left ear...

ABBOT

Riding the wild winds of change No escape No escape for the wicked Evil Evil thy name is woman. Woman. Woman he is coming. He is coming for youuuuuuuuu --*

SPLORTCH-KT--!!

The Abbot's HEAD EXPLODES --!!!

Like a ripe melon dropped ten stories onto pavement.

Blood, bone, hair and brain matter SPRAY John.

John SCREAMS.

A HORRIBLE ALIEN HEAD BURSTER

Is all that sits atop the blood spurting neck of the Abbot.
It keeps it's hold on the Abbot's spinal cord -- The Abbot's body continues to stagger around, arms jerking mechanically as lack of fresh nerve impulses from the brain works its way through the system.

Ripley SCREAMS.

The Infant Alien-headed corpse stumbles towards her --
She plucks Anthony's staff from the floor and SWINGS --
-- Like a child hitting a baseball from a TEE --

WHACK-K -!!

BLASTS the Chest/head burster across the room --

It hits the floor SCRAMBLING. Scuttles down into where the Windmills meet the floor. Disappears.

RIPLEY

BASTARD!! It came out of his fucking head!

ANTHONY

I didn't have to see that to know what that means.

RIPLEY

He sent him to us. That bastard outside.
I can't get away from him. He's fucking with my mind. He's my punishment!

ANTHONY

I'm confused. Before you said it came out of the torso, not the head --

RIPLEY

I don't feel like a discussion of Alien biology.

John comes up next to her.

JOHN

Ripley, don't --

She pushes him away and sinks to the floor.

RIPLEY

I should just wait for the air to run out...

JOHN

I believe - I know - that we can win -- there is an answer in our books.

RIPLEY

Your books? Your books are gone, Brother.
Your world is gone. Once that thing starts to lay its eggs, all your brothers - if they aren't already - are dead.

JOHN

If that's true, then all of us, the books, are consigned to ashes.

He clasps his hands and bows his head.
The Abbot's blood drips off his hands.
Plip - plop!
Into a little puddle at Ripley's feet.
She stares at the blood. Aahk.
Feels the PAIN again.
Runs her hand across her chest...

ANTHONY O/S

Ripley?

RIPLEY

What?

ANTHONY

There are several inconsistencies between this and the other Aliens you described.

RIPLEY

Give it up.

ANTHONY

I think this is important. This may help us fight it. The creature that I fought in the hall - when I first saw it, it had camouflaged itself to look like wood.

Ripley looks up.

RIPLEY

Wood? When I saw it in my room it looked the way it did before -- black, mechanical -- unless that was a dream.

ANTHONY

I don't think it was. I think that this creature, if it is the efficient predator that you say it is, has the ability to adapt to its environment.

RIPLEY

Then the reason they've always looked the same to me is that I only ever saw them in the same environment.

ANTHONY

Or this may be an as yet unseen stage of development -- you saw a queen -- This could be like a King ant -- more highly advanced than the drone, bred for survival -?

JOHN

How does this explain the thing that came out of the ewe's chest? The Abbot's head?

RIPLEY

Maybe it can deposit different types of eggs. The chest burster is probably dormant until the host eats - The first one I ever saw came out of Kane after he started to eat --

And in one horrible moment she realizes:
She hasn't eaten. The pain in her chest...

RIPLEY

No.

Anthony "looks" towards her - does he realize as well?

JOHN

No what?

RIPLEY

No, we're not beat yet, Father --

JOHN

Brother --

Ripley gets up.

RIPLEY

Brother. Not yet. If he's taunting me, then maybe we can use that. We can beat this bastard. We can get to my ship.
We can live.

CUT TO:INT. TECHNOLOGY ROOM

John stands by a ladder that runs up to a trap door in the ceiling. Holds a torch.
Ripley is on the ground with Anthony, his injured leg splayed out in front of him. Skin is palid.

ANTHONY

Don't have second thoughts. Blind and crippled I would only slow you down.
Give him time to figure out what you're doing. Just leave me my staff.

RIPLEY

Okay. Good luck.

She shakes his hand. He pulls her closer.
Anthony's empty eye sockets seem to see as he looks at Ripley.

ANTHONY

Ripley, I know. Good luck.

RIPLEY

Sit tight.

Ripley crosses to John. Poised at the bottom of the ladder they look up at the trap door on the ceiling.

RIPLEY

He could be waiting on the other side of that door. We might not get ten feet before he kills the three of us.

He shakes his head.

JOHN

We had better go, then.

He smiles.
She smiles back.
They move up the ladder.

It leads up a damp, short shaft, walls GREEN with algae, to

AN UNDERGROUND DOCK - NIGHT

The ladder shaft opens onto a barnacled pier. Ripley and John climb out onto the wooden structure. Before them:

AN UNDERGROUND SEA stretches the width of the entire planet, over five miles across. The floor of the lowest level of the top half of the orbiter makes a ceiling that looms a hundred feet overhead.

The water sparkles with a golden glow.

JOHN

Must be day on the surface of the planet.

RIPLEY

Where is the light coming from?

JOHN

Mirrors. Reflect the outside light down great shafts -- through lenses. That's what they make in the glass factory.
Lenses. Look --

She turns:

A HUGE WATERFALL

Lit from within by daylight beaming down from above -- pours into the sea a short distance from them.

JOHN

Opens to the surface. Water flows in and out. I don't know how. There's one at either end. I came down on the other side.

RIPLEY

What do we do?

John points to three small leather and wood coracles bobbing at the end of their ropes.

JOHN

We cross.

INT. TECHNOLOGY ROOM - DAY

Anthony has dragged himself to a sitting position against the bottom of one of the windmills. He winces as he prods his tender ankle with the end of his staff. It SPARKS.
The large canvas arms of the windmill rotate above his head.
The wind blows through his hair.

WHOOSH...WHOOSH...

Feels good.

Anthony reaches up and waves his hand of his "eyes."

ANTHONY

Now the seer can only see what God wants him to. Forty years on a planet of Monks and I've finally found religion.

A floor board CREAKS.

Anthony strains to hear:

ANTHONY

John? Ripley?

WHOOSH...WHOOSH...

He knows it is not.

ANTHONY

Well come then. I haven't got forever.

A shadow falls across his face. He can feel it.
He doesn't have to see what is here.

THE UNDERGROUND OCEAN - DAY INTO NIGHT

The leather boat makes its way across the sea.
John rows while Ripley holds the torch aloft.
As night falls she takes the oars.

The Ocean is dead calm. The coracle glides across the glass-like surface. John flexes his scarred fingers.

RIPLEY

Your hands okay?

JOHN

They'll be fine. You've been on a boat before.

Ripley squints ahead of them.
The ocean seems to go on forever.

RIPLEY

I was a warrant officer on a ship -- but I did all my sailing in space.

JOHN

Father Anselm used to take me on his coracle when I was little.

Ripley leans forward - scans his face.

RIPLEY

How old were you when they towed this satellite out here?

JOHN

Five. The Abbot said they put us to sleep for the thirty years it took to get here. We've had almost forty more. Until now.

RIPLEY

What happened to your mother?

JOHN

Never had one. I mean, never knew her.
I mean, I did, once. She left my father when he joined the movement. If she hadn't I wouldn't be here. They kept the other children with the women, on Earth. That was too long ago now. Like a dream.

Ripley's face grows strangely dark. She turns to the water.

RIPLEY

Did you know that I was a mother?

JOHN

The girl in the ship with -?

RIPLEY

No. On Earth. I never mentioned my daughter. My daughter. I have - had
I guess, by now - a daughter on Earth.
Kathy. She was nine when I signed on to the Nostromo. Mommy will be home before you know it I said. My shares would have set us up good. Then I lost sixty years floating around in a rescue pod. Thanks to the Alien. I came home to face a bitter, 70 year old woman. My daughter. A little girl who's mother never came home.

JOHN

Jesus Christ.

RIPLEY

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.

They said I should have been happy to be alive. Funny, huh? That's why I went back the second time. Not so I could fight it -- You can't fight it -- So I could let it kill me.

She rubs her chest --

JOHN

You didn't choose to get lost in space.

RIPLEY

Thanks for the try Father --

JOHN

Brother.

RIPLEY

Brother, but I'm not looking for absolution. I couldn't be a good mother to my daughter. I couldn't be a good mother to Newt. But I can be a good mother to you. I can make sure you survive.

Suddenly they feel rain --

Ripley holds out her hand.

Her eyes open wide at what she sees.

John takes the oars as she holds the torch over the side:

The Ocean has become red with BLOOD.

Blood DRIPS down from the ceiling around them.

RIPLEY

Blood.

John looks up.

JOHN

From the levels above.

His face goes white.

JOHN

He must have slaughtered all --

RIPLEY

Don't think about it. Don't think about what's up there. Just row.

As Ripley takes the torch away from the water, tiny ripples move across the surface.

She doesn't notice.

A SHAPE

Passes underneath the boat. A swimming CREATURE. The Alien. Thanks to the reflective qualities of water, it appears HUGE. Dwarfs their coracle.

INT. TECHNOLOGY ROOM - NIGHT

All the windmills are BURNING.

Flaming arms lazily turning.

Anthony is not in sight.

Whoosh...Whoosh...

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE OCEAN - NIGHT

Another dock with ladders going up and down.
Ripley and John climb out of the coracle.
Don't waste time tying off. They go --

UP THE LADDER

A hundred foot climb. The wood is twisted.
Rungs have been torn away in some places.
They pull themselves up sections that have only the tiniest foothold. The temperature rises as they do.
Sweat runs into their eyes.

Soon they can see the floor above them:
BLACKENED by intense heat.
They climb.

INT. UNDERGROUND WHEAT FIELDS - NIGHT

Ripley and John come up from the level below.

RIPLEY

Holy shit.

John crosses himself.

Another testament to the terrible battle with the Alien.
Reduced to just a huge, blackened floor.
All the crops burned to ash --
Their charred stalks mingled with the corpses of roasted Monks.
Their nostrils assailed by the stench of the dead --
Ripley would puke if she had any food in her body.

JOHN

There's Andrew. And Raphael. Peter...

RIPLEY

Stop. How far?

JOHN

We're right below the Abbey now.

They cross the smoldering field.
The scorched floor threatens to give way under John's feet --
Ripley pull him to one side.

THE MONASTERY LEVEL

Heaven has become HELL.
The ground, the buildings, the Sky-timber - all blackened.
FIRES burn everywhere. Air choked with gray smoke and dust pouring in from the Orbiter's surface through rends in the vaulted ceiling.

RIPLEY AND JOHN

Climb through a hole where a trap door has been torn off it's hinges. They look at the grim tableau:

Monks impaled on their own pikes.
Tangled together in their own pungy stakes.
Alien cocoon material cobwebbed over their bodies.

THE MONASTERY

Flickering fires lit the first few floor windows.
Ripley takes a step towards it --

Reaches back and pulls John...

INT. GLASS FACTORY - NIGHT

The Glass furnace boils almost to the point of overflow.
Small fires burn out of control around the room.
Finished glass pieces BURST from the heat.
Ripley and John enter.

JOHN

This is the glassworks. They have tools here -- (spots)
Kyle --

He runs across the room --

BROTHER KYLE

Sits calmly at the Marver table.
He places playing cards on the table in front of him.
Solitaire.
He sings to himself quietly.

KYLE

(sotto)
Can't see my baby.
Don't see my baby. Bay be.

John grabs him by the lapels - pulls him to his feet.
The playing cards fall to the floor --
Kyle watches them, not John.

JOHN

Kyle. Brother Kyle.

KYLE

Cards on the floor, fifty two pickup.
Black king on red queen, put the ace up --

John SHAKES him.

JOHN

Kyle goddammit!

Ripley moves closer.

RIPLEY

John - it's too late --

Kyle begins to sing faster. Faster.

KYLE

Ace up. Put the ace up. Redaceupup.
Blackaceup.Up.Pup-pup-pup-chakaboomloommawhacka -- Booomalooma looma --

Ripley and John look at each other.
They know what this means.
John pulls a length of rope off a nearby table.
Moves in front of Kyle. Looks into his glassy eyes.
A tear runs down his cheek.

JOHN

Keep singing, my friend.

John loops the rope around Kyle's neck.

Strangles him.
Eases the lifeless body to the floor.
Stares at it.

RIPLEY

Pulls a blowing iron from the rack. Feels its weight and balance. A reasonable weapon. She crosses to John.

JOHN

I killed him. I'm a doctor and I killed him.

RIPLEY

You had to. You're supposed to end suffering.

She hands him a pontil, a pointed iron spear used to form the molten glass shapes.

RIPLEY

Let's get the hell out of here.

INT. STAIRWELL - NIGHT

Ripley and John move up the stairs.
Flickering orange lit from below.
Smoke and soot rise from the first on the lower floors.

INT. LIBRARY - NIGHT

They enter carefully. The room is exactly as John left it, books out of shelves, hanging on their chains.

RIPLEY

He's made a mess.

John pushes ahead of her.

JOHN

No. He hasn't been up here yet. I did this.

He moves to the nearest shelf and uses his pontil to pry open the lock --

JOHN

Here - philosophy - we'll start here --

AAAROO --!

A HAIRY BLUR flies out from between the stacks -- WHUMPH! Knocks John to the floor --
Licks his face.

JOHN

Mattias!

The happy dog leaps all over his master.

JOHN

He waited. Ripley, this is Mattias. My dog. Good fellow.

Ripley crosses to them.

RIPLEY

I'm glad. Really. But we've probably only got a few minutes before this entire place goes up in flames. Just grab whatever books you want and --

Ripley leans in to pet Mattias.
Mattias draws his lip back. Growls.
He's looking over Ripley's shoulder.

She turns around slowly...

THE ALIEN

Standing in the open doorway.
It's in bad shape from the man traps.
Lost a foot. Tongue hanging out, useless.
Parts of it look like wood. Parts of it look like wheat.

It carries Anthony's waterlogged, limp body -- POPS off his head like a grape from the bunch.
Tosses the corpse at Ripley's feet.

I could swear it's trying to smile.

RIPLEY AND JOHN

Back against the book stacks.
John grabs Mattias' collar.
The Dog GROWLS at the Alien intruder...

JOHN

Easy, boy...

RIPLEY

Is there another way out?

JOHN

Not that will do us any good.

THE ALIEN

Limps into the room dragging one foot.
It's breathing is labored. Dripping acid blood leaves a thin trail of fire behind it.

JOHN

We hurt it.

The Alien draws itself up to its full height --
Even wounded it is one dangerous mother fucker.

RIPLEY

You wanna give it a bandage? Look --
Where is my ship from here?

JOHN

On the roof directly above this room.

RIPLEY

Here's the plan --

JOHN

But the books --

RIPLEY

Forget the books!

RUFF!!

Mattias pulls free from John's grasp -- Runs to the Alien --

RIPLEY

Shit.

MATTIAS

Snaps and barks at the Alien --
Leaping about to dodge its claws.
Draws its attention --

RIPLEY AND JOHN

RUN at the Alien.
It is trying to spear the dog with its tail.
John swings the iron rod -- THWAP -!
HITS the Alien across the back of its bulbous head --

It turns to him --

SPLIIIIITCH -!

Ripley SHOVES the blowing iron into the Alien's torso.
His acid blood SPURTS out the end of the hollow tube --
SPLATTERS Ripley's cassock - she TEARS it off --

John grabs Mattias -- pulls him back.

The Alien SPINS in a circle --
Blood SPRAYING around him -

Creating a CIRCLE OF FIRE about him --
IGNITING the books --

JOHN

No! THE BOOKS!!

RIPLEY

Don't --!

John steps forward -- Ripley grabs for him --
The ACID EATS through the wooden floor --

THE FLOOR COLLAPSES

The Alien, John and Ripley PLUMMET down -!
THROUGH the next floor --

INTO THE GLASSWORKS

The Alien FALLS into the molten glass vat -- SCREECHES - arms flailing as it sinks beneath the surface of the thousand degree liquid.

JOHN

Finds himself HANGING over the bubbling glass vat - Caught - DANGLING on the Flying Fox rope. Five feet away - the ledge the Flying Fox is launched from. He looks down:

He can see the huge open vat of molten glass below him. To its right, the Water DUMP TANK - a large wine cask-looking affair where finished pieces are cooled. He looks up:

Ripley holding onto the edge of the broken floor above.

JOHN

Are you all right?

Ripley grunts an affirmative response.
At least is she falls, it will only be a twenty-foot drop to the floor. John is looking at instant par-boiling.
John starts to move hand over hand UP the rope. He begins to sweat.
A drop of sweat falls...
HSSS!
POPS AND SIZZLES as it hits the surface of the molten glass --

RIPLEY

Tries to pull herself up to the floor above --
The next level is a raging fire.

She can only hang and DROP. She DOES -!
Falls the two stories.
Bends her knees and ROLLS on impact.

JOHN

Has reached the ledge overlooking the furnace.
He stands. Sees Ripley slowly rising --

JOHN

Ripley -!

Ripley shakily gets to her feet.
Hops on one foot.

RIPLEY

Aargh. I'm fine. Let's get the fuck out of --

SUDDENLY

THE ALIEN'S head breaks the surface of the molten glass.
SCREAMING. STEAMING. It is white-hot - translucent -- covered with --
It looks like MOLTEN GLASS!!

Hook-like hands grasp the edge of the tank --
It tries to climb out --

Ripley turns to run. Tender ankle gives out.
She falls face down on the floor --
Rolls over --

THE ALIEN is going to climb out of the vat --
She SCREAMS --

JOHN

Grabs the Flying Fox handle.
SWINGS down the rope - across the room --
PAST the Alien --

It turns away from Ripley -
She scrambles across the floor...

John lands HARD.
Points --

JOHN

Ripley - the lever!!

Ripley looks next to her: a burning wooden lever.

The Alien has one foot out of the glass furnace --

RIPLEY grabs the lever -- Hsssst!
Putting out the fire with her hand -- Pulls --

THE HUGE DUMP TANK OF WATER

DUMPS. Empties a thousand gallons -- RAINS DOWN on the Alien.
It HOWLS in pain --

The Molten Glass instantly COOLS --
The rapid extreme temperature change causes the beast to BE-THWOOOoooOOM -!!
EXPLODE into a million pieces...!!!!

Ripley helps John off the floor.
They are battered. Bloody.
They look into the vat.
The steam clears...

The room is littered with Alien Bits.
Each piece is encased in glass --
Trapped like a fly in amber.

JOHN

Saw that happen to a bottle once.

RIPLEY

(panting)

Beat... Beat him - ugh --

She grabs her stomach as her knees give out.
John gives her an arm for support.

JOHN

We've got to get to the Library --

RIPLEY

Don't worry. Ship. Just --

They look up:

Mattias looks down through the hole in the floor.
BARKS...

INT. LIBRARY - NIGHT

An INFERNO.
Every bookshelf ablaze. The floor dotted with pools of flame.
Ripley and John are at the door - held back by the heat --

John tries to enter the room --
Ripley grabs him --

RIPLEY

Don't be stupid --

JOHN

Some of them! I've got to save some of them! Mattias!!

Mattias yelps in response. Threads his way through to them.
Ripley spins him to face her. Tears stream down his cheeks.

RIPLEY

They're lost. You did your best. If you get out, it wasn't in vain.

We've got to live!!

She YANKS him into the hallway --

CUT TO:

EXT. MONASTERY - THE ROOF - NIGHT

Ripley's good foot KICKS down the burning planks that surround the escape ship. John and Mattias stand behind as she climbs through to the ship. John looks around:

The ABBEY LEVEL is devastated. The air is filled with smoke. The Abbey is burning. The Library is in flames.

John looks down at his medical bag.
Torn, bloody, scorched, it still hangs from his shoulders.
Inside: The only remaining book.

RIPLEY O/S

Come on in!

John and Mattias step through --

INT. SULACCO ESCAPE POD #4 - NIGHT

Ripley CLICKS on the lights.
John lifts Mattias into the hatch.

JOHN

The Library --

RIPLEY

I told you -- the Earth is still there --

Ripley checks an instrument: Elapsed travel time.
Her brows knit. She TAPS the gauge.

RIPLEY

Not working.

JOHN

What does that mean?

RIPLEY

It means I don't know how long I was in hyper sleep.

JOHN

It means the Abbot could've been right --

RIPLEY

It means my clock isn't working. We have to get out of here. Even if he was right this ship's onboard computer is filled with man's knowledge.

JOHN

Not everything. Some things will be lost forever.

RIPLEY

Then man starts over. He's done it before.

She pushes a few buttons. Somewhere under the floor a propulsion source HUMS to life. THROBBING through the soles of John's feet. Ripley is absorbed in her work.

RIPLEY

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.

Okay. The seals weren't broken so we're probably clear. But those dead monks out there are going to start hatching soon. Let's get ready to take off.

JOHN

What can I do?

RIPLEY

Here, I need a compressor tank from in that compartment.

She motions towards an open door.
John enters the compartment.
Whoosh-CLANG -!
The door closes behind him.

JOHN

Hey! What?!

He looks out the window in the door.

Ripley is staring at him, punching keys on a pad next to the door.

JOHN

Hey - I'm locked in.

Mattias scratches at the door.

RIPLEY

I know. I locked you in.

JOHN

What?

RIPLEY

I'm not going with you. I've got one inside me.

JOHN

What?! You can't --

She runs a hand across her midsection.

RIPLEY

I figured it out. That's why it didn't kill me. He must have impregnated me when I was in the stasis tube.

(remembers nightmare)

It hasn't come out yet because I haven't eaten, It's still dormant. So either I eat and it kills me or I don't eat and I starve to death. Either way I die.

John pulls the Medieval Tome out of his medical bag.

JOHN

My book -- I know what to do --

RIPLEY

What, an exorcism? No good.

JOHN

You can't do this. Ripley - listen to me - you're confusing feeling of guilt for actual sin - I can help you --

RIPLEY

Alien 3 Script at IMSDb.

(ignoring)

I've set a time lock. When the pod escapes the Colony's gravitational pull this compartment will open. Then all you have to do is get into the Stasis tube with Mattias and press the blue button. With any luck a freighter or something will pick you up. Good luck.

He pounds his fists against the door.

JOHN

NO! No, Goddammit - you can't do this. You can't let it win.

She turns away from the door.

RIPLEY

It always wins. We killed it, but it's still inside me -- You're my last chance. If I can keep you alive it'll make up for all those I've lost.

JOHN

Listen to me! You have to let me try! Ripley: You're MY only chance!

She's listening...

JOHN

I told you Father Anselm raised me. He raised me and when he was dying I couldn't do anything to save him. I didn't know enough. It was my fault he died. If you don't let me try to save you my body will live but my soul will be dead.

Ripley turns and stares at him.

JOHN

Please.

CUT TO:

THE PAGE

A MEDIEVAL ETCHING.

A Monk vomits up the devil.

Pull back as John lowers Ripley to the pod floor. John closes his eyes. Closes the book.

He pours some water into a small plastic cup. Retrieves a small pouch of herbs. Opens it. Wrinkles his nose - they smell -- pours these ancient medicines into the space age cup.

RIPLEY

What is this stuff?

JOHN

(forceful)

Something that will make you well. Something that will make you sick.

RIPLEY

I don't --

JOHN

Shut up and drink.

He lifts the back of Ripley's head --
FORCES the drink down her throat.

John swings his leg over her midsection. STRADDLES her.
Presses his two hands together in prayer.
Then balls them into one fist.
Takes a deep, preparatory breath...

Ripley starts to GAG -- Cough.
Her body starts to JERK --

John BRINGS HIS FIST DOWN INTO HER STOMACH -- WHAMM -!!

Ripley CONVULSES -- has the dry heaves --

WHAM! WHAM --!
John PUMMELS Ripley's diaphragm!

She sputters -- VOMITS a thick mucous-like substance -- HEAVES --

Ripley's back arches --
She SCREAMS a gut wrenching WAIL --
Her torso BULGES as the creature is forced upwards.

John BEARS down --
Pushes UP under her ribs --
FORCING the chest-burster up her throat --

Ripley fights for air as the alien STOPS halfway up her esophagus -- She's choking --

John crosses himself -- takes a deep breath --
Lowers his mouth to hers -- Inhales. Exhales. CPR.

THE ALIEN CHEST BURSTER

SLITHERS out of Ripley's mouth --

INTO JOHN'S!!
Reptilian tail whips about before disappearing down his gullet.

John falls back against a computer console.
Gagging. Fights to speak.

Ripley raises herself up on one elbow.
Alien mucous drooling down her chin.
Hair matted against her forehead.

RIPLEY

Why?

JOHN

Choking. It was the only way.

He drops the open book in front of her:
She sees the etching.

JOHN

Gulps back the oozing slime.
Struggles to his feet.

JOHN

They knew.

RIPLEY

But you --

Ripley tries to stand - to go after him --
She can't sit up -- feels like a rib might be cracked.

RIPLEY

You'll die --

John stumbles to the Pod door. Turns back.

JOHN

That's idea. Join...my brothers. If we were right, Heaven. If we were wrong -- either way, where we belong. World of books. Pages.

He draws the parchment out of his bag.
Drops it to the floor.

JOHN

You... are from the real world.

He starts to step through the door --
Mattias tries to follow.

JOHN

Stay -- both of you.

He exits the Pod.

Ripley drags herself across the floor.

RIPLEY

No - wait! John!

To the Door. Looks out:

BROTHER JOHN

Dawn's rays are peeking through the battered ceiling as he walks slowly across the smoking roof.
Into the inferno that is the burning Abbey.

Ripley watches as John and the alien horror inside him are INCINERATED.

The heat of the flames grows.
She must pull back --
Reaches up for the door handle.
It closes with a THUD.

She rolls onto her back.
She weeps. For the first time in years.
She's been absolved.

CREeeek -!!
The escape pod SHIFTS.
Ripley's eyes SNAP open --

The Roof beneath the Pod is beginning to GIVE WAY.

Ripley rolls onto her stomach and drags herself to the pilot's chair. Pulls herself into the seat.
Straps herself in --

SULACCO ESCAPE POD #4

Blasts THROUGH the wooden outershell of the Orbiter Arceon.
ROARS towards us - past us.

INT. SULACCO ESCAPE POD #4 = DAY

Ripley places Mattias into the Hyper sleep tube.
Rubs under his chin. Is about to climb in with him when she spots something on the floor --

JOHN'S PARCHMENT

Ripley picks it up and unrolls it.
She hears John's voice:

JOHN V.O.

I, Brother John Goldman of the orbiter
Arceon, Minorite abbey and gaol, know the Abbot was wrong. There is a great evil here. I have seen it. I put pen to paper now lest this plague - this creature stills my hand. I have gone down below - both to try to warn the others and get the woman - Ripley - get from her some clue as to how to battle this evil, or at least to make my peace for not defending her. She believes there is still an Earth and I hope she is right.
I hope she will be able to find out.
I hope she can find some rest for the devils that torment her.

Ripley looks at the elapsed time counter on the command console. Pulls a pen from it's holder. She adds:

RIPLEY V.O.

Whether the Earth exists or not, whether we end up in Heaven, or Hell, or the cold vacuum of space, she has.

She sets her course.
Gets back into her tube.
Closes the lid.

DEEP SPACE

The escape pod moves through the jet-black void...

ARCEON

Dwindles into the darkness behind her, a smouldering, slowly dying ember...

THE SCREEN GOES BLACK

END CREDITS ROLL...

Teenager in the back of the movie theater shouts,
"It's in the dog!"

1 EXT. NIGHT. HOUSING PROJECTS -- MOSCOW 1

SMASH CUT

MOTION -- flat out -- it's us -- we're running -- stumbling -- breathing rushed -- blood in the snow...

We are JASON BOURNE and we're running down an alley...

Supered below: MOSCOW

BLUE LIGHTS -- from the distance -- strobing through the night -- rushing toward us -- POLICE CARS -- three of them -- SIRENS HOWLING as they bear down -- closer -- faster -- until they whip past the alley...

Up against the wall -- BOURNE is hidden in the shadows.

BOURNE is badly wounded -- shot through the shoulder -- bruises and broken bones from the final car chase in SUPREMACY...

With a GROAN, he lifts himself up, staggers across a park toward a PHARMACY...

4 INT. NIGHT. PHARMACY -- MOSCOW 4

ROWS of MEDICINE and FIRST AID supplies, and in the background, a DOOR being jimmied...It's BOURNE...The ALARM goes off...

MACRO ON -- MEDICINE BOTTLE

VICODIN, as BOURNE grabs it...Then PENICILLIN...

Then SURGICAL SUPPLIES:

Scalpel...Forceps...Sutures...Cotton gauze...Betadine...

BOURNE finds a large sink...Rests his gun there...Lays out SURGICAL SUPPLIES...Checks out his back in the mirror...Opens the capsules of penicillin and pours the powder directly into the wound...Begins treating himself...

5 EXT. NIGHT. PHARMACY -- MOSCOW 5

A POLICE CAR pulls up to the curb, lights flashing. One POLICEMAN goes to the jimmied DOOR. SECOND POLICEMAN sees blood and footprints. He motions to his partner to follow...

6 INT. NIGHT. PHARMACY BATHROOM -- MOSCOW 6

BOURNE finishing up -- splashes water on his face -- he seems a man on a mission. He looks up --

A MIRROR.

His face...

FB1 FLASHBACK -- JUMBLED STREAKY IMAGES: FB1

"415" written on a building.

DISEMBODIED VOICE (HIRSCH)
Welcome to the program...

POV Bourne walks down a corridor (corridor #1).

6AA INT. NIGHT PHARMACY -- MOSCOW 6AA

The cops approaching.

FB1A FLASHBACK -- JUMBLED STREAKY IMAGES: FB1A

Daniels leading Bourne down the corridor.

DISEMBODIED VOICE (V.O.)
You'll be saving American lives.

A black sack is thrown over Bourne's head, then:

(STOCK) A torrent of quick shots of Bourne's kills: the Professor, Jarda, the blonde guy in Paris, Mr. And Mrs. Neski...

And finally. BANG -- Marie hit in the head. The car off the bridge. She sinks away dead...

6A INT. NIGHT PHARMACY -- MOSCOW 6A

The POLICE enter the back room, guns drawn.

POLICEMAN #1
Put your hands on your head and turn around slowly!

BOURNE snaps out of it, doesn't move. POLICEMAN #1 (older) approaches him. When BOURNE doesn't respond to his questions, the POLICEMAN starts forward. BOURNE turns and in one motion grabs his gun from the sink and disables the POLICEMAN.

BOURNE freezes POLICEMAN #2 with his gun and a look.

BOURNE
(in Russian)
Give me your gun and radio.

POLICEMAN #2's gun and radio skittle across the floor.

BOURNE
 (in Russian)
My argument is not with you.

BOURNE smashes the radio and takes the gun.

BOURNE exits...

	A workman installs a nameplate that reads: Ezra Kramer, Director, CIA.
8C	INT. KRAMER'S OFFICE -- DAY	8C
	Kramer listens to a recording with Landy and Cronin. There are unhung pictures and a few other items that indicate he has just moved into this job.

Two other senior CIA officials sit in on the meeting.
Kramer looks at a file on Bourne and Abbott.

*BOURNE (V.O.)
So we got in the way? Is that why Neski died? Is that why you killed Marie?*

Kramer glances at a photo of Marie in the file.

*ABBOTT (V.O.)
You killed Marie the minute you climbed into her car. The minute you entered her life she was dead!*

Kramer looks at Abbott's official photo.

*BOURNE (V.O.)
I told you people to leave me alone! I fell off the grid. I was half way around the world.*

*ABBOTT (V.O.)
There's no place it won't catch up to you. It's how every story ends. It's what you are, Jason.
A killer! You always will be.*

THUMP!

*CRONIN
We think that's Bourne hitting him on the head and then--*

He makes a gun with his hand, i.e. Bourne putting his gun to Abbott's head.

*ABBOTT (V.O.)
Go ahead! Go on! Do it!*

*BOURNE (V.O.)
She wouldn't want me to. That's the only reason your alive.*

The tape clicks off.

KRAMER Who's "she?"

CRONIN puts a picture of MARIE in front of KRAMER.

*LANDY
His girlfriend, Marie. She was killed in India three weeks ago.*

Kramer looks down at another image. Abbott dead after his suicide.

KRAMER

A dirty section chief in league with a corrupt Russian Billionaire commits suicide when confronted by Jason Bourne. You couldn't make this stuff up.

(holds up the photo of Abbot dead)

You watched this happen?

Landy nods. Kramer shakes his head in disgust at the whole situation.

KRAMER

Bourne's last confirmed location is Moscow, three days ago?

LANDY

Right.

KRAMER

So what does he do now?

LANDY

I think he's looking for something he hasn't found.

KRAMER

Like what? What's he after?

LANDY

I'm not sure. Maybe he hasn't gotten his memory back yet. Not all of it.

A look from Kramer...

KRAMER

Pam, what I need to know is, what kind of a threat is he to us?

LANDY

If he just wanted to hurt us he could have sent this tape to CNN.

KRAMER

Maybe he still will. Maybe he gave it to you because he wants to throw you in the opposite direction of his real plan. I don't know. I just know my number one rule is "the only way to stay safe is to assume the worst." As far as I'm concerned Bourne is a serious threat until proven otherwise.

A WORK TABLE, covered with sheet music, music paper, pencils. And, sitting on the upright piano against the wall, a framed PHOTO of MARIE...

A KNOCK on a door beautifully, heavily lacquered with centuries of paint...

MARTIN KREUTZ, late 20s, opens the door and finds BOURNE. A long look between them -- like two lost brothers who recognize each other -- each has been waiting for this moment for a long time.

INT. CONTINUOUS. MARTIN'S APARTMENT

Martin looks out the window.

MARTIN
Where is my sister?

BOURNE
She's dead. She was killed.

MARTIN
I knew it was going to end this way. It was always going to end this way...

BOURNE
I didn't believe that.

MARTIN
Why did she die?

BOURNE
She was shot. A man came for me.

MARTIN
And then you killed him.

Bourne nods.

MARTIN
Now what?

BOURNE
Someone started all this...and I'm going to find them.

Bourne looks at him for a beat and leaves.

EXT. SUBWAY -- DAY

Bourne climbs the stairs.

Bourne rounds a corner and stops, sees a bodyguard at a door up the street hail a car then go back inside.

Bourne walks up to the door, the bodyguard comes out again. Bourne knocks him aside. Grabs the man behind him, ELLATRACHE.

BOURNE
(in French)
Who started Treadstone?

The bodyguard comes back, gun out--

ELLATRACHE
(in French, to bodyguard)
It's OK!
(in French, to Bourne)
They're still looking for you.
You are taking a big risk coming
here.

Bourne shoves him against the wall, hard.

BOURNE
(in French)
Just tell me what I want to know!

ELLATRACHE
(in French)
I just provided them weapons. I don't know who started--

BOURNE
(in French)
You know something. Tell me where to start looking.

ELLATRACHE
(in French)
There's a journalist in London.
Simon Ross. He seems to know a lot about you. He has a source inside the program. Someone there from the beginning. What should I tell them if they contact me?

BOURNE
(in English)
They give me the name I want, or I burn their entire house down to get it.

ROSS
 ...This is big -- a skein of lies
 -- you pull at it and it just keeps coming -- I'll fill you in when I get home. And it's not finished, either.
 (beat)
 They're calling it 'Blackbriar'.

Follow this SEQUENCE as...

17 INT. DAY. CIA SUBSTATION -- LONDON 17

A LISTENING STATION in England scoops up MILLIONS of CELL
 PHONE CALLS...Sifts through BILLIONS of words...One word EMERGES from the CHATTER...

BLACKBRIAR

A TECHNICIAN sends the data to NSA back in the States...Where another COMPUTER gathers up the rest of the phone call...As we listen...

TECH#3
 "Blackbriar" echelon hit.
 NSA, please confirm receipt.

R18 EXT. DAY. CIA HEADQUARTERS -- LANGLEY R18

And there in the CRI HUB, another TECHNICIAN receives the DATA. Stops SUPERVISOR and reports.

TECHNICIAN #1
 Sir, we intercepted a call from London, keyword "Blackbriar."

SUPERVISOR
 Okay, send it to CRI right now.

25D EXT. DAY. THE SKYLINE -- NEW YORK CITY 25D

NOAH VOSEN, deft and confident, arrives at CRI Headquarters.

25E INT. DAY. CRI OFFICES -- NEW YORK CITY 25E

As VOSEN steps out of the elevator and into his office, he is met by his #2, WILLS.

WILLS
 We tracked the phone. Registered to a London reporter named Simon Ross. He works at the Guardian newspaper.

They enter a hallway through double doors towards the HUB.

VOSEN
You tracking him?

As they pass through, colleague hands WILLIS a file.

WILLIS
Yeah, thanks Mike. We have a survey team covering him at work...and a sneak and peek's on their way to his apartment.

VOSEN
Well, who talked to him? How did he find out about Blackbriar?

WILLIS
We don't know, we pulled his background and ran a cross check on any known anomalies, but we've come up with nothing. But, I think if we follow Ross, we are going to be able...

VOSEN
Right. Ross is easy. I want the source.

They enter the HUB.

26 EXT. DAY. GARE DU NORD -- PARIS 26

BOURNE buys a newspaper, enters the station and gets on the EUROSTAR.

26A INT. DAY. CRI DATA ROOM (was 25E) 26A

VOSEN and WILLIS listen to the phone call.

ROSS (VOICEOVER)
Have you heard of an Operation Blackbriar? I'm going to try and get my head around this, see you first thing.

VOSEN turns.

VOSEN
Is that all?

WILLIS
Yeah.

VOSEN

I want rendition protocols and I want the asset put on standby, just in case.

26B INT. DAY -- CRI HUB

26B

VOSEN steps out from DATA ROOM...addresses the HUB.

VOSEN

People, listen up, this is a full priority situation

WILLS

Jimmy, give me Ross's profile on one.

(points at the big screen on the wall)

ROSS'S information come up on the center screen.

VOSEN

Our target is a British national,
Simon Ross, a reporter. I want all his phones, his blackberry, his apartment, his car, bank accounts, credit cards, travel patterns...I want to know what he's going to think before he does. Every dirty little secret he has. And most of all, we want the name and real time location of his source.

This is NSA priority level 4, any questions?

No response from the HUB.

VOSEN (CONT'D)

All right, let's get to it.

26C EXT. DAY. EUROSTAR -- ENGLAND

26C

The EUROSTAR winds it's way to London.

26D INT. DAY. EUROSTAR

26D

BOURNE reads The Guardian. He sees an article written by Simon Ross. Title: "RENEGADE ASSASSIN LOSE IN EUROPE".
It mentions BOURNE. There is a photo of Marie--

FB2 FLASHBACK

FB2

Marie smiles at him. Marie shot. Marie fades into the depths, dead. Bourne burns Marie's stuff

26D INT. DAY. EUROSTAR 26D

BOURNE comes out of the flashback. He is still carrying the pain of her loss

Bourne finds Ross's name on the masthead, then goes to the name just below it in the news department.

29 EXT. DAY GUARDIAN NEWSPAPER -- LONDON 29

Ross crosses a busy London street -- heads to Guardian office building. A CRI TEAM watches from a parked car.

35H INT. DAY -- CRI HUB 35H

TECH #1 watches the data arrive.

TECH#1

Copy that. Mr. Vosen, subject is entering his office.

VOSEN watches the feed.

VOSEN

Where's my picture please?

TECH#2

Coming online...Online...Now.

A surveillance picture flashes onscreen -- ROSS works in his office. HUB chatter about ROSS phone.

TECH#3

Take an hour to get his phone...

VOSEN

That's too long.

Off VOSEN.

R34 INT. DAY. GUARDIAN EDITOR OFFICE -- LONDON R34

ROSS reports to his EDITOR.

EDITOR

So how do we know he's not spinning for someone?

ROSS

There's more. He was scared.

EDITOR
Scared of what?

ROSS
Blackbriar.

A REPORTER sticks her head in.

REPORTER
Sorry, a call for you.

ROSS
Who is it?

REPORTER
Won't give hie name.

ROSS leaves to pick up the call.

35Y INT. CONTINUOUS. GUARDIAN -- NEWSROOM

35Y

ROSS crosses the busy newsroom...

REPORTER
He's on my line...

ROSS picks up the phone.

Ross (CONT'D)
Simon Ross.

35H INT. DAY. CRI HUB -- NEW YORK CITY

35H

VOSEN watches as ROSS takes phone call.

VOSEN
Why aren't we hearing this?

WILLS
That's a hard line, Jimmy, why don't we have it?

JIMMY
We have his line, sir, but he's not on it.

WILLS looks confused.

35Y INT. DAY GUARDIAN -- NEWSROOM

35Y

ROSS listens.

BOURNE (V.O.)
Waterloo Station, south entrance, thirty minutes.

ROSS
Who is this?

BOURNE (V.O.)
This is Jason Bourne.

35Z INT. DAY -- EUROSTAR TRAVELING 35Z

Bourne
You want to talk to me. Come alone.

BOURNE hangs up.

35Y INT. DAY. GUARDIAN -- NEWSROOM 35Y

ROSS looks bewildered -- hangs up the phone -- gathers his stuff -- puts his notebook in his pocket and leaves.

SURVEY ONE (V.O.)
Are you getting an image?

35H VOSEN 35H
Where's he going?

WILLS
Okay, he is on the move. Target is mobile.

The HUB reacts. .

WILLS
Okay, people, look sharp, give me eyeballs on the street.

36 INT. DAY. BUILDING -- ACROSS FROM GUARDIAN 36

SURVEY ONE has panned down to the entrance of the GUARDIAN building. Because ROSS is on the move...

SURVEY ONE
Subject is on the move. Go mobile
One and Two.

WILLS
Where's that audio on the street?
I want to know where he's going...

36A EXT. CONTINUOUS. LONDON STREET 36A

ROSS hails a BLACK TAXI. The SILVER VAN pulls out behind him...

35H INT. DAY. NEW YORK HUB

35H

VOSEN watches as the feed from the SILVER VAN comes through.

MOBILE 2
(over radio)
We have the subject confirmed.

VOSEN
Where is he heading?

MOBILE 2
Waterloo Station.

37 EXT. DAY. WATERLOO STATION -- LONDON

37

BOURNE arrives on the EUROSTAR. Enters the station.

38 EXT. CONTINUOUS. STREET

38

As the taxi moves away, the SILVER VAN pulls out behind it.

A CYCLE COURIER momentarily blocks its path. Looking in on ROSS sifting through documents in the back seat.

HUB (V.O.)
Stand by at Waterloo...

39 EXT. DAY. WATERLOO STATION -- LONDON

39

BOURNE moving toward the rendezvous...

63 INT/EXT. DAY. BLACK CAB -- YORK ROAD

63

ROSS pays the DRIVER, exits. Checks his watch. Looks around. Isn't sure what his next move is--

64H INT. DAY. CRI HUB

64H

TECHNICIANS searching for ROSS on the busy street.

TECHNICIAN #2
Mobile One -- give us eyes on the subject.

63 EXT. DAY. YORK ROAD -- LONDON 63

MOBILE ONE-- two people from the van-- take up a position in an open stairwell three floors up. They focus a camera down on Ross.

63A EXT. DAY. ENTRANCE -- WATERLOO STATION 63A

BOURNE buys a cell phone. Activates the SIM card on the new phone. Dumps the pay-as-you-go package in a bin. Rounds a corner. Out of sight.

63B OMITTED 63B

64H INT. CONTINUOUS. CRI HUB -- NEW YORK CITY 64H

Screens come alive with a POV of ROSS. VOSEN studies the monitors. ROSS arrives at Waterloo, pays TAXI.

TECHNICIAN #1
Sir, subject just arrived at the south entrance to Waterloo Station.

63 INT. DAY. WATERLOO -- ENTRANCE 63

ROSS moves to the entrance.

Behind him, inside the tube station portico, BOURNE arrives.

Sees ROSS. Sees the two survey teams. MOBILE ONE up the stair well and MOBILE TWO at street level.

Commuters coming up the escalators. BOURNE joins them - moving towards Ross.

Closer.

Right on him. ROSS oblivious. Looking out onto the street.

BOURNE brushes past him and PUTS THE PHONE IN HIS POCKET..

ROSS feels the contact. Checking himself -- he's okay. But now a phone is ringing -- looks around, must be someone else.

But the vibration's coming from his jacket pocket.

ROSS takes out the phone -- not his -- puzzled.

ROSS hits "answer."

ROSS

Hello?

BOURNE (O.S.)

Don't ask questions. Just listen...

64H INT. CONTINUOUS. NEW YORK HUB

64H

VOSEN watching...

VOSEN

What's he doing? I thought we blocked his cell? Who the hell is he talking to???

WILLS

Jimmy, I need that phone!

VOSEN

(beat)

Activate the asset.

WILLS

Sir, we haven't yet become operational --

VOSEN

I said activate the asset. I want options.

Wills keys in a CODE...

64 EXT. DAY. BMW -- LONDON STREET

64

PAZ, 20s, cool and predatory, drives and waits for instructions...His PHONE buzzes...He reads the code...Accelerates toward Waterloo Station...

70 EXT. CONTINUOUS. FOOTBRIDGE

70

BOURNE reaches the top of the stairwell on the other side of the road.

His POV to the left -- a LONDON BUS is approaching.

To the right -- a young man in a hooded top -- speaking on his cell -- walking toward a BUS STOP...

A plan is forming.

71 INT. CONTINUOUS. WHITE VAN

71

SURVEY TWO -- camera zooming in on ROSS.

SURVEY TWO
What's the ROE on this one?

PANNING TO REVEAL

64H INT. CONTINUOUS. NEW YORK HUB 64H
VOSEN thinking it over as he watches the image of ROSS.

75 EXT. DAY. YORK ROAD -- TUBE -- BUS STOP 75
ROSS looking around. Then --

BOURNE (O.S.)
To your left. Blue hooded top.
Walking towards the bus stop

ROSS has clocked him.

The HOODY walks to the bus stop. One hands-free EARBUD swaying down by his side as he moves to a seat.

Sitting down. Checking his watch.

ROSS shifting nervously from one foot to another.

BOURNE (O.S.) (CONT'D) Go to the bus stop, sit next to him. Head down...

The LONDON BUS approaching.

ROSS begins to move.

64H INT. DAY. CRI HUB -- NEW YORK 64H
Things are beginning to happen.

TECHNICIAN #1
Target is on the move.

WILLS
Okay, who's the guy in the blue hood?

Screen POV. ROSS standing next to the HOODY -- head down.
Trying to play it cool -- ROSS in clear view of the cameras. "Speaking" with the HOODY. Camera zooming in.

VOSEN
Okay, there, he's talking to the guy with the hood. Take them down.

Just then --

A BUS pulling up to the bus stop, blocking both SURVEYS' views. Rifle mics picking up the bus chatter, instead of ROSS.

VOSEN. Annoyed now.

VOSEN
Watch that bus! The bus! -- don't lose them! Stay triangular and don't get blocked.

The crackle of the survey teams as they try and reframe.

POV SCREEN -- SURVEY ONE seeing the bus clear. The HOODY has gone.

POV ANOTHER SCREEN -- SURVEY TWO -- camera finally catching up, picking out the HOODY on the bus as it begins to pull away.

VOSEN?
Grab Team B. Grab the hoody and stay with Ross...

TECH'S giving orders...

77 EXT. ACROSS FROM YORK ROAD -- DAY 77

SURVEY TWO -- three men racing across the road on foot. Weaving through heavy traffic.

78 EXT. DAY. FOOTBRIDGE AREA 78

BOURNE watching his plan unfold...Only a few seconds to get ROSS out of there...

BOURNE
Take the footbridge. Go to the West Entrance. I'll meet you at the newsstand.

79 EXT. DAY. YORK ROAD -- CONTINUOUS 79

ROSS rearing this -- Moving away --

The BUS moves up to the traffic light. The AGENTS moving across the street...

64H INT. DAY. NEW YORK -- ENCRYPTED AREA -- CONTINUOUS 64H

VOSEN looking at the screens. Pointing...

VOSEN

No, no, look...Ross is not on the bus. Split up the team -- get the guy on the bus and send someone to stay on Ross.

R81 EXT DAY. YORK ROAD -- CONTINUOUS

R81

One AGENT peeling off, to keep ROSS in check.

The other two AGENTS racing to the bus as it pulls away from the lights. Kicking the doors open, leaping on.

GUNS drawn. So quick. Passengers screaming.

AGENT ONE

(to Hoody)

You. On the floor. Down.

Pushing the HOODY to the floor.

AGENT TWO

Driver, stop the bus!

On the HOODY.

The HOOD is pulled back.

An innocent YOUNG MAN -- terrified, bewildered.

83 EXT. DAY. FOOTBRIDGE AREA

83

ROSS on the move across the walkway.

84 INT. DAY. STAIRWELL

84

SURVEY ONE moving up the steps, only to meet-

BOURNE coming down. Three quick moves and he's down-slumped against a wall- just another drunk to step over in the rush hour.

Pulls the feed. Takes the earbud. Then back up and falls into step behind ROSS.

Listening in to the chaos he has caused -- an ocean away.

64H INT. DAY. NEW YORK HUB

64H

TECHIES scrambling to restore the feed. VOSEN staring.

TECHNICIAN #2

We've lost signal.

TECHNICIAN #1
What happened to Survey One?

VOSEN
I don't like this. Patch me through to Met surveillance.

86 INT/EXT. DAY. CAR -- LONDON STREETS 86

PAZ parked up -- gets the call -- pulls out into the traffic.

Slicing through to the target area. Waterloo up ahead.

87 EXT. DAY. WATERLOO 87

A SECOND SURVEY TEAM -- out of their vehicles. Furtively they lock and load their side arms.

Fanning out towards the station.

R88 EXT. DAY. WEST ENTRANCE WATERLOO - NEWSTAND R88

Bourne stops Ross, surprising him.

BOURNE
Why do you know so much about me?

ROSS
What?

BOURNE
The article. You talked to someone from Treadstone. Someone there at the beginning. What's his name?

ROSS
I can't tell you that.... Who's following me?

BOURNE
Whoever they are it's trouble.

ROSS
Are they Blackbriar?

BOURNE
Blackbriar, what's Blackbriar?

ROSS
I don't know. I heard the name this morning for the first time.
Whatever it is, my source said it started with you.

BOURNE
What? What are you talking about?

ROSS
Look, just help me get away from these people...and we can talk more...we can--

BOURNE
(spotting approaching operatives)
We have to move.

Bourne moves Ross toward the concourse.

BOURNE
Answer your phone.

64H INT. DAY. CRI HUB

64H

SCREENS coming alive again. They are through to MET SURVEILLANCE -- the AREA around WATERLOO.

TECHNICIAN #1
Last sighted heading to the West entrance.

VOSEN
He's got to be close. Seal the entrances.

90 EXT. DAY. WATERLOO

90

The new SURVEY team moves towards different entrances -- Ready to beat out the quarry.

R88A EXT. DAY. WEST ENTRANCE

R88A

CAMERAS suddenly alive. Movement across the footbridge.
The net's been thrown.

91 INT. CONTINUOUS. CONCOURSE -- WATERLOO

91

Into the station concourse.

ROSS moving fast. Fighting through the crowds of faces.
Each one a killer in ROSS' tormented mind.

BOURNE on the periphery looking out across the throng, picking out the inconsistencies.

One AGENT, then another approaching.

He dials.

BOURNE (O.C.)
Three o'clock. Female. Blonde black top.

ROSS
Has she seen me?

BOURNE
Not yet. Dip left past the photo kiosk.

ROSS spinning round. Dipping left. BLACK TOP passing in the background missing him.

BOURNE crossing close behind - marshalling the pieces at breakneck speed.

BOURNE (CONT'D)
Straight ahead. News kiosk.

ROSS turning. Weaving through the commuters.

BOURNE seeing cameras turn. ROSS heading into their path.

BOURNE (CONT'D)
Change of plan. Stop. Tie your shoelace.

BOURNE seeing ROSS dip out of view as a group of TOURISTS block the CCTV's line of sight.

64H INT. DAY. CRI HUB

64H

That same scene -- scores of TOURISTS -- from VOSEN's point of view. The TECHS try to get another angle...

94 EXT. DAY. CONCOURSE -- WATERLOO

94

ROSS looking through the sea of legs as he finishes tying his laces. Cameras sweeping past.

ROSS
Are we clear?

BOURNE
Clear. News kiosk. Straight ahead.

ROSS on the move. Sweating. Paranoid.

Seeing a BIN MAN coming toward him -- reaching into his trolley.

ROSS
Straight toward me. Bin man?

BOURNE
Negative.

ROSS
He's got a gun.

BOURNE
Negative. Keep straight ahead.

But ROSS swerves out of his path as the BIN MAN pulls out -- a bunch of keys.

CCTV CAMERAS turn -- ZOOMING IN ON ROSS.

64H INT. DAY. CRI HUB -- NEW YORK

64H

Ross' face on all screens.

TECH#1
We got a hit. Middle of the concourse.

VOSEN pacing.

VOSEN
We're losing him! We cannot afford to lose him!

Frenzied teching as they capture and transmit an image of Ross to...

96 EXT. DAY. TAXI RANK -- WATERLOO

96

PAZ flipping open his phone. A voice crackling in his earpiece.

VOICE
Waterloo concourse. Subject heading east.

Paz jamming the wheel hard right. Doing a high speed U-turn.

Heading towards the east side of the station.

94 EXT. DAY. CONCOURSE

94

BOURNE realizes ROSS has been seen. Sees the AGENTS starting to form the box...

BOURNE
Get into cover. Now!

ROSS moving faster.

64H VOSEN What's the status of the asset? 64H

WILLS
In place in one minute.

VOSEN
Alright, I want to take him now.
Get him out of there and have the asset cover it.

WILLS gives orders...

96 INT. CAR TRAVELLING-- MEPHAM STREET -- DAY. 96

PAZ pulling into a side street. Out towards a series of arches that lead underneath the terminal. In his ear...

VOICE
Target moving towards the stores.

ANOTHER VOICE
Asset in play. ETA thirty seconds. All exits covered.

PAZ through the archway. Grabbing a station plan. Studying it.

98 Through a subterranean maze of corridors. Up steps. 98
Through doors.

On his way to the kill zone.

99 EXT. CONCOURSE-- CONTINUOUS -- DAY 99

ROSS moving through crowds around the departures board.

BOURNE hearing that last exchange in his earpiece too.
Asset in play?

BOURNE
Keep moving...

BOURNE's POV: AGENTS closing the box. The departures board.
Platform 7. A train waiting.

BOURNE (CONT'D)
Faster....

Commuters waiting for the platform

BOURNE (CONT'D)
The front...

Suddenly -- CLICK -- PLATFORM 7 displays.

A wave of commuters flooding away -- sweeping the AGENTS back with them towards platform 7.

BOURNE (CONT'D)
GET IN THE STORE.

BOURNE'S bought them thirty seconds.

100 INT. TUNNELS ABOVE THE CONCOURSE -- DAY 100

PAZ on the move. Earpiece crackling. Through a door. Taking a left down another tunnel.

Opens another security door and moves up some steps. Towards a ladder.

100A EXT. CONCOURSE WATERLOO -- SIMULTANEOUSLY -- DAY 100A

The AGENTS regrouping. Speaking into their radios.

Voice
He's in the store -- still moving east.

ROSS out into the open again. In front of him another STORE COMPLEX.

BOURNE INSIDE!

BOURNE searching the concourse. Something bothering him. The threat level clicking another notch.

102A/B INT. MAINTENANCE AREA-- SIMULTANEOUSLY -- DAY 102A/B

PAZ heads up some stairs to a service platform.

Climbs a ladder.

101 EXT. CONCOURSE -- CONTINUOUS -- DAY 101

ROSS into the store complex. To one side is a service doorway.

BOURNE sees the AGENTS approaching. Looks the other way -- up at the hoardings above.

Something's not right. Treadstone instinct.

BOURNE
Service doorway -- Now!

64H INT. NEW YORK HUB -- SIMULTANEOUS -- DAY

64H

An image of Ross as he enters the store complex appears on the screen.

TECHY 2

Store. Three means of egress.

VOSEN

Close him down...

105 INT. STORE COMPLEX -- SIMULTANEOUSLY -- DAY

105

ROSS through narrow store corridors. Sheer panic now. Two of the AGENTS move in after him.

BOURNE behind them.

BANG - takes the first out silently.

BOURNE

Keep moving.

ROSS moving out to the light as another AGENT follows.

BOURNE (CONT'D)

Through the store room.

ROSS travelling through. The second AGENT right behind as-BOURNE steps out from behind the store room door. The dull snap of bones as second AGENT falls to the floor.

64H INT. DAY -- CRI HUB

64H

On a screen VOSEN watches, transfixed, as BOURNE takes out all his agents and then grabs ROBB...

VOSEN

Jesus Christ, that's Jason Bourne.

WILLS

Maybe he's the source?

VOSEN

It doesn't matter, the asset now has 2 targets. Take them both out.

WILLS taps in the order...

102B INT. MAINTENANCE AREA-- DAY

102B

PAZ moves cross a narrow walkway.

Now he's behind a mechanical 'tri-panel' hoarding. The kind that displays a different advert every 15 seconds. He waits for the change and then---

-- A huge field of vision across the concourse stretching out down below him- a sniper's heaven.

PAZ pulling open the motor-casing from the side panel, goes to work on it.

Slowing the rotation. Rearranging the large triangular prisms to give him just the right time-gap to pull the trigger- and just enough cover to disappear.

He takes out rifle parts from his rucksack. Starts to assemble them.

102C INT. BEHIND THRESHERS (BEHIND THE SILVER METAL DOOR) 102C

BOURNE

I'm going to get you to safety but you have to stay calm do exactly what I say.

ROSS

(fear-induced autopilot)
Sure, okay.

BOURNE

No, listen to me: Exactly what I say this time. Understand?

Ross snaps to focus. Looks Bourne in the eye.

ROSS

Yes.

BOURNE

Stay here while I look for an escape.

Ross nods.

102B INT. MAINTENANCE AREA 102B

PAZ puts together the rifle.

103 INT. WATERLOO STATION 103

BOURNE exits from the silver door behind Threshers. He stays on the phone with Ross.

Hidden from the view of the CCTV cameras by the thick crowd, Bourne sees the approaching agents abruptly pulling back.

ROSS (PHONE V.O.) (CONT'D)
 I can see the entrance from here
 I can make it out--

BOURNE
 No, stay behind that door.

64H INT. HUB

64H

CCTV view of the silver door behind Threshers that ROSS is behind (not Bourne). Wills is on phone.

WILLS
 There. That silver door.
 Bourne's behind that door?

TECH Confirmed.

WILLS
 Okay, pull the agents back and give Bourne's location to the asset.

107 INT. MAINTENANCE AREA

107

On his cell phone Paz receives a text indicating Bourne's location. Paz finds the silver door and aims his rifle at it.

SCOPE POV

A shape barely visible moving behind the window. (It's Ross but Paz and the Hub think it's Bourne.

111 INT. BEHIND THRESHERS / WATERLOO CONCOURSE-- DAY

111

INTERCUTTING BETWEEN ROSS AND BOURNE:

Bourne spots the agents pulling back per Wills' orders.

ROSS (INTO PHONE)
 If I run now I can make it--

BOURNE (INTO PHONE)
 No. Something's not right.

107 INT. MAINTENANCE AREA

107

Paz awaiting his shot--

SCOPE POV

The door comes open slightly, but from this angle Paz doesn't have a clean shot at his target (who he thinks is Bourne).

111 INT. CONCOURSE -- WATERLOO 111

Bourne searches the rafters, looking for any threats from above.

ROSS (TEL. V.O.)
I'm going to go for it, okay?

BOURNE
Don't move until I tell you.

Bourne is distracted by the last of the agents disappearing. Something is definitely wrong--

ROSS
I'm going to go for it.

BOURNE
No, No not now.

Ross suddenly sprints out from behind the door--

110A SCOPE POV 110A

Paz sees the shape emerge--

110A INT. MAINTENANCE AREA -- DAY 110A

PAZ fires--

111 INT. WATERLOO -- SERIES OF ANGLES 111

But it's Ross, not Bourne. Ross is hit by Paz's shot. He falls, inches from the silver door, dead. Blood has splattered on the door.

110A INT. PAZ'S NEST 110A

Paz snaps his head back to the scope, realizing he's shot the wrong person. Then he catches a glimpse of Bourne--

Bourne ducks behind the gathering crowd, out of Paz's line of sight, and goes to the body.

64H INT. HUB

64H

Vosen and Wills stare at the screen. At the image of Ross, dead on the concourse. The room -- normally full of chatter has gone dead silent...

Vosen puts his head in his hands. This is a monumental screw up and everyone here knows it. He just had the wrong man killed....

VOSEN

Oh...shit...

Then suddenly Vosen snaps back to focus:

VOSEN (CONT'D)

Get the asset out of there ...

WILLS

What about Bourne?

On the HUB MONITORS we see Police moving in... Vosen doesn't need to see anymore.

VOSEN

Get him out of there - NOW!

111 INT. WATERLOO -- DAY

111

Bourne feels Ross' body for something.

110A OMITTED

110A

110A PAZ'S NEST

110A

Paz is frustrated by the order. He's itching to get another shot off at Bourne, but after a beat, packs up quickly, as ordered.

111 INT. WATERLOO -- DAY

111

Back in Waterloo, Cops run in from all sides.

111A INT. DAY. WATERLOO STATION

111A

On the screens and in real life, the aftermath of the hit. PARAMEDICS try helplessly to deal with ROSS -- killed instantly by the head shot meant for BOURNE...POLICE arrive and seal off the crime scene...

113 EXT. CONCOURSE WATERLOO -- SIMULTANEOUSLY -- DAY 113

BOURNE on the move. Fast --

Past platforms. On his way up to the Tri Panel.

Up stairs. On to a walkway. To his right he sees a figure disappearing...

PAZ.

BOURNE hammers down the walk - way in pursuit.

114 EXT. PLATFORM AREA -- DAY 114

BOURNE tailing PAZ down on to a parallel platform. PAZ dipping down into the underground entrance.

115/116 INT. TUBE STATION -- WATERLOO -- DAY 115/116

PAZ moving deliberately through the evening rush hour-- blending in...

BOURNE in pursuit. Chasing on instinct.

There...A glimpse of PAZ at the bottom of an escalator.

BOURNE fights past people.

PAZ disappears into the crowd.

BOURNE rushes to catch him. Rounding a corner...

A long walkway -- at the end, two staircases lead to different tube lines. BOURNE hesitates-- measures the choice.

The sound of a train fills the station--

BOURNE -- Fast downstairs.

Watches-- just as PAZ gets onto the car at another door.

BOURNE lunges to get on the train...But the doors close...

BOURNE'S POV

Watching PAZ from the platform as he SAGS down onto a seat, nauseated, his skin clammy, his head pounding...He takes out the PILLS and dry-swallows them...Looks up...

CLOSE ON -- BOURNE

Watching PAZ...As if he's looking in the MIRROR at his old self...The self before THE BOURNE IDENTITY...

CLOSE ON -- PAZ

He looks straight ahead, just another commuter...

BACK ON -- BOURNE

Watching PAZ, as the train pulls away...Then BOURNE is immediately in motion...

119 INT. DAY. DIRECTOR'S OFFICE -- CIA -- LANGLEY, VA 119

KRAMER

Hello.

VOSEN

It's Vosen. We have a situation.

119B EXT. NIGHT. DANIELS OFFICE -- MADRID 119B

Establishing Sewell and Marbury.

120 INT. NIGHT. DANIELS OFFICE 120

DANIELS watches news of ROSS murder on TV. DANIELS panics, opens his safe, packs up papers, takes Blackbriar FILE. Sets alarm. Leaves.

120C EXT. NIGHT. INTERNET CAFE -- LONDON. 120C

BOURNE sits at a computer, the ROSS notebook open in front of him. He pages through it, finding names, places, "HOW DID THIS ALL START?" -- and Blackbriar. He Googles "Sewell and Marbury"-- finds Paris, Berlin, Madrid. BOURNE continues to search and finds receipt from Madrid.

BOURNE leaves.

123 EXT. DAY. POSH HOTEL -- NEW YORK CITY 123

LANDY steps out of a TAXI...

123A INT. DAY. POSH HOTEL -- NEW YORK CITY 123A

Vosen's sitting.

VOSEN

(to waiter)

Sparkling. And a "Heart-Healthy" omelet with goat cheese and peppers.

Landy arrives.

VOSEN
You're late. Traffic?

WAITER
(handing her the menu)
Ma'am?

LANDY
Nothing for me.

Vosen looks at her, surprised.

VOSEN
I'm buying.

She shakes her head, no. She sits, without taking her coat off. She's not staying long.

VOSEN
When the Director called, it was suggested we bring you on--

LANDY
Suggested?
(beat)
Are you sure it was just a suggestion?

VOSEN
Funny how different things look depending on where you sit. I look at this as doing a favor for you. Giving you an opportunity to complete some unfinished business.

LANDY Meaning?

VOSEN
Jason Bourne.

LANDY
Bourne's finished.

VOSEN
Really?

LANDY
It was finished the moment I realized I was chasing him for something he didn't do. The case is closed.

VOSEN

So what do you make of this?
(handing her surveillance photos of Bourne in Paris)
French intel picked up Bourne meeting Pierre Elattrache on Tuesday. He threatened to burn our house down if you didn't tell him who started Treadstone.
That's a big problem, wouldn't you agree?

LANDY

This doesn't feel like Bourne to me.

VOSEN

Why's it so hard for you to believe?

LANDY

Probably because it's coming from you, Noah.

VOSEN

Lets try and be adults okay? We all thought he was done, off the grid. But Bourne's back. Maybe he's a threat. We both want the same thing here.

LANDY

So what happened at Waterloo?

VOSEN

We have a leak. Bourne showed up in our surveillance. We had very little time to react.

LANDY

And the reporter ended up dead?

VOSEN

Bourne saw us coming.

Landy looks at him, suspicious.

LANDY

So what was he doing?

VOSEN?

We don't know. But just the fact that he was there means he's up to something, don't you think?
Maybe he's the source?

LANDY

The real question is how you managed to get in a fire fight in the middle of a public train station.

VOSEN

Don't second guess an operation from an armchair, Pam. It's not fair.

LANDY

I'm going to the office now.
I'll make my own introductions.

Off VOSEN...

125 EXT. DAY. ATOCHA TRAIN STATION -- MADRID 125

AN AVE train pulling into the vast station. BOURNE stepping out, walking up the platform.

Moving out through the station...

125A INT. DAY -- CRI HUB 125A

TWO NEW TECHS plus the three we met before. All watching VOSEN lead LANDY and CRONIN into the room.

WILLS

This is Pamela Landy. She's gonna be quarterbacking our search effort. I think what we oughta do, just to get started, let's go around the room, say who you are and what your spec is.

LANDY stepping in before this gets going --

LANDY

Let's do names later.
(she's got the floor)
What's Bourne's last fixed position?
(impatient) Anybody.

TECH#3

London. Twelve hundred Zulu.

LANDY

Status? Wounded? Armed?

TECH#2

Alive. Mobile. Unknown.

LANDY
Where are your grids coming from?

TECH#1
NSA Tactical.

LANDY
You have an Echelon package?

TECH#1
Yes.

LANDY
Why isn't it on?

TECH#1
We were waiting.

LANDY
For what?
(no takers)
You're nine hours behind the toughest target you've ever tracked. I want everyone to sit down, strap in, and turn on all you've got.
(beat)
That would mean now.

That lights it. They're moving.

LANDY (CONT'D)
Thank you.

VOSEN watches...

LANDY (CONT'D)
I want everything you've got on Ross on screen one.

LANDY watches as the screen lights up with ROSS information...

125B EXT. DAY. SEWELL AND MARBURY -- MADRID

125B

Bourne arrives, begins to recon the area.

He goes to the front door finds "Sewell and Marbury" and rings the bell. No answer. Two cops come around a corner.

Bourne sees them, notes the side of the building and leaves.

125E INT. DAY. CRI HUB -- NEW YORK CITY

125E

TECH#1

Sir, we just hacked Ross's email account at the Guardian and found a round trip ticket to Turin, yesterday. 0800 arrival, 12:05 departure.

LANDY

I think we can be pretty certain that Bourne's not your source then?

VOSEN

How?

LANDY

Ross's call to his editor, where he said he just met the source on Blackbriar, took place just after his flight landed. His met his source in Turin.

VOSEN

So?

LANDY

So, what, Bourne met Ross for breakfast and then, at noon the same day Bourne calls Ross to demand a meet at Waterloo?

CRONIN

(Needling Wills)

Maybe they were even on the same flight?

VOSEN

Cross check the secure cell phone usage of everyone with Blackbriar SCI clearance against all calls in and out of Turin during the morning Ross was there

TECHNICIANS start pounding keyboards.

LANDY

The guy you're after is a CIA operative with clearance above Top Secret. He was committing treason by talking to Ross. Do you really think, while doing that, he used a cell phone he knows we can track?

TECH 3 (JIMMY)

Zero results on the cross check.

VOSEN stares daggers at her.

WILLS

Do you have a better idea?

LANDY

Yeah, I'd look at all the people whose cell phones were switched off the entire period Ross was in Turin.

WILLS

Do it Jimmy.

TECHNICIANS start tapping.

LANDY

(looks at Cronin)

I mean if your people use their cell phones as much as mine do, the list should be pretty small

TECHNICIAN 3 JIMMY

Three names: Tom Brewster, Jack Boulin, Neal Daniels.

The names display on the screen: Tom Brewster, Jack Boulin Neal Daniels.

The HUB employees can't help but be impressed by LANDY. WILLS and VOSEN notice their response.

LANDY

Now check everything in Ross's apartment against those names. Look for common patterns, look for -

CRONIN

InitialsBring that up on main.

LANDY turns. CRONIN is leaning down in front of a computer screen. Point to something for the tech --- who puts it on the big screen, blown up.

In a set of handwritten notes by ROSS it says "per N.D." next to several scrawls.

LANDY

Neal Daniels. He's Station Chief in Madrid now, isn't he?

WILLS

Jesus Christ.

VOSEN

Call the RSO at the Embassy and have them take Daniels into custody if he's there. If he's not, get a grab team to the Calle Norte safe house. Send them in heavy and tell them we'll assist with entry.

LANDY

"Heavy?" Daniels isn't--

VOSEN

I'm worried about Bourne. If he's not Ross's source, then he must be after Ross's source -- just like us.

Off LANDY...

125F EXT. MADRID STREETS -- NIGHT 125F

BOURNE in a TAXI turning a corner into a narrow street. The rain has slowed, but the streets are still quiet.

BOURNE gets out and walks past the SEWELL and MARBURY front door, picks the lock and gains entry.

126B INT. SEWELL AND MARBURY. -- NIGHT 126B

BOURNE up the stairs. Finds the office. Jimmies the door. Disables the alarm.

All the signs of a hurried exit. A half filled cup of coffee -- cigarette burned down in an ashtray but not snubbed out -- a light left on -- files and documents, some shredded, some not.

127H INT. HUB 127H

Vosen paces back and forth. The hub is MUCH quieter than it was in the Waterloo scenes.

TECH 1. (LUCY)

Parque Vasquez is clean. No sign of subject.

VOSEN

Team two, ETA Callee Norte?

FILTERED V.O. (KILEY)

Three minutes.

127A EXT. MADRID STREETS -- NIGHT 127A
A BLACK CAR moving briskly through traffic and --

127A INT. MOVING BLACK CAR -- NIGHT 127A
HAMMOND at the wheel. KILEY with the map. Shutting off his phone.

127B INT. SEWELL AND MARBURY -- NIGHT 127B
BOURNE checks the office. Soon he finds a photo of Daniels with Albert Hirsch.

FB3 EXT. HOSPITAL ANNEX -- OVERCAST DAY -- FLASHBACK FB3
Bourne arrives at a nondescript steel door with two CCTV cameras covering it. He sees 415 written above the door.

127B INT. SEWELL AND MARBURY -- NIGHT 127B
The flashback overwhelms Bourne.

FB3A INT. SRD CORRIDOR -- DAY -- FLASHBACK FB3A
POV shots of Bourne walking down the long corridor with Daniels. Other shots revealing that Bourne is in Army dress greens (without hat). Daniels knocks and leads Bourne into--

127B INT. SEWELL AND MARBURY -- NIGHT 127B
Bourne is driven to his knees.

FB3B OMITTED FB3B

FB3C INT. TANK ROOM -- FLASHBACK FB3C
Bourne is dragged into a room with a large water tank. His hands have been bound behind his back, the sack's drawstring pulled tight, and he has been weighted down. Bourne is shoved into the water.

FB3D UNDERWATER SHOT -- FLASHBACK FB3D
Bourne falls into the water. SPLASH. He starts to sink. The wet sack allows us to see the outlines of his face. Also POVs as Bourne sinks.

FB3E SERIES OF SHOTS FROM ABOVE AND BELOW WATER --FLASHBACK FB3E

Bourne struggles wildly at first. Tries to get out of his restraints. But to no avail. SRD men watch him from the edge of the tank. Perhaps also on monitors. Expressionless.

FB3F UNDERWATER SHOT - FLASHBACK FB3F

Bourne fights every human instinct to draw a breath. Also shot from Bourne's POV:

HIRSCH (FILTERED, EERIE)
You're going to drown. There is nothing you can do to prevent this. Stop struggling and accept it.

Finally Bourne can't hold his breath for an instant longer. His mouth opens. Water rushes in. He convulses, begins to drown...

FB3G INT. TANK ROOM -- FLASHBACK FB3G

Bourne's body goes limp. SRD men watch. No reaction.

FB3H UNDERWATER SHOT -- FLASHBACK FB3H

Bourne goes limp. POV of him blacking out.

127B INT. SEWELL AND MARBURY -- NIGHT 127B

BOURNE comes out of the FLASHBACK. As he staggers across the room, he notices a car arriving on the monitor...

127C EXT. STREET 127C

A car approaches.

127B INT. SEWELL AND MARBURY 127B

Bourne snaps out of it and sees the car on a security monitor.

127C EXT. STREET. 127C

Agents get out of car and approach building.

127H INT. DAY -- CRI HUB 127H

TECH#3
Sir, they're at the front door.

VOSEN watches...

127C EXT. NIGHT. MADRID SAFEHOUSE 127C

HAMMOND AND KILEY enter the building.

127D INT. NIGHT. SAFEHOUSE 127D

BOURNE runs water into the TEA KETTLE -- sets the trap...

128A INT. NIGHT. SAFEHOUSE 128A

HAMMOND and KILEY enter.

HAMMOND
We're in.

BOURNE listens from his hiding spot.

127H INT. DAY. CRI HUB 127H

LANDY paces.

VOSEN
Okay, put it live.

129 INT. NIGHT. SAFEHOUSE 129

HAMMOND moves quickly into the room -- gun raised.

HAMMOND at the alarm box.

HAMMOND
Alarm's down.

127H INT. DAY -- CRI HUB 127H

VOSEN
That has to be Bourne.

VOSEN already moving to the monitor.

131 INT. NIGHT. MADRID SAFEHOUSE 131

HAMMOND and KILEY -- move cautiously from room to room -- they've done it before...

HAMMOND
 (into mike)
 Safe's cleaned out.

127H INT. CRI/GRID ROOM 127H

VOSEN pacing impatiently around the speakerphone --

VOSEN
 Shit... Track the passports.

133 INT. NIGHT/RAIN -- SAFEHOUSE 133

KILEY gestures to a light moving under a door.

Kiley crouching...leaning in...hand on the knob, and --

Pulls the closet DOOR OPEN --

Nothing. Sink, dishes. a small kitchen. And... on the stove...a tea kettle and a spoon...

Which is the last thing they'll remember, because...

BOURNE -- coming around the corner fast -- full stop and --

BOURNE lays out HAMMOND... KILEY turns to find BOURNE -- who takes him out too.

Then it stops.

BOURNE yanks the headsets. Closes the PHONE.

127H INT. DAY. CRI HUB 127H

The SCREENS go black. Silence...

VOSEN
 Goddamn it! Get a back-up team in there!

127D INT. MADRID SAFEHOUSE - NIGHT 127D

TEA KETTLE payoff...

127H INT. HUB 127H

VOSEN
 How long till back-up arrives?

The hub scrambles to answer that... Landy paces in the background. Suspicious of Vosen...

VOSEN
 How long?
 (beat, loud, to the entire hub)
 Stop! Hang on. I have an idea...

136 INT. NIGHT. MADRID SAFEHOUSE

136

ON A SECURITY MONITOR -- BOURNE sees another figure moving up the stairs...Checking his watch, reloading his gun. Twisting into the path to shoot as the door opens, hesitating because-

It's NICKY.

A beat -- long unbroken.

BOURNE
 What are you doing here?

NICKY
 I was posted here after Berlin.

BOURNE
 Where's Daniels?

The office PHONE goes. Bourne waving her to it. She picks it up. He hits the speaker phone.

127H INT. HUB

127H

NICKY (V.O.)
 Hello.

VOSEN
 Who is this?

NICKY (V.O.)
 This is Nicky Parsons. Who's this?

Landy reacts to her voice...

Both Vosen and Landy strongly suspect Bourne is there and listening...

Vosen reads her "Duress Challenge" identity check off the screen. It reads:

Challenge: "Sparrow"

Response if Under Duress: "Ruby"

Response if Normal: "Everest"

VOSEN
Nicky, I need to do an ID challenge first. Code in:
"Sparrow."

Vosen looks at the screen to check her response...

NICKY
Response: "Everest".

VOSEN
Nicky, this is Noah Vosen. How long have you been on site?

NICKY (V.O.)
I just walked in.

VOSEN
We have two officers on site.
Are you in contact with them?

NICKY (V.O.)
They're down. Unconscious, but alive.

VOSEN
Is there any sign of Daniels?

NICKY (V.O.)
No.

LANDY
Nicky, this is Pam Landy. We have reason to believe there is a connection between Neal Daniels and Jason Bourne.

NICKY (V.O.)
Bourne, are you still looking for Bourne? I thought the case was closed.

LANDY
No, some people are convinced he's still a threat. I disagree but to find out I need to talk to him.

VOSEN seething because LANDY has interrupted him...

VOSEN
Hold on Nicky.

Vosen hits the mute button.

VOSEN
What are you doing? You know
Bourne's probably listening.

Landy doesn't answer. Vosen to Wills:

VOSEN
How long till back up arrives.

Wills holds up three fingers. Vosen unmutes.

VOSEN (CONT'D)
(into microphone again)
Listen, Nicky. I want you to stay put and secure the premises.
It could be an hour until another team arrives.

LANDY piercing VOSEN with a look...

138 INT. SAFEHOUSE - NIGHT 138

BOURNE continues to hold the gun in her face -- NICKY is very calm considering the predicament she is in.

NICKY
Okay.

DIAL TONE as the line gets closed at the other end.

NICKY
They know you're here.

BOURNE
How long do I have?

NICKY
Three minutes...

138A EXT. NIGHT. MADRID STREET 138A

FLASH: TWO SEDANS squeal around a corner. CRI reinforcements.

138AA INT. NIGHT. CRI SEDAN -- MADRID STREET 138AA

DELTA DUDE
2 minutes to safehouse.

138B INT. NIGHT. MADRID SAFEHOUSE 138B

NICKY
My car's outside. I know where Daniels is.

BOURNE lowers his gun, grabs the phone and dials "1-1-2"

SPANISH OPERATOR (SUBTITLE)
Emergency operator. Where is your emergency?

BOURNE answers her in perfect Spanish with a perfect Madrid accent, but worked up, like a civilian would be...

BOURNE (SUBTITLE)
*334 Calle Norte. I hear gunfire.
 And men shouting. I think they're Americans --*

BOURNE pushes the phone off the desk -- fires four shots into the ceiling -- calmly moves Nicky towards the back door...

127H INT. HUB

127H

VOSEN
 You "disagree" he's a threat? He just took out two more of my men. Not to mention his ultimatum to Ellatrache?

LANDY
 The only way this has a happy ending, Noah, is if we find a way to bring Bourne in voluntarily.

VOSEN
 He wants revenge, Pam. The only realistic way to deal with this is to eliminate the threat.

139 INT. NIGHT. BACKSTAIRS

139

BOURNE and NICKY rapidly descend.

BOURNE
 Okay, where is Daniels headed?

NICKY
 8 o'clock this morning, he wired $100,000. to a numbered bank account in Tangier.

BOURNE
 Okay, Tangier is about 300 miles away, we can make the morning ferry.

NICKY
 And then what?

139A EXT. NIGHT -- MADRID SAFEHOUSE STREET 139A

Bourne and Nicky exit on to the street. Suddenly they hear tires squealing nearby.

NICKY
They're coming.

They continue to walk down the street towards Nicky's car.

127H INT. HUB 127H

Vosen and Landy are watching this live.

As they cross the street two MADRID POLICE CARS come around the corner the wrong way and screech to a stop.

Vosen reacts...

139A EXT. MADRID -- NIGHT 139A

Four cops jump out and take aim at the AGENTS.

SPANISH POLICE
Manos Arriba! Manos Arriba!

More sirens closing in. A third police car appears. Then a fourth...

127H INT. HUB 127H

Vosen can't believe it--

139A EXT. MADRID -- NIGHT 139A

The agents drop their guns and surrender.

BOURNE and NICKY continue around a corner -- they get in her VW GOLF and drive away...

127H INT. HUB 127H

Vosen stares at Landy. A beat, then she walks out.

VOSEN
Issue a standing kill order on Jason Bourne, effective immediately.

139B-C INT. NIGHT -- VOSEN'S OFFICE -- CRI

139B-C

VOSEN on the phone.

VOSEN
We lost Bourne.

KRAMER
You still think he's after Daniels?

VOSEN
Yeah. Nicky's just the means.
But if we find Daniels, we'll find Bourne.

KRAMER
Daniels knows way too much.
Daniels knows everything. We can't let them meet.

VOSEN
I'll take care of it.

KRAMER
Good.
(beat)
And fill Hirsch in. Just in case.

R145 INT. NIGHT. TRUCK STOP -- SPAIN

R145

BOURNE and NICKY sit over coffee. A long silence...then:

NICKY
What are you after, Jason? Why are you looking for Daniels?

BOURNE
Do you know who this is?

Bourne puts the photo of Daniels and Hirsch on the table between them. She looks at the photo, points.

NICKY
That's Daniels.
(points at Hirsch)
I don't know who that is.

BOURNE
I have to get back to the beginning...or I'll never be free of this.

NICKY
Who is he?

BOURNE
 I think he started Treadstone. I remember meeting him. I remember the first day...
 (beat)
 Daniels brought me to him.

Nicky looks back at him....not sure what to say.

NICKY
 What happened?

BOURNE
 An initiation...I guess...

FB3B FLASHBACK

FB3B

QUICK FLASH: Bourne, head in sack, is held underwater, struggling desperately for breath--

R145 INT. NIGHT. TRUCK STOP -- SPAIN

R145

Bourne comes out of the flashback. Nicky is looking at him....

NICKY
 Jason...that wasn't some one-off initiation. Daniels said they did that to you over and over again. That's how they...

She doesn't finish. And Bourne doesn't ask her to. Just a long pause.

BOURNE
 Why are you helping me?

NICKY
 It was difficult for me...with
 you.

BOURNE looks up. Another long pause...

NICKY (CONT'D)
 You really don't remember anything?

BOURNE
 No.

NICKY'S face.

Two SPANISH COPS enter the cafe.

BOURNE (CONT'D)
 We should move.

They get up and leave...

145A

Vosen goes to his safe.

VOSEN
(to voiceprint mic)
Noah Vosen.

Then he puts his thumb into a print reader. The safe door pops open. He pulls out a file marked "Top Secret."

145B INT. DAY. LANDY'S OFFICE -- CRI

145B

CRONIN makes his way down the hallway.

LANDY works at her desk. CRONIN enters...

CRONIN
They tracked Daniels' passport to a hotel in Tangier. They're holding up a bank transfer he made to keep him in place while they move an asset in from Casablanca.

Off LANDY. This just keeps getting worse...

145C INT. VOSEN'S OFFICE

145C

Landy enters without knocking.

LANDY
Since when do you have authorization for lethal action against Daniels?

VOSEN
Since he cleaned out a Blackbriar safe and fled to Morocco!

LANDY
So grab him--

VOSEN
I don't have the people on the ground to do that and I'm not going to risk that file falling into the wrong hands.

LANDY
What's going on? What's Daniels got?

VOSEN

What's he got? He ran all of Blackbriar's operations in Southern Europe and North Africa.

LANDY

I think the world's well aware we have a rendition and lethal action capability at this point, Noah.

VOSEN

For Christ's sake, Pam, he's got our entire playbook. Names, dates, ghost sites, how we train our assets.....

LANDY

You still don't have the authority to kill him.

VOSEN

Oh, yes I do, Pam.

Vosen holds up the file we saw him pull out of his safe. It is labeled "Blackbriar: Lethal Action Protocol."

VOSEN

That's what makes us special. No red tape. No more getting badguys in our sights and then watching them escape while we wait for some bureaucrat to issue the order.

Landy opens up the file. Sees the words "instantaneous lethal action is authorized when..."

LANDY

You just decide? No oversight. No checks and balances.

VOSEN

Come on, Pam, you've seen the raw intel. You know how real the threat is. We can't afford to have our hands tied like that anymore.

LANDY (OVERLAPPING)

(going to Vosen, firm)
Noah, what are you doing?

VOSEN

Not now.

LANDY

Now. I want to know what's going on.

VOSEN

Not now.

LANDY

I'm asking on what basis you're continuing this operation.

VOSEN

On the basis that Nicky Parsons has compromised a covert operation. She is up to her neck in it.

LANDY

This is about Daniels, not Nicky!

VOSEN

She has betrayed us!

LANDY

You don't know the circumstances!

VOSEN

She's in league with Jason Bourne for Chrissake!

LANDY

168 EXT. DAY. TANGIER STREET 168

DESH parks the motorbike and walks around the corner,
BOURNE follows.

DANIELS' car coming down the street. BOURNE stops and sees the car -- realizes the danger.

BOURNE turns back to see DESH with the detonator in his hand.

BOURNE locks eyes with DESH. Before BOURNE can react -- DESH detonates.

BOOM! DANIELS is DEAD.

BOURNE is thrown across the street by the blast. He lays MOTIONLESS.

DESH POV. He looks back to see BOURNE not moving, lying in the street.

DESH gets on his motorbike and heads off to kill NICKY.

EXT. PETIT SOCCO -- CONTINUOUS

VOSEN

Okay, that's it. Bar her cell.
Tie it off.

EXT. RUE D'ESPAGNE -- CONTINUOUS

DESH is disappearing from view.

And the POLICEMEN are surrounding BOURNE. Demanding to see his papers. *

BOURNE speaking in Spanish - fishing for his papers. Looking back up the street. Forming a plan. Checking his watch. *

More POLICE arriving now. *

And DESH has disappeared out of sight. *

No time for this. *

BOURNE breaks away. Through the crowds into the traffic. Police whistles- shouting. Confusion. *

The chase is on. *

Three policemen turning into his path. No choice. BOURNE taking them down. Sprinting out across the road. *

A KID and his moped. Caught up in the police dragnet. BOURNE leaping on the bike - kick-starting it. *

Away into traffic as two squad cars turn and make chase. *

BOURNE weaving through traffic. One hand on the bike the other on the cell, desperately trying to call NICKY. *

But now, at least he's got a dial tone. *

EXT. PETIT SOCCO -- CONTINUOUS *

NICKY grabbing the cell. Answering. *

NICKY
Bourne? *

BOURNE
Nicky? Listen to me. You need
to - *

The line goes dead. Looking at the screen - 'SERVICE DENIED' *

Really spooked now- looking around. Time to move. *

Dismantling the phone instinctively - scattering it's components. *

She starts to make her way out of the square. *

EXT. STREETS -- CONTINUOUS *

DESH through the streets-getting closer - heading towards the PETIT SOCCO. *

EXT. MOPED TRAVELLING *

BOURNE picking up the pace. Three more police cars out of a side road just missing him. *

BOURNE choosing his exit. *

Up ahead- a narrow alleyway - taking it. *

The squad cars crunching to a halt, behind him. *

EXT. PETIT SOCCO -- CONTINUOUS *

DESH crossing the SQUARE weaving through a sea of push bikes. *

Parking his Vespa at the corner of RUE DES CHRETIENS. *

Travelling on foot. *

EXT. RUE DE CHRETIENS -- CONTINUOUS *

NICKY - trying to keep calm. Checking each alley. Moving on. *

EXT. PETIT SOCCO -- CONTINUOUS *

BOURNE arriving - seeing NICKY has left. Seeing DESH'S Vespa parked up. *

More police - on foot now. *

BOURNE parking up. Seeing the crowded streets. Looking up to the rooftops. He needs to get higher. *

Starts running up steps. *

INT./EXT. RIAD/ROOFTOPS -- CONTINUOUS *

BOURNE into a riad. Through a courtyard - up more stairs - up a ladder. Out onto the rooftops. Scanning the skyline. A beat. Has he misjudged? *

No, there in the distance at the top of a narrow street- NICKY walking slowly and behind DESH. Moving quickly. *

BOURNE tailing him - trying to close the gap. Dipping down through another riad - through an alley. Up more stairs. Back up onto another roof. He's gained a few metres on DESH. *

Desh goes up to the rooftops now. Bourne has him in sight - *
 DESH is prepping his gun with a silencer. *

DESH speeding up. BOURNE sees NICKY down below amongst the * crowds. In Desh's sights. *

BOURNE knows he has to gain more ground. *

CABLE CAM shot - Two trained assassins leaping across the * narrow streets - silently effortlessly -- the cops down * below searching the alleyways, oblivious to the chase * unfolding above them. *

BOURNE nearly on terms with him - then -- *

DESH dipping down again into the street below. Avoiding * the police -- he melts into the crowds. *

STEADYCAM SHOT - following BOURNE as he heads downstairs. *
 More stairs. Through a corridor then a courtyard - * bursting out of a door into the street - *

A police checkpoint. Right in his path. Bourne forced to * dog leg and take another route. *

BOURNE'S lost him- for the moment. *

EXT. RUE DE CHRETIENS -- CONTINUOUS *

NICKY - walking fast up the Rue des Chretiens. Wondering * why there are so many police around. *

Suddenly stopping - seeing DESH - knows instantly that he * is coming for her. *

Now we see NICKY'S skills. Has to think on her fee t- *
 TREADSTONE MINDSET -- *

Checking the alleyways. Slipping out of sight. *

NICKY looking to the rooftops -- taking the advantage. Up * some steps -- into a riad. *

Desh tracking her. *

EXT. RUE DE CHRETIENS -- CONTINUOUS *

BOURNE seeing Desh again - further up the street. Heading * in that direction. *

INT. RIAD -- CONTINUOUS *

NICKY through one hallway - then another. Moving up all * the time. *

EXT. RIAD -- CONTINUOUS

DESH arriving at the steps. Looks up to where Nicky is going. Takes the entrance to the next building. Anticipates her next move. Aiming to cut her off.

EXT. RIAD ROOFTOP

NICKY up steps. Out onto the rooftops. Looking for a path across them.

Scrabbling across the roof of this crumbling riad. Knows she can't go back down.

She makes it across to the next building.

Where Desh is...

EXT. ANOTHER ROOFTOP -- CONTINUOUS

BOURNE up high. Seeing NICKY on that other roof.

He can't get across to her. Moving fast now.

Down steps. Into the riad courtyard.

INT. RIAD

BOURNE entering the hallway.

Moving up the stairs. Towards Nicky.

And towards Desh.

Meanwhile NICKY moving down. Looking out into the courtyard below. The sound of POLICE getting nearer.

BOURNE hearing the POLICE too as he moves up onto a landing.

BOURNE into a main room - something stirring on a couch - a girl and her little sister having a siesta.

In another room two small boys fast asleep. TV playing. One wakes.

A noise on the stairs above. Quickly arranging a mirror - getting line of sight - Bourne dipping into a corner.

It's NICKY.

She gives him a look -- DESH is in here somewhere.

The door goes below them. The noise of Police entering the Riad. *

NICKY signalling to BOURNE - this way. *

They climb narrow stairs to the next floor. *

Down below Police begin searching rooms. Waking the sleeping family. Shouting, crying. Commotion. *

INT./EXT. -- NARROW STAIRWELL *

BOURNE and NICKY creeping up the steps. *

Then - suddenly NICKY spinning round as two silenced bullets speed past her - And DESH bursting out of a landing toilet. *

On to Bourne. *

Full on Treadstone fighting in the narrow stairwell. *

Crashing into a tiny disused lift cage- silent constrained- vicious. *

Downstairs a young POLICEMAN hears the noise- heading for the lift. *

NICKY seeing the handle turn. Thinking quickly. She sends the lift up to the next floor. *

The POLICEMAN stepping back from the door -- directing the other cops out to the courtyard. *

People are spilling out into the atrium. It's pandemonium. *

EXT. ROOFTOP -- CONTINUOUS *

Bourne and Desh spill out of the elevator and onto the roof. *

BOURNE kicking the gun - spinning across the floor - he and DESH facing each other. *

DESH with BOURNE - straight over the edge. *

DESH still on top - just. *

A brutal exchange. Matching each other's moves like shadows. *

Relentless. Rolling - falling onto another roof level. *

And another. *

The two men tiring now. DESH grabbing for the bag. The pills. BOURNE kicking them away. *

BOURNE has the upper hand now. DESH'S reaction's slowing. No longer the match he was. *

BOURNE drags him to the ground. He's finished. Bourne's won. *

DESH- shivering -- convulsing. *

In the struggle, BOURNE strangles Desh.

194 BOURNE and NICKY hide DESH's body. 194

BOURNE
Alright, we need to be dead. You can't remember any names....

197 INT. DUSK. LANDY'S OFFICE (LONELY LANDY) 197
Landy looks at Bourne's kills. The faces Bourne remembers.
But there names are here, and who they were, why they were killed.

198AC INT. NIGHT. PENSIONE -- BEDROOM/SITTING ROOM 198AC
Bourne and Nicky sitting together.

BOURNE

I was starting to remember who they were...in India...with Marie.

A beat.

NICKY

It's just going to lead to more killing, Jason. Are you sure you want that?

Bourne takes her words in. But who he is is eating him alive from the inside...

BOURNE

I've killed people and I've tried to apologize for what I've done, for what I am. None of it makes it better...

Another moment passes between them...then:

BOURNE

They're going to come for you again. You are going to have to run now.

She gets up.

198 INT. BATHROOM 198

Nicky dyes her hair BLACK. Starts cutting it shorter.

199 EXT. NIGHT. TANGIER BUS STATION 199

Bourne walks with a now dark-haired Nicky. They exchange looks for a long beat. She turns towards the bus.

BOURNE

It gets easier.

197 INT. LANDY'S OFFICE. NIGHT 197

Landy finds a denotation in Bourne's file that he was "recruited to Treadstone by Neal Daniels." Further down the page it says "Bourne was inducted into Treadstone at the Special Research Department facility at 415 E 71st, New York, NY." Then "Facility closed by order of Director, June 2002."

198C INT. TANGIER MORGUE 198C

Bourne looks at the tattered remains of Daniels' body and belongings.

He goes through his briefcase and finds a nearly destroyed piece of paper with "Noah Vosen - Director of Operations - CRI" written on it. Bourne slips the morgue attendant a bribe.

198DA INT. VOSEN'S OFFICE -- DAY

CRONIN

Pam, You need to see this.

Landy follows CRONIN into--

201 INT. CRONIN'S OFFICE -- DAY

201

BOURNE'S PASSPORT is displayed on the computer monitor.

CRONIN (CONT'D)

This passport just cleared Immigration at JFK ten minutes ago. It's an early Treadstone identity registered to Jason Bourne but he never used it and it never went to the grid. Bourne's alive.

LANDY

They don't know.

CRONIN

No, if they knew Vosen wouldn't be in his office right now.

202 INT. AIRPORT TERMINAL 202

Bourne moves through the airport.

LANDY (O.S.)
It's a hell of a risk.

CRONIN (O.S.)
Yeah. Maybe Bourne wants us to know, just like Naples, maybe he's communicating.

201 INT. CRONIN'S OFFICE 201

CRONIN
Maybe he's trying to communicate with you.

LANDY
Maybe we should communicate back. Because I think I know what Bourne's looking for.

202 SERIES OF SHOTS 202

Bourne over the 59th Street Bridge -- arrives at CRI -- goes into the adjacent building --

202A INT. OFFICE BUILDING ACROSS FROM CRI -- DAY 202A

Bourne uses his monocular to zoom in on a file Vosen is looking at -- he sees the word "Blackbriar." Vosen puts the file back in the safe.

203 INT. DAY. LANDY'S OFFICE -- CRI -- NEW YORK 203

LANDY'S cell phone rings. She answers it.

LANDY
Pamela Landy.

204 INT. UNDEFINED SPACE 204

I hear you're still looking for me.

203 INT. LANDY'S OFFICE 203

LANDY puts down her pencil. CRONIN watches.

LANDY
Bourne?

206 INT. VOSEN'S OFFICE 206

His phone rings. He picks it up.

WILLS (TEL. V.O.)
Get in here! Bourne called
Landy!

Vosen jumps up, sprints toward the hub--

203 INT. LANDY'S OFFICE -- DAY 203

LANDY
I guess I owe you an apology.

207 INT. HUB -- BACK ROOM 207

Vosen rushes in--

BOURNE (V.O.)
Is that official?

VOSEN (OVERLAPPING)
Are we triangulating?!

LANDY (V.O.)
No. Off the record. You know how it is.

BACK ROOM TECH (OVERLAPPING) Trying--

BOURNE (V.O.)
Good-bye.

203 INT. LANDY'S OFFICE 203

LANDY
Wait. Wait.

She opens a file on her desk.

204 INT. UNDEFINED SPACE 204

Bourne listening--

LANDY

How do you know a text came if you can't read it--
(to Wills)
Are we on Landy?

TECH
Six men. More on the way.

VOSEN
I want that goddamn text. We need to get out in front of her!

TECH Seconds...

VOSEN paces anxiously.

TECH (CONT'D)
Got it!

TECH points at big screen: "Tudor City Pl & 42nd. Ten

BOURNE (V.O.)
This is Jason Bourne.

VOSEN reels for a beat. Then quickly scans the streets, trying to see if he can spot BOURNE.

VOSEN
How did you get this number?

BOURNE (V.O.)
You didn't actually think I was coming to Tudor City, did you?

VOSEN
No, I guess not. But if it's me you want to talk to maybe we can arrange a meet.

BOURNE (V.O.)
Where are you right now?

VOSEN
In my office.

BOURNE (V.O.)
I doubt that. If you were in your office--

233 INT. VOSEN'S OFFICE -- DAY 233

REVEAL that BOURNE is inside VOSEN'S office.

BOURNE
We'd be having this conversation face-to-face.

BOURNE hangs up. Puts a portable dictaphone up to VOSEN'S

VOSEN (TAPE V.O.)
Noah Vosen.

As he places the plastic slide we saw in the ECUs into the fingerprint reader. The safe pops open--

234 INT. DAY. VOSEN SUV 234

He flips it open. He scans down the page. His eye

LANDY

240B INT. CRI CAR -- DAY 240B

The passenger side agent sees BOURNE, points--

BOURNE cuts to the south side of the road so the passenger-side agent doesn't have a shot, while controlling the car makes it almost impossible for the driver to fire accurately.

240C EXT. 41 STREET -- DAY 240C

The westbound car cuts sharply and drives up on the sidewalk. But Bourne is too fast. He's already past them. The passenger side agent jumps out. But he's still got to get around the door and then move a few steps to get a bead over the hood of his car on Bourne.

The other CRI car races the wrong way on the street but gets immobilized and trapped by the onrushing tunnel traffic.

242A INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- DAY 242A

Vosen and Wills race West on 41st.

242C EXT. MIDTOWN WEST -- DAY 242C

He runs across 10th Avenue as a third CRI car screams up the street at him.

243 INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- DAY 243

258A INT. CRI CAR -- DAY 258A

The driver pilots his car up the ramp behind Bourne. He jams the accelerator down. He'll be on top of Bourne -- running him over -- in seconds--

260 EXT. PORT AUTHORITY -- DAY 260

A New Jersey-bound bus exits the complex and heads around the corner of the ramp -- it skids to a stop when it sees Bourne and the CRI car giving chase heading right at the bus.

260A INT. CRI CAR -- DAY 260A

The driver has to skid to a stop to avoid hitting the bus. Bourne slides between the side of the bus and concrete guard rail. The driver calls it in--

261 SERIES OF SHOTS 261

Cops and CRI cars close in on Port Authority. One agent jumps out of his car on 8th Avenue and rushes for the stairs.

TACTICAL TEAM LEADER (V.O.)
Block every exit. I want a full perimeter on Port Authority--

262 EXT. ROOFTOP PARKING LOT -- PORT AUTHORITY

262

Bourne races up a set of stairs the rooftop parking lot. He surveys every aspect of his environment on the fly (which includes his taking a quick peak over the concrete railing at the east end of the roof.

Next Bourne rushes toward the parked cars. Smashes the window of one to set off its alarm. Then a second and a third, setting off their alarms.

The fourth window Bourne smashes in doesn't set off an alarm. Bourne pulls the door open and climbs in.

Inside the car Bourne reaches under the dash and yanks handful of wires off the steering column and starts to expertly hotwire the car.

264 SERIES OF SHOTS

264

Agents race up stairwells. Two CRI cars careen up the ramp to the passenger parking (a separate ramp to the bus ramp we saw Bourne on earlier.) A third CRI car races through the parking level just below the roof and up the circular ramp to the roof.

INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- DAY

TACTICAL TEAM LEADER
(to Vosen)
He's on the roof. He's trapped.

EXT. ROOFTOP PARKING LOT -- PORT AUTHORITY

Bourne works to hotwire the car.

A CRI car gets to the roof. Two agents come from the elevator lobby. The three car alarms distract them. They search for Bourne, but can't find him at first...

Bourne gets the car engine on - but, given the wonders of modern anti-theft technology his steering wheel is still locked.

A second CRI car arrives.

Bourne slams the car into low gear and backs up at high speed.

He smashes into the car across the aisle from him. With a sharp metallic snap the wheel in Bourne's car is suddenly free, he jams the car into drive pulls out into lane and stops.

Three CRI cars here now. Two head straight for him. A third blocks the exit ramp.

Bourne checks the rearview and sees two more agents pour from the elevator lobby, one carrying the serious firepower of an M-4 (an M-16 variant whose bullets can penetrate metal and concrete). They move into position to get a bead on him.

Bourne assesses. But he doesn't move. The agents swarm toward him. What the hell is he doing? Why is he waiting?

267 INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- DAY

267

TACTICAL TEAM LEADER

We've got him! He's got nowhere to run!

VOSEN

Take him out!

268 EXT. ROOFTOP PARKING LOT -- PORT AUTHORITY

268

The agents clear their obstructions and drop their barrels toward Bourne--

But before they can get a bead--

Bourne slams the car into reverse again. Petal to the metal in reverse--

The agents open fire.

Bourne ducks the lead slugs ripping through the windshield. But there's no dodging the shower of broken glass.

As Bourne disappears below the dashboard, the CRI agent adjusts his fire into the car's grill.

Virtually blind, Bourne races the hard-pressed vehicle backwards as the agent's fire decimates the car's driveline.

Bourne slips the car into neutral and takes a quick peek behind him.

Steers still speeding but quickly dying car towards a small gap between two parked cars at the edge of the parking structure.

Bourne's car splits the gap between the parked cars, hits the base of a low angled wall that slams the back of his car up and over the wall.

Bourne is pounded as his car jounces onto the wall, a second later the front end seesaws over the top, the sudden angle change exposes for an instant the bottom of Bourne's car, to the shooters.

Several rounds rip through the floorboard and tear past Bourne's head just before his car drops upside down for 25 feet and slams onto a row of parked cars.

The impact rips Bourne from the seat and slams him hard against the roof.

Bourne struggles out of the car, knowing he has only a moment before the armed agents will fire down into his overturned car.

CRI AGENT

270 EXT. ROOFTOP PARKING LOT -- PORT AUTHORITY

271 INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- DAY

271A EXT. ROOFTOP PARKING LOT -- PORT AUTHORITY 271A

One of the agents scrambles over the edge and starts to climb down. Other agents race for the stairs.

TACTICAL TEAM LEADER (V.O.)
Don't tell me--

274 INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- DAY 274

TACTICAL TEAM LEADER
--you've lost him! Who's on street level?! Street level backup?!

Clearly there is no one down there. Bourne's car jump from the roof has completely flat-footed them.

VOSEN
(to Wills)
Get NYPD backup! And FBI, DEA, any other federal assets we can draft!

A274A OMITTED A274A

274A INT/EXT. CIRCULAR RAMP 274A

Two CRI cars race down from the roof to try to get to the level Bourne's on.

275 INT./EXT. PARKING GARAGE -- TWO LEVELS BELOW ROOFTOP 275

Bourne cuts off a guy cruising for a parking space and pulls him from his car and races away as the agent from the roof lands hard behind him.

Bourne's race to the exit is cut off as a 3rd CRI sedan slides into view and it's occupants open fire on Bourne in a head on charge.

The just stolen vehicle takes heavy fire as Bourne reacts instantaneously; thumbing on the cruise control, shouldering his door open, and slamming the gas pedal to the floor as he dives out of the car.

The agents react as Bourne's sedan torpedoes them head on. Hit hard they're taken out of the fight as metal collapses, glass shatters, and airbags explode.

Bourne tumbles to a stop at the rear of a parked car as his car implodes against the oncoming agents.

Instantly Bourne is on his feet, moving between the parked cars to engage another CRI sedan traveling parallel to the course of the wrecked one.

The agents in this sedan are distracted by the still echoing crash and are caught off-guard as Bourne steps out and points his gun at the driver.

The driver ducks and floors his gas pedal in a desperate effort to save his own life. As the sedan suddenly accelerates, Bourne deliberately shifts his aim to the sedan's front tire and fires.

The tire explodes and the car suddenly veers left and slams into a parked car, pitching the driver violently against the unyielding interior of the sedan.

An instant later Bourne rips the radio off the dazed drivers belt just before he cold cocks him with it.

With the wreck still echoing through the garage Bourne has to deal with the arrival of the first NYPD sedan.

Bourne takes on the persona of an alarmed witness as the on edge cop climbs out of his car but Bourne's performance is cut short as the agent running from his drop from the roof, arrives and opens fire.

The police officer goes down in the hail of gunfire as Bourne turns and expertly drops the gunman with a single shot.

The increasing volume of squealing tires alerts Bourne to a new threat, he pulls the officer into some cover and grabs the officer's radio.

BOURNE
10-13. Shots fired. Officer down. Port Authority parking lot. Level four.

Bourne rips a piece of his sweater off and ties a makeshift tourniquet for the officer. Then he hands the cop his radio back.

BOURNE (CONT'D)
Stay out of sight until one of your own arrive.

Bourne disappears.

We pick him up as he jumps into the cops car and guns the engine and heads for the exits.

CRI agents are confused for a second -- until they pick up the NYPD car exiting Port Authority on one of the ramps. But that's all the time Bourne needs--

276 OMITTED 276

277 EXT. CROSSTOWN STREET -- DAY 277

Bourne turns on his lights and siren and speeds east, followed closely by a CRI sedan.

As cars yield to Bourne's siren a taxi tries to jump into Bourne's wake but a CRI sedan punches the taxi back to the right. It ricochets off several parked cars before regaining control.

277A OMITTED 277A

280 OMITTED 280

281 EXT. CROSSTOWN STREET -- DAY 281

Bourne struggles to keep his over-matched vehicle ahead of the more powerful CRI Sedan which tries to spin Bourne out by hitting his bumper.

Bourne tacks right quickly and barely avoids a stopped car. The CRI sedan flanking Bourne's slams into the rear of that car, spinning it 180 degrees into the path of the trailing CRI sedan which destroys itself in the resulting collision and blocks the path of the other CRI sedan.

282 INT. BOURNE'S CAR -- DAY 282

Bourne is home free. He looks around and spots a sign that indicates a right turn and says "To Holland Tunnel / US 95." Bourne turns right--

Suddenly the window next to his head explodes as two more shots rip through his door to tear a jagged wound into the top of Bourne's leg.

REVEAL Paz, his SUV racing along the curb lane. As Bourne's car crosses in front of a small car stopped at the intersection Paz swerves his car into that car and punches it into the side of Bourne's car.

Bourne's car is knocked spinning, Paz keeps charging forward and slams into the back of Bourne's car. With his front tires spinning wildly Bourne fights to straighten his car as another CRI sedan appears and tries to box Bourne's car by sliding into his path.

283 OMITTED 283

284 EXT. MANHATTAN STREET -- DAY

284

Bourne just manages to punch his car into the right rear of the CRI Sedan and race down the Avenue with Paz and the slightly damaged sedan in pursuit.

Paz gains on him and Bourne is forced to swerve violently to deny Paz the kill shot he is all too capable of.

Just ahead of Bourne, two government SUVs slide into the intersection completely blocking his path.

Bourne instantly spins his car 180 degrees and continues on, barreling into the roadblock backwards.

As Bourne's car plows through the SUV's he whips the wheel and his car spins through a reverse 180 as Paz and the other sedan race through the wreckage in Bourne's wake.

Paz and the CRI sedan are all over Bourne as he slides a right hand turn onto South St. as Paz and the CRI sedan overwhelm Bourne's battered vehicle.

284A OMITTED

284A

287 INT. BOURNE'S CAR -- DAY

287

On his police radio, Bourne singles out an NYPD officer (call sign Alpha-2503) racing toward the intersection just ahead.

Bourne slows, then speeds up quickly to time it right:

The CRI car almost hits his bumper, then has to accelerate through the upcoming intersection. As he does, the cop car Bourne was listening to on the radio slams broadside into the CRI sedan drafting the bumper of the mangled cop car.

Swerving wildly Paz avoids the pileup and slams his heavy SUV into the back of Bourne's car, pushing him into the oncoming traffic.

Several cars swerve left and right as Paz pushes Bourne sideways onto the ramped end of a K-Rail dividing the street ahead.

The nearly upended car grinds down the K-Rail until the rear of Bourne's car strikes an obstruction which punches it back into the lane as it slams against the front of Paz's SUV, knocking the SUV sideways, into a row of parked cars.

Bourne's car hits parked cars on the other side of the road.

Wills grabs his headset--

288A EXT. CRASH SITE -- DAY

288A

A CRI agent approaches Vosen.

CRI AGENT
Landy gave Bourne a false

It sinks in for Vosen...oh...shit...

303 INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- LATE AFTERNOON

303

Vosen steely eyed as they race uptown. He dials a number--

304 EXT. UPPER EAST SIDE -- LATE AFTERNOON

304

Bourne reaches 71st street and 2nd Ave. He looks up at the sign...

306 INT. HIRSCH'S OFFICE (NEW BUILDING OF HOSPITAL) -- LATE 306
AFTERNOON

Hirsch's office is located in the SRD's "front office", which is located covertly on a floor of the new building of the hospital. He is the longtime head of SRD and a powerful behind-the-scenes official at CIA.

THE CAMERA FINDS

DR. HIRSCH, 70, is, put simply, not a man to be trifled with. He's a 45 year CIA veteran. One of the great brains in the Agency's history, but also a man who knows how to wield power silently, invisibly, and to tremendous effect.
His phone buzzes.

DR. HIRSCH (INTO PHONE)
Hello.

306A INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- LATE AFTERNOON 306A

VOSEN at the other end of the line --

VOSEN (INTO PHONE)
Bourne knows everything. I think he's heading for you right now.

Dead pause.

306 INT. HIRSCH'S OFFICE (NEW BUILDING OF HOSPITAL)-- DAY 306

HIRSCH (INTO PHONE)
He's coming home, Noah.

There's a wistfulness in the way he says it. But also the sense that this was absolutely inevitable. And he's calm about it, doesn't show any fear, doesn't reach for a gun.

HIRSCH (INTO PHONE)
How long do I have?

VOSEN
Not long. Get out of there.

HIRSCH
No. I'm going to stay.

VOSEN
Are you crazy, he'll--

HIRSCH
He'll come to the training wing.
That's what he knows. I'll keep him in play until you arrive.

309R EXT. NEW YORK -- HOSPITAL -- LATE AFTERNOON 309R

Bourne arrives at the "Johnston Medical Center." He looks up to see "415".

FB5 FLASHBACK FB5

The image of "415" that has been haunting his dreams.

309 EXT. NEW YORK -- HOSPITAL -- LATE AFTERNOON 309

This is the place... When he looks down Landy steps out of the lobby to meet him on the sidewalk.

BOURNE
They'll kill you for giving me this place.

LANDY
4/15/71 isn't much of a code. My guess is Vosen's already on his way.

BOURNE
Why'd you do it?

LANDY
This isn't us, David. What they turned you into, what they're doing with Blackbriar... This has to stop.

BOURNE
Then stop it. Everything you need is in there.

Bourne hands her the black bag and enters the hospital.

LANDY
David... Come in with me. It's better if we do this together.

BOURNE
(shakes head)
This is where it started for me, this is where it ends.

She watches the doors close behind him.... Landy lets him go.

323 EXT. NYC STREETS -- LATE AFTERNOON

323

QUICK SHOTS of six different CRI sedans and SUVs rushing toward the hospital.

309R EXT. HOSPITAL -- LATE AFTERNOON

309R

Landy looks in the backpack.

JUMPCUTS:

--She unzips the backpack and looks in at the the Blackbriar Operations File.

--A cover page inside: "utmost secrecy"... "potentially explosive public reaction would jeopardize the program"...

--Another page: "Terminated" stamped across the photos of victims. Next to the victim from the inciting incident, the words: "US citizen"...

LANDY
Oh, my God...

--A third page, more photos, no "terminated" on these.
Future victims. "US citizen" stamped next to each one...

310 INT. HOSPITAL -- LATE AFTERNOON 310

Bourne uses the card reader he took from Vosen's safe to enter a "restricted access elevator." A guard comes. Bourne aims his pistol at him as the elevator door closes.

309R EXT. FIRST AVENUE -- OUTSIDE HOSPITAL -- LATE AFTERNOON 309R

Landy walks down the street. She looks up to spot two black sedans speeding east on 71st, turns south -- two SUVs coming up York. Shit--

323 INT. VOSEN'S SUV -- LATE AFTERNOON 323

A block south of the hospital, stuck in traffic, Vosen points.

VOSEN
Landy! Right there! She's got Bourne's backpack!

310R INT. 8TH FLOOR ELEVATOR LOBBY -- LATE AFTERNOON 310R

Bourne flips up the elevator stop button and uses the access card to enter a secure corridor--

323 INT. LOBBY -- LATE AFTERNOON 323

Landy runs across the lobby.

323 EXT. FIRST AVENUE -- LATE AFTERNOON 323

Vosen's SUV careens to a stop behind a bunch of traffic. Still a half block from the entry door but it's close enough--

322 INT. CORRIDOR 322

Bourne rushes down a nondescript corridor--

325 INT. HOSPITAL LOBBY -- LATE AFTERNOON 325

Vosen and CRI agents rush into the lobby.

VOSEN
 (to a group of six agents)
 I'll find Landy. You get to the training wing and get Bourne!

A security guard comes over.

VOSEN
 Do you know who I am?
 (the guard nods)
 Where's your security room?

324 INT. HOSPITAL CORRIDOR 324

Landy looks around. Finds an open office. She pushes open the door and runs to the fax machine. She starts faxing the Blackbriar documents Bourne took from Vosen's safe.

324A INT. SECURITY ROOM -- LATE AFTERNOON 324A

Vosen enters.

VOSEN
 I want to see all your footage for the last three minutes.

322 INT. SRD TRAINING WING (OLD BUILDING OF HOSPITAL) -- LATE 322
 AFTERNOON

Bourne stares down the corridor from his dreams, the corridor Daniels lead him down in his flashback.

We see Bourne go into--

FBA3 FLASHBACK FBA3

322 BACK TO SCENE 322

FBB3

Bourne was standing at this door....

331 INT. OFFICE -- LATE AFTERNOON

331

Vosen enters the room. The last pages have been faxed...

LANDY

You better get a good lawyer.

She exits...

322 BACK TO SCENE

322

Then spins, gun up--

Hirsch is there, halfway down the corridor behind him.

HIRSCH

Put the gun down. I wouldn't be here if I didn't want to talk.

BOURNE

I've spent three years running. Three years trying to find out who I was.

Hirsch moves toward Bourne, completely unfazed by the gun.

HIRSCH

You still don't have it all back, do you? You haven't filled in all the pieces?

BOURNE

Let's start with the moment you found out I wouldn't execute Wombosi. The amnesia wasn't the issue, it was the fact that I didn't pull the trigger....

HIRSCH

One lapse meant your conditioning had failed.

Bourne grabs Hirsch and slams him against the wall

BOURNE

It was always you, behind Conklin, behind Abbott.... They were just following orders.

Bourne grabs Hirsch and pushes him to the wall. Searches him for weapons.

HIRSCH
(completely calm)
I'm unarmed, Jason.

BOURNE
(shoving Hirsch hard against the wall)
"David." I'm David Webb.

CLOSE ON Bourne's face--

HIRSCH
You were David Webb, but not anymore.

322 INT. SRD TRAINING WING CORRIDOR -- LATE AFTERNOON

322

Bourne stands with Hirsch.

BOURNE
Why me? Why did you pick me?

A beat...

HIRSCH
You really don't remember, do
you?
(beat)
You picked us, Jason.

BOURNE
What does that mean?

HIRSCH
You volunteered.

Hirsch uses his free hand to hit the keypad on the wall.
The "room in use" sign lights up.

Bourne looks up "flashback style"--

FBA1 FLASHBACK

FBA1

Bourne remembers that keypad, that "room in use" sign from the first day...

322 INT. ROOM WHERE BOURNE FIRST MET HIRSCH

322

Bourne and Hirsch enter...

HIRSCH
You volunteered right here....
You didn't even blink, Jason.
You just handed me these...

Hirsch removes a pair of dog tags from his jacket pocket.
Holds them out to Bourne.

Bourne takes the dog tags. Stares at them.

stay.

HIRSCH

*Stop running from the truth,
Jason. You chose to come here!
You chose to stay! And no matter how much you want to forget it...eventually you're going to have to face how you chose, right there, to become Jason Bourne!*

FB10 FLASHBACK:

FB10

Bourne sitting in a chair, looking terrible. Hirsch looks at him from behind the desk...

HIRSCH (CONT'D)

You haven't slept for a long time have you David? Have you made a decision? This can't go on, you know. You have to decide.

BOURNE

Who is he?

HIRSCH

We've been through that.

BOURNE

What did he do?

HIRSCH

It doesn't matter.

(beat)

*You came to us. You volunteered.
You said you'd do anything it takes to save American lives.
You're not a liar are you? Or too weak to see this through? This is it. Let go of David Webb. Will you give yourself to this program?*

Bourne looks down, a gun in his hand. He gets to his feet swiftly and fires the pistol several times into a hooded figure. The man slumps over.

Bourne stares at what he's done.

HIRSCH (CONT'D)
You're no longer David Webb.
From now on you'll be known as Jason Bourne. Welcome to the program.

Daniels pulls the hood off the figure to show that he is dead.

Just then Kramer walks through the door.

KRAMER
He's ready. Send him to Operations.

322 PRESENT

322

And now, in real time, Bourne comes out of the flashback. He stares back at Hirsch....

HIRSCH
Do you remember now?

Bourne lowers the gun.

BOURNE
I remember. I remember everything.

HIRSCH
You can't outrun what you did,
Jason. You made yourself into who you are.

BOURNE
I'm done running. That's why
I'm here. To end you, to shut this down. I'm no longer Jason
Bourne.

HIRSCH
So now you're going to kill me?

BOURNE
No. You don't deserve the star they give you on the wall at Langley.

Just then Bourne spins -- agents arrive at the door. It's locked.

322 INT. HALLWAY 322

The agents fire at the door handle to get it open.

322 INT. ROOM WHERE BOURNE FIRST MET HIRSCH 322

Bourne looks out a window. Sees the layout of a roof several stories below. Then he turns and shoots out the room's mirrored observation window. Bourne dives through it just as agents rush in and open fire at him.

SERIES OF SHOTS

Bourne races through corridors, loosing the CRI agents.

352 EXT. ROOF -- NIGHT 352

Bourne runs out onto the roof. Rushes across it to look over the edge. It's a straight drop to the FDR -- 12 stories down.

He races to another ledge -- the East River below him. But he has to clear a 10 foot supporting wall at the base of the building to hit the water. He backs up to get a running leap.

As he does, he turns and sees Paz, who is holding a gun on him.

PAZ

Why didn't you take the shot?

Bourne looks at him.

BOURNE

Do you even know why you're trying to kill me? Look at what they make you give.

Bourne turns and runs off the roof.

Paz fires into the air...

FOLLOW Bourne as he drops fourteen stories into the freezing river--

MULTIPLE ANGLES -- Bourne goes into the river...

352 UNDERWATER 352

Bourne in a dead man's float...as his clothes soak through he begins to sink....

PULL BACK...farther and farther from Bourne's dead still sinking....as OVERLAPPING, INTERWEAVING VOICE OVERS begin:

ANCHOR 1 (V.O.)

FBI agents arrested several senior CIA officials today in connection with the broadening scandal enveloping Washington today--

ANCHOR 2 (V.O.)

Assassination program code-named "Blackbriar" was exposed by a former assassin named David Webb--

ANCHOR 3 (V.O.)

Program reportedly targeting US Citizens in some cases...

ANCHOR 4 (V.O.)

CIA Director Ezra Kramer produced explosive documents for the Senate Committee indicating "Blackbriar" was authorized at the highest levels of government.

356 INT. BAR -- URUGUAY -- SUNSET

356

Nicky goes to the bar of at a low end tourist bar with several other customers. She stands there, eyes fixed on a TV behind the bar:

ANCHOR 5 (V.O., CONT'D)

Webb, who was known inside the intelligence community, as "Jason Bourne" jumped from the fourteenth floor of the CIA facility where he was trained in New York into the East River below. While experts say it would be nearly impossible to survive the fall, despite two weeks of efforts, his body has still not been recovered.

PUSH in on the smile that develops on Nicky's face. As we CUE the Moby "Extreme Ways" sting---

352 UNDERWATER

352

Bourne's body sinking toward the bottom...when all of a sudden it comes to life -- arms together, legs kick powerfully--

And Bourne swims away...

medicine cabinet. Downs something specific.*

3 INT./EXT. COTTAGE LIVING ROOM/VERANDA -- NIGHT 3

One minute later. BOURNE moves out onto the veranda.

*MARIE pads in. Watching him for a moment. Concerned.
Clearly it's not the first time this has happened.*

They both look different than last we saw them; his hair is longer. She's a blonde. Hippie travelers. Their cottage is humble but sweet. The bedroom opens to a beach and a town just down the hill. CLUB MUSIC from some all night rave wafting in from the far distance.

MARIE
Where were you, Jason?

BOURNE
In the car. Conklin up front.

MARIE
I'll get the book.

BOURNE
No. There's nothing new.

MARIE
You're sure?
(he nods)
We should still -- we should write it down.

BOURNE
Two years we're scribbling in a notebook --

MARIE
-- it hasn't been two years --

BOURNE
-- it's always bad and it's never anything but bits and pieces anyway!
(she's gone quiet)
You ever think that maybe it's just making it worse? You don't wonder that?

She lays her hands on his shoulders, steadies him.

MARIE
We write them down because sooner or later you're going to remember something good.

BOURNE
(softens)
I do remember something good. All the time. I remember you.

She smiles. Kisses him. Leads him back in.

4

INT. COTTAGE BEDROOM -- NIGHT

4

MARIE getting BOURNE into the bed. Turning down the light.
Getting him settled. Waiting for that pill to kick in.
What would he do without her?

BOURNE
I'm trying, Marie, Okay?

MARIE
I worry when you get like this.

BOURNE
It's just a nightmare.

MARIE
I don't mean that. I worry when you try to ignore it.

He hesitates. But that gets him. He knows she's right.
And with that opening, he's letting go. Resistance folding. Almost childlike. She's gathering him in.
He's letting her do it...

MARIE (CONT'D)
Sleep. Sleep now.

BOURNE
I should be better by now.

MARIE
You are better. And I think it's not memories at all. It's just a dream you keep having over and over.

BOURNE
But it ends up the same.

MARIE
One day it will be different. It just takes time.
(beat)
We'll make new memories. You and me.

Silence. She strokes his face. He gives in to her tenderness. He's fading. Two waifs in the dark.

DISSOLVE TO:

5 EXT. BEACH -- GOA/BEACHTOWN -- DAY 5

BOURNE running in the sun. A punishing pace along the sand. Moving strong. Effortless. Deep into it. Focused.
The stunning conjunction of sun and scenery are lost on him.

6 EXT. OUTDOOR MARKET -- GOA/BEACHTOWN -- DAY 6

A busy market town. Fishing town. Hippie town. Lots of young Western faces. Rundown and happening at the same time.

MARIE shopping. Filling a bag with local produce.

7 EXT. ROAD -- GOA/BEACHTOWN -- DAY 7

BOURNE still running, leaving the beach behind.

8 INT. COTTAGE KITCHEN -- DAY 8

MARIE back from the market, putting the groceries away.
Almost done, when she stops for a moment --

A PHOTOGRAPH. There on the windowsill. A snapshot. Jason and Marie on a beach. Her arms around him. As if she were the protector. Big smiles. Young. Alive. In love.

MARIE smiles.

9 EXT. MAIN STREET -- GOA/BEACHTOWN -- DAY 9

Funky busy. Colonial facades in vivid, sub-continental technicolor. Loud morning traffic.

CAMERA FINDS

BOURNE coming out of a store with a big bottle of water.
He's just finished his run. Standing there, chugging away, checking the scene, when something catches his eye --

HIS POV

THE STREET. A SILVER CAR -- something newish -- pulling down the block -- can't quite see who's driving, but --

BACK TO

BOURNE watching this silver car. So serious he's casual.
Nobody passing would notice, but we do: He's on alert.

MOVING WITH HIM AS

BOURNE follows THE SILVER CAR on foot -- natural -- cruising the BUSY SIDEWALK -- blending into the mix -- chugging on that water bottle and --

UP AHEAD

THE SILVER CAR making the corner and turning now --

BACK TO

BOURNE slowing as he reaches the corner --

HIS POV

THE SILVER CAR has parked. There's a GUY -- well-dressed -- casual -- physical -- sunglasses -- call him KIRILL -- he's out of the car and heading across the street toward a building there. A TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

BACK TO

BOURNE checking his watch. The car. The guy. Perimeter.

INT. JEEP -- DAY -- CONT

MARIE at the wheel -- adrenaline pumping -- clear running for thirty yards ahead and --

MARIE skidding them into the right turn -- clipping another vehicle -- MIRROR SHATTERING! -- speeding up.

BOURNE scanning behind them -- MARIE moving out to pass -- veering back! -- an ONCOMING BUS -- just in time and --

MARIE *
 -- Jesus! -- *
 (glancing over) *
 -- is he back there? -- *

BOURNE *
 -- not yet -- *

MARIE *
 -- it's just him? -- *

BOURNE

-- yeah -- one guy -- I don't think he was ready --

MARIE

-- hang on --

MARIE bearing down -- pulling out -- gives him a quick smile -- BOURNE knowing he's got a good one here --

31

INT. HYUNDAI -- DAY/SUNSET

31

*

KIRILL stopping short on a rise. Bit of a view from here.
Gets half out the car to look.

*

*

BELOW -- the JEEP headed for A BRIDGE. He's gonna lose them. KIRILL'S mind racing. Grabs duffle from the back, abandons car.

*

*

*

32

INT. JEEP -- BRIDGE -- DAY/SUNSET

32

MARIE driving. BOURNE preps his pistol. Eye out for KIRILL.

*

*

BOURNE

You keep going to the shack. I'll meet you there in an hour.

*

*

*

MARIE

(concerned)

Where are you going?

*

*

*

BOURNE

I'm going to bail on the other side and wait. This bridge is the only way he can follow.

*

*

*

*

MARIE

What if it's not who you think it is?

*

*

BOURNE

If he crosses the bridge, it is.

*

*

MARIE

There must be another way!

*

*

BOURNE

I warned them, Marie. I told them to leave us alone.

*

*

*

MARIE
Jason, please don't do this...it won't ever be over like this.

BOURNE
There's no choice.

HER POV

The old CONCRETE BRIDGE ahead. Almost there.

33

EXT. LOW WALL -- DAY/SUNSET

33

KIRILL slams into it. Quick, precise grabs into the bag.
Only a moment and he's got a SNIPER RIFLE.

A34

INT. JEEP -- BRIDGE -- DAY

A34

BOURNE -- pistol in hand -- spare clip in the other -- checks his watch.

BOURNE
At the end make the left, when I roll out do not slow down.

MARIE nods, got it. After a beat...

MARIE
I love you, too.

BOURNE
Tell me later.

MARIE looks ahead.

B34

EXT. LOW WALL -- DAY

B34

KIRILL. Eye to the scope.

SNIPER SCOPE POV

There! The JEEP rumbling across the bridge. No clear target, just the back of the full DRIVER'S SIDE HEADREST.

KIRILL'S FINGER

Squeezing. Firing.

34 EXT. WOODEN BRIDGE -- DAY (CONT) 34

The JEEP jerking.

FRONT FENDER tearing into and along the guard rail -- cement shards fill the air --

BOURNE reaching for the wheel -- Too late!

As the JEEP finally crashes through the flimsy guardrail -- Plummets -- splashes hard -- begins to sink out of sight.

35 EXT. LOW WALL -- DAY (CONT) 35

KIRILL lowers the scope, takes a quick look around. He's basically gone unnoticed in this little nook with his silenced rifle. But people are already rushing toward the bridge. Then... there!

An OLD WOMAN looking directly at KIRILL from a doorway.
Not quite sure what. But an old Indian woman in Goa? So
what.

KIRILL drills her with a look. As she sinks back inside --

36 INT. JEEP -- SINKING IN THE RIVER -- DAY/SUNSET 36

Swallowed up. BOURNE and MARIE gone.

*

37 EXT. LOW WALL -- SUNSET 37

KIRILL scans the surface of the river under the bridge.
Waiting.

38 EXT. RIVER BOTTOM -- DAY 38

Mud plumes as the JEEP settles. BOURNE reaches over to MARIE, tries to urge her out.

*

*

39 EXT. LOW WALL -- DAY 39

KIRILL with a killer's patience, waiting, almost done.

SCOPE POV

The surface of the water. Unbroken.

KIRILL

Scans his perimeter. There's the old woman again. But more people with her. People coming out of the woodwork.

KIRILL checks the surface one last time. Nothing.

He breaks down the rifle in moments -- goes. *

40 EXT. JEEP -- RIVER BOTTOM -- DAY 40

BOURNE -- up into an air pocket held by the jeep's canvas top. A big gulp of air --

And he's back to MARIE. Frantic. Trying to unclip her seatbelt. Pull her out. But it's all jammed up. *

41 EXT. KIRILL -- BY THE SILVER CAR 41

Bag chunked in the back. All he has left is the scope. One last look to the unbroken surface. Then it's time to go. KIRILL -- drifting away -- disappears. *

42 EXT. JEEP -- RIVER BOTTOM -- DAY 42

The red halo growing bigger. BLOOD. *

BOURNE pauses. MARIE'S face is blank. She's dead. *

BOURNE finally pulling back. Realizing this is goodbye... *

"The Hub". Secure, anonymous office space somewhere in the city. Shades drawn. Lots of gear cabled around. The stale, improvised feel of a temporary outpost. Four serious people alone in this room:

PAMELA LANDY is 46. A Senior C.I.A. Counterintelligence Officer. Hovering over the communications console.

CRONIN -- Pamela's #2 -- early forties, stone-cold facade -- quarterbacking the operation over the radio -- KURT and KIM are the techs here. His and Her headphones. Ruggedized laptops and comm gear spread around them.

CRONIN
What have you got, Survey One?

72 INT. NEARBY BERLIN OFFICE -- NIGHT (CONT)

MIKE and VIC shake hands; two tired co-workers parting ways. MIKE will keep walking. VIC entering the building through the big glass doors, smiling as he's approached by A NIGHT SHIFT SECURITY GUARD. And we hear:

MIKE still walking, alone now, heading away from THE GLASS OFFICE BUILDING toward A VAN parked up the block.

MIKE/RADIO

MARSHALL
I'm here. So is Donnie and Jack Weller.
We understand you're using the full allocation for this buy?

PAMELA
That's where we came out.

MARSHALL

It's a lot of money, Pam.

PAMELA

We're talking raw, unprocessed KGB files.
It's not something we can go out and comparison shop.

MARSHALL

Still...

PAMELA

For a thief. A mole. I vetted the source, Marty. He's real. If it does nothing more than narrow the list of suspects, it's a bargain at ten times the price.

MANDARIN #1

Pamela, Jack Weller here. It's the quality that's at issue...

PAMELA

Yes, sir. I'm in total agreement. If they're fakes, they're expensive.

(furious, impatient)

Gentlemen, I've got the seller on site and in play. Quite honestly, there's not much more to talk about.

MARSHALL looks to his MANDARIANS. Not convinced, but doesn't want to lose the opportunity. Time to wash his hands.

Dark. A small room full of wiring and infrastructure, lit by the glare of someone's MAG-LIGHT.

GLOVED HANDS quickly pass over racks of gear and wiring and then stopping at -- the main electrical risers.

They carefully place an EXPLOSIVE DEVICE -- no bigger than a pack of cigarettes -- onto the main riser...

Done with that, here comes A SECOND SMALL EXPLOSIVE DEVICE -- but this one's special, it's being taken from A PLASTIC BAG and mounted down by the floor on a sub-panel --

121 EXT. FERRY BUILDING CUSTOMS HALL -- NIGHT

121

NEVINS. American. A junior, C.I.A. Field Officer. Walking from the parking lot, talking on his cellphone.

NEVINS

...what can I do? I can't. I'll call you when I know what I'm into...

(a hassled pause)

I don't know, some guy's name came up on the computer.

(starting toward the building)

So start without me, if I can get there, I will. Later...

NEVINS hangs up and pockets the phone. He hustles towards the building.

122 INT. CIA SITUATION ROOM -- DAY

122

The room is jumping. Agents tracking, working the phones and computers. PAMELA giving orders. ABBOTT watches.

CRONIN
 (looks up from computer screen)
 Looks like he's been detained.

PAMELA
 Who's going? Us?

CRONIN
 There's only a Consulate, they sent a field officer out half an hour ago --

PAMELA
 (cuts him off)
 Then get a number, they need to know who they're dealing with.

CRONIN already on it...

123

INT. FERRY BUILDING HOLDING ROOM -- SUNSET

123

As NEVINS flashes his credentials to CARABINIERI at door, who gives an unimpressed shrug and lets him in.

NEVINS takes his overcoat off, tosses it on the empty chair. We see a big ass .45 for just a second under his suit jacket.

NEVINS
 Alright, Mr. Bourne, is that your name?
 (BOURNE nods)
 Name's Nevins. I'm with the US Consulate.
 Could I see your passport?

BOURNE, silent, hands over his passport.

NEVINS (CONT'D)
 So, Mr. Bourne...

NEVINS studies Bourne's passport...

NEVINS (CONT'D)
 What are you doing in Tangiers?

Silence...

NEVINS (CONT'D)
 (faux friendly)
 Are you travelling alone?

BOURNE stares straight ahead. NEVINS comes around the table and sits in front of BOURNE.

NEVINS (CONT'D)
(in his face)
Look, I don't know what you've done.
But, you're gonna need to play ball here.

NEVINS cell starts to ring. He shrugs an apology, turns away and answers:

NEVINS (cont'd) (CONT'D)
Nevins...

PAMELA/PHONE
This is Pamela Landy, a CI Supervisor calling from Langley, Virginia. Are you with a Jason Bourne now?

NEVINS
(listens; looks at Bourne)
Yes...

A123 INT. CIA SITUATION ROOM -- DAY

A123

PAMELA on the phone.

PAMELA
Then use extreme caution. He can be very unpredictable and violent. Use whatever means necessary to...

123 INT. FERRY BUILDING HOLDING ROOM -- SUNSET

123

Whatever Nevins is being told, it's concerning. BOURNE watching him. Knows exactly what this is.

CLOSE ON NEVINS as he steps away, listening intently. His hand just starting to move toward his shoulder holster.

NEVINS (cont'd)
Okay, I'll call you right back.

NEVINS flips shut his phone. He reaches for his gun, even as he turns, and --

BOURNE is right there in his face. WHUMP! Momentum and gravity reaching mutual agreement as NEVINS hits the deck.

CARABINIERI barely clears his holster before -- CHOP -- CHOP -- BOURNE has him down in a heap.

BOURNE is back, silent and effective.

Finding NEVINS cellphone, BOURNE reaches into his bag. He holds the phone next to a larger, diagnostic MOBILE UNIT -- the "confirm" light blinks -- Nevins' phone has been cloned. BOURNE puts the phone back in NEVINS coat, takes his gun and CARABINIERI'S gun and radio and puts them in his duffle. We're starting to realize there's a plan at work here.

FINALLY

BOURNE -- exits the door, wedging a desk under the handle so it cannot be opened from the inside and calmly walks away like nothing ever happened --

124 EXT. NAPLES FERRY BUILDING -- NIGHT 124

And now we see the old BOURNE, in his long black coat, purposely striding out of the building. He pauses long enough for the security camera to get a good look at him.

THE RONIN returns.

125 EXT. NAPLES FERRY PARKING LOT -- NIGHT 125

BOURNE crosses the street and approaches a man putting his suitcase in the trunk of a green Peugeot. BOURNE reaches into his bag, pulls out some cash.

PAMELA/PHONE

Pamela Landy, again. Where do we stand?

*

A130 INT. FERRY/SECURITY HOLDING ROOM -- NIGHT

A130

Nevins barely knows where he is.

131 EXT. NAPLES STREET -- NIGHT

131

BOURNE sits in the dark car. Headphones. A nest of cool gadgetry -- on the passenger seat. Listening in -- recording --

He writes: Pamela Landy -- circles it.

NEVINS/PHONE

I think... I think he got away.

*

PAMELA looks at the faces waiting around the table. Shakes her head no...

*

PAMELA

Have you locked down the area?

*

*

NEVINS/PHONE

Ah, we're in Italy. They don't exactly "lock down" real quick...

*

INTERCUT -- BOURNE -- NEVINS -- PAMELA --

PAMELA/PHONE

How long have you worked for the agency?

NEVINS/PHONE

Me? Four years.

PAMELA/PHONE

If you ever want to make it to five, you're gonna listen to me real close. Jason Bourne is armed and extremely dangerous. A week ago, he assassinated two men in Berlin, one of whom was a highly-experienced field officer...

*

(continuing as--)

We're TOTALLY ON BOURNE at this point -- sitting there in the dark car, struggling to make sense of this -- what the fuck is she talking about? -- Berlin? -- He writes it, circles it.

PAMELA/PHONE (CONT'D)

I want that area secured, I want any evidence secured and I want it done now. Is that clear??

*

NEVINS/PHONE

Yes, sir -- ma'am...

PAMELA/PHONE

I'm getting on a plane to Berlin in 45 minutes, which means you are going to call me back in 30, and when I ask you where we stand, I had better be impressed. My mobile number is...

ABBOTT

You don't know what you're getting into here.

PAMELA

And you do? From the moment he left Treadstone, he has killed and eluded every person that you sent to find him...

Before it can come to blows --

MARSHALL

(riot act)

Enough. I want both of you on that plane.
(MORE)

MARSHALL (CONT'D)

And we are -- all of us -- going to do what we were either too lazy or inept to do the last time around -- you're going to

135 INT. US AIR FORCE BASE, ENGLAND -- DAY 135

Inside a hanger. Inside an office. ABBOTT watching as CRONIN questions NICKY. PAMELA sits on a window sill.

CRONIN

So your cover at the time was what?

NICKY

That I was an American student in Paris.

CRONIN

What exactly did your job with Treadstone in Paris consist of?

Nicky looks to Abbott. He nods that it's okay to answer. Pamela bristles at the check-off.

*
*

NICKY

I had two responsibilities. One was to coordinate logistical operations. The other was to monitor the health of the agents, to make sure they were up to date with their medications.

CRONIN

Health, meaning what?

NICKY

Their mental health. Because of what they'd been through. They were prone to a variety of problems.

PAMELA

(losing patience)

What kind of problems?

*

NICKY

Depression. Anger. Compulsive behaviors. They had physical symptoms -- headaches -- sensitivity to light --

PAMELA

Amnesia?

*

*

NICKY

Before this? Before Bourne? No.

NICKY gets agitated. ABBOTT steps in, fatherly, good cop.

*

*

ABBOTT

Were you familiar with the training program?

NICKY

The details? No. I mean, I was told it was voluntary. I don't know if that's true or not, but that's what I was told.

(a bit defensive)

Look, they took vulnerable subjects, okay? You mix that with the right pharmacology and some serious behavior modification, and, I don't know, I mean, I guess anything's possible.

ZORN arrives from outside.

*

ZORN
 The jet's ready.
 (points to Nicky)
 There's a car for you.

Everybody moving. NICKY relieved. She's off the hook.
 She thinks. She becomes aware of PAMELA considering her.

NICKY
 Good luck.

PAMELA
 You were his local contact. You were with him the night Conklin died. You're coming with us.

136 EXT. PRIVATE JET -- DUSK 136

Streaks across the sky.

137 INT. PRIVATE JET -- NIGHT 137

Quiet in the cabin. ABBOTT gets up to use the bathroom.
 PAMELA sits across from NICKY who stares out the window.
 As the bathroom door clicks shut, PAMELA seizes the privacy.

PAMELA
 I'm curious about Bourne. Your interpretation of his condition.
 You have specific training in the identification and diagnosis of psychological conditions?

NICKY
 Am I a doctor, no, but...

PAMELA
 Are you an expert in amnesia?

NICKY
 Look, what do you want me to say?
 I was there. I believed him.

PAMELA
 Believed what?

NICKY
 I believed Jason Bourne had suffered a severe traumatic breakdown.

PAMELA
So he fooled you.

NICKY
(frustration building)
If you say so.

PAMELA
(leans in; still low)
Not good enough. You're the person who floated this amnesia story.
(shifts gears)
Ever feel sorry for him? For what he'd been through?

NICKY
You're making it out like we're friends here or something. I met him alone twice.

PAMELA
You felt nothing? No spark? Two young people in Paris? Dangerous missions?
Life and death?

NICKY
(incredulous)
You mean, did I want a date?

PAMELA
Did you?

NICKY
These were killers. Conklin had them all jacked up. They were Dobermans.

PAMELA
Some women like Dobermans --

NICKY
What do you want from me? I was reassigned. I'm out.

PAMELA
See, that's a problem for me, Nicky.
Whatever he's doing, we need to end it.
This isn't the kind of mess you walk away from.

PAMELA leans away. NICKY looks back out the window.

138 EXT. TARMAC -- BERLIN AIRPORT -- NIGHT 138

activity. KIM ready to debrief, KURT work the computers.
Energy up. PAMELA, ABBOTT and CRONIN bring NICKY into the room.

KIM

-- so far Bourne's had no contact with anyone on the list -- Langley pulled an image out of Naples, it's uploading right now.

*
*

KURT

Coming in now...

Everything stops, as THE PHOTO -- blurry, oblique -- begins materializing on HALF-A-DOZEN MONITORS around the room.
Suddenly, they're surrounded by Bourne.

PAMELA

(to Nicky)

Is it him?

Looking closer -- she nods...

CRONIN

He's not hiding, that's for sure.

ZORN

Why Naples? Why now?

PAMELA has gone quiet, just staring at the picture, as --

KURT

Could be random.

CRONIN
Maybe he's running.

ABBOTT looks skeptical.

ABBOTT
On his own passport?

KIM
(the image)
What's he actually doing?

CRONIN
What's he doing? He's making his first mistake...

And then, from behind them --

NICKY
It's not a mistake.
(everyone looks over)
They don't make mistakes. And they don't do random. There's always an objective, always a target.
(beat)
If he's in Naples, on his own passport, there's a reason.

THE DOORMAN
(standing there)
(Can he walk?)

KIRILL stirs. His stupor a futile attempt to escape. Eyes still those of an exceptionally hard man.

A minute later. KIRILL can walk. The most graceful drunk you've ever seen. Making his way through the club. Tuning out everything but the need to get to THE DOOR and --

143 INT. JARDA'S HOUSE FOYER/KITCHEN -- DAY 143

The man enters. His alarm system -- beep...beep -- starts once he comes through the door. There's A KEYPAD on the wall. He enters his code and the beeping stops. Just like everyday. It's a sad house.

He hangs his coat on the rack. Moving now --

INTO

THE KITCHEN. He drops his briefcase on the table, opens the fridge for a drink. Except what he comes out with is --

A GUN!

Wheeling around. The salaryman is JARDA. JARDA from Bourne's dream. But as he turns --

BOURNE behind him. Bigger gun. Waiting. So ready.

BOURNE
I emptied it.

JARDA
(a total pro)
Felt a little light.

BOURNE
Drop it.

JARDA lets the gun fall, looks his old comrade over a beat.

But Bourne's not interested in a reunion.

Here...

Bourne tosses him FLEXCUFFS -- JARDA puts his hands behind his back, turns to let BOURNE cinch them.

BOURNE (cont'd) (CONT'D)
Front. Use your teeth.

JARDA
(caught scamming)
Sorry. Old habits.

BOURNE kicks over a chair. Sit.

JARDA (CONT'D)
Word in the ether was you'd lost your

BOURNE checking JARDA'S briefcase -- tearing through it --

BOURNE
You still should've moved.

JARDA
I like it here.

Last time I saw you was Greece. You had a good spot.

BOURNE reacts -- doesn't look over -- but realizes...

JARDA (CONT'D)

I had the girl. I had her lined up that whole afternoon. Waiting for you, that was the problem.

(defensive)

You ever do two targets? It's tough.

BOURNE turns. Cold.

JARDA (CONT'D)

(his real question)

So why didn't you kill me then?

BOURNE

She wouldn't let me.

(beat)

She's the only reason you're alive.

Silence. JARDA down a peg. Or two.

JARDA

What do you want?

BOURNE

Conklin.

JARDA

He's dead.

BOURNE -- the gun -- right to Jarda's face --

BOURNE

Try again.

JARDA

Shot dead in Paris. Dead the night you walked out.

BOURNE/PHONE

Then who runs Treadstone?

JARDA

Nobody. They shut it down. We're the last two. It's over...

(not finishing because--)

-- he's falling! -- landing hard -- BOURNE just kicked the chair out from under him --

BOURNE

You're lying. If it's over, why are they after me?

JARDA

I don't know.

BOURNE

Who sent you to Greece?

JARDA

A voice. A voice from the States. Someone new.

BOURNE

Pamela Landy?

JARDA

I don't know who that is.

BOURNE

What's going on in Berlin?

JARDA

I don't know! Why would I lie?

Silence. BOURNE pulls back. Unsure.

JARDA makes it to his feet.

JARDA (CONT'D)

What the hell did you do? You must have really screwed up.

*

BOURNE doesn't know. He backs off.

JARDA (CONT'D)

She really did that? Told you not to kill me?

(beat)

I had a woman once. But after a while, what do you talk about? I mean, for us. The work. You can't tell them who you are...

BOURNE

I did.

JARDA hesitates. It's really like Bourne just told him how much he loved her.

JARDA

I thought you were here to kill me.

Something in the way he said it. Plus Jarda just glanced at his watch.

BOURNE

What did you do?

JARDA shrugs, almost embarrassed. BOURNE looks across to the alarm pad Jarda hit on the way in. Voltage -- like a switch.

BOURNE (cont'd) (CONT'D)

You called it in?

What do you have, Danny?

ZORN

You put a four-gam Kel on here and it's gonna take out power to the building. You know that. What you can't know, is if it's gonna blow the room with it.

ABBOTT

And?

ZORN

There were two charges, they were supposed to go off simultaneously. The second one, the one that didn't go off, was down here...

(pointing it out)

First of all, this is nothing, it's a sub-line for the breaker above. Second, why put the charge all the way down here? If you're good enough to get in here and handle the gear, you're good enough to know you don't need this.

(beat)

Bourne would know.

ABBOTT

It was staged?

ZORN

Is it a slam dunk? No, but...

GRETKOV arrives by car. Walks through the darkness.
ABBOTT barely glancing over.

ABBOTT
You told me Bourne was dead.

GRET KOV
There was a mistake.

ABBOTT
I'll say. You killed his goddam girlfriend instead. Now they're onto Neski. They're at the Brecker Hotel even as we speak.

GRET KOV
Will it track back to us?

ABBOTT
No. The files are spotless. Whatever they find, it's just going to make Conklin look worse.

GRET KOV
And the Landy woman?

ABBOTT
She's done everything I wanted. She bit on Conklin so fast it was laughable. She even found his bogus Swiss account...

GRET KOV
Anything else?

ABBOTT shoves a piece of paper -- and ADDRESS -- into GRET KOV'S hand.

ABBOTT

There's a body in the basement. Danny Zorn. He's got to disappear. For good.
Clean and fast. I'll put him in bed with Conklin and Bourne. Even the girl, Nicky.
Give me twenty-four hours, I'll think it

Neski. The reformer. I remember that.

Abbott can see by their faces: this hits closer to home.

ABBOTT
What?

PAMELA
They found Danny Zorn's body. Dead in the basement at the building where my people got hit the first time.

ABBOTT
Oh, God... It must have been Bourne.

PAMELA
Did he say anything to you?

ABBOTT
No... It must have been Bourne.

PAMELA, straight...

PAMELA
We'll know for sure when we get the security tapes.

CRONIN
But we can relax. We tracked him. He's on a train to Moscow.

ABBOTT reeling, hiding it.

ABBOTT
Moscow? What the Hell's he going to Moscow for?

PAMELA

GRET KOV

Go to the airport. Get a plane. I'll have a brass band waiting for you.

ABBOTT

Save it for Bourne.

GRET KOV

What?

There's a KNOCKING AT HIS DOOR -- ABBOTT simply ignores it.

ABBOTT

He left yesterday on the night train.
He's probably just getting in now.

ABBOTT

Why not? It was just money.

*

PAMELA
And Danny Zorn, what was that? *

ABBOTT
Had to be done. *

PAMELA
No good options left? *

ABBOTT

PAMELA
No. You lost your way. *

ABBOTT
Well, you're probably right. I guess that's all that hubris is. *

271 INT. MOSCOW TRAIN STATION -- DAY 271

BOURNE on the move. Welcome to the whole mad Moscow scene.
A jumble of faces and voices. Travellers. Arrivals and departures. Families. Beggars. Drunk war vets. Hawkers.

272 EXT. MOSCOW TRAIN STATION CAB STAND -- DAY 272

There, in the plaza. BOURNE hobbling across the street, when suddenly -- A CAR HORN! -- he turns and -- Look out!

A BIG BLACK BMW speeding past -- followed by TWO MORE -- all three cars with BLUE LIGHTS STROBING on the dashboards -
- a convoy -- whipping by like they own the place and --

TAXI DRIVER (OS) (Gangster bastards don't care what they do.)

BOURNE turns. A grizzled TAXI DRIVER right beside him.

BOURNE pulls a slip of paper from his pocket.

BOURNE
(his Russian is basic)
(You know this address?)

THE TAXI DRIVER squints, finally grunts affirmative.

He motions to his cab. As they get in and pull away --

273 INT. MOSCOW GARAGE -- DAY 273

Lots of cars. No people. But someone running... It's KIRILL pulling his keys as he sprints past and --

274 DELETED 274 *

275 INT. MOSCOW TAXI -- DAY 275

BOURNE and THE TAXI DRIVER looking over as THREE MOSCOW
POLICE CARS speed by -- SIRENS WAILING --

TAXI DRIVER
(It's always something, right?)

BOURNE just nods, as we --

276 INT./EXT. BLACK BMW -- DAY 276

KIRILL at the wheel. A guy in a hurry who knows what he's doing. One more thing, on the passenger seat -- TWO BIG AUTOMATIC PISTOLS --

277 EXT. MOSCOW TRAIN STATION -- DAY 277

MOSCOW COPS fanning through the crowd showing BOURNE'S INTERPOL PICTURE. "Have you seen him?"

278 EXT. MOSCOW TRAIN STATION CAB STAND -- DAY 278

MOSCOW COPS with the picture. Flashing it around, until --

 YOUNG CABBY
 (the moment he sees it)
 (He was just here. They just left.)

279 INT. MOSCOW TAXI -- DAY 279

They've stopped. BOURNE flashes a FIFTY DOLLAR BILL --

 BOURNE
 You wait. You understand? Stay.

 TAXI DRIVER
 (happy to pocket the cash)
 Sure. No problem. I sit.

280 EXT. OLD MOSCOW STREET -- DAY 280

Old Moscow. But not for long, there's new construction metastasizing all around it. BOURNE crosses the street and --

HIS POV

AN ABANDONED WOODEN HOUSE. Windows shattered and boarded up. Paint all but gone. Roof and gables all failing.

BACK TO

BOURNE crestfallen. Checking the address. This is it.

281 EXT. MOSCOW TRAIN STATION CAB STAND -- DAY 281
MORE COPS. Everything focused on ANOTHER TAXI DRIVER who's making a call on a cell phone -- everybody waiting on it --

282 EXT. ABANDONED WOODEN HOUSE -- DAY 282
BOURNE off the sidewalk now, peering around the side, trying to see if there's anything around back and --
OVER THERE
AN OLD WOMAN on the steps next door. Watching him.
BOURNE starts over. Finding the sweetest smile he's got --

283 INT. MOSCOW TAXI -- DAY 283
THE TAXI DRIVER still parked there --
HIS POV
BOURNE and the OLD LADY -- she's pointing like she's giving directions -- when suddenly, the Driver's CELL PHONE RINGS --
-
 TAXI DRIVER/PHONE
 (Hello...?)

284 EXT. ABANDONED WOODEN HOUSE -- DAY 284
BOURNE and the OLD LADY. His Russian is limited, but she's charmed nonetheless --
 BOURNE
 (A pen...to write...one minute...)
 (searching his pockets)

285 INT. MOSCOW TAXI -- DAY 285
THE TAXI DRIVER on the phone -- not so happy anymore --
 TAXI DRIVER
 (-- I'm looking at him -- American -- he's right here! --)

286 EXT. ABANDONED WOODEN HOUSE -- DAY 286

THE OLD LADY scribbling on a piece of paper. BOURNE reacting as the TAXI drops into gear. Pulls away.

BOURNE

Wait! Hey!

But THE TAXI only speeds up, and --

287 EXT. MOSCOW TRAIN STATION -- DAY 287

MOSCOW POLICE CARS tearing away and --

288 DELETED 288

289 INT. BLACK BMW -- DAY 289

KIRILL DRIVING. Reaching for his RINGING PHONE and --

THE BLACK BMW -- a moment later -- slamming on the brakes -- fishtailing a U-TURN and --

291 EXT. MOSCOW BUILDING PROJECT -- DAY 291

BOURNE hustling past all the new construction. Glancing back as POLICE SIRENS start rising behind him and --

292 INT. RED LEXUS -- DAY 292

KIRILL skidding around another corner and --

293 EXT. ABANDONED WOODEN HOUSE -- DAY 293

TWO POLICE CARS just stopped there -- COPS -- the OLD LADY pointing -- everyone turning as --

THE RED LEXUS speeds past them and --

294 DELETED 294

295 EXT. CONCRETE STAIRS -- DAY 295
BOURNE coming down as fast as he can -- just ahead there's A FOOTPATH BENEATH A FOUR LANE OVERPASS -- a neighborhood * on the other side -- he could disappear there --

296 INT. RED LEXUS -- DAY 296
KIRILL driving and scanning -- THERE! -- as he passes it --
THE OVERPASS -- slamming on the brakes and --

297 EXT. FOOTPATH -- DAY 297
BOURNE hobbling out in the open -- twenty yards to go --

298 EXT. OVERPASS -- DAY 298
KIRILL jumping out of the Lexus with A PISTOL in hand and --

299 EXT. FOOTPATH -- DAY 299
BOURNE -- no clue -- BANG! -- his shoulder! -- he's hit! -- he throws himself forward and --

300 EXT. OVERPASS -- DAY 300
KIRILL shifting for a better second shot and --

301 EXT. FOOTPATH -- DAY 301
BOURNE -- he's diving! -- rolling! -- pure instinct -- back under the embankment and --

302 EXT. OVERPASS -- DAY 302
KIRILL with no shot suddenly -- leaning over the rail -- just as the TWO MOSCOW POLICE CARS come screaming up -- MOSCOW COPS jumping out with guns drawn and --

303 EXT. FOOTPATH -- DAY 303
BOURNE -- he's up -- he's bleeding -- he's moving and --

CHAOS -- KIRILL with his hands in the air -- MOSCOW COPS coming toward him -- everyone screaming --

MOSCOW COPS
(-- UP! -- HANDS UP! -- KEEP THEM UP! -- DROP THE GUN! -- DROP IT! --)

MOCK-BOURNE
(-- I'M KGB, ASSHOLES! -- WE'RE CHASING THE SAME GUY! - HE'S GETTING AWAY! --) *

They let KIRILL go -- he looks back at the footpath -- BOURNE is gone -- as *

A304 EXT. MOSCOW CITY STREET -- DAY A304 *

GRETOKOV strolls along, suddenly two black sedans pull up and he is arrested. *

A305 INT. PEDESTRIAN TUNNEL -- DAY A305 *

BOURNE hurriedly makes his way to the other end -- a few beats later -- KIRILL on the hunt -- *

305 EXT. MOSCOW OUTDOOR MARKET -- DAY 305

A labyrinth of stalls. Food. Hardware. Clothes. And crowded. Even this hard-to-impress CROWD noticing --

BOURNE hobbling through. Nothing like a limping madman with a fresh gunshot wound to get attention --

PEOPLE back off -- pull THEIR KIDS out of the way -- SOME WOMAN STARTS SCREAMING and --

306 INT. MOSCOW ENCLOSED MARKET -- DAY 306

A SECURITY GUARD -- hears the commotion -- jogs out and --

THE G-WAGON in full pursuit now and -- *

BOURNE DRIVING -- up this curving little hill and -- *

THE TWO MOSCOW POLICE CARS starting to climb and -- *

KIRILL DRIVING and he's on the hill now -- *

BOURNE -- bad hand on the wheel -- holding on -- trying to find something in passenger seat -- TUBE SOCKS? *

THE TWO MOSCOW POLICE CARS splitting up! -- one on Bourne's ass -- the other cutting hard into A SIDE STREET, flanking him and -- *

BOURNE -- topping the hill -- two choices -- right or left? *

RIGHT! -- No! -- wrong -- because down the hill there's A POLICE CAR just about to angle in from THE SIDE-STREET and -- *

BOURNE -- no choice -- FLOORING IT! -- *

THE CAB -- it's a whale -- SLAM! -- knifing the front end of THE POLICE CAR and -- *

THE POLICE CAR -- spun back! -- CRASHING AGAINST A BUILDING ON THE CORNER and -- *

KIRILL -- right behind that guy -- swerving -- onto the sidewalk -- SPARKS FROM THE WALL AS HE SCRAPES! -- hanging in -- skidding into a turn down the hill and -- *

JUST MISSING THE FIRST POLICE CAR bombing right past him! *

BOURNE -- in pain as he packs his shoulder wound with the socks -- Ahead -- the street banks downhill to left and -- *

THERE! -- A BOULEVARD -- wide ride -- lots of traffic and -- *

THE CAB rocketing into the flow and -- *

BEHIND HIM -- POLICE CAR #1 with THE G-WAGON right on his ass and -- *

BOURNE -- Wrists flicking the wheel. THE CAB screaming through the slower traffic and -- *

KIRILL -- totally on it -- pedal down -- passenger window open -- wind blowing -- he's got THE PISTOL in his hand -- closing the gap and -- *

THE BLACK G-WAGON -- blowing past POLICE CAR #1 and -- *

BOURNE -- steering -- barely -- as he tears a few strips of DUCT TAPE to finish his triage -- *

BLAM! -- BLAM!! -- THE G-WAGON -- right beside him! -- *

BOURNE -- reacting -- what the fuck?! -- that's not a cop! - *

- but no time to clock Kirill because -- *

KIRILL -- shit! -- can't keep shooting -- into the oncoming lanes -- swinging wide -- A TRUCK! -- swerving again and -- *

THE CAB -- wavering again -- rallying and -- *

UP AHEAD -- THE BOULEVARD opens into THE RIVER BELTWAY -- big -- wide -- fast -- KREMLIN in the BG and -- *

FOUR NEW POLICE CARS screaming down from RED SQUARE and -- *

BOURNE skidding onto THE BELTWAY -- looking for room -- *

-- Finding it -- open road -- *

KIRILL back in the hunt and -- *

THE RIVER BELTWAY -- CAB SCREAMING PAST -- then ONE -- TWO - *

- THREE -- FOUR POLICE CARS -- now the BLACK G-WAGON and -- *

BOURNE -- Both hands on the wheel -- He's already forgotten about his shoulder -- *

THE BELTWAY -- up ahead -- ANOTHER CHOICE -- right takes you up to the city -- left is a TRANSIT TUNNEL and -- *

BOURNE -- checking his rearview -- starting right and -- *

THE TWO LEAD POLICE CARS right on his ass and -- *

BOURNE -- fake out -- veering left! -- last second -- into THE TUNNEL and -- *

THE TWO LEAD POLICE CARS -- wrong -- and worse, trying to change -- CRASH!!!! -- SPINNING -- and it's not just them -- *

A THIRD POLICE CAR caught in the clutter -- Not to mention the COMMUTERS -- CRASH!!! The Police are out of the race. *

KIRILL -- not fooled -- threading the needle -- through the carnage and into -- *

INT. THE TUNNEL -- DAY

338

FOUR LANES -- two way -- and long -- there's -- *

THE CAB -- squibbing past SLOWER CARS and -- *

KIRILL on him -- move for move -- follow the leader and -- *

BOURNE -- checks the rearview -- he's lost them all but the * G-WAGON -- who the hell is that? -- *

The Heavyweights. World Championship Belt up for grabs. *

KIRILL -- gaining -- nearly pulling level. *

BOURNE -- nowhere to go -- that's never stopped him before - *
- he carves a path -- turns two lanes into three as * sparks his way through a lane split -- *

THE G-WAGON -- roaring after him.

BOURNE -- checks the mirror -- closer -- who the Hell is that guy? --

KIRILL -- Gaining -- FIRING through his passenger window.

BOURNE -- BRAKES --

TUNNEL -- As the two vehicles scrape along each other --

KIRILL -- FIRING BACK -- odd angle --

BOURNE -- ducking for meager cover as bullets stitch through the roof --

SPINNING around the G-WAGON --

DETAILS -- front bumpers locking on rear fenders as --

TUNNEL -- The G-WAGON hurtling forward -- the CAB ass end first -- locked together --

KIRILL -- firing into the CAB -- really unloading now --

BOURNE -- down on the floor -- a tornado overhead --

KIRILL -- slaps in a new clip -- intense --

BOURNE -- gun against his door -- just below the window knob -- WHUMP-WHUMP-WHUMP --

SUV TIRE -- shredding.

KIRILL -- fights the wheel --

ANOTHER TRUCK -- looming large --

BOURNE -- looking between the seats out the rear window -- a LANE DIVIDING PILLAR ahead --

CAB -- as BOURNE sits up -- jerks the wheel to the right --

TUNNEL -- the cars unlock -- spin away from each other --

KIRILL -- focused -- taking deadly aim --

BOURNE -- staring back at him -- calm -- "I know something you don't know."

KIRILL -- frowns --

THE TRUCK -- swerves to reveal the PILLAR to Kirill's POV --

KIRILL -- eyes go wide --

WHALLOP! -- steel vs. concrete -- concrete victorious -- a bone compressing, truly horrendous impact!

353 INT. PROJECT BUILDING STAIRWELL -- EVENING 353

IRENA climbing. A JUNKIE here. Flickering light there.

354 INT. SIXTH FLOOR HALLWAY -- EVENING 354

IRENA -- her key at the door. Domestic disturbance playing across the hall. She opens up and --

355 INT. IRENA'S APARTMENT -- EVENING 355

It's dark. And she's barely through the door when --

IRENA jumps -- chokes back a CRY --

BOURNE is standing there -- propped there actually -- behind her -- gun in hand -- motioning for her to be quiet --

 BOURNE
 (his shabby Russian)
 (Quiet. Silence. Okay?)

IRENA nods. Scared. Gun in hand, BOURNE pushes the door the last few inches so it's fully closed.

 IRENA
 (I have no money. No drugs. Is that what you want?)

And now she can really see him. He's a disaster. Shivering. Bloody. Eyes more hollow than hers are.

 BOURNE
 Sit. Can you...
 (trying to conjure the Russian--)
 (The chair. Have the chair.)

 IRENA
 (accented)
 I speak English.

BOURNE staring at her. Nods. Gestures for her to sit.

 BOURNE
 Please...

So she does. And here they are.

BOURNE (CONT'D) (cont'd)
 Of all the people in the world, you're the only one I have anything to offer.
 (hesitating)
 That's why I came here.

IRENA
 (she's terrified)
 Okay.

He's got something beside him. Something he's taken off the wall. IT'S THE PHOTOGRAPH. The Neski family. Same as the one that was in the Hotel Brecker. Mom, Dad and Irena, arms around each other, in front of the house. Before it was abandoned. Happy. Smiling. Perfect.

BOURNE
 It's nice.
 (a beat)
 Does this picture mean anything to you?
 (no answer)
 Hmm?

*
 *
 *

IRENA
 It's nothing. It's just a picture.

BOURNE
 No. It's because you don't know how they died.

IRENA
 (he couldn't understand)
 No, I do.

*

A change in BOURNE as he studies her, measures her. Some moment of truth is here. IRENA braces, unsure.

BOURNE
 I would want to know.
 (beat)
 I would want to know that my mother didn't kill my father. I would want to know that she didn't kill herself.

IRENA
 What?

She really looks at him now. Fear overwhelmed by curiosity.

BOURNE
 I would grow up thinking that they didn't love me if they just left me like that.

Irena making sure her eyes don't leave his. They don't.

BOURNE (CONT'D) (cont'd)
It changes things. That knowledge.
Doesn't it?

IRENA (wary)
Yes...

BOURNE
That's not what happened to your parents.

IRENA
Then what?

BOURNE
I killed them.

Body blows, but he has her attention. She wipes a tear.

BOURNE (CONT'D) *
It was my job. My first time. Your father was supposed to be alone. But then your mother, she came out of nowhere...
(a little shrug)
I had to change my plan.
(beat)
You understand me?
(does she?)
You don't have to live like that anymore.
Thinking that.

IRENA
You killed them.

BOURNE nods, that's right.

BOURNE
They loved you.
(beat)
And I killed them.

IRENA *
How...how can...how can you be here and * say this? *

BOURNE *
I don't want you to forgive me. *

She stands suddenly. Stands because if she doesn't she'll burst into tears. Because she knows if she starts crying she won't be able to make sense of this.

IRENA

For who?

(he doesn't answer)

KILLED FOR WHO?

*

BOURNE pushes himself to his feet. A real effort.

BOURNE

It doesn't matter. Your life is hard enough.

IRENA

You're a liar.

BOURNE

You know I'm not.

IRENA

YOU'RE A LIAR!

BOURNE

Look at me.

There they are. Two people standing in a room. Squared off.

And now she starts crying. Really crying.

And he's taking it.

IRENA

I should kill you...if it's true you should die...I should kill you now!

BOURNE

I can't let you do that either.

*

IRENA

Because you're afraid!

BOURNE

No.

(starting for the door)

Because you don't want to know how it feels.

She hesitates. Stunned. He's leaving. He's opening the door.

*

*

BOURNE (CONT'D)

I have to go now.

*

*

IRENA

Is this really happening?

*

*

BOURNE
 (empty)
 I'm sorry.

*

And she sags. Back into the chair, as --

*

*

THE PHOTOGRAPH on the table. The sound of the door closing and Irena crying, as --

*

356 EXT. HOUSING PROJECT PLAYGROUND -- DAY

356

BOURNE trudging along. Across the snow. He's done it.

And he really can't take another step.

There's a bench. He sits down. Out of gas.

He just might die here. We slowly tilt up to the multicolored Moscow tenements.

*

*

FADE OUT:

*

357 INT. HOSPITAL ROOM -- DAY

357

BOURNE waking up -- sitting up -- where is he? -- trying to get his bearings -- but it's so bright -- white walls -- sheets -- SUNSHINE through clean windows and --

PAMELA (OS)
 Hello, David.

*

There she is. Standing at the foot of his bed.

BOURNE
 Where am I?

PAMELA
 Ramstein Air Base, Germany.
 (smiles)
 Before the wall fell you would have woken up in a Russian prison hospital.

*

He looks around -- tries to move -- hammered by pain.

BOURNE
 Oh, shit...

PAMELA Careful...

*

Long moment. He's taking it in. Trying to.

BOURNE
Why am I alive?

PAMELA
Are you disappointed?

They study each other a beat.

BOURNE
I know who you are.

PAMELA nods. Very calm here. No sudden movements.

PAMELA
Thank you for your gift. I'm sorry about Marie. *

BOURNE
What's that? *

PAMELA
Do you think you can read? Are you well enough? *

She has a folder. A PHOTOGRAPH -- Bourne's face -- stapled to the cover.

PAMELA (CONT'D) *

It's all in here. Treadstone. A summary of your life. All of it.

He waves it off.

BOURNE
Don't need it. I remember everything.

PAMELA
(smiles again)
Sounds like a threat.

BOURNE
You didn't answer my question.

PAMELA
Why you're alive?
(beat)
You're alive because you're special.
Because she kept you alive.
(she smiles)
Because we want you back on our side.

BOURNE silent. But hearing it. PAMELA leaves the file.

PAMELA (cont'd) (CONT'D)
Take a look at it. We'll talk later.

BOURNE watching her back away. As she exits into --

INT. HOSPITAL CORRIDOR -- DAY

358

Long, sterile hallway. CRONIN and NICKY standing there with an AIR FORCE SENTRY assigned to guard the room.

CRONIN and NICKY trying to play it cool, but now, as they get some distance down the hallway --

PAMELA
(to the sentry)
Let's give him half an hour.

*
*
*

NICKY
(quietly)
So?

PAMELA
Felt promising. It's a start.

*

A chill in the air. Both of them going quiet because there's A NURSE carrying a tray of food. She's coming toward us. They're walking away.

THE CAMERA

Staying with THE NURSE now. Coming up the hall.

THE SENTRY smiles -- opens the door and she enters --

359

INT. HOSPITAL ROOM -- DAY

359

Empty bed. Open window. Bourne is gone.

As THE MUSIC STARTS PUMPING, and we...

INT. SUNNYVALE - DOCTOR'S OFFICE - NIGHT - 2002

EVAN, 20, good-looking but with dark haunted eyes, frantically hides himself in an unlit Doctor's office. His face and chest are covered in blood. He holds his forehead in pain.

FLASHLIGHT BEAMS stab through the darkened corridor hunting for him. ALARMS SOUND. GUARDS are heard shouting to each other. Evan grabs a cardboard box and hides under a doctor's desk. He grabs some paper and begins writing in shorthand.

EVAN

(as he writes)

If anyone finds this, then I guess my plan didn't work and I'm already dead...

He takes a deep breath.

EVAN

But if I can just go back to the beginning of all this, I still might be able to save her.

Fatigue overwhelms him, but he continues writing...

INT. BUSY HOSPITAL CORRIDOR - DAY - 1982

TITLE: TWENTY YEARS EARLIER

ANDREA TREBORN, twenty-five, an attractive pregnant woman strapped to a gurney, is rolled down a busy hospital corridor. She is clearly ready to give birth, and as she flails her arms, she knocks another patient's IV bottle into the wall.

INT. BUSY HOSPITAL - RECOVERY ROOM - SUPER 8 FOOTAGE - 1982

A tearful Andrea holds newborn EVAN in her hands.

TITLE SEQUENCE OVER SUPER-8 MONTAGE INCLUDING:

INT. BUSY HOSPITAL - RECOVERY ROOM - DAY - 1982

Smiling Andrea holds baby Evan up to the camera, then places him in a crib.

EXT. PLAYGROUND - DAY - 1983

A playground. Evan's father, JASON (23), puts a 1-year old on a slide.

EXT. LENNY'S HOUSE - DAY - 1987

A birthday party for LENNY, 5, a chubby kid with only a few friends. Evan, now 5, is gently prodded by Andrea toward KAYLEIGH, 5, a quiet sweet-looking girl with beautiful hair.

Evan clumsily shakes her hand and she quickly leans over and kisses his cheek. He blushes and runs to hug his mother's leg.

END MONTAGE & TITLES.

EXT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - EARLY MORNING - 1989

In the driveway, 7-year old Evan plays with CRICKETT, a frisky cocker spaniel puppy.

Andrea, wearing a mechanic's jumpsuit, works impatiently on the carburetor of a Toyota Celica. Evan pets the dog as he watches his mother work.

ANDREA

Okay, okay...what now?

Evan quickly eyes the situation and grabs the 5/16" wrench from the toolbox.

EVAN

We're gonna be late again.

ANDREA

When did you ever care about getting to school on time?

EVAN

We're putting up pictures for Parent's Night.

Evan impatiently watches Andrea turn the bolt.

EVAN

Righty-tighty, lefty-lucy.

ANDREA

Thanks. Don't worry Evan, you'll have plenty of time.

The carburetor will not set properly. She bangs on it with the wrench.

ANDREA

(re: carb)

Darn it!

EVAN

Um...can dad come this time?

ANDREA

(getting impatient)

You know the answer to that.

EVAN

Can't he come out for one day?

ANDREA

We've been over this a hundred times.

It's too dangerous for him.

EVAN

But Lenny said that his dad's coming... and Tommy and Kayleigh's dad...

Andrea hands the wrench to Evan.

ANDREA

Here, Ev... Finish this up for me.

Evan beams as he climbs onto the bumper and screws the carb back together. Andrea, meanwhile, strips off her coveralls, revealing a spotless nurse's uniform underneath.

EVAN

All the dads are gonna be there.

ANDREA

I get the point, kiddo. But I'm not so bad, am I?

EVAN

No.

ANDREA

Good. Because I've been waiting to see your art projects all week and I'd feel terrible if all you thought about was your father not being there.

Evan, disappointed, passes the wrench back to Andrea.

EVAN

(beat)

Done. Try it.

Andrea gets behind the wheel. She turns the ignition and the engine roars to life. Evan wears a proud smile.

ANDREA

You're amazing, kiddo.

EXT. SCHOOL PARKING LOT - MORNING - 1989

Andrea races through the school zone and heads for the main doors. Evan's already got the car door open and his foot on the ground by the time the car skids to a halt. Andrea checks her watch.

ANDREA

Okay have a great day I love you I'll pick you up later gotta go...

Evan blows Andrea a kiss goodbye and runs into the school. As Andrea pulls away, MRS. BOSWELL, 35, taps the car window.

MRS. BOSWELL

Mrs. Treborn! I need to speak with you!

ANDREA

I'm sorry, but can it wait til tonight?

I'm already late for work --

Mrs. Boswell's morbid expression stops Andrea.

MRS. BOSWELL

I think you really need to see this.

INT. ELEMENTARY SCHOOL - CLASSROOM - MOMENTS LATER

The classroom is filled with screaming, running children. Mrs. Boswell enters the classroom with Andrea and immediately calls out to TOMMY, a tough seven-year old kid who swings a whiffle bat at LENNY, now seven, a sniffling, chubby kid.

MRS. BOSWELL

Tommy! Leave Lenny alone! Don't make me send you to Mr. Voytek's office!

Evan is surprised to see his mother enter with Mrs. Boswell, but continues playing with Kayleigh, now seven, a quiet, sweet-looking girl.

Mrs. Boswell leads Andrea over to the teacher's desk.

MRS. BOSWELL

I was going to show this to the principal, but I wanted to talk to you first.

ANDREA

What is it?

MRS. BOSWELL

Yesterday I had all the children draw pictures of what they wanted to be when they grew up. Most of them made drawings of what their parents did, but this...

Mrs. Boswell opens the bottom drawer of her desk and pulls out a drawing. Andrea turns to stone when she sees it.

ANDREA

I don't understand...Evan did this?
The drawing shows a child holding a bloody knife while standing on a heap of dead bodies. It's extremely sophisticated for a seven-year old. Some of the corpses have been cut open and the insides are surprisingly anatomically correct. Andrea sees Evan playing with Lenny, harmless as a bunny, and struggles to control her concern.

ANDREA

Thank you for showing it to me first.
I'll...I'll take care of it. Can I have the picture?

MRS. BOSWELL

Of course. There is one more thing, Mrs. Treborn. And I feel bad for mentioning it...

ANDREA

What?

MRS. BOSWELL

When I asked Evan about his drawing, well, he didn't remember doing it.

Andrea is visibly shaken now.

ANDREA

I have to go.

EXT. SCHOOL PARKING LOT - LATER

Andrea seems so impacted by this revelation that she cannot even start the car.

INT. ELEMENTARY SCHOOL - LATER

The children hang artwork on the walls in prep for Parent's Night. Each child has a picture of his or her family made from colored construction paper and macaroni. Evan's picture (no longer sophisticated) depicts his mother, Crockett and himself on a green hill. Tommy and Kayleigh's pictures each show two kids and a single father. And their 'mother' is stuck to the far end of page.

Lenny beams as he pins-up his picture of an ideal nuclear family. He looks at Tommy's picture and is confused.

LENNY

You put the mommy too far away. Mrs. Boswell has macaroni and glue if you wanna fix it.

TOMMY

You're such a retard!

KAYLEIGH

Mommy lives far away but she comes and visits.

LENNY

(to Tommy)

If I'm retarded, why didn't my mommy move away from me?

Tommy gets upset. He swipes his hand down Lenny's picture and his macaroni "mother" crumbles to the floor. Lenny begins to cry.

EVAN

Hey, what'd you do that for?

TOMMY

Fat little baby, crying for mommy.

Evan takes the ruined picture and leans down next to Lenny.

EVAN

Come on, Lenny. It's not that bad. You can still see your mom a little.

Lenny, unable to stop crying, begins hyperventilating out of control. His desperate gasps for breath are frightening.

Evan, scared, looks around for Mrs. Boswell, but cannot find her. He reaches up to his own picture and quickly tears his own macaroni "mother" apart and places it over Lenny's picture. It's a nuclear family again. Lenny slowly is able to catch his breath.

LENNY

(grateful)

Can...can...Can I have this?

EVAN

Sure. I was gonna make a new one, anyway.

Kayleigh helps Lenny glue a new "mother" in place and she smiles gratefully at Evan.

As Evan smiles back at Kayleigh, Mrs. Boswell calmly enters the room in time to see Evan tacking up his butchered family portrait. She shivers.

EXT. SUNNYVALE INSTITUTION - DAY - 1989

Gothic. Imposing. Andrea runs up the stairs.

INT. SUNNYVALE - DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - CONTINUOUS

DR. HARLON REDFIELD, 40, a handsome and extremely genial man, scrutinizes a disturbing drawing.

DR. REDFIELD

And you say he doesn't remember any of it?

ANDREA

(anxious)

Not according to his teacher. It just got me thinking about Jason and what if Evan's inherited his father's condition?

DR. REDFIELD

Hold it, hold it, Andrea. Let's not jump to conclusions. I'll run some preliminary tests, see what we can rule out.

Andrea nods and forces a thankful smile.

DR. REDFIELD

Tell you what, bring Evan here tonight and we'll run a CAT-scan series.

EXT. SUNNYVALE INSTITUTION - NIGHT

The looming building looks even more frightening at night. Andrea and Evan head up the stairs.

EVAN

I don't like this place, Mom. It's creepy. Please can we go? I promise I won't make any more bad pictures!

ANDREA

(lighthearted)

You'll be fine. Dr. Redfield just wants to give you some tests. You'll like him.

INT. SUNNYVALE INSTITUTION - NIGHT

Andrea leads Evan into Dr. Redfield's office. Dr.
Redfield warmly greets Evan at the door.

DR. REDFIELD

Hello, Evan. It's very nice to meet
you.

(to Andrea)

He's as handsome as his father.

EVAN

(stunned)

You know my father?

Before Dr. Redfield can answer, Andrea cuts him off.

ANDREA

That's why I wanted you to come here, Evan. Dr. Redfield already has a background in memory loss.

EVAN

My father has a bad memory, too?

DR. REDFIELD

(off Andrea's look)

Uh, tell you what, Evan. If it's okay with your mother, I'd like to run some tests. Nothing scary.

Evan raises an eyebrow at the doctor.

DR. REDFIELD

Okay, it might be a little scary...

INT. LABORATORY - MOMENTS LATER

Evan looks terrified as he lies on a medical platform as a series of CAT-scan images are taken. In another part of the room, a distressed Andrea speaks quietly with Dr. Redfield.

ANDREA

Just tell me that Evan doesn't have Jason's illness...

DR. REDFIELD

Look, Andrea, I'm sure he'll test negative for brain disorders. But there's something else you can try to monitor his memory.

ANDREA

Anything.

DR. REDFIELD

A journal. Just have him write down everything he does.

ANDREA

Why? What for?

DR. REDFIELD

It could be extremely useful to jog his memory. See if he remembers anything new the next day. And I'll have the test results back in a few days.

INT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - KITCHEN - MORNING

The next morning. Evan busily writes in his new black-marble mead comp book:

EVAN'S DIARY

Today Mommy is taking me to play with Kayley and Tommy. I will mete there father and see what a real dad is like. Maybe one day I will mete my Dad.

Andrea, meanwhile, speaks into the phone as she pours Lucky Charms into a cereal bowl for Evan.

ANDREA

Thanks, George. I really appreciate you watching him, he won't be any trouble at all.

Evan puts down the journal and eats breakfast. He separates the green clovers from the cereal and drops them to the floor for Crockett to nibble.

EVAN

These'll bring you luck, Crockett.

ANDREA

(into phone)

Great. I'll see you soon.

Andrea hangs up the phone and walks into the next room.

INT. HOUSE - DAY

Andrea grabs the pocket book off the coffee table and heads back into the kitchen. She drops her purse in shock when she sees:

Evan, in doorway, expressionless and holding a large BUTCHER KNIFE by his side.

ANDREA

Evan?

Evan sees her but remains expressionless.

ANDREA

Evan? What are you doing with that knife?

Life suddenly springs into Evan's face. He seems stunned to find himself holding the knife and drops it.

EVAN

(scared)

What happened?

ANDREA

Honey. What were you doing with that?

EVAN

(tears welling)

I...I don't remember.

EXT. MILLER HOUSE - MORNING

Andrea, still shaken, drops Evan off at the house of GEORGE MILLER, 35, a handsome athletic man with an infectious smile. He approaches the car and opens the door for Evan.

MR. MILLER

Hey, Andrea.

(to Evan)

Hello little man.

Andrea writes nervously on a piece of paper as Evan gets out.

ANDREA

Thanks a lot George. Here's my work number in case there are any problems.

MR. MILLER

(lighthearted laughter)

Whaddaya kidding? We're going to have a great time today, right Evan?

Andrea nods thanks and nervously drives away. Evan walks up to Mr. Miller and momentarily reaches for his hand. Mr. Miller flinches his hand away and chuckles at Evan.

MR. MILLER

You waiting for an invitation? The kids are inside.

Evan appears confused for a moment at Mr. Miller's unexpected rudeness, but walks inside.

INT. MILLER'S HOUSE - DAY

Evan enters the well-kept middle class home and sees his classmates Kayleigh and Tommy. Kayleigh is dressed in a make-shift Medieval gown and Tommy is also dressed in a period costume.

KAYLEIGH

(excited to see Evan)

Evan, guess what? Dad got a new video camera and we're all gonna be in a movie.

TOMMY

I don't think Evan gets to be in it --

KAYLEIGH

Quit it, Tommy. Evan gets to be Robin Hood. I'm gonna be Maid Marian, and you're the Sheriff of Nottingham!

TOMMY

I thought I was the bad guy!

KAYLEIGH

You are, silly. He's a bad sheriff.

Mr. Miller, holding a full glass of scotch in one hand, sets the circa-80's bulky video camera on a tripod and plugs it into the porta-deck.

EVAN

We're really gonna be in a movie!?

MR. MILLER

That's right, Evan, and you get to be the star.

TOMMY

I thought I was the star.

MR. MILLER

Shut up, moron. Now get in your costume, Evan. And you have to promise, your bestest super-duper promise, that this will be our little secret. Think you can do that?

Evan nods and sticks his arms straight up in the air. Mr. Miller downs his drink and helps Evan off with his clothes. Suddenly --

HARD CUT
TO:

INT. MILLER'S HOUSE - BASEMENT - DAY

Evan comes to in an unfamiliar place. The rec-room/basement. Evan's eyes dart from the fireplace to Mr. Miller's camera lens and finally to Kayleigh, whose ashen face trembles slightly. Panic spreads across Evan's face.

EVAN

Where am I? What happened? Where did we all go?

MR. MILLER

Calm down, kid. Stand still.

Evan backs up and awkwardly scurries around the basement, grabbing his clothes. Panicking.

EVAN

I was just somewhere else - how did I get here?

MR. MILLER

Quit acting like some retard or I'll call your mother and tell her what a naughty little shit you've been.

EVAN

Kayleigh? What happened?

Kayleigh's eyes are unable to leave the floor. She begins adjusting her disheveled clothing. Evan trembles.

EVAN

What's wrong with me?

Tommy silently watches from the top of the basement stairs, absently wringing the head off one of his sister's dolls.

INT. SUNNYVALE INSTITUTION - DAY

Dr. Redfield places Evan's CAT-scan slides on the light box. Andrea squints, unable to interpret them.

DR. REDFIELD

Well, the good news is that the results are negative. I've found no evidence in the way of lesions, hemorrhaging, tumors...

ANDREA

And the bad news?

DR. REDFIELD

Unfortunately, we've got nothing to work with. It's harder playing detective now.

ANDREA

But you must have something to go on?

DR. REDFIELD

If I had to guess, I'd say the blackouts are stress related.

ANDREA

But he's seven. What kind of stress can he have?

DR. REDFIELD

Plenty. Who knows? Maybe he's got severe coping problems about not having a father. Did you say the last blackout occurred when he was with his friend's dad.

ANDREA

Come on, I doubt the answer's that simple.

DR. REDFIELD

You'd be surprised how often they are.

ANDREA

Well, he has been pushing me to meet his father, but I've been putting it off.

DR. REDFIELD

It's worth a shot. I can arrange a controlled meeting. A careful dose of sedatives for Jason, some security, you and I monitoring. Evan comes in for a quick visit and with any luck, no more missing father complex.

ANDREA

How soon?...

INT. ANDREA'S CAR - COUNTRY ROAD - DAY

Evan, dressed in his Sunday best, writes copiously in a journal marked "AGE 7."

EVAN'S DIARY

April 15. Today I get to meet my father. His name is Jason and he is crazy. I hope he lets me call him dad.

INT. SUNNYVALE INSTITUTION - DAY

Andrea tightly grips Evan's hand as the pair follow Dr. Redfield down a corridor. Evan's enthusiasm is dampened by the sounds of distant screams and bloodcurdling laughter.

EVAN

Dad lives here?

DR. REDFIELD

Not in this wing, actually. No.

ANDREA

Now your father may seem sleepy to you, but that's just because of his medicine, okay?

EVAN

Okay.

They walk to the end of the corridor and come to a "Visitor's Chamber". Dr. Redfield leads Evan inside. Andrea begins to follow, but the doctor gestures that she stay outside.

INT. SUNNYVALE - VISITOR'S CHAMBER - CONTINUOUS

Evan takes a seat at a long rectangular table. His eyes are fixated on the door on the other side of the room. Finally, a dark figure can be seen through the opaque glass.

JASON, thirty and haggard looking, enters the room. His eyes want to sparkle at seeing his son for the first time. But tranquilizers have dulled the effect. Evan's eyes fixate on the leg-restraints and handcuffs that hinder Jason's movement. Finally Jason sits. He smiles warmly and speaks in over-enunciated tones.

JASON

It's okay. I won't bite. You've seen pictures of me, right?

EVAN

Uh-huh. Mom says I have your eyes and your --

SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. SUNNYVALE - VISITOR'S CHAMBER - DAY

Evan "comes to" in another unfamiliar place. Rather than seeing his father across a table, he's looking up at a ceiling.

Blocking his view of the ceiling is Jason, whose face is now monstrous with rage, and whose cuffed hands are wrapped around Evan's throat, choking the life out of him.

JASON

(through clenched teeth)

I...love...you.

Suddenly, ORDERLIES tackle Jason from both sides and wedge a baton under his jaw to wrench him away. Andrea frantically struggles to rescue Evan from Jason's clutches.

JASON

(panicking)

He has to die! You don't understand!

It's the only way to stop it!

Jason wrestles the baton from under his chin, hits an orderly in the kneecap and comes for Evan with the baton!

Orderly #2 acts quickly, beating Jason with his baton.

As Jason makes another desperate grab for Evan,

Orderly #2 is forced to bash him in the skull. Down for the count.

Andrea hugs Evan, now in shock.

ANDREA

I'm sorry, Evan. I'm sorry.

And ALARM sounds and Andrea tries to cover Evan's eyes, but through her fingers he can see a quick blur of a pool of blood spreading from Jason's head.

FADE TO BLACK.

FADE IN:

EXT. CEMETERY - DAY - 1989

Dressed in black, Andrea and Evan watch Jason's casket being lowered into the ground. Andrea's tears soak through her veil. A few feet back, Kayleigh stands behind Evan.

PRIEST

Ashes to ashes...dust to dust.

Evan watches the coffin descend, disappearing from sight. Kayleigh steps up to Evan and takes his hand. A moment. And she softly whispers in Evan's ear.

KAYLEIGH

You're better off anyway.

A rumble of thunder. Evan looks up at the brooding dark clouds.

EXT. CEMETERY - DUSK

Gray skies. Andrea drives the children home. Evan stares at the passing tombstones that flutter by like a white picket fence. The flickering strobe effect that intensifies into a white blur is hypnotic.

SLOWLY
DISSOLVE
TO:

EXT. MILLER'S HOUSE - DAY - 1995

Bright and sunny. The lawn freshly cut. A Toro lawnmower has been carelessly left in the grass-strewn driveway.

TITLE: SIX YEARS LATER

CRANE DOWN to the window of the --

INT. MILLER'S HOUSE - BASEMENT

Evan, Kayleigh, Tommy and Lenny are now THIRTEEN. Evan exhales cigarette smoke, taps his ash and finishes sketching a portrait of Kayleigh in his journal. Tommy wears a leather jacket and now has traces of peach fuzz on his upper lip. Kayleigh's hair is longer now, albeit stringy and unkempt.

Evan closes his journal and coolly ignites a STRIKE-ANYWHERE MATCH with his thumb and lights Kayleigh's cigarette. Everyone but Lenny smokes in the basement. Tommy, now with longer hair, ransacks his father's army locker looking for something.

EVAN

Tommy, I'm bored shitless over here.
What's up already?

TOMMY

Hold your horses, man. It's here somewhere. I saw it when I was a kid.

Tommy absently chucks an old Playboy toward Lenny. Kayleigh seems uncomfortable by the sight of it.

KAYLEIGH

(to Tommy)

We should go soon. If Dad catches us smoking down here, we're dead.

EVAN

So let's go. This place creeps me out.

Evan claps his hands and stands up, Lenny and Kayleigh join him. Finally, Tommy shakes an old army thermos and hears something rattling inside.

TOMMY

I knew it had something to do with the army.

Tommy opens the thermos, tips it over and a blockbuster (1/4 stick of dynamite) spills out. Tommy grins mischievously.

TOMMY

Let's blow the shit out of something!

EXT. HALPERNS' FOREST - DAY

Tommy leads Evan, Kayleigh and Lenny on a mission through the woods. Everyone smokes except Lenny, yet he's the only one who's wheezing. He pulls out an inhaler and takes a puff.

LENNY

Guys, slow up, would you?

KAYLEIGH

Evan, did I tell you? My mother said I might be able to visit her this summer in Orlando with her new family.

TOMMY

What did I say about mentioning that bitch?

KAYLEIGH

(uncomfortable)

Where the hell are you taking us anyway? Just blow something up already.

TOMMY

Just blow something up? Are you nuts? There's an art to mass destruction. Would you just paint the Mona Lisa? No. Besides, we're here already.

Now at the edge of the woods, Tommy spots:

EXT. MRS. HALPERN'S HOME - CONTINUOUS

A MAILBOX sits at the end of the driveway. It's exquisite. An exact replica of a Colonial home it serves.

Across the street, Tommy hands the blockbuster to Lenny.

TOMMY

Here you go, buddy.

LENNY

(recoiling)

What? No frigging way, man. I'm not touching that thing.

TOMMY

The hell you aren't. Anyone of us does it, you'll puss out and narc for sure.

LENNY

Ain't gonna work this time, buddy. Look how small that fuse is! I'll get killed.

EVAN

Not necessarily.

All eyes turn to Evan as he takes his lit cigarette, breaks off the filter and jams the fuse into the unlit end.

EVAN

That should buy you ten minutes at least.

LENNY

Gee, thanks friend.

EXT. MRS. HALPERN'S HOME - CONTINUOUS

Lenny paces back and forth next to the three-story mailbox, desperately trying to appear nonchalant. He pretends to notice his shoe's untied and bends down to tie it. From the woods, the other kids watch anxiously.

TOMMY

Oh, for Christ's sake, just do it,
Lenny.

Finally, Lenny throws the bomb in the mailbox. Then sprints like hell to the woods. Kayleigh shakes Lenny's inhaler and hands it to him when he gets back.

LENNY

(taking puff)

Thanks.

Evan pats Lenny on the back.

EVAN

You got balls, man.

The four watch the mailbox in intense anticipation. Evan smiles with the cigarette pressed tightly between his lips and places his hands over Kayleigh's ears. She smiles back at him and presses his hands against her head. Tommy catches this and seems disturbed, and quickly turns back to --
The mailbox. Tick-tock...tick-tock...It's like a staring contest...

SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. HALPERNS' FOREST - DAY

Evan, running full speed, comes to in an unfamiliar place. He instantly loses his footing and falls to the ground. Lenny, falling on top of him.

TOMMY

Hurry! Let's go! Get him up, Evan! Come on!

EVAN

(frantic)

What happened?? Where are we?!

Evan gets up and starts running, then realizes he's not being followed. Kayleigh and Tommy are helping Lenny up and carrying him. Evan realizes that Lenny's completely dazed. Evan doubles back, grabs Lenny's arm and he and Tommy drag Lenny through the woods as fast as they can.

KAYLEIGH

(crying)

Oh God...what did we do?

EVAN

Shit, Lenny. What's happened to you!
We've gotta get help!

SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. LENNY'S HOUSE - DRIVEWAY - DAY

Andrea's car screeches to the curb of Lenny's house. Lenny's mother, Mrs. Kagan, frantically loads Lenny into an ambulance.

As Andrea rushes up to the ambulance, Mrs. Kagan gives her an icy glare and slams the ambulance door in Andrea's face. Andrea turns to Evan, now trembling on the front stoop.

ANDREA

What is it? What happened?

TOMMY

(staring menacingly at the others)

We were just building a fort in the woods when Lenny freaked out. One minute he was fine, then he just froze up. Right guys?

ANDREA

What happened, Evan? The truth.

EVAN

I don't know... I don't remember.

ANDREA

Something must've happened! What set him off?

EVAN

I...I blacked out.

ANDREA

(building frustration)

Don't try to use your blackouts to get out of this one!

Evan looks helpless.

ANDREA

You're not making this up, are you?

Evan shakes his head "no". Almost ashamed...

DISSOLVE
TO:

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - DAY

Evan lies on a couch.

DR. REDFIELD

With every breath you exhale, you can feel all of the tension draining from your body like water through a faucet. Nine, ten, and you're completely asleep. Relaxed.

Evan breathes slowly. Deeply. Andrea watches nervously from the far side of the room.

DR. REDFIELD

Now I want you to go back to the time you were in the woods with Lenny. Think of it like a movie. You can pause, rewind, or slow down any details you wish. Understand?

EVAN

Yes.

DR. REDFIELD

Where are you now?

EVAN

I'm standing next to Kayleigh, my hands are over her ears.

DR. REDFIELD

Are you hurting her?

EVAN
No, protecting her.
Andrea suppresses the tiniest of proud smiles.

DR. REDFIELD
Okay. Then go a little forward in time.
What do you see now?

EVAN
I see a car.
Evan's eyes suddenly roll back in his head.

DR. REDFIELD
Yes, tell me about the car.
Evan moans and begins shaking.

DR. REDFIELD
Go on. Nothing can hurt you. Remember, this is only a movie. You're completely safe.

EVAN (moaning)
I can't...the car vanishes and all of a sudden I'm on the ground in the woods.

DR. REDFIELD
The car doesn't vanish Evan. The movie in your head has broken, that's all.
But now I've respliced it and I want you to tell me about the car.

EVAN
It's coming...argh! I can't!
Evan moans and shakes on the couch.

DR. REDFIELD
Fight it Evan. Hurry. It's coming!
Blood begins to trickle from Evan's nose as a guttural sound is uttered from deep within him. Dr. Redfield bolts upright in his chair and redirects the session.

DR. REDFIELD
Okay, Evan. Listen to my voice! On the count of ten, you're going to wake up.
Feeling refreshed and remembering everything we talked about.
Evan moans in agony. Andrea darts into the room.

ANDREA
What's happening to him?? Make it stop!

Dr. Redfield waves her away and concentrates on Evan.

DR. REDFIELD
One. You're feeling more awake now.
Two, your eyes no longer feel heavy.
Andrea moves to stop the blood flowing from Evan's nose. She lifts Evan's eyelids and sees only the whites of his eyes.

DR. REDFIELD
Five. Six. Refreshed and awake! Seven, eight. Come on, Evan, wake up, dammit!
Evan is completely non-responsive.

ANDREA
Evan wake up, oh please wake up!

DR. REDFIELD
Nine, ten. And you're awake! Open your eyes, dammit!

Nothing but moans and blood. Dr. Redfield frantically opens some desk drawers until he finds smelling salts. He breaks a small capsule under Evan's mouth, pinches his bleeding nose closed and lets Evan inhale the vapor through his mouth. Evan lurches forward on the couch and falls off. Holding his bloody nose.

EVAN

What happened? Did it work?
Evan deduces the answer from everyone's horrified faces.

EXT. MULTIPLEX THEATER - PARKING LOT - DUSK
Andrea drops off Evan, Kayleigh and Tommy outside the complex. Kayleigh, looking morose, shuts the car door and Andrea drives off. They walk through the parking lot.

TOMMY

(to Kayleigh)

Wipe that sad-assed look off your face before you get us all busted. You see the way Evan's mom was looking at you?

KAYLEIGH

I'm sorry.

EVAN

Would someone just tell me already what the hell happened in the mailbox?
On "mailbox", Tommy suddenly grabs Evan's jacket and SHOVES him against a parked car. Tommy looks around to make sure nobody heard anything.

TOMMY

Don't ever bring that shit up again. Not ever. Not to me, not to Kayleigh, or even Lenny. The stupid fuck if he ever learns to talk again. Understand?
Evan nods, scared. Tommy gives a final shove.

TOMMY

Ever.

(re: Kayleigh)

She don't want to talk about it, anyway. Do you Kayleigh?
Tommy's right. Kayleigh clearly doesn't.

INT. MULTIPLEX THEATER LOBBY - DUSK
Kayleigh shuffles behind Evan and Tommy as they head toward the theatre. Evan drops back.

EVAN

Are you okay?
Kayleigh says nothing as Tommy sees the theatre playing SEVEN and whispers.

TOMMY

There it is. Let's go.
INT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - KITCHEN - NIGHT
Andrea does the dishes as the TV plays a NEWSCAST in the b.g.

ANCHOR

(on TV)

...was the grizzly aftermath of what police officials of upstate New York are calling a horrible act of vandalism gone awry.

Andrea turns to the TV, blocking our view. We can only hear the report as she watches intensely.

ANCHOR

The powerful explosion is believed to have been caused by a small quantity of dynamite.

Andrea's face looks haunted by the on-screen images.
She shakes her head in terror and grabs the remote.

ANCHOR

Police thus far have no leads as to the suspects...

She clicks off the TV, trembling.

INT. MULTIPLEX THEATER - NIGHT

The movie's in progress. Evan and Kayleigh sit behind
Tommy.

TOMMY

Holy shit! Look at that fat fuck! You'd have to wipe his ass with a forklift!

Some crowd members TURN around and give Tommy a SHUSH.
Tommy whips M&Ms at them.

TOMMY

Shut up, faggot. No one's talking to you!

Kayleigh, repulsed, suddenly darts fro the aisle and runs out. Evan follows.

INT. LOBBY - CONTINUOUS

Evan follows her to a small alcove.

EVAN

I'm sorry Kayleigh. This was a bad idea.

KAYLEIGH

You really don't remember anything that happened?

Evan shakes his head "no". She looks devastated.

KAYLEIGH

You're so lucky.

She begins to cry. Evan makes sure no one's staring.

EVAN

It's going to be okay. Lenny'll be fine. You'll see.

He reaches to comfort her. But she winces.

KAYLEIGH

Ouch.

EVAN

I'm sorry.

She pulls her sleeve up, revealing a large bruise.

KAYLEIGH

It's not your fault. Mrs. Kagan called dad and blamed us for what happened to Lenny.

EVAN

Damn. Your dad did this?

Kayleigh pulls back her shirt collar to show an even larger, darker bruise.

KAYLEIGH
(looking down)
I deserve a lot worse.

EVAN
What are you talking about? What you deserve is a better brother and father.
All they do is make you feel like shit.

She looks into his eyes.

EVAN
You really have no clue how beautiful you are, do you?

She searches his eyes for sincerity. And finds it.
They lean into each other for a TENDER KISS. After a moment, a ROAR from nearby.

TOMMY (O.S.)
What the fuck are you doing??

They jerk back to see Tommy, shocked and betrayed, staring at them from across a small crowd. By now, some teens chuckle at Tommy.

TEEN PUNK (O.S.)
Buying popcorn, what the fuck are you doing?

Tommy rushes through the small crowd at Evan. His hands in fists. Suddenly a FOOT reaches out and trips Tommy. Tommy falls to the floor and the crowd cackles at him.

Tommy slowly gets up, locks eyes with Evan. Hatred oozing.

Evan looks guilty, weakly shaking his head, it's not what you're thinking.

Tommy suddenly lunges at the TEEN PUNK who must be at least a foot taller than he is. Tommy lands a flurry of punches before the Teen Punk can even defend himself, frequently taking opportunities to eyeball
Evan.

Evan, Kayleigh and even the punk's FRIENDS look on helplessly when TWO SECURITY GUARDS SEIZE TOMMY. Tommy valiantly struggles against them at first. But the moment he realizes it's hopeless, he allows his body to go slack.

As Tommy is being dragged away, he turns to Evan, a sick smile on his face.

Evan and Kayleigh look back, speechless.

INT. ANDREA'S CAR - NIGHT
Andrea drives through the winding roads.

CLOSE UP
Andrea's eyes. Tormented.

REVEAL she's driving Evan and Kayleigh home. Evan's up front and Kayleigh sits behind them. Everyone silent.
Andrea stares through the rearview mirror into KAYLEIGH'S EYES
Probing. Searching.

ANDREA
So how was the movie?

KAYLEIGH
Okay.

Andrea watches Kayleigh. A calculated beat.

ANDREA

Any exploding mailboxes?

Kayleigh flinches at the question. And Andrea catches it. Evan can't help but look back at Kayleigh. Oh my god, she knows.

KAYLEIGH

(faking poorly)

What do you mean?

Andrea pulls the car over and stops. After a moment, Kayleigh realizes she's at her house. She exits the car in a hurry.

ANDREA

Goodnight.

Andrea stares at Evan, who keeps his eyes facing dead ahead. She finally shifts the car into gear.

ANDREA

We're moving.

Evan says nothing.

FADE TO BLACK.

EXT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - MORNING

A "For Sale" sign is now planted on the front lawn. Andrea, in her nurse uniform, exits the house to her car.

INT. ANDREA'S LIVING ROOM - CONTINUOUS

Evan discreetly watches her leave through the window. Grabs his coat and exits frame.

EXT. LENNY'S HOUSE - DAY

Kayleigh and Evan walk down toward the house.

EVAN

I can't believe Tommy's still pissed at me. He knows I'm moving away, right?

KAYLEIGH

He's been acting real strange lately. He won't even look me in the eyes anymore.

EVAN

Duck, here they come.

As a station wagon rolls up the street, Evan and Kayleigh duck in nearby bushes.

KAYLEIGH

Did your mom say if Lenny was...okay?

EVAN

He must be. They're letting him go, right?

The station wagon finally heads into the driveway.

Evan puts on a smile and charges the car, pounding the window.

EVAN

Welcome home, Lenny!

Inside the car, Lenny jerks back in horror. Mrs. Kagan looks angry as she rolls the window down.

MRS. KAGAN

I think your little homecoming's in bad taste.

The smile fades from Evan's face. Kayleigh hangs back.

EVAN

Sorry?

MRS. KAGAN

(acidic)

Lenny's been through a hell of an ordeal no thanks to you.

Evan and Kayleigh look guilty as the garage door opens up and Mrs. Kagan continues into the garage.

INT. LENNY'S BEDROOM - CONTINUOUS

Alone, Lenny concentrates on a MODEL AIRPLANE. There is a sudden KNOCK at the window. Lenny's head jerks around to see Evan and Kayleigh smiling through the window.

EXT. LENNY'S WINDOW - CONTINUOUS

Evan and Kayleigh stand on the ivy-covered trellis.

EVAN

(quietly)

Welcome home. Thought you might like some fresh air for a change.

KAYLEIGH

Hi, Lenny.

Lenny twitches ever-so-slightly.

LENNY

Is Tommy with you guys?

Evan shakes his head "no".

EVAN

It's cool.

Lenny looks back at the model airplane. Needs to think.

EXT. JUNKYARD WOODS - DAY

Evan, Lenny and Kayleigh pass a junk pile in the woods.

KAYLEIGH

(to Lenny)

So what did you do in there?

LENNY

It was awful. You can't sleep 'cause everyone's screaming all night long. I never want to go back.

As Evan and Kayleigh absorb this in silence, they see a column of smoke billowing in the horizon.

KAYLEIGH

Do you see that?

Evan and Kayleigh run toward the smoke. Lenny nervously follows behind.

They exit the woods to find:

EXT. JUNKYARD - CONTINUOUS

Tommy has stuffed a dog into a gunny sack which he douses with lighter fluid. Next to a campfire.

EVAN

Crockett!!

Evan and Kayleigh rush toward the trapped, helpless dog. Tommy is ready for them. He drops the lighter fluid, picks up a wooden plank and SWINGS! Evan ducks back at the last minute and Tommy accidentally connects with Kayleigh's head. Knocking her unconscious.

TOMMY

Look what you made me do!

EVAN

What's wrong with you?!

Tommy, enraged, fakes a high swing, then goes for Evan's knee cap. BASH! Evan doubles over in pain and falls to the ground, clutching his knee.

Tommy moves to the fire, Crockett squirming inside the bag and picks up the lighter fluid.

Evan painfully looks up from the ground and his eyes dart from the sight of Kayleigh, unconscious, to Crockett, trapped in the tied gunny sack.

EVAN

Kayleigh! Wake up!

No response.

TOMMY

Why don't you fucking kiss her, Prince Charming!

Tommy squeezes the bottle hard, creating a flaming fuse from the campfire to the fluid soaked dog.

As the flames near Crockett, Evan, seething with rage, stands up with clenched fists and CHARGES Tommy at FULL SPEED --

SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. JUNKYARD - DAY

Evan comes to in an unfamiliar place. Still in running mode. His body contorts spastically like a fish on land, since he is now lying face down on the ground. Evan regains himself and sits up painfully. His face is badly bruised and he clutches his battered ribs.

EVAN

How long was I out?

He gets no answer from Lenny, who stands in the exact same spot. Tommy is nowhere in sight and the sound is of Kayleigh weeping. Evan spins to face her.

EVAN

Kayleigh?! Are you okay? Where's Crockett?

Kayleigh, her knees drawn tightly to her chest, is unable to answer through her tears. Evan struggles to rise but he becomes dizzy and falls back to the ground.

Evan takes a quick glance toward the gunny sack, smouldering then moans and buries his head in his hands.

EXT. LENNY'S HOUSE - DAY

A small neighborhood CROWD has gathered to watch an ambulance with the SUNNYVALE insignia take an entranced Lenny away. Mrs. Kagan is about to climb in the rear when she stops and turns to Evan.

MRS. KAGAN

(ice cold)

Do you know what you are? A monster.

Evan stands there, speechless.

EXT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - DAY

A packed U-HAUL sits in front of Evan's house. Andrea shifts the small truck into gear and slowly pulls out.

Outside the truck, Kayleigh waves to Evan, tears spilling shamelessly down her cheeks. Evan reaches behind his seat and opens a large cardboard box. It is filled with past journals. He finds the most recent journal, uncaps a pen and writes something. Finished he presses the journal to the window.

EVAN'S DIARY

I'll come back for you.

Evan waves back to her, trying nonchalantly to wipe away his own tears as she fades into the distance. When Kayleigh disappears from sight, Andrea looks over to see what he's written.

ANDREA

I'm sorry.

Evan returns the journal and begins writing furiously.

SLOW
DISSOLVE
TO:

INT. COLLEGE CLASSROOM - DAY - 2002

TITLE: SEVEN YEARS LATER

Evan, twenty now, continues writing in a college Blue Book. He is older, dressed down in worn jeans, T-shirt and plaid flannel. He closes the Blue Book with a cocky grin just as PROFESSOR CARTER, 40, calls out to the class:

PROFESSOR CARTER

Time! Please place your blue books on my desk before you leave.

Evan grabs his psychology textbook from under his seat, gets up and turns in his exam.

PROFESSOR CARTER

How'd you do, Evan?

Evan flashes a confident smile.

EVAN

I'm not sure. I might have gotten some stories mixed up. Did Pavlof condition his dogs to lick his nuts?

PROFESSOR CARTER

(laughing)

Typical psych major. A complete wise ass. And how's your project coming? Still planning to change the way we humble scientists view memory assimilation?

EVAN

(shrugging)

Hey, I got no choice.

Professor Carter nods solemnly, obviously in the know.

EXT. COLLEGE - QUAD - DAY

Evan bikes past students.

EXT. COLLEGE - FRAT HOUSE - DAY

Evan bikes past some obnoxious GREEKS.

EXT. COLLEGE - EVAN'S DORM - DAY

Evan docks his bike and carries his knapsack inside.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - MOMENTS LATER

Evan's dorm is cluttered "double" whose walls are adorned with head-shop posters of Gothic rock bands. By Evan's bed is a bookshelf filled with books on amnesia, memory loss, fugues, hypnotism and other related bands.

Evan's roommate, THUMPER, 19, is a completely punked out Gothic boy who weighs 300 pounds. He currently hands a black lacy dress to CRICKET, 17, a pierced Goth co-ed. She slips the tattered dress on as Thumper wipes his post-coital self off with a black tee-shirt.

Evan barges through the door, throwing his psych books on the bed and politely looking away from the half-naked girl.

EVAN

Whoa. Smells like patchouli and...ass.

Evan opens the window and checks out his Psych project: a small maze has several flatworms at one end and a bowl of cornflakes at the other.

THUMPER

Cricket, meet my well-mannered roommate, Evan.

Cricket puts on her Doc Martens as Evan watches the worms.

CRICKET

Yeah, you're the one who fucked up the bell-curve on my Anthropology final. Later, Thumper.

EVAN

Nice to meet you, too.

As she leaves, Thumper takes the black T-shirt by his wallet and throws it on Evan's bed.

THUMPER

Here, bro. Found your T-shirt.

Evan nods thanks, picks up his journal. Reads something and smiles.

EVAN

Get dressed, Thumper, you're taking me out for my birthday.

THUMPER

I thought you were a December baby.

EVAN

This is bigger. Seven years to the day. No blackouts.

Thumper pulls out a bong.

THUMPER

Let's do this.

EXT. DIRTY HANK'S BAR - DAY

INT. DIRTY HANK'S BAR - CONTINUOUS

A popular watering hole. A dark rustic interior, blasting alternative rock. Plenty of underage students carry pitchers of beer to their tables.

Evan and Thumper play pool against two young women.

HEIDI, beautiful, wears ripped jeans, no make up. She sinks the eleven ball off the rail. KRISTEN coolly smokes a cigarette, confident that she and Heidi will hold the table.

KRISTEN

So...which one of you has a pet worm?
Thumper proudly steps forward.

THUMPER

Worms, plural.

KRISTEN

That's so gross.
Thumper steps back, points to Evan.

THUMPER

Talk to him about it, he's got the fetish.
Heidi sinks another ball and looks up at Evan strangely.

EVAN

Actually, they're for a psych project.
A study on memory.
Heidi misses her shot and passes the cue to Evan.

HEIDI

(stifling a yawn)
Shit, better explain before all the excitement gives me a heart attack.
Evan speaks as he knocks the one-ball in the corner pocket. As he talks, at a table behind them, some obnoxious Greeks; including HUNTER, SPENCER, and GWEN make fun of Thumper.

EVAN

It's an experiment with flatworms and a maze. You take a flatworm and run it through the maze until he's memorized it. Then you put a new flatworm in the maze. He's clueless. Banging into walls, getting lost, whatever.

THUMPER

(thoughtfully)
Like Ozzy.
Gwen giggles as Spencer throws popcorn at Thumper's head.

SPENCER

Ten bucks says he eats it off the floor.
Thumper seems oblivious to their taunts as Evan knocks the three-ball in the side.

EVAN

You chop up the smart flatworm and feed it to the dumb one and presto, the dumb one suddenly knows the maze inside and out.
Evan walks past Heidi, putting his hand on her shoulder to squeeze by. The hand lingers longer than necessary and Heidi doesn't mind. He sinks another ball.

EVAN

Just by absorbing the first worm into its cellular structure, it gets all of the worm's memories.

THUMPER

(thoughtfully)

That's probably why Hannibal Lecter's so smart.

A handful of popcorn hits Thumper's face. They all try to ignore Hunter and Spencer's jeers.

HEIDI

So what's the point?

EVAN

(setting up the eight)

Maybe if I can figure out how the memories of a simple worm function, it'll help me understand the complexities of the human brain.

Another barrage of popcorn hits Thumper's jacket.
Although his hand clenches on the cue. He meekly shuffles away to the opposite side of the pool table from the cackling geeks.

HEIDI

(intrigued)

So are you planning on becoming a doctor or something?

Thumper casually takes the pool cue from Evan.

EVAN

No, I just don't want to lose my mind.

As Heidi digests this, Thumper carefully lines up his shot...The eight ball.

CRASH!!! The cue ball intentionally jumps the table, rocketing into the pitcher of beer on the Greek's table. They're all soaked with beer and debris.

Just as they begin to rise, Thumper smashes the cue stick on the table, WHISTLING innocently (while now brandishing a spear). They sit the fuck down.

Kristin, impressed, casually wraps her arm around
Thumper's waist. He smiles coolly, it's nothing.

EVAN

(to Heidi)

I think that's your game.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Evan and Heidi, making out, burst through the door and fall on the bed. Evan's shirt is unbuttoned and Heidi strokes his chest. Suddenly Heidi stops and sniffs the air.

HEIDI

Smells like sex in here.

EVAN

Thumper had a busy afternoon.

HEIDI

You're kidding. He's so...big.

Evan drunkenly crosses the room, grabs two beers from the mini-fridge.

EVAN

Charisma and eyeliner go a long way, I guess. Wanna beer?

Heidi takes one. Looks under the bed.

HEIDI

Most guys tuck their porn under here, but all you have are... comp books.

EVAN

Yeah. I've been keeping journals since
I was seven.

HEIDI

(respectfully)

Wow...read something.

Evan chugs his beer and sits next to her on the bed and puts his arm around her. Very drunk.

EVAN

No way, I'd be too embarrassed.
Heidi teasingly runs her fingers over his smooth torso.

HEIDI

Then keep drinking, worm-boy. You're too uptight.

Evan stops short.

EVAN

Freeze! No "worm-boy". No "Mr. Worm," and no "Worm-Master-General!" Once you get a nickname like that you can't shake it. And I don't want everyone thinking I've got tapeworms coming out of my ass or something, okay?

HEIDI

(laughing)

Deal. Now read me something.

Heidi hands him a book marked "AGE 13". He flips it open to a random place and takes the beer from her hand.

EVAN

(re: her beer)

For courage.

Evan takes and finishes her beer and begins reading.
As he reads, he seems more and more on the verge of passing out.

EVAN

It's like my mind refused to believe what it was seeing. Hearing Crockett make those awful screams... Just writing about it gives me the shivers.

Color drains from Evan's face as he realizes what he's reading. He looks over at Heidi, who kisses him.

HEIDI

Come on, go on...

EVAN

It was like Tommy was possessed or something. There was a hate in his eyes that I couldn't really call human.

As Evan reads, the world seems to ALMOST IMPERCEPTIBLY
VIBRATE around him LIKE A TUNING FORK. His voice becomes distant and SOUNDS ECHO around him like distant memories resurrecting themselves...

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. JUNKYARD - DAY - 1995

Evan is THIRTEEN again. The scene begins exactly where Evan's blackout occurred as a child. Tommy has just knocked Kayleigh unconscious with a wooden plank, Lenny is frozen at the sight of Crockett in the fluid-soaked gunny sack. And Evan, seething with rage, stands up with clenched fists and CHARGES Tommy at full speed.

Only now, Evan almost seems caught off-guard to suddenly find himself running at full speed. He stumbles and falls to his knees at Tommy's feet. Evan looks around, utterly confused by his surroundings.

EVAN

What the hell is going on?

Before an answer comes, Tommy smiles at his good fortune and swings the plank, hitting Evan's head. Evan is sent sprawling backwards, his forehead bleeding freely.

Tommy knocks Evan hard in the ribs with his boots. Evan writhes in agony, his face against the ground. Lenny moves toward the gunny sack, lifts it and tugs desperately on the rope that traps Crockett inside.

LENNY

I can't undo the rope!

Tommy spins around and flashes an evil smile.

TOMMY

Drop it or I'll slit your mother's throat in her sleep.

As if on cue, Lenny does exactly as he's told. His eyes begin to glaze over.

Evan, beaten and bloody, reaches out with his last bit of strength, grabs Tommy's foot and holds on.

EVAN

I got him, Lenny. Help Crockett!

Lenny remains frozen in place. Tommy yanks his leg back, breaking Evan's grip. Evan groans on the ground in a writhing heap.

Tommy's voice hitches. His eyes water from pent up frustration.

TOMMY

Listen to me good, Evan. There's a million other sisters in the world. You didn't have to fuck with mine.

Tommy smiles viciously at Lenny, traumatized to watch Tommy pick up the lighter fluid and spray a liquid fuse from the campfire to the soaked gunny sack.

A WHOOSH OF FLAMES

And Evan passes out.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT - 2002

Evan comes to with Heidi slapping him awake.

EVAN

Oh my God! No! No!

Heidi rolls her eyes.

HEIDI

Wake up, idiot. It was just a dream.
She stands and angrily puts on her jacket.

EVAN

(freaked out)
It didn't feel like a dream.

HEIDI

Maybe because they never do.
(sarcastic)

So Don Juan, you pass out on all your dates?

Evan doesn't even hear her. After getting his bearings, he grabs his jacket and exits, leaving her dumbfounded.

INT. EVAN'S CAR - SUNRISE

Evan drives...

EXT. LENNY'S HOUSE - DAY

Evan, exhausted, finally pulls into Lenny's driveway.
Very little has changed in the past seven years.

INT. LENNY'S ROOM - CONTINUOUS

ANGLE ON LENNY

Now 20, making a model airplane. He's still overweight and looks like his mother dresses him.

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

The room is filled with model airplanes. Hundreds of them.

A KNOCK on Lenny's bedroom door. Mrs. Kagan, grayer, fatter, opens the door and escorts Evan inside. She glares at Evan while pretending to be cheerful.

MRS. KAGAN

I've got a surprise for you, Lenny.
You'll never guess who's here.

Lenny looks up to see Evan, his jaw drops.

ANGLE ON EVAN

Looking around, shocked to see:

PAN ALL THE WAY AROUND THE ROOM. Nothing has changed in the past seven years. The same kids' toys, posters and comic books.

AS WE PAN ALL THE WAY AROUND TO LENNY

We see he's working on the model again, in his own world. The window of opportunity for conversation has closed.

EVAN

Hey, uh, it's me. Evan.
Silence. Lenny frowns.

EVAN

What's that you're working on? A model?

Nothing.

EVAN

Well, you look busy, so maybe I should make this quick. I'd totally understand if you didn't want to get into this right now, but that day at the junkyard, could you help me remember what happened? Any details?

No response. Evan picks up a model airplane from the desk.

LENNY

I couldn't cut the rope.

EVAN

(containing excitement)

Yeah, good, what else do you remember?

LENNY

Drop it or I'll slit your mother's throat in her sleep.

Evan, startled, drops the model on the desk. An epiphany.

EVAN

Jesus Christ. It really happened.

Lenny stares out the window.

EVAN

What if I can get back all my lost memories with my journals.

With lightning speed, Lenny jumps from his desk and unexpectedly shoves EVAN IN TO THE WALL. Squadrons of hanging planes crash to the floor. Lenny digs his fingers into Evan's shoulder.

LENNY

Make one peep and I swear it'll be your last, motherfucker.

Evan is terrified. Then Lenny suddenly moves back and begins working on the model again, his eyes a million miles away. Evan is speechless.

The door bursts open. Mrs. Kagan looks at the smashed model airplanes by Evan's feet. Evan ignores her accusing stare.

EVAN

Well, thanks for seeing me, man. I shouldn't have waited so long.

When Lenny doesn't respond, Mrs. Kagan hustles Evan back into the hallway.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Evan pulls a dozen journals from beneath his bed and begins pouring over them. Nearby, Thumper empties a can of hairspray into his Mohawk.

THUMPER

You really think he wanted to kill you?

EVAN

All I know is that I might be able to unblock some of my repressed memories.

He finds something he's looking for, marks the page with a yellow post-it note marked, BLACKOUT and sets the book in a separate pile.

As he sets the next journal on the bed, it automatically opens up to a place where the spine was bent. Staring up at him is the message:

EVAN'S DIARY

I will come back for you.

Evan looks overcome by guilt.

LATER THAT EVENING:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Evan has now organized a pile of five journals. He selects an entry, begins reading and suddenly closes the journal. Fear covers his face. He holds one of his hands up and isn't surprised to see it trembling. He opens his journal again and reads out loud.

EVAN

(reading aloud)

The last thing I remember before the blackout was holding my hands over Kayleigh's ears...

(his voice slowly fades)

I think I was more focused on her hands on mine than the mailbox across the street...

His own words grow reverberant, distant. Furthermore, the walls behind him vibrate, slightly worse than before.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. MRS. HALPERN'S HOME - DAY - 1995

Evan, Kayleigh, Lenny and Tommy, all thirteen, watch the mailbox across the street with intense anticipation.

When Evan comes to in this memory, the lit cigarette absently drops from his mouth and nestles into the folds of his shirt, SMOLDERING.

The mailbox...tick-tock, tick-tock...Like a staring contest.

LENNY

Maybe it went out. Should someone check it?

TOMMY

Yeah, you do that, Lenny.

Suddenly a car appears from down the street and slowly pulls into the driveway.

MRS. HALPERN, 24, an attractive young mother, gets out of the car and walks to the mailbox.

Across the street, Tommy digs his fingers into the nerves of Lenny's shoulder.

TOMMY

Make one peep and I swear it'll be your last, motherfucker.

Tommy's words make Evan flinch. From inside the car, a BABY begins to cry. Mrs. Halpern walks back to the car.

Evan looks on in horror and suddenly clenches his teeth in pain and silently swipes the front of his shirt, sending the lit cigarette to the ground. He pulls up his shirt revealing a fresh BURN MARK on his stomach.

MRS. HALPERN

How's my sweet girl? Awww, you need a change, don't you honey?

Mrs. Halpern picks her up and carries her to the house. AS the mother unlocks the front door to the house, the kids break into wide smiles of relief. But wait...

The mother remembers the mail and carries the baby back to the mailbox. Now Tommy is the only one left still smiling.

MRS. HALPERN

You want to open the door, honey?

The baby fumbles with the mailbox's door handle for a moment -

ANGLE ON KIDS' FACES

BOOM!!!

The blast is deafening. Evan, Kayleigh and Lenny watch the results in stunned horror.

TOMMY

C'mon! Run!!

Evan and Kayleigh slowly back away in shock and begin to run a few steps when they realize that Lenny isn't with them.

TOMMY

Lenny? Come on!

KAYLEIGH

Oh my God oh my God...

Lenny doesn't seem to hear, his eyes fixated on the crimson road. Evan and Tommy double back and grab him. They try to make him break out into a run, but Lenny's feet drag limply against the ground. Both Tommy and Evan grab an arm and begin to run with Lenny through the woods.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Evan comes to. Lurches his body over the bed and vomits.

Sounds of squeaky bed springs fill the room. Looking sick and pale, he lifts his shirt to see a NEW SCAR from the cigarette burn.

EVAN

What the hell?

In the next bed, Thumper's head, wrapped in a blanket, pops up from above a NAKED GESELA'S waist.

THUMPER

Christ, man. You wanna clean that up before I lose my appetite here?

Evan sits upright in bed and begins writing in the margins of the journal.

INT. DORM LOBBY - DAY

The lobby is decorated with colorful streamers, balloons, posters and banners announcing PARENTS' WEEKEND.

Carefree STUDENTS and their parents carry shopping bags toward the bustling elevators. Evan leans against the side of a pay phone, holding his ear to drawn out the noise.

EVAN

Yes, hello, uh, Mrs. Kagan, this is Evan Treborn.

(rolling eyes)

I know. I'm sorry about that. But I really need to speak with him.
She's obviously hung up on him. Suddenly, a HAND grabs his shoulder. It's Professor Carter.

PROFESSOR CARTER

Whoa! Didn't mean to scare you, Evan.
Just wanted to know how the flatworms project was coming.

EVAN

Oh, fine I guess. It's been kind of crazy lately with my mom coming up, so I haven't...

PROFESSOR CARTER

I know, I know. Who can think of worms when your libido's in full swing, right? Evan shrugs and forces a smile.

PROFESSOR CARTER

Just don't drop the ball, okay?

EVAN

I won't let you down, Professor Carter.

Carter waves to another student and her parents and walks away.

INT. FANCY RESTAURANT - NIGHT

A waiter clears the dishes away from Evan and Andrea's table.

REVEAL ANDREA

Her hair now has gray streaks. As she signs for the bill, she leans over and kisses Evan on the cheek.

EVAN

Please, mom. People will talk.

ANDREA

I can't help it. I'm just so proud of you. You've got the highest grades in all of your classes.

EVAN

Did Da - Jason - get good grades?

ANDREA

(smiling)

Please. He got straight A's without ever touching a book. That was the one area where his memory never failed him.

EVAN

Ma? Did he ever say that he figured out a way to recall a lost memory years after he blacked it out for the first time?

Andrea's smile fades.

ANDREA

Why do you ask?

EVAN

No, it's just weird with him being such a brain and all, I just wondered if he was ever able to remember stuff he'd forgotten.

ANDREA

When he was around your age...almost exactly your age. He said he figured out a trick to remember the past.

Evan tries not to react.

ANDREA

I couldn't tell if they were real memories or just phantoms. You know, he might only have thought he actually remembered them...

EVAN

Sure...

ANDREA

And then, just before it got so bad that he had to be committed, he said that he could...

EVAN

What? What could he do?

Andrea shakes her head.

ANDREA

Forget it. It's nothing. He was far too sick by then.

Evan nods, but something gnaws beneath the surface.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Evan hastily hunts through his journals, tearing up the room looking for a certain book. Thumper, lying on his bed, quietly watches Evan with growing concern.

EVAN

(reading aloud)

I never wanted to be in the movie anyway and it was cold so I wanted to wear my clothes but Mr. Miller took his shirt off --

THUMPER

What the fuck are you doing?

EVAN

Shhh! I need quiet for this.

Thumper jumps off the bed and snatches the journal away.

THUMPER

Are you stupid or what?

EVAN

What?

THUMPER

Shucks, I dunno. But maybe there's a reason why you've repressed the one day when some old lecher had you in your tighty whities, dammit!

Thumper begins scanning the journal entry. A bitter laugh.

THUMPER

Yeah, man. I'd think twice about this. You could wake up a lot more fucked up than you are now.

He hands the journal back to Evan. Evan opens it and begins reading it silently. His hands begin to tremble and he slams the book shut in defeat.

INT. EVAN'S CAR - COUNTRYSIDE - DAY

Evan, looking haggard and frail, wipes the greasy hair from his eyes and punches the accelerator. His teeth are clenched and he hammers his fist on the dashboard.

DISSOLVE
TO:

EXT. RIDGEWOOD DINER - EVENING

Evan pulls into a parking lot of a country diner. He eyes a piece of paper with an address scrawled on it and gets out.

INT. RIDGEWOOD DINER - CONTINUOUS

A run-down greasy spoon. Filled with a number of TOWNIES and TRUCKERS. The place is stale with cigarette smoke and appears decorated in grime motif. Evan is about to enter when he spots Kayleigh coming out of the kitchen with a tray full of food. Kayleigh, now twenty, looks pale and sickly thin. She bangs her hip on the swinging door and an order of food crashes to the floor. Her BOSS stares back in aggravation.

BOSS

Can we get through one goddamned day without you breaking something?

Kayleigh's face turns beet red as she bends down to clean up the order. She is humiliated and Evan leans back against a pay phone so that she can't see him watching her.

As she brings the mess inside the kitchen, a CUSTOMER pinches her ass. Evan closely studies her reaction to the offense. She flinches uncomfortably but then composes a smile for the customer. Evan backs out uncomfortably.

EXT. RIDGEWOOD DINER - NIGHT

Kayleigh struggles with the zipper of a shabby coat as she exits. Evan steps out of the shadows. She's startled at first, but eventually recognizes him. A smile flickers across her face and she allows herself to be hugged.

KAYLEIGH

God, Evan! I never thought I'd see you again. How've you been?

EVAN

Oh, comme si, comme ca, you know...

KAYLEIGH

No, Evan. I don't know. It's been a long time. Fill me in.

EVAN

I'm going to State now. Things are going okay. I guess. Mom's good...

Kayleigh nods and they walk down the street. She reaches into her pocket, pulls out a pack of smokes.

EVAN

(declining)

Not since we were kids.

KAYLEIGH

I've stopped a hundred times.

EVAN

So how's Tommy?

KAYLEIGH

(takes a long drag)

They kept him in juvy for a few years.

Now he works over at Dale's Autobody.

Evan nods and scrutinizes her face with his next question.

EVAN

You still live with your dad?

Her face is betrayed by a slight tick.

KAYLEIGH

No. I emancipated myself when I was fifteen.

EVAN

Wow. That must've taken some courage.

KAYLEIGH

Not if you remember my dad.

EVAN

Couldn't you have moved in with your mom?

KAYLEIGH

(shaking her head)

She had a new family. Not enough space for me. Said I should have moved in with her when we were kids. But... whatever.

They walk in silence for a moment.

EVAN

Actually, Kayleigh, the reason I came back to town was to talk to you.

KAYLEIGH

(brightening)

Me? Are you kidding? Why?

EVAN

Remember when I was a kid I had all these blackouts?

KAYLEIGH

Of course.

EVAN

Well, lately some of the memories have begun to come back and I'd kinds like to talk to you about one of them in particular. It'd be a big help.

KAYLEIGH

Well, sure. I'll try to remember. Shoot.

EVAN

When we were kids. Your dad was making a movie. Robin Hood or something?

KAYLEIGH

(cold)

What do you want to know, Evan?

EVAN

It's just...did he...what happened in the basement?

KAYLEIGH

It was a long time ago.

EVAN
I know, but...

KAYLEIGH
(cold)
Is that why you came all the way back?
To ask a lot of stupid questions about Robin Hood?

EVAN
No, but I think something really bad might've happened to us.
Kayleigh stops walking and crushes her cigarette.

KAYLEIGH
Is there a point to any of this?
Evan's features shift from inquisitory to tenderness.
He steps closer to Kayleigh and softly strokes her face. She flinches at first, but remains in the same spot.

EVAN
Whatever happened, it wasn't our fault.
You know we couldn't have stopped it.
Kayleigh begins to tremble. Tears flow.

EVAN
Look, Kayleigh. This may sound like bullshit coming from a guy who hasn't spoken to you in seven years...
She moves her face away from his hand.

EVAN
But you were seven years old and there's nothing you could've done to deserve...
Her face collapses and she turns away.

(defeated)
Just shut up, Evan. You're wasting your breath.

EVAN
You can't hate yourself just because your dad's a twisted freak.

KAYLEIGH
Who are you trying to convince, Evan?!
You come all the way out here to stir up my shit just because you had a bad memory!? You want me to cry on your shoulder and tell you that everything's all better now? Well fuck you, Evan!
Nothing's gonna be all better! Okay?!
Nothing ever gets better!
Kayleigh runs, stops and turns back to Evan.

KAYLEIGH
If I was so wonderful, Evan, why didn't you ever call me? Why'd you leave me here to rot?!

She turns and runs away. Evan looks sick with guilt.
EXT. COLLEGE CAMPUS - QUAD - DAY - 2002
A few GREEKS play frisbee and talk trash. Evan, tired and depressed, sits on the lawn nearby, fingering the new burn scar on his belly. Contemplating...

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Evan enters his dorm. He ignores Thumper, who sits on Evan's bed sucking furiously from a gurgling bong. He chokes out a message.

THUMPER

Some dude left a message for you.

Evan puts a towel under the door.

EVAN

You can smell it all the way in the bathroom.

Evan hits "play" on the answering machine.

ANSWERING MACHINE

(male voice)

Hi, Evan, this is Professor Carter. Just wondered why you didn't hand in your essay this afternoon. I was a bit concerned. Call me to schedule a make-up.

BEEP. Thumper offers Evan a magnified frown of disapproval.

(male voice)

What did you say to my sister motherfucker?! Last night she cried on the phone for over an hour to me.

(enraged breathing)

She said you came and saw her last night.

Thumper coughs accidentally, tips the bong over on Evan's bed. Reacting quickly, he grabs a towel from under the door and wipes off Evan's comforter.

ANSWERING MACHINE

(Tommy; cont'd)

She...she fucking killed herself tonight. She's dead.

(beat)

And so are you.

BEEP. Evan stares dumbstruck at the machine.

THUMPER

Whoa, bad news, bro. I don't think this is gonna come out.

DISSOLVE
TO:

EXT. CEMETERY - DAY

Evan, dressed in black, gets out of his car at the edge of the cemetery. A small cluster of friends and family gather at the grave. Evan grabs a bouquet of roses and begins walking to the grave. When he suddenly spots Mr. Miller and Tommy.

Evan's hands tense up into fists. He becomes weak in the knees and stops walking. After an uncomfortable moment of standing still, he retreats to his car and watches the ceremony from the driver's seat.

DISSOLVE
TO:

EXT. CEMETERY - DAY

The last of the mourners are filing away. Evan exits his car and walks to the deserted grave. He drops the roses on the casket and turns to make sure nobody is watching.

Evan reaches into his pocket and pulls out a sheet of paper. He unfolds it and leaves it on her gravesite:

EVAN'S DIARY

I'll come back for you.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

He makes a weighty decision and gets up. He hastily hunts through his journals, looking for a certain book.

Evan opens his journal marked "Age 7". He plops on his bed and starts writing sideways in the margins.

EVAN (V.O.)

It's been said that a person's life is little more than the sum of his experiences. If that's true, then I'm not sure I know who I am anymore.

(beat)

I definitely never knew Kayleigh.

He turns the page and begins reading the journal. As he mouths the entry to himself, the resonance of an older man's voice seems to REVERBERATE throughout the room and the WORLD behind his head FAINTLY VIBRATES.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO: INT.
MILLER'S HOUSE - LIVING ROOM - DAY
- 1989

Mr. Miller plays with his camera and the kids are excited about playing Robin Hood in a movie.

MR. MILLER

Shut up moron. Now get in your costume Evan.

Evan slowly nods and begins to strip out of his clothes. Mr. Miller takes a quick peek at him.

MR. MILLER

I've got an idea. Let's go downstairs, it'll look more like a dungeon down there.

INT. MILLER'S BASEMENT - DAY - 1989

Mr. Miller puts the camera on a tripod in the basement. Kayleigh and Evan sit on folding chairs in front of the camera. Tommy stands at the top of the basement stairs, looking down.

MR. MILLER

(to Tommy)

What did I say about keeping that door closed, stupid?

TOMMY

But I wanna see!

MR. MILLER

You're gonna see my fist in about two seconds unless you do what I tell you.

Tommy sulks and closes the door. Mr. Miller lowers his voice and speaks to Evan and Kayleigh.

MR. MILLER

Now in this part of the story, Robin Hood just married Maid Marian and they have to kiss and stuff like grown-ups do.

Kayleigh giggles and covers her mouth with her hand. Evan looks skeptical.

MR. MILLER

So take your clothes off Kayleigh.

Kayleigh stops giggling. Evan says nothing.

MR. MILLER

Come on, like when you take a bath. Don't make a deal out of it. You too, Evan.

Mr. Miller gets behind the lens. The room is dead silent.

MR. MILLER

Let's go.

ANGLE ON TOMMY

Who silently opens the door at the top of the basement stairs and watches with horror.

Evan's face is flushed with rage. He walks behind Kayleigh and cups his hands tightly around her ears. She can't hear anything now.

EVAN

What time is it?

MR. MILLER

It's time for you to stand where the hell I told you.

EVAN

Wrong answer, fuckbag. This is the very moment of your reckoning. In the next thirty seconds you're going to open one of two doors. The first door will forever traumatize your own flesh and blood.

The mature speech seems completely surreal coming from a seven-year old. Mr. Miller looks around the room as if he's the butt of some sick joke.

MR. MILLER

(stunned disbelief)

What's happened to -- How are you doing that?

EVAN

(voice rising)

It'll change your daughter from a beautiful child into an empty shell whose only concept of trust was betrayed by her own sick pedophile father. Ultimately, it'll lead to her suicide. Nice work, daddy.

MR. MILLER

(hoarse whisper)

Who - who are you?

Evan impatiently waves the question.

EVAN

Let's just say you're being closely watched, George. Your other option is to get your porn off the rack and treat Kayleigh like...oh, let's say like how a loving father treats his daughter. Sound okay to you, Papa?

MR. MILLER

(choking)

...yes.

EVAN

Listen close then, fuckbag. You screw up again and I swear I'll flat out castrate you.

The impact of the last sentence isn't lost on Mr. Miller.

EVAN

One last thing.

Evan leans over to whisper in Kayleigh's ear. Kayleigh stares at the floor, then looks up at her father and shivers.

Kayleigh looks into Evan's eyes for support. Evan nods go on. His confidence brings a boldness to her lips.

KAYLEIGH

Don't you ever touch me again.

MR. MILLER

I - I won't.

Kayleigh summons her own new courage.

KAYLEIGH

I'm cold. And I'm putting on my clothes.

As he leaves to pick up her clothes, Evan grins.

EVAN

What you need to do is discipline your son Tommy, because the kid's one sadistic pup.

Hiding at the top of the basement stairs, Tommy recoils in horror and picks up one of his sister's dolls and begins twisting the head back and forth...

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. SORORITY BEDROOM - MORNING - 2002

A broad smile lines Evan's face as he slowly wakes up from his slumber. He suddenly grabs his head as if suffering from a pounding migraine.

MONTAGE OF SWIRLING MEMORIES

Quick cuts and flashes of Evan and Kayleigh growing older - she seems more carefree now, full of life and less-self conscious.

EXT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - DAY - 1989

Evan pulls Kayleigh around in a little red wagon.

INT. FAMILY RESTAURANT - DAY - 1989

Evan and Kayleigh play in a tub of balls in the playroom.

EXT. PLAYGROUND - DAY - 1989

Kayleigh pushes Evan on a tire swing.

INT. MULTIPLEX THEATER - NIGHT - 1995

Tommy, glaring at Evan, thrashes the Teen Punk.

EXT. JUNKYARD - DAY - 1995

Burning sack in flames.

EXT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - STREET - 1995

QUICK FLASH of the U-Haul driving away.

EXT. BUS STATION - DAY - 1995

At thirteen, Kayleigh spunkily hops off a GREYHOUND

BUS and runs into Evan's arms.

EXT. ANDREA'S NEW HOUSE - DAY - 1995

Still thirteen, Evan peddles his bike by his new house, Kayleigh riding on the handlebars.

More memory flashes of Evan and Kayleigh throughout the teen years, they grow up as lovers now:

EXT. LAKE - DAY - 1997

Evan and Kayleigh have romantic picnic on a rowboat.

EXT. HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL FIELD - SUNRISE - 2000

Evan and Kayleigh watch the sunrise after senior prom.

BACK TO:

INT. SORORITY BEDROOM - MORNING - 2002

Finally the memory assault is over. Evan groans in pain as blood trickles from his nose.

An arm reaches over and touches his shoulder.

KAYLEIGH (O.S.)

Honey, are you all right?

Evan whips around to see Kayleigh watching him. Not only is Kayleigh alive, but she's a ravishing beauty. Evan lurches back from the shock of seeing Kayleigh and falls to the floor. She sees Evan's nose bleed and her eyes go wide.

KAYLEIGH

Oh my God, Evan. You're bleeding! Look at you!

Evan, still stunned, can do little but stare from the floor.

EVAN

(transfixed by her)

Jesus, Kayleigh, you're...

(looks around)

Incredible.

KAYLEIGH

(purring)

Mmmm... You' give good compliment.

Clean up and come back to bed.

He stands in the middle of her bedroom, surrounded by sorority plaques and pink preppy decor.

Evan, hardly able to take his eyes off her as she hands him a tissue. He reaches for his clothes at the foot of the bed and comes up with a Greek-lettered fraternity sweatshirt and brown suede jacket.

EVAN

Where...where are my clothes?

KAYLEIGH

Those are your clothes, silly.

Evan frowns with distaste, grabs a towel and heads out.

WE FOLLOW HIM INTO:

INT. SORORITY BATHROOM - MORNING

At the sink, Evan washes the blood off his face and looks at his reflection in the mirror. A nearby shower SHUTS OFF.

EVAN

This is too amazing! Un-fucking-real!

WOMAN'S VOICE (O.S.)

I wish I could get so excited about a nose bleed.

Evan turns around and sees Gwen, one of the sorority brats from the bar, exit the shower naked.

EVAN

Whoops. Sorry. My bad.

Evan blushes and turns back to the mirror through which Gwen dries herself with a towel while staring flirtatiously back at Evan.

EVAN

Hey, you were with those assholes who threw popcorn at Thumper.

Evan holds his temple in pain as another memory comes to him.

EVAN

And your name is...Gwen!

GWEN

Seriously, Evan. Lay off the blow.

She pats his ass and exits the bathroom.

EXT. COLLEGE - QUAD - DAY - 2002

Kayleigh, wearing a long skirt and tight red sweater, catches the eye of every guy on campus. She and Evan stroll arm in arm through the quad. Somehow, the world seems brighter now. Even the colors seem more vibrant when compared to the somewhat grimmer world we've known.

MANY STUDENTS wave to Evan and call his name. He can't remember all their names but it's kinda cool being the BMOC.

Evan takes a long look at her and becomes curious.

EVAN

Hey, uh, don't go freaking out on me over this, but do you remember when your dad first got his video camera?

KAYLEIGH

Well I remember he had one...but he, like, put it away after the first day. Why would that freak me out?

EVAN

I dunno.

(goofy smile)

Just being weird.

Kayleigh playfully sweeps her leg around to kick him on the ass, then smiles as if a ghost must have done it.

KAYLEIGH

Such a goofus. See you tonight.

Kayleigh gives him a big unexpected kiss and walks away. After a moment of wow, Evan runs off to class himself.

INT. DORM LOBBY - DAY

Evan inserts his last quarter into the lobby pay phone and dials a telephone number.

EVAN

(to himself)

Come on, Mom, be there!

ANSWERING MACHINE

(Andrea's voice)

Andrea,

(Evan's voice)

Evan,

(a strange, older man's voice)

And Chuck

(all three)

Aren't home right now. You know what to do.

EVAN

(off-guard)

Hi, Mom and, uh, Chuck. Just calling to say hi and well, call me.

Evan hangs up the phone, then checks his watch. No, wrist. At that moment, Thumper passes Evan in the lobby.

EVAN

Thumper! What time is it, man?

Thumper eyes this strange preppy kid with distaste.

THUMPER

Whasamatter? Lost your Rolex?

EVAN

Huh?

THUMPER

Fuck off, frat boy.

Thumper walks away, leaving Evan dumbfounded.

INT. COLLEGE CLASSROOM - DAY

Evan runs into the lecture hall and gets in line behind other STUDENTS who are taking No. 2 pencils from a box on Professor Carter's desk.

Evan hears PEOPLE he cannot see calling his name. Somehow, it's more creepy than cool. The Professor makes a loud announcement.

PROFESSOR CARTER

Remember, everyone! Only two weeks until your science projects are due.

EVAN

(quietly)

I still owe you an essay from last week. Is there any way I could get an extension?

PROFESSOR CARTER

And you are...?

EVAN

(disappointed)

Evan Treborn.

PROFESSOR CARTER

The answer's 'no', Mr. Treborn. Now take a seat. The exam's about to begin.

Evan walks up the aisle and takes a seat. As he sits down, someone puts his ARM menacingly around Evan's throat.

Evan flinches, turns around and sees Hunter, the frat guy Thumper assaulted the other night at Dirty Hank's bar.

EVAN

Leave me alone, asshole. I didn't lay a hand on you, okay?

Hunter bursts out laughing.

HUNTER

Evan, you're hysterical. You study for this?

EVAN

(awkward)

We'll find out soon enough.

HUNTER

(laughing)

Me neither.

Hunter surreptitiously hands Evan a cheat-sheet to the exam. Evan's face brightens.

EVAN

You're kidding. Are these the answers?!

HUNTER

Damn, Evan, on the D.L.

EVAN

(holding it lower)

Thanks. Wow. Hey, I want to do something really special for Kayleigh tomorrow. If I said I needed some help from you and the brothers...

HUNTER

I'd say blow me. Get the pledges to do it.

Evan nods and smiles as exams are passed down his row.

INT. SORORITY BEDROOM - NIGHT

Evan and Kayleigh have just finished having sex. She seems incredibly satisfied, but he looks slightly uncomfortable.

KAYLEIGH

Oh my God, that was good. Where'd you learn all those new tricks/

EVAN

So it didn't feel...weird?

KAYLEIGH

Yeah, if you call multiple orgasms weird.

She giggles and snuggles into him. He's grateful for her affection, but still looks uneasy. The PHONE RINGS and he automatically answers it.

EVAN

Yellow.

Silence on the other end. More silence.

KAYLEIGH

Fuck 'em.

As Evan hangs up, he and Kayleigh share a giggle and he resumes snuggle position.

EVAN

What do you think it is about us that makes us so perfect? Like, looking back, whatever gave you the nerve to sneak out and visit me after I moved away?

KAYLEIGH

(laughs)

As if my dad could've stopped me from seeing you. What's he gonna do to me? Evan smiles to himself. And hugs her tighter.

EVAN

You think we'll always be together?
For the first time she looks at him with concern.

KAYLEIGH

That is the plan, right? Hell or high water?

He's in heaven, but plays it cool.

EVAN

Just making sure.

DISSOLVE
TO:

EXT. FRAT HOUSE - FRONT LAWN - DAY

The pledges of Theta Chi busily gather around Evan, their clothes covered in dirt, food and what might be vomit.

Evan, now dressed like his usual self, bangs a wooden spoon on a metal salad bowl that a poor THETA CHI PLEDGE wears as a hat.

EVAN

Order, order. So all you rushes know what you've got to do for me?

THETA CHI PLEDGE

(correcting him)

Pledges, Sir Brother Evan, Sir.

EVAN

Pledges, rushees, same difference. Now this is a one-time deal. You do all this for me and I'll never give you shit again. Promise.

A buzz of excitement runs through the pledges.

DISSOLVE
TO:

INT. FRAT HOUSE - ATTIC HALL - NIGHT

It's peaceful now. Evan covers Kayleigh's eyes with his hands as he leads her through the attic hallways. Both are dressed to the nines.

KAYLEIGH

I don't understand, where are you taking me?

EVAN

You'll see.

EXT. FRAT HOUSE - ROOF - CONTINUOUS The wooden door to the rooftop swings open, revealing Kayleigh and Evan.

Kayleigh is dazzled by what she sees:
The entire roof is decorated with fairy-lights, Chinese lanterns and hundreds upon hundreds of candles. And elegant romantic table for two awaits them, flanked by twelve FORMALLY DRESSED SERVANTS (previously seen pledges) who respectfully stare ahead with the utmost class.
Two pledges immediately pull out two chairs and stand by. Kayleigh applauds and laughs with delight.

KAYLEIGH

I don't know what to say. It's beautiful.

EVAN

Go on. Sit down.

AS she takes a step toward the table - FLOWER PETALS shower down on her. She looks up to see TWO MORE PLEDGES standing on ladders, delicately tossing pedals.

Kayleigh looks overwhelmed as she sits down.

KAYLEIGH

Why are you doing all this for me?

EVAN

Simple math. When I woke up this morning and saw your smile... I knew that I wanted to spend the rest of my life with you.

Her hand reaches out to his and grabs it fiercely. Her eyes tell him she feels the same way. A magical moment.

And they lean into each other for a kiss so enchanted it might as well be their first ever --

Hunter bolts up the stairs, two at a time.

HUNTER

We been lookin' all over for you, man.

SENIOR BROTHER

Someone trashed your car.

The moment's gone. Evan and Kayleigh exchange worried looks.

EXT. FRAT HOUSE - PARKING LOT - CONTINUOUS

Evan runs down the front lawn to his car, the Honda parked at the bottom of the hill. His face collapses.
Evan's car has been trashed and is surrounded by broken glass. The seats and tires have been slashed, the hood has been mysteriously yanked off and the steering wheel sits on the roof.

The most unnerving thing, however, is a SPIKED LEATHER
DOG COLLAR hangs off the rearview mirror.

By now a crowd has gathered. Evan runs up to people.

EVAN

(panicked)

Did you see who did this? You see anyone?

No one will answer with anything more than a shrug.

HUNTER

Probably them Pika fuckers.

But Kayleigh knows better. She stares at the collar.

EVAN

How could he get away with this? Right in front of the goddamn frat house!

A SENIOR BROTHER angrily calls him from the lawn.

SENIOR BROTHER

Frat house? Hey man, would you call your "country" a "cunt"?

Kayleigh shudders and Evan puts his arms around her.

KAYLEIGH

Don't. He's probably watching.

INT. FRAT HOUSE - EVAN'S BEDROOM - NIGHT

Evan leads Kayleigh into his bedroom and shuts the door. Evan can't help but look under the bed. No one.
He then locks the door, reaches into his desk and finds a tiny canister of Pepper Spray.

KAYLEIGH

It's my fault. I should have told you he was released a few weeks ago.

EVAN

Might'a been nice.

(re: pepper spray)

Like this is gonna do any good. Maybe one of the frat guys has a gun.

KAYLEIGH

Please, Evan. Don't even joke. He wouldn't hurt you. He's just trying to scare you away from me.

EVAN

(shaking the cannister)

Yeah, right. Tell that to Crockett.

KAYLEIGH

(quietly)

It's not his fault, Evan. You knew how bad he had it when we were kids.

EVAN

Don't give me this Oprah-book club bad upbringing shit, because you turned out fine.

KAYLEIGH

(quietly)

My father never laid a hand on me. It's like the prick saved it all up for
Tommy.

Evan sits in silence for a moment, contemplating this.

Kayleigh's eyes plead for him to have compassion.

EVAN

Fine, then. We'll let campus security deal with him.

EXT. COLLEGE QUAD - NIGHT

Kayleigh and Evan walk through the all-but-deserted campus. Evan seems especially paranoid. In the distance, some guy vomits loudly.

KAYLEIGH

Are you okay?

EVAN

What do you mean?

KAYLEIGH

It's just...you've been acting kinda strange, you know?

EVAN

Like how?

KAYLEIGH

I don't know. You seem...different. You make weird jokes. Your accents changed. You don't even walk the same.

EVAN

I walk differently?

KAYLEIGH

I can't put my finger on it, but everything's a bit off. Even the dinner tonight. It was beautiful, but...

EVAN

I know I've been actin strange lately. It's just that... I don't want anything to happen to us.

The guy along the path gags loudly into the bushes. Kayleigh and Evan instinctively avert their eyes. Suddenly, Kayleigh's ears perk and she stops walking mid-stride.

KAYLEIGH

Wait. Something's not right. Isn't that your jacket?

EVAN

What?

The guy, wearing Evan's brown suede jacket, suddenly springs to his feet, revealing his face for the first time.

KAYLEIGH

Tommy.

Tommy has grown in the last seven years. He has long, greasy hair and some tattoos. He holds a TIRE THUMPER (a short, steel bat for truckers) menacingly in his right hand.

Evan stands frozen in fear, his hands rooted in his coat pockets.

EVAN

Leave us alone you sick fuck!

TOMMY

Get this "us" shit. As if I was gonna lay a hand on my own sister. You've done nicely for yourself, Evan. Nice friends, nice life, not to mention you're fucking my sister. Not a bad piece of ass if I say so myself.

KAYLEIGH

Shut up, Tommy!

TOMMY

Aw, hey now, that was a compliment.

Tommy takes a few practice swings with the tire thumper.

EVAN

What the hell are you doing?

TOMMY

It wasn't enough that the whole world loves you, but you had to take away the last person on earth who didn't think I was a piece of shit.

EVAN

(suppressing panic)

No one thinks you're a piece of shit, Tommy.

TOMMY

Right, Evan. I believe you just said "sick fuck."

Tommy rushes Evan and bashes him with the tire thumper in the shoulder and ribs. Evan goes down. As Tommy prepares to bash his brains in, Evan whips out the Pepper Spray and nails Tommy in the face.

Tommy reels back in pain, covering his eyes with this free hand. Evan struggles to his feet and circles around Tommy, keeping a distance as he douses Tommy with Pepper Spray. Kayleigh screams. Tommy blindly stumbles around, madly swinging the tire thumper. Evan charges forward in an uncontrollable rage, rips the weapon out of Tommy's hands and sprays a lethal dose of pepper spray into Tommy's open mouth.

KAYLEIGH

Evan, stop! You're gonna kill him!

EVAN

He's a fucking maniac!

Evan knocks Tommy down with the tire thumper. Kayleigh screams and tries to hold Evan back, but he easily wrestles free of her. She runs to a blue streetlight on the quad.

EVAN

He ruined Lenny's life --

Evan kicks Tommy hard in the ribs. Kayleigh pushes a button on the "Blue Light" lamp post and an ALARM WAILS.

EVAN

He killed Crockett --

(kicks him)

Murdered that woman and her baby!

(kicks again)

And he's trying to kill me, Kayleigh!

He's trying to fucking kill me!

Evan raises the tire thumper for a final attack and swings down OFF CAMERA. CRUNCH!

Evan sees what he's done and drops the weapon, horrified. Kayleigh sees what Evan's done to her brother. And stops cold when she sees the damage to Tommy.

Evan rushes toward her and she stumbles backwards, still terrified by his rage, and skitters away from him in a crablike fashion.

SIRENS come racing to the quad. Evan looks away from Tommy's limp body. Collapses to the ground and begins to weep.

DISSOLVE
TO:

EXT. MAVIS PENITENTIARY - DAY

A SECURITY VEHICLE pulls through the ominous metal gates of the large state prison. The vehicle stops and Evan, along with nine other convicts, exit in leg and hand restraints.

INT. MAVIS PENITENTIARY - DAY

Evan, now wearing his standard issue inmate uniform, enters the General Population area of the prison. PRISONERS begin screaming vicious taunts and catcalls at the fresh batch of new inmates. Evan tries to keep composed and walks toward his cell. Evan looks up to see one of the men leaning over the second tier, KARL, a huge muscular con with tattoos of swastikas and other Nazi symbols on his arm, blows a kiss at Evan and winks.

INT. EVAN'S CELL - DAY

Evan enters a dimly lit cell plastered with pictures of Jesus Christ and various Saints. Burning flames on open cans of shoe polish serve as candles to the large shrine.

There is a stained bare mattress on the top bunk. Sitting on the bottom bunk is CARLOS, 30s, a massive Hispanic convict covered with faded Indian ink jail tats of Christ in agony. Carlos stares at Evan disinterestedly as Evan makes up his bed on the top bunk.

CARLOS

First time?

Evan nods glumly.

CARLOS

Best not bitch up. Wind up someone's luggage that way.

(desperate)

Can you protect me?

CARLOS

Jesus himself couldn't make me take on the Brotherhood. When they come, just put your mind in another place, man. Be somewhere else.

A BUZZER SOUNDS. Carlos leaves the cell without another word.

INT. PRISON CAFETERIA - EVENING

Evan sets his tray down at a table filled with Carlos and some other INMATES. No sooner has he sat down to eat, do eager forks reach onto his tray and steal his food. Carlos shrugs at Evan and offers him a roll.

INT. MAVIS VISITING CHAMBER - DAY

Andrea sits across from Evan in the visitor's chamber. Her hair is now bottle-blond. Four inches of Plexiglas separate the two and they talk on monitored phones. Andrea, frazzled, twirls an unlit cigarette.

ANDREA

...I spoke to your new lawyer about the appeal. HE's sure he can get you off on self-defense, so if you're patient.

EVAN

How long will I be in here?

ANDREA

I don't know. These things take time.

EVAN

How's Kayleigh doing? She all right?

Andrea's look tells him to look for hope elsewhere.

EVAN

What about my journals, Mom? Did you bring the ones I asked for?

Andrea nods, holding up two comp books. "AGE 7" and "AGE 13".

ANDREA

I found these. The others are still in storage.

EVAN

Damn it, Mom. I told you I need them all!

ANDREA

Fine. You'll get them, Evan. But I think it's far more important to focus on your case right now.

Evan looks as if he's about to disagree with her, but he closes his mouth and placates her.

EVAN

Sure, Mom. You're right. Just try to tell Kayleigh I'm sorry.

And officer signals Evan and points to his watch.

ANDREA

I'm not gonna lose you, kiddo. Promise me you'll hang on, Ev.

They look at each other and Evan slowly lowers the phone. He hangs up, Andrea still pressing her phone to her ear.

INT. MAVIS PENITENTIARY - DAY

Evan walks closely behind Carlos through a corridor, clutching his journals. As he passes Karl, the Neo-Nazi, Karl reaches over and firmly grabs Evan's crotch.

Evan, totally violated, turns white with rage.

KARL

Shit on my dick or blood on my knife.

Evan stands there, stunned, unable to react when -- Another Neo-Nazi, RICK, swats Evan's journals out of his hands and onto the floor. Life springs back into Evan as he rushes for the journals. He and Rick grab the journals at the same time. A minor tug of war.

EVAN

Let go! They're mine!

Rick tears them away, Evan coming up with only a few torn pages. Evan sees the damage and goes mental.

EVAN

Motherfucker!

Evan swings at Rick and misses. INMATES CHEER! It's on! Rick lunges for Evan, a brief and painful scuffle ensues, the journals getting trampled. Suddenly -- The sounds of COCKED RIFLES echo through the air. The fight stops instantly as Rick and Evan look up to see

--

ANGLE ON

OFFICER STATION. Officers aim rifles at the pair. From an upper tier, even more officers with more rifles. Their barrels sight directly at Evan. Rick steps away, quick to maliciously scoop up Evan's torn journals.

KARL

We'll be comin' for you tonight, sister.

Evan catches his breath, then looks at the remaining few pages on the floor.

INT. EVAN'S CELL - DAY

Evan enters the cell with a few entry pages. HE looks through them. Nothing there.

Evan nods depressed, then sees the page from his "Age 7" journal, grabs Carlos' duct tape and tapes the page over his bed.

INT. PRISON CORRIDOR - DAY

Evan, walking toward some White Supremacists, flinches whenever the occasional INMATE brushes against him.

Evan is completely paranoid, waiting for an inevitable attack.

Karl makes himself visible among them, holding a journal. He reads:

KARL

(from Evan's journal)

Today I found my grandfather's death certificate. HE died in a nut house, just like my father. Mom denies it, but she thinks I'm gonna end up the same way...

The other Supremacists start laughing and calling "looney" and "nut job." Evan rushes past them and they make chicken clucks at him.

EXT. PRISON YARD - DAY

Evan and Carlos sit on BLEACHERS that overlook the other prisoners working out.

Evan closely watches Karl and Rick who stare daggers at him from across the yard. A SKINHEAD PASSES SOMETHING with a white-taped handle to Karl but no officers seem to notice.

Evan slides closer to Carlos and stares at the Jesus Christ tattoos all over Carlos' back.

EVAN

You're religious Carlos, you believe that bit about "the Lord works in mysterious ways?"

CARLOS

Straight up.

EVAN

Because I think he sent me to your cell on purpose. For you to help me.

CARLOS

Shit. I knew you were crazy.

EVAN

I ain't bullshitting. Jesus speaks to me in my dreams.

Carlos scoffs whatever.

EVAN

Pack of smokes says I can prove it to you.

Carlos is suddenly interested.

INT. EVAN'S CELL - LATER

Evan holds a tattered journal entry in his hand and finishes up a conversation. Carlos looks dumbfounded.

EVAN

So when I'm out, I need you to watch my face and hands closely.

CARLOS

You need to see the prison shrink, man.

Their conversation stops when a convict rolls a mail cart by, Evan looking up expectantly.

EVAN

Anything today?

CONVICT

Yep. Just not for you.

Disappointed, Evan turns back to Carlos. Holds up his journal entry.

EVAN

Just tell me if anything weird happens.

CARLOS

Weirder than this?

EVAN

Marks, scars, I dunno. Anything could happen I guess.

Evan studies the page.

JOURNAL ENTRY

On Wednesday I got in trouble for a drawing that I didn't do. Mommy wont let me see it.

Then as he starts reading it to himself, the bars behind him almost imperceptibly VIBRATE --

SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. FIRST GRADE CLASSROOM - DAY - 1989

Evan, seven, COMES TO in an old familiar place. WE are back in Mrs. Boswell's first grade class. All of the children draw colorful pictures.

Evan sees some paper spindles sitting on Mrs. Boswell's desk. AS he heads over to them, Mrs. Boswell firmly grabs his shoulders and steers him back to his own desk.

MRS. BOSWELL

No monkey business, Evan. Sit still and finish your drawing.

Evan, defeated, looks over at his blank piece of paper. HE smiles mischievously, and grabs some colored pencils.

MRS. BOSWELL

That's great everyone! Just imagine anything you want to be. There are no limits.

Soon enough, an image emerges: Evan holding a knife, stands over a heap of several dead inmates Karl and Rick.

When done, he sneaks over to Mrs. Boswell's desk, where the two paper spindles sit. The metal needles reach up and skewer a number of paper notes and messages. Evan looks over to see Mrs. Boswell holding up his drawing, horrified.

EVAN

(musically)

Oh, Mrs. Boswelllllllllll?

She looks over in time to see Evan using all of his seven-year old strength to WHIP his hands down toward the spindles!

The moment before his palms reach them there's a brief instant where SOUNDSCAPES COLLIDE and the world behind him VIBRATES.

AND WE'RE
BACK TO:

INT. EVAN'S PRISON CELL - DAY - 2002

Evan comes to as ECHOES OF SCREAMING CHILDREN FADE.

Alertness slowly creeps back up on him as he hears:

CARLOS

Oh sweet Jesus. It's true. It's a miracle! A miracle!

Evan looks up to see Carlos staring at him with reverence.

CARLOS

Your hands. The stigmata!

Evan looks to see two scars in the center of each palm.

EVAN

What did you see? What did it look like?

CARLOS

(laughing)

Signs of the Lord. They just appeared out of nowhere. I thought you were loco!

EVAN

So you believe me?

Carlos simply stares at him, awestruck, and hands over a box of cigarettes.

INT. KARL'S CELL - CONTINUOUS

Evan nervously approaches. A CREW of Aryans block his path.

EVAN

I want to make a deal.

The Aryans laugh, make discrete eye contact with Karl, who grins and signals to let Evan pass.

INT. KARL'S CELL - CONTINUOUS

Karl and Rick wait expectantly as Evan nervously enters. They say nothing, relishing the fearful silence.

EVAN

Look. I'm new to all this but I think I get how things work. You gotta join a gang or else end up dead meat.

They continue to stare.

EVAN

Well it sure ain't gonna fucking be with no niggers or spics. So how do we do this? You gotta work your way up, and I'm the new guy.

(looking ill)

So...should I...I mean, do I suck your dicks right now?

Karl and Rick exchange looks.

KARL

Is your blood pure?

EVAN

(angry)

I ain't no fucking kike if that's what you mean.

Rick stands. All muscle.

RICK

Let's see what you got. And watch the fucking teeth or you'll be leaving without 'em.

Evan nods reluctantly and peacefully drops to his knees. Karl and Rick lower their pants to their ankles. Evan looks miserable, about to do the deed when --

CARLOS

Bulldozes past the Aryans into the room, slamming Karl into the wall and jamming a shank into Karl's crotch!
Rick instantly charges Carlos, but trips on the pants around his ankles. Evan, anticipating Rick's fall, stomps Rick's face before snatching his journals from Karl's shelf.

Evan frantically flips through them, hunting for something, as the other WHITE SUPREMACISTS charge the cell.

Carlos!

Carlos drops Karl's writhing body to the floor and presses his girth against the cell door.

Evan locates an entry and concentrates on the words just as the other supremacists force the door open -- Evan focuses on the words. Chanting quickly.

EVAN

We took the woods behind the junkyard just to make sure we wouldn't bump into Tommy. We hadn't seen the smoke yet.

WORDS from the entry begin to SHIMMER. REVERBERANT SOUNDS OF BARKING break the sound barrier and the image of Aryans storming the cell behind him become a frenetic blur -

SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. JUNKYARD WOODS - DAY - 1995

Evan, thirteen again, comes to in the woods. Evan stumbles at first, then rights himself. He seems strangely exhilarated. A sinister victory smile.

EVAN

Rot in hell you fucking animals.
Kayleigh and Lenny, walking by his side, do a double take. Evan shrugs "just kidding" and looks around, getting his bearings. He whips his hand out and stops them.

EVAN

Wait. Before we --
He suddenly notices Kayleigh who now no longer looks an awkward and unkempt tomboy, but rather a vibrant and feminine young girl. Whereas her clothes were loose and unflattering before, she is now radiant and wears fashionable styles.
Evan remembers his mission and darts over to a JUNK PILE.

EVAN

We need something to cut open the sack!

Kayleigh and Lenny stare at him, concerned for his sanity.
Evan roots through the trash until he finds something: a razor sharp piece of metal about two feet long. Evan offers it to Lenny.

EVAN

I want you to take this, Lenny. Today's your day of atonement. I know how guilty you feel about that woman and her baby --

KAYLEIGH

Evan. Stop it. It's not the time.

EVAN

(frantic)
Now's the only time!
(to Lenny)
Today you get a chance to redeem yourself. Start over with a clean slate. Tabula rasa --

LENNY

What are you talking about?

KAYLEIGH

You're acting crazy!

EVAN

(desperate; to Lenny)
Please. If you've ever trusted me before, trust me on this one.

Evan places the metal shard in Lenny's hand.

EVAN

Cut the rope.

Lenny slowly follows Evan as he bolts away.

EXT. JUNKYARD - LATER

Evan groans on the ground, writhing. Tommy's voice hitches, eyes watering from pent up frustration.

TOMMY

Listen to me good, Evan...

EVAN

I'll do whatever you want. You don't want me to ever see Kayleigh again, fine. Just let Crockett go. Besides, you kill him now and they'll stick you in juvy for sure. And I know you'd never leave your sister alone with your father.

Evan's words hit home and Tommy's anger slowly dissipates. A look of understanding passes between them. Gratitude, even.

Tommy looks at the sack and begins to untie it. Lenny comes screaming from nowhere like a bat out of hell!
With all of the force he can muster, he jams the metal shard all the way through Tommy's throat!

Tommy clutches his throat, gagging in blood. Evan surveys the scene in shock:

EVAN

Oh fuck, Lenny, no!

Lenny drops to the floor, Indian style, wipes the dirt in his hands and freezes up completely. Kayleigh wakes up and SCREAMS when she sees blood spurt from Tommy's throat.

Meanwhile, Crockett escapes from the sack.

EVAN'S POV

Lenny, silhouetted by the sky, seems to vibrate violently as if operating a jack-hammer.

SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. COLLEGE - EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT - 2002

Evan comes to in a familiar place. His original college dorm - ONLY BACKWARDS.

EVAN

Christ. Help me.

He sits upright in bed and takes in his surroundings.
When suddenly, Evan clutches his head in severe pain.

A MONTAGE OF IMAGES ASSAULT HIM:

INT. SORORITY BEDROOM - DAY

Color memories of Kayleigh's sorority fade to BLACK and WHITE and dissipate.

EXT. FRAT HOUSE - NIGHT - 2002

Memories of Evan's vandalized car fade to BLACK and WHITE and dissipate.

INT. PENITENTIARY - DAY - 2002

The faces of Karl and Rick all turn grainy...

INT. COLLEGE - EVAN'S DORM - DAY - 2002

As new images of THUMPER become more BRILLIANT.

INT. SUNNYVALE - PADDED ROOM - DAY - 1005

A new image overwhelms the others: Lenny, 13, with dark, soulless eyes wearing a straight-jacket in a padded room.

BACK TO
EVAN:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - DAY - 2002

Evan's eyes roll back in his head. He shakes uncontrollably and blood pours from his nose.

Thumper opens the door, sees Evan convulsing and jumps back in horror. He scans the hallways for assistance.

THUMPER

Someone call 9-1-1!

INT. SUNNYVALE LABORATORY - DAY

Evan lies on an examining table undergoing another series of CAT-scans. The machines are now state of the art and the lab room has been redecorated.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - DAY

Andrea nervously chews her fingernails as she watches Dr. Redfield post CAT-scan results on the light box. A young nurse pushes Evan, in a wheelchair, into the doctor's office.

EVAN

Okay, doc. What's the damage? How much time have I got?

ANDREA

Cute, Evan.

DR. REDFIELD

It's a little complicated. I haven't seen results exactly like these before.

EVAN

Are you sure? Not even with my father?

Dr. Redfield and Andrea exchange looks.

DR. REDFIELD

Actually, these tests weren't available twenty years ago.

ANDREA

So what did you find.

Dr. Redfield points to the CAT-scan slides, specifically, to the outer lining of Evan's brain.

DR. REDFIELD

This is where we're finding most of the hemorrhaging. The outer lining of the cerebral cortex.

EVAN

(nonplussed)

Lemme guess. Would that be where the memories are stored?

Dr. Redfield stares ahead. Transfixed by the slides.

DR. REDFIELD

I've never seen anything like this. I've compared these to the ones taken last year, and there's evidence of severe hemorrhaging and massive neural reconstruction.

Andrea stares at him blankly. Evan impatiently "pops wheelies" in the wheel chair.

ANDREA

What does that mean for Evan?

EVAN

(to Andrea)

He's saying it's like forty years worth of new memories have been jammed in my brain since last year. Overload city.

'Sat about the gist of it, doc?

Dr. Redfield nods, awed by Evan's effortless interpretation. Evan springs out of the wheelchair and stretches his legs.

EVAN

(to Andrea)
Mind if I wait in the car? The lighting here bugs my eyes.
Andrea nods. Evan shakes Dr. Redfield's hand.
EVAN
Well, it's nice seeing you again. But you know, people to see, things to read...
Andrea shoots Dr. Redfield an apologetic look. Evan heads out the door, accidentally knocking Dr.
Redfield's jacket to the floor. He shrugs apologetically and re-hangs it.
INT. SUNNYVALE CORRIDOR - CONTINUOUS
Outside the office, Evan inspects Dr. Redfield's KEYS and attached SECURITY CARD and smiles. Evan covertly winds himself through the maze of corridors, careful not to be seen by the staff.
He finally sees a wing marked "CRIMINALLY INSANE".
Evan look around to make certain he's not being watched, then uses the security card to open the door.
He looks in every room of the wing until he finds --
INT. SUNNYVALE - LENNY'S ROOM - CONTINUOUS
Evan unlocks the door and is moved by what he sees.
Lenny is strapped onto a metal bed, his arms and legs in tight leather restraints. The dark five o'clock shadow and his malicious grin radiate evil. His black and haunting eyes personify hate and murderous intent.

Lenny seems neither surprised or happy to see Evan.
That is, if he's aware of Evan's presence at all...
EVAN
Is there anything you need? Anything I can get you?
Nothing from Lenny.
EVAN
What about the models, man? Bet I can get you a shitload of models up in here.
Still nothing. Not even a glance in his direction.
Evan sighs and gives up.
EVAN
Okay, Lenny. Just wanted to say "hi".
Evan turns around to leave.
LENNY
You knew the whole time, didn't you?
(Evan spins around)
When you put the blade in my hand, you knew something big was going to happen.
Didn't you?!
EVAN
(jaw dropped)
Y...yes. I guess I did.
Lenny's eyes seethe with hate.
LENNY
Then you should be where I am. You should be where I am.
Evan backs away, face guilt-stricken.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - DAY

Evan enters his dormroom (where everything's backwards), reaches under his bed and is relieved to find the journal marked "AGE 7".

EXT. COLLEGE QUAD - DAY

Evan is ignored by several Theta Chi pledges as he plops himself by a tree and hunts through his journal to find the entry from when he was seven and visited Jason at Sunnyvale.

JOURNAL ENTRY

Today I get to meet my father. His name is Jason and he is crazy. I hope he lets me call him dad.

Evan takes a calming breath and begins reading.

EVAN

(as if reciting a mantra)

Today I get to meet my father. His name is Jason and he is crazy...

Evan gets some strange looks, but continues. As he does, the trees and frisbee-playing students behind him VIBRATE and SHUDDER.

SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. SUNNYVALE VISITOR'S CHAMBER - DAY - 1989

Seven-year old Evan comes to during the time he first met his father, Jason. Jason waits patiently for young Evan to finish his sentence.

JASON

Are you okay? You looked like you were somewhere else for a second there.

EVAN

Look, Jason, I need some fast answers if I'm ever gonna fix what I've done.

Jason is completely thrown.

JASON

I was praying this curse would have ended with me.

EVAN

But it didn't. And now I need info to make things right again and you're the only one who can give it to me.

JASON

(frustrated)

There is no "right". When you change who people are, you destroy who they were.

EVAN

Who's to say you can't make things better?

Jason seems extremely upset to hear Evan say this.

JASON

You can't play God, son. It must end with me. Just by being here, you may be killing your mother.

EVAN

Bullshit. I'll send you a postcard when I've made everything perfect again.

Jason launches himself across the table, shackles and all, and grabs hold of Evan's throat.

EVAN'S POV

As Jason looks down at us, frothing at the mouth, there's a trick of the light where Jason's head seems to VIBRATE against the ceiling.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. COLLEGE QUAD - DAY - 2002

Evan's hands instinctively reach for his throat, then he realizes his surroundings. Heartbroken, he shuts the journal and stands up shakily.

INT. RIDGEWOOD DINER - EARLY EVENING

Evan eats in the same diner where Kayleigh used to work. As he eats, his arm sits in front of his plate, protectively. Guarding his food.

WAITRESS

Just get out, didja?

EVAN

Huh?

WAITRESS

(re: his arm)

Nothing. Just that my brother did a stint in the pen and he used to eat like that.

EVAN

(defensively)

I come from a big family.

WAITRESS

Meant no offense.

EVAN

None taken. Hey, uh, does Kayleigh Miller still work here?

WAITRESS

(confused)

Sorry. Never heard of her.

EXT. MILLER HOUSE - EVENING

Evan slowly walks up the driveway, which is now a dilapidated mess. Garbage litters the front lawn and paint chips rot off the sides of the house. Inside, Mr. Miller yells at someone.

MR. MILLER (O.S.)

Just shut the hell up already! Can't a man get a little goddamn peace in his own home!

(Evan rings doorbell)

Oh, for Christ's sake, now what?

Mr. Miller opens the door and sees Evan.

MR. MILLER

Don't suppose you're here to sell cookies?

In a blur, Evan grabs Mr. Miller's shirt and violently shoves him through the house and into a wall.

EVAN

Good guess, fuckbag.

(off Miller's startled face)

Remember me now? We had a great chat once when I was seven.

Mr. Miller goes slack, his eyes wide with horror.

EVAN

One question, fuckbag. Where can I find your daughter?

EXT. SEEDY HOTEL - NIGHT

Evan walks past some junkies and enters.

INT. SEEDY HOTEL - CONTINUOUS

Evan steps over some passed out bodies that litter the hallway of an incredibly seedy motel. The kind with hourly rates. He knocks on a door.

Kayleigh, now haggard, strung-out junkie, opens the door and immediately the contempt for Evan grows in her eyes. She puts out an expression of disappointment.

KAYLEIGH

Oh, I thought you were my eight o'clock. Make it fast, I'm expecting someone.

EVAN

Nice to see you, too. Can I come in?

She looks around, waves him in.

KAYLEIGH

If I knew you were coming I'd have cleaned the stains off the sheets.

INT. KAYLEIGH'S SEEDY HOTEL ROOM - CONTINUOUS

The room is dirty and sparse, excepting charred-bottom spoons, yellowed cotton balls and brown-spotted squares of tin foil. Evan doesn't hesitate to sit on the "soiled" bed.

KAYLEIGH

What do you want?

Evan can't speak. His eyes begin to water.

EVAN

I just needed to see...a friendly face.

His sincerity touches her.

KAYLEIGH

Well, time is money, Evan. So you...

Evan reaches for his wallet and throws it on her dresser. Kayleigh eyes the wallet. But makes no move to pick it up.

KAYLEIGH

Well, I guess I can spare ten minutes for an old friend, right?

Tears fall freely from Evan's eyes.

KAYLEIGH

So how's tricks? Sorry, occupational humor.

EVAN

I get it. You can drop it now.

KAYLEIGH

(angry again)

Oh, I'm sorry. Does my line of work make you uncomfortable, precious?

EVAN

No. Just that you need to hurt me with it. I've been where you've been

KAYLEIGH

Ha! Where's that?

EVAN

The bottom. When you're just a piece of meat waiting for the next attack.

Kayleigh watches Evan silently.

KAYLEIGH

What's happened to you?

EVAN

You wouldn't believe me. I mean, people always say, "You wouldn't believe me", but in this case, it's not even worth trying.

KAYLEIGH

I've seen some sickening shit. I don't blink twice anymore, especially in your case.

EVAN

Why's that?

KAYLEIGH

Because you're...different.

EVAN

Different? How?

KAYLEIGH

Let me ask you a question. Just a little one that's been gnawing at me for years.

EVAN

Yeah?

KAYLEIGH

On the bridge. How did you know that Tommy had your dog? That was no fucking hunch.

EVAN

Do you remember when I was a kid and I had those blackouts?

Evan continues and Kayleigh listens with a mixture of intense interest and matched skepticism.

DISSOLVE TO LATER:

INT. DINER - NIGHT

Kayleigh finishes a plateful of food at a busy diner. She lights up an after-dinner smoke.

KAYLEIGH

You're right, Evan, I don't believe you.

EVAN

I never thought you would. That's why I've never bothered to tell a soul until now, and why I never will again.

KAYLEIGH

I'm the only person you've told? That's a great line. Does that make other girls swoon? Do they actually eat up this bullshit?

EVAN

I couldn't give a shit if you believe me or not, and frankly I'm too tired to prove it to you.

KAYLEIGH

Oh? There's proof now?

(tired)

Shit. I dunno. How would I know about the twin moles on your inner thigh?

KAYLEIGH

Anyone with fifty bucks could tell you that.

EVAN

Then forget that. How about...you prefer the smell of a skunk to flowers, you hate cilantro because for reasons unknown to you, it reminds you of your step-sister.

Kayleigh's jaw drops.

EVAN

Oh! And when you orgasm, your toes go numb. I'm sure your clientele aren't privy to that one.

Kayleigh tries to conceal the surprise in her eyes.

EVAN

I just thought you should know.

KAYLEIGH

Know what?

EVAN

That I didn't leave you there to rot.

Kayleigh flinches as if her should had been invaded, then her eyes fill with distrust and contempt.

KAYLEIGH

There's one major hole in your story.

EVAN

Which is?

KAYLEIGH

There is no fuckin' way on this planet or any other that I was in some fuckin' sorority.

She opens Evan's wallet and leaves a twenty on the table.

KAYLEIGH

Sure you don't want your wallet?

EVAN

Don't think I'll need it where I'm going.

KAYLEIGH

Off to change everyone's life again, is that it? Maybe this time you'll pop up in some mansion while I wind up in Tijuana doing the donkey act.

EVAN

I'm over it. Whenever I try to help anyone it all turns to shit.

KAYLEIGH

Well, don't give up now, Slick. You've already done so much for me. Hell, why don't you go back in time and save Mrs. Halbern and her baby. Then maybe Lenny wouldn't freak out and ruin my family. She gets up and puts on her coat.

KAYLEIGH

Oh, here's one! Go back when I'm seven and fuck me in front of Daddy's handi-cam, you know, straighten me out a bit...

She tosses his wallet over her shoulder at him and leaves.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - DAY

Evan enters his familiar looking dorm and hears the familiar sounds of Thumper having sex with another naked GOTHIC CO-ED. On Evan's bed.

EVAN

Get out. Both of you.

THUMPER

Sorry, dude. Just figured it'd be okay with you bein' sick and all.

Evan's temper flares and he picks up a chair and SMASHES it against a wall above Thumper's head.

EVAN

I'm not saying it again.

Thumper and the co-ed quickly cover themselves in the blankets and leave. Alone in the room, Evan looks under his bed and breathes a sigh of relief to see all of his journals are intact. He sifts through them again. He finally finds the passage he needs. Something catches the corner of Evan's eyes and he turns to examine it.

To the left of Thumper's Buddha statuette sits a large VOTIVE CANDLE that bears a portrait of Jesus Christ.

(humble)

Lord give me the strength and guidance
I need to set things right.

As he begins reading a passage to himself, SOUNDS ECHO backward at us from another time and place. And the entire ROOM SHIMMERS around him -

SMASH CUT
TO:

EXT. MRS. HALPERN'S HOUSE - DAY - 1995

Evan comes to as he, Kayleigh, Lenny and Tommy - all thirteen - watch Mrs. Halpern carry her baby back to the mailbox across the street with intense anticipation.

Evan suddenly comes to life and makes himself visible, running across the street shouting.

EVAN

Lady, stay back! Don't go near the mailbox!

Mrs. Halpern, startled, stares at the young kid skeptically as she absently continues toward the mailbox.

EVAN

I mean it, woman! Get the hell back!
Lenny comes running across the street to Evan's aid, and Tommy shrugs and follows after him.

LENNY

There's a bomb in the mailbox. Get away!

Tommy, still running, cringes to hear Lenny's stupid confession and rolls his eyes at the situation. Evan positions himself between Mrs. Halpern and the mailbox, frantically waving his hand at her to stay back, because she's STILL COMING.

TOMMY

I'll save you lady!

Tommy takes a running dive at Mrs. Halpern, perhaps a bit too hard, and sends her and the baby to the pavement, hurt, but no major injuries.
Seeing things are safe, Evan backs away from the mail

--

BOOM!

The blast is deafening! Evan's body is hurled backwards dramatically.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - DAY - 2002

Evan comes to back in his dorm, the same posters are on the wall, the sheets are the same. Even the familiar sounds of Thumper having sex under the covers.

EVAN

I thought I told you two to beat it.
Evan's face falls as he hears a familiar voice, but not Thumper's.

LENNY

What? Hey, sorry, man. We wake you up?
Evan is confused by Lenny's presence, but smiles to himself and shakes his head "no".

EVAN

No, it's cool.

(re: Lenny's okay)

Really cool.

Evan yawns, brining his hand to his mouth, but there's no hand. No arm, really, either. Just two FLESHY STUMPS!

Evan bolts upright in bed and stares down at his amputations.

A FLOOD OF MEMORIES ASSAULT HIM:

We see countless and brief image flashes of Evan growing up from the age of thirteen with NO ARMS, and requiring a WHEELCHAIR.

INT. MULTIPLEX THEATER LOBBY - DAY - 1995

Tommy and Kayleigh load popcorn and drinks onto Evan's lap as Lenny pushes the wheelchair.

INT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - KITCHEN - DAY - 1995

Evan celebrates his 14th birthday and blows out the candles. Andrea, Kayleigh, Tommy and Lenny all clap.

EXT. CHURCH - DAY - 1995

Tommy pushes Evan to church.

INT. EVAN'S DORM - DAY - 2002

Evan screams as blood pours from his nose. Lenny is out of bed at once to help him...as is KAYLEIGH! (Now beautiful and natural looking).

QUICK SERIES OF FLASHES:

EXT. LAKE - DAY - 1999

Lenny and Kayleigh, as teens, sit together with Evan at the far end of the boat.

INT. HIGH SCHOOL - DAY - 1999

Evan looks on longingly as Lenny and Kayleigh become lovers in high school.

EXT. WOODS - NIGHT - 1999

A campfire. Evan sips from a BEER CAP as Lenny and Kayleigh make out in plain sight with Tommy's bashful approval.

BACK TO
EVAN:

INT. DORM HALLWAY - DAY - 2002

Evan's in agony as Kayleigh opens a series of dorm doors and Lenny rushes Evan's wheelchair through. Kayleigh carries a pair of prosthetic arms in her hands. Evan moans and tries to rub his temple with his stump.

EVAN

Where are we going?

KAYLEIGH

We have to get you to Sunnyvale. You're having one of your famous hemorrhages.

EVAN

Stop! Take me back!

LENNY

Sorry, tough guy, no can do. Your mother would kill me.

Evan launches his body forward and spills clumsily out of the wheelchair. Lenny must halt in order not to crush Evan. AS Evan writhes about on the floor, his legs paralyzed, a CROWD GATHERS.

Evan focuses on Lenny, but it's hard to ignore the crowd that titters and snickers in the background.

EVAN

Take me back, Lenny!
(teeth clenched)

You owe me that much.

Kayleigh turns to face the jeering crowd.

KAYLEIGH

What are you geeks looking at? Must be nice to be so goddamned perfect, huh?
Fucking losers.

The crowd breaks up and leaves.

EXT. COLLEGE QUAD - DAY

It's calm now. Lenny and Kayleigh push Evan's wheelchair around the quad. Evan now wears prosthetic arms. Random PEOPLE call out to Lenny. He's extremely popular in this world.

LENNY

'Sup, Sheila! WE missed you at the party! Don't even think I'm giving you my lab notes either! Think I like getting up for "eight thirty's"?

Lenny pushes Evan past Thumper and Cricket. Their conversation stops and they stare at their feet as Evan gets wheeled by. Evan boils to be treated as if he were non-existent.

LENNY

Hey, there's Tommy.

Evan spins around in fear. He sees Tommy, clean-cut, and handing out flyers in front of a banner that reads "Campus Crusade for Christ." Tommy seems good-natured now, working hard and soliciting names for his list. He looks up as Evan rolls along and his eyes brighten to see Evan.

TOMMY

I did what you said, man! We're pooling our student funds with Hillel House and we're going to have an Awareness Dance.

EVAN

Oh goody, nothing like spinning my chair around to a techno mix of Hava Nagila til I puke.

Tommy frowns and exchanges glances with Lenny, who shrugs and nods back to him.

LENNY

Uh, we should be getting to class now.

EVAN

Forget it. What's the point of Psych now? Tomorrow I could wake up as some dirt farmer in Bangladesh.

Another exchanged glance. Kayleigh looks at Evan.

KAYLEIGH

Let's go for a stroll.

Evan allows Kayleigh to roll him away from the others. To the very spot where Evan once killed Tommy. Evan stares at his prosthetic hand which he can "magically" will to open, close, open, close...

EVAN

So Tommy's really into this Jesus kick, huh?

Kayleigh looks at him curiously.

KAYLEIGH

You know how spiritual he's gotten ever since he saved Mrs. Halpern and Katie.

EVAN

He saved Mrs. Halpern? Please, the twisted fuck.

Kayleigh, now by a bench. Stops and sits. As she casually uses her foot to turn his chair to face her, she pulls out a granola bar and hands it to him. His prosthetic hand crushes it. It crumbles to dust. She seems more confused.

KAYLEIGH

Is something the matter?

EVAN

(re: prosthetic arms)

Yeah, I think I gotta get these fixed or something.

She leans into him, gently feeding him her remaining bar.

EVAN

Kayleigh? Do you ever think about "us?"
I mean, wonder if it could ever have been different between the two of us?

KAYLEIGH

Sure, Evan, why not? You were the first person I really ever cared about.

EVAN

I was?

KAYLEIGH

That's why when I was little I never went to live with my mother.

EVAN

I don't get it.

KAYLEIGH

(feeding another bite)

When my folks split, they gave me and
Tommy a choice who we wanted to live with. I couldn't stand my dad, but I knew if I moved to my mom's I'd never see you again.

EVAN

I never knew that. So then you still sometimes think of us... together?

KAYLEIGH

It's crossed my mind from time to time.

EVAN

(hopeful)

And...?

KAYLEIGH

Well a lot of things cross my mind.
I've always been a fast thinker, Ev. I can play out the movie of our entire lives in under a second. Boom - we fall in love-get married-two kids, your keen analytical insight matched to my generous nature-kids grow old as do we, relatively stable relationships,
matching burial plots, the whole bit.
It took a lot longer to spit out than to imagine.

EVAN

Then you think it might have worked out?

KAYLEIGH

Why not? But that's not how things wound up. I'm with Lenny, Lenny's your friend. And there it ends.

She looks into his eyes and shrugs almost apologetically. Tears streak down Evan's face as he speaks in a pleading tone.

EVAN

Would it make any difference if I told you that no one could possibly love anyone as much as I love you?

Kayleigh shakes her head sadly, then suddenly looks up. Evan turns to see Lenny waving her over. She puts her hand on Evan's shoulder, stands and goes to Lenny.

Evan can't take his eyes off her.

ANGLE ON

Lenny kissing Kayleigh. In painful slo-mo. Evan turns away, utterly heartbroken.

INT. HANDICAPPED BATHROOM - DAY

CLOSE UP

Evan's stump turns on a BATHTUB FAUCET.

REVEAL

Evan, fully clothes, lies in a bathtub that's filling with water. Beside the tub, the wheelchair has been tipped over.

The water rises past his mouth, to his nostrils - Evan makes his peace and takes a final breath.

And the water spills over the side of the tub. All Evan can do is watch it, still breathing easily through his nose.

A beat. Then the door opens.

TOMMY ENTERS

Immediately sizing up the situation.

TOMMY

You forgot to put the toaster on the edge.

Tommy casually turns off the water, then pops open the DRAIN. The water level lowers to Evan's mouth.

EVAN

But you, Kayleigh and Lenny like toast.
And that's really all that matters now.

Tommy feels Evan's anguish and plops his ass on the wet floor by the tub. He lanes his head onto Evan's shoulder.

Evan bristles at first, but finally gives in to his hatred, ultimately resting his own head against Tommy's. Taking the comfort offered.

TOMMY

I'll get you changed. Visiting hours are almost up.

INT. ST. VINCENT'S HOSPITAL - EVENING

Tommy rolls Evan through a quiet hospital corridor.

EVAN

(looking around)

What, did mom get transferred again?

Tommy frowns, confused, then rolls Evan into --

INT. ANDREA'S ROOM - CONTINUOUS

Evan is startled to see Andrea hooked up to several IV's, an oxygen tank and a respirator Several oxygen hoses connect to a tracheotomy tube.

Tommy smiles and kisses Andrea on the cheek. She tousles his hair in return. Evan can hardly speak. As Tommy begins to wheel Evan's chair closer to Andrea's bedside, Andrea utters a faint whisper.

ANDREA

Looking. Good. Kiddo.

Evan eyes her MEDICAL CLIPBOARD as he's wheeled by.

EVAN

(reading)

Lung cancer?

TOMMY

Sorry, Mrs. T. He's been out of sorts lately.

Andrea flinches to hear this. Evan stares at her, eyes wide.

EVAN

Right... You started chain smoking after I blew myself up.

Evan suddenly seems sick with guilt.

EVAN

There must be a way to fix this.

ANDREA

Fix?

EVAN

I just need the entry about the blockbuster. Wait, shit, no arms. I never even got the chance to write it.

A flicker of recognition registers in her eyes.

ANDREA

Is Evan...different?

TOMMY

He's just going through some tough times.

EVAN

Mom. Don't cry. I can change this.

TOMMY

I think I'll go check out the chapel.

ANDREA

You're. Acting. Like your father.

EVAN

Come on, Mom. Just 'cause Dad was my age when he started going crazy doesn't mean that I'm nuts.

Andrea is shocked.

ANDREA

How. Did you. Know that?

EVAN

You told me that on Parents' Weekend. Remember? Wait, that wasn't me. Or you.

She uses her left hand to pinch off the air to her oxygen tube and forces herself to speak in a sick, GRAVELY manner.

ANDREA

Just. Like. Jason.

EVAN

Don't worry. I'm gonna get you out of here.

He pushes a lever and the mechanical wheelchair rolls itself out of the room. Andrea forces her loudest raspy scream.

ANDREA

Stop him. Stop him. Stop him...

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT

Lenny tears through old cardboard boxes in Evan's closet. Evan watches nearby.

LENNY

Are you sure you even packed it?

EVAN

My mom packed for me. I think she sent everything I ever owned. So we'll see.

Evan watches Lenny eagerly as he dumps tons of Evan's junk on the floor. Old report cards, books, toys and photo albums fall on the floor.

LENNY

Is this it?

Evan beams when he sees Lenny holding his old journal. AGE 7.

LENNY

What do you need it for? I don't get you lately.

EVAN

Duly noted. Now I'm gonna ask you for one last favor.

LENNY

What?

EVAN

Shhh. I need to concentrate on the blockbuster if I'm gonna destroy it.

LENNY

(concerned)

Destroy it?

EVAN

If I hadn't blown my arms off, Mom never woulda started smoking in the first place. Now shhhh.

Lenny, utterly baffled, sits back in silence and watches Evan begin reading his journal to himself for a beat.

ON EVAN

As new sounds ECHO BACKWARD. There's a --

SHIMMER!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. ANDREA'S HOUSE - KITCHEN - MORNING - 1989

Evan comes to in his childhood kitchen. He is only seven-years old. He coughs up Lucky Charms that have "magically" appeared in his mouth. On a journal before him is the recently written passage:

JOURNAL ENTRY

Today Mommy is taking me to play with Kayley and Tommy. I will mete there father and see what a real dad is like.

Andrea is nowhere in sight. Evan springs to his feet and flexes his real hands triumphantly.

EVAN

Yes. Now how do I destroy the blockbuster?

He rummages through the utensil drawer and pulls out a large butcher knife and grabs it. He tucks it into his sock but it won't fit. He's still debating what to do when:

ANDREA WALKS IN

And is startled by the unexpected sight of Evan holding a huge knife.

Evan sees her but remains expressionless. Andrea's face blanches.

ANDREA

Evan? What are you doing with that knife?

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - NIGHT - 2002

Evan comes to to find Lenny still staring at him. Waiting for something big to happen.

EVAN

Well, that didn't work...

Evan flips a single page of his journal and tries again. He reads to himself, then relaxes his head --

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. MILLER'S BASEMENT - DAY - 1989

Evan, seven again, stands in the basement dressed in his Robin Hood costume as Mr. Miller prepares for the sex scene.

MR. MILLER

Now in this part of the story, Robin Hood just married Maid Marian and they have to kiss and stuff like grown-ups do. Kayleigh giggles. There seems to be a new glint of intelligence in Evan's eyes as he adjusts to his new surroundings.

EVAN

Wait! I need my belt!

Mr. Miller is puzzled, but watches Evan SKIP to the fireplace.

EVAN

(overly childlike)

Loo loo, skip to my loo. Loo loo, skip to my loo.

Mr. Miller puts his eye back to the viewfinder as Evan quickly finds Mr. Miller's old army thermos in the bottom drawer of the dresser, opens it and shakes out the blockbuster.

EVAN

Loo, loo, skip to my loo.

He tries to crack it with his own hands, but his seven-year old body is too weak.

MR. MILLER

Hey kid, don't bother with the belt.
Mr. Miller finally turns around and sees Evan banging the blockbuster on the table. Shock registers in Mr. Miller's eyes and he takes a step towards Evan.

EVAN

Back off, fuckbag!
Mr. Miller freezes on that, and Evan smiles at him.

EVAN

Amazing. That word never fails to make an impression with you...
Mr. Miller takes a slow, non-threatening step toward Evan.

MR. MILLER

Easy does it, Evan! Don't be a bad boy or I'll tell mommy you were naughty.

EVAN

And I'll tell the Child Protective Services about your kiddie porn endeavors. One step closer and I'll shove this up your ass!
Kayleigh's mouth hangs open with utter amazement at the scene. Tommy, hiding at the top of the stairs, slowly creeps down to get a better view.
Evan rummages in the bureau and finds the wooden "strike anywhere" matches used at thirteen to light his cigarettes.

MR. MILLER

That's dangerous! You could blow your hands off!

EVAN

Been there, done that.
Evan, standing near the fireplace, defiantly strikes the match with this thumb and lowers the flame to the short fuse.
Mr. Miller charges Evan just as the fuse is lit! Mr. Miller knocks the blockbuster from Evan's hand and it rolls towards the other side of the room, resting peacefully against the video camera.
Kayleigh's eyes are dazzled by the sparkling fuse and she bends down to pick it up --

MR. MILLER/TOMMY/EVAN

Kayleigh! NOOOOOoooooo!
EXT. MILLER'S HOUSE - DAY - 1989
BOOM! The blast is deafening.

INT. SUNNYVALE - EVAN'S ROOM - DAY - 2002
Evan, twenty, wakes up with a bloody nose.

EVAN

Oh God, Kayleigh...
Evan gets a new series of QUICK IMAGES and FLASHED FACES.

INT. FAMILY COURTROOM - DAY - 1989
Evan (now seven) is institutionalized before a judge.
INT. SUNNYVALE INSTITUTION - DAY - 1989-1994

Evan (seven through twelve) GROWS UP in an institution.
INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - DAY - 1989-1994
Evan undergoes years of therapy under Redfield's care.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. EVAN'S ROOM - SUNNYVALE - DAY - 2002
Evan lies in a room, same posters from college adorn the walls. Blood flows freely now.

EVAN
(sobbing uncontrollably)
Kayleigh...no! You can't die again! I won't let this happen. I won't!
Evan fights off the pain and looks under his bed for something.

EVAN
Where are they?!
His journals are missing! He runs from the room.
INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - DAY
Evan runs into Dr. Redfield's office just as another patient is leaving.

DR. REDFIELD
Hey, Evan. What's the big rush? We don't meet for another hour.

EVAN
Where are my goddman books?
DR. REDFIELD
Books?

EVAN
My journals! Where are they?
The doctor looks heartbroken, as if Evan has had a relapse.

DR. REDFIELD
It kills me to have to go through this again. There are no journals. There never were. It's part of this fantasy world your mind created to cope with the guilt of killing...
Evan looks stunned. Refusing to believe it.

DR. REDFIELD
Think Evan. You've invented a disease that doesn't exist. Alternate universes with colleges, prisons, paraplegia...

EVAN
But I...I need those books.

DR. REDFIELD
You remind me of your father. He always screamed for a photo album even though he never had one.

EVAN Photos?
Evan's eyes roll back and he collapses lifelessly to the floor.
INT. SUNNYVALE LABORATORY - DAY
Evan lies on a platform and gets another series of CAT-scans.

INT. EVAN'S ROOM - NIGHT

Evan, no longer incapacitated, stares out the window into the darkness. Alone. Trapped. Hopeless.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - DAY

Later that day, Dr. Redfield posts the new CAT-scan slides on the light box and shudders when he sees the results. Andrea looks on anxiously.

DR. REDFIELD

Jesus, no.

Andrea, biting her nails, is unable to conceal her fear.

ANDREA

No dances, just tell me.

DR. REDFIELD

(devastated)

The hemorrhaging...the neural damage is irreparable. I'm frankly surprised he still has use of his motor functions.

Andrea begins to break down in tears. Evan secretly listens in from the hallway. His gaunt face looks deep in thought. He takes a breath and enters the lab, making sure not to look directly at his weeping mother.

EVAN

Hey, Mom, didja remember to bring those goofy old home movies we used to make?

Andrea wipes tears away, nodding in advance.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S CORRIDOR - NIGHT

Evan sees no one is watching him in the institution corridor as he throws his weight into the door of the doctor's office, breaking it open.

Sporadically, severe VIBRATIONS invade Evan's environment, threatening to distract him from his mission.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - NIGHT

Evan enters the office and tears the file cabinets apart, looking for something. His nose bleeds profusely and he repeatedly wipes the blood off his face with irritation.

Evan sees a cardboard marked TREBORN, E. Grabs it and hides under the doctor's desk.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S CORRIDOR - CONTINUOUS FLASHLIGHT BEAMS stab through the darkened corridor hunting for him. An ALARM SOUNDS. GUARDS are shouting.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - CONTINUOUS

Evan, under the doctor's desk, grabs some paper and begins writing in shorthand.

EVAN

If anyone finds this, then I guess my plan didn't work and I'm already dead.

Again, the world flutters as if it were attached to a paint-shaker. He takes a deep breath.

EVAN

But I I can just go back to the beginning of all this, I might be able to save her.

Fatigue overwhelms him, but he continues writing...
INT. DR. REDFIELD'S CORRIDOR - CONTINUOUS
Dr. Redfield catches up with the rest of the guards.

DR. REDFIELD

He's not in his room. Search the grounds.

INT. DR. REDFIELD'S OFFICE - CONTINUOUS
The cardboard box is overturned. Evan finishes threading a SUPER-8 film projector and turns it on.
Careful not to let any light spill against the wall,
Evan projects it at the underside of the desk.
We see familiar home movie footage from his childhood:
Lenny, 5, has a birthday party. Kayleigh is there.
ANGLE ON EVAN'S EYES
Getting lost in the memory.
CHAOTIC NOISES of CHILDREN'S PARTY bleed into Evan's reality. The world SHUDDERS UNCONTROLLABLY.

EXT. LENNY'S BACKYARD - DAY - 1987
Evan, 5, comes to at a birthday party. He's unexpectedly gently prodded forward by Andrea.

ANDREA

Go on, Evan. Introduce yourself.
Evan slowly approaches Kayleigh, only five. She smiles bashfully at him. An old memory comes back to him.

KAYLEIGH (V.O.)

When my folks split, they gave me and
Tommy a choice who we wanted to live with. I couldn't stand my dad, but I knew if I lived with my mom, I'd never see you again...

Evan slowly looks around the yard, taking in the reality of this distant memory. He even inhales the aroma of the place. Savoring the moment. He locks eyes with Kayleigh.

ANDREA (O.S.)

He's not usually this shy.
It's time. Evan leans over to Kayleigh as if he's about to kiss her. Then whispers in her ear:

EVAN

I hate you. If you ever come near me again, I'll kill you and your whole family.

Kayleigh reacts predictably. Bursting into tears and runs into Kayleigh's mother's arms.

KAYLEIGH'S MOTHER What did you say to her? What happened?!

Evan ignores them. He can't take his eyes off
Kayleigh.

EVAN

Goodbye.
His eyes well up.

FLASH!
SMASH CUT
TO:

INT. EVAN'S DORM - DAY - 2002

Evan wakes up with a bloody nose. He grabs a pillow and covers his head with it as a flood of memories seizes him.

Lenny (looking fit) grabs a towel from atop an award-winning flatworms project and hands it to Evan.

LENNY (O.S.)

You alright? Should I call the doctor?

Evan groans and shakes his head "no". He rides out the pain like a seasoned pro. When it finally subsides, he lowers the pillow and smiles feebly.

EVAN

I'll think I'll be alright this time.

(a new hope)

I really do.

Lenny nods, still concerned.

INT. COLLEGE - INCINERATOR ROOM - LATER

Evan opens the door to a concrete room with a large furnace. He and Lenny carry cardboard boxes.

LENNY

You sure about this?

Evan nods. They silently dump tons of journals into the fire. Evan steps outside and returns with a box of home movies, photo albums, old report cards, etc. In they go.

CLOSE ON

Burning journals.

DISSOLVE

EXT. CITY STREET - DAY - 2010

Evan, a suit now, walks down a city street cradling a cell phone to his ear.

TITLE CARD: Years Later

EVAN

(into phone)

Yeah, Ma. I'm running a little late for lunch. One of my patients had a breakdown. Anyway, order some soup in the meantime. See ya soon.

As he clicks off, an attractive woman wearing a power suit approaches from the other direction. Evan has to look closely, but it's Kayleigh. A mature woman, now. He stumbles slightly, caught off guard. As she passes, her eyes linger on his a little longer than necessary, but there's no recognition. Evan watches her continue past him and down the sidewalk.

After a hesitant beat, he takes a breath, turns around and follows her.

INT PAPAL APARTMENT DAY

CLOSE ON an ornate ring. It's intricately carved with a seal, an image of St. Peter casting a net. The ring is carried on a satin pillow through a darkened, regal apartment. In the distance, BELLS ARE TOLLING -- the slow, solemn tones that announce a death.

A dozen men in scarlet cassocks, ROMAN CATHOLIC CARDINALS, bend down to inspect the ring, nodding in affirmation, part of an ancient ritual.

A younger man (the CAMERLENGO) in a black cassock takes a silver knife and scratches the ring's seal twice, once horizontally and once vertically, in the sign of the cross.

Now the ring is placed on a lead block. The Camerlengo raises a silver mallet and SMASHES it down, shattering the ring into a thousand tiny pieces.

As the Cardinals confirm to their satisfaction that the ring has been destroyed, the HUSHED VOICE of a NEWS REPORTER comes over the image.

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA DAY

In St. Peter's Basilica, we move in toward an empty chair, a chair so magnificent it can only be called a throne.

SCIENTISTS and TECHNICIANS read off checklists in a variety of languages, none of them English so far. The place is a hive of activity and sound; cooling water WHOOSHES through pipes, the static HUM of high levels of current floats in the air.

of the giant monitor screens in the detector room at CERN, all of which are lit up with similar arrays.

Something has happened and there's an enormous amount of excitement in the room. More Scientists and Technicians pour in, take their seats at consoles, CONFER excitedly. A computerized voice speaks English over a loudspeaker:

It repeats the message in Italian, German, French, and Chinese.

There are a dozen columns of polished steel about three feet tall, each of which supports a transparent canister the size of a tennis ball can. They appear empty.

LEONARDO BENTIVOGLIO, sixtyish, black pants and a short-sleeve black shirt, is at work at a command console in the center of the room. (They speak to each other in Italian, subtitled.)

VITTORIA

Power should be back five by five.

LEONARDO

It is, extraction's already started.

He turns around, and we thought his black pants and shirt looked familiar -- now we see his Roman collar and realize this physicist is also a priest.

We're in God's hands now.

While Leonardo and Vittoria work at the console, we move slowly across the room toward those strange vertical pillars.

The College of Cardinals will lock itself in the Sistine Chapel for Conclave literally, the word means "with key" -- the process by which the Church chooses a new leader for the world's one billion Catholics.

We move onto the altar, close enough to Mortati to get a good look at him. He's in his late seventies, grave, eyes closed in religious fervor as he consecrates the communion host.

INT ANTIMATTER LAB DAY

In the lab, we're still moving, close to one of the pillars and to the transparent tube on top of it. The tube isn't empty, as we first thought, there's something suspended in the middle of it, a drop, round and white, floating in mid-air.

INT HARVARD COLLEGE - NATATORIUM DAWN

The bottom of a swimming pool. A lithe figure SLASHES like a knife through the water, doing laps.

The swimmer is the only one in the pool, but still pushes like he's got someone to beat. His strokes echo off vacant bleachers in an oldish college natatorium.

As he reaches the end of the pool, he sees a murky figure through the water. The swimmer stops, pulls off his goggles.

ROBERT LANGDON is fiftyish, but looks ten years younger, must have something to do with two hundred laps at dawn every day.

CLAUDIO VINCENZO is heavier, dressed in a sport jacket and slacks, looks exhausted. He speaks with an Italian accent.

VINCENZO

Professor Langdon?

LANGDON

Swim might help your jet lag.

VINCENZO

I beg your pardon?

Langdon gets out and pulls a towel off a nearby bench.

LANGDON

(GESTURING)

Bags under your eyes, up at five a.m., Italian accent... Do I hear Naples in those Rs?

VINCENZO

(smiles, shows an ID)
Claudio Vincenzo, Corpo della
Gendarmeria Vaticano.

LANGDON

Vatican Police? I was expecting another letter.
(Vincenzo looks confused)
My request for access to the Archives?

Vincenzo has no idea what he's talking about.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Shouldn't you be in Rome? Busy time for you guys.

VINCENZO

In fact I was in New York, on vacation. I got a call in the middle of the night --- find Robert Langdon. A matter of great urgency.

LANGDON

Urgent Vatican business, involving me?
I doubt that.

He heads for the locker room. Vincenzo calls after him.

VINCENZO

They said to show you this.

Langdon turns back. Vincenzo's holding a single sheet of paper in his right hand. Langdon, curious, makes his way back to him.
Takes the paper ---

--- and, it is safe to say, feels the earth give way beneath his feet. He looks up, eyes wide, and mutters a single word:

LANGDON

lluminati?

CUT TO:

EXT HARVARD CAMPUS DAWN

As the sun comes up, Langdon and Vincenzo leave the natatorium.

VINCENZO

Yes, of course, but it couldn't be the llluminati as we knew them, they disappeared a hundred years ago.

LANGDON

Did they? Look at the paper.

VINCENZO

I've seen it.

LANGDON

Look again.

Vincenzo looks at it. The word llluminati is written in ornate script. Vincenzo looks back up --- so?

LANGDON (cont'd)

Turn it upside down.

Vincenzo does. Incredibly, the word reads exactly the same way upside down.

LANGDON (cont'd)

It's called an ambigram, the same backwards and forwards. That's common in a symbol, like a Jewish star, or yin-yang, or a swastika, but this is a word. People have searched for the llluminati ambigrammatic symbol for four centuries, modern symbologists even tried to create it, but nobody could pull it off, not even by computer. Most had concluded it was a myth. I wrote a book about it.

(REALIZING)

Which is why you're here, isn't it?

VINCENZO

"The Art of the llluminati," by Robert Langdon.

CUT TO:INT LANGDON'S APARTMENT DAY

A hand skims along a bookcase and stops at that very title, a heavy academic tome. Langdon pulls it out and drops it on the desk in his apartment with a THUD.

(The apartment is cluttered with esoterica, the home of a man whose taste in furnishings was very fashionable about four hundred years ago. A single man -- no kid stuff, no cats.)

Langdon flips the book open to an illustrated section in the middle, filled with renderings of previous attempts to create the symbol he now holds in his hand.

9.LANGDON

Incredible. Either someone just figured out how to make this, or they found it. Recently. Which would mean the llluminati have returned.

(looks at Vincenzo)

An ancient brotherhood, enemies of the church, surfacing just after the death of a Pope? I'd pull you off vacation too.

VINCENZO

It's worse than just that. Four cardinals were kidnapped from their quarters inside the Vatican some time between three and five a.m. this morning. Shortly afterward, the Office of the Swiss Guard received that document, along with the threat that the Cardinals will be publicly executed, one per hour, starting at seven p.m. tonight, in Rome.

LANGDON

(mind racing ahead)
Conclave?

VINCENZO

Was to begin today. We have postponed its start for a few hours, a story of illness, there are no suspicions. Yet.

LANGDON

What do you want from me?

VINCENZO

The perpetrators of this heinous act sent that -- ambigram, you say? -- as a provocation, a taunt. But it may also be their undoing. If you can help us learn their identity, perhaps we can stop them.

LANGDON

Why me?

VINCENZO

Your expertise. Your erudition. And your involvement with recent Church -- shall we say "mysteries?"

10.

LANGDON

I wasn't under the impression that episode had endeared me to the Vatican.

VINCENZO

Oh, it didn't. But it made you -- what is the word?

(Italian pronunciation)

Formidable. Formidable. A plane is standing by twenty minutes from here. Will you come with me?

Langdon doesn't move, just stares at the ambigram, still amazed.

VINCENZO (cont'd)

Professor Langdon, you have spent ten years of your academic life searching for the very symbol you now hold in your hand. And the madman who created it, or who knows the secrets of its origin-- that person is in Rome.

(checks his watch)

How much longer must we pretend you have not already decided to come?

INT HELICOPTER DAY

The papal helicopter is plush inside, and nearly silent. A very pricey piece of equipment. Vincenzo stares out the window.

VINCENZO

If the Illuminati have returned and are in Rome, we will hunt them down and kill them.

Langdon, seated across from him, stifles a laugh.

LANGDON

Spoken like a Roman Catholic.

Vincenzo looks at him sharply.

11.

LANGDON (cont'd)

The Illuminati didn't become violent anti-Papists until the 17th century.
Initially, they were physicists, mathematicians, astronomers. Their name means "the Enlightened Ones." In the 1500s, they started meeting secretly to share their concerns about the church's inaccurate teachings.
They were dedicated to the quest for scientific truth. And for that, the church -- to use your words -- hunted them down and killed them. Drove them underground.

Langdon turns and looks out the front window of the helicopter as, up ahead, the marble facade of St. Peter's Basilica blazes like fire in the afternoon sun.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Into a secret society.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE DAY

Pulling away from the helicopter, we see a coat of arms emblazoned on its side -- two skeleton keys crossing a shield and papal crown.
The helicopter SWOOPS over St. Peter's Square, filled with more tourists than usual, due to the impending start of Conclave.

We drift toward a structure on the far side of the Square, closer to its huge, ornate windows. As we approach, large swaths of black drop down, draping over the windows, closing off our view.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL DAY

Inside, WORKERS continue to drape large bolts of black velvet over the windows, sealing this room off from outside. Pulling back, we realize it's not just any room --- --- it's the Sistine Chapel. As the last window is blackened, the room is bathed in a profound darkness lit only by candles.

ONE HUNDRED SIXTY-ONE MEN in red robes are gathered inside the Chapel, the College of Cardinals. They talk in a polyglot of languages, milling about the place, conferring, catching up on old friendships.

Cardinal Mortati, the Dean of the College who led the Pope's elegy mass, is the type of man one crosses a room to see, not the other

MORTATI

They are the four leading candidates. If they're not present, they're not eligible. There will be no consensus without them, wid are we to vote for?

Father Simeon gives him a look -- perhaps you?

MORTATI (cont'd)

It is as much a sin to offer flattery to accept it.

FR. SIMEON

CUT TO:

EXT VATICAN - STREET DAY

On the ground now and behind Vatican walls, Langdon and Vincenzo walk briskly around a corner and are met by ERNESTO OLIVETTI, a solidly-built man in his late thirties.

OLIVETTI

Professor Langdon, welcome to Vatican City. Ernesto Olivetti, Inspector Generale of the Vatican Police Force.

He takes Langdon by the arm and gestures down a narrow passageway.

OLIVETTI (cont'd)

This way, please, we'll meet in the headquarters of the Swiss Guard.

LANGDON

I assumed you were Swiss Guard.

OLIVETTI

No. The Gendarmerie is responsible for everything inside the Vatican walls, with the exception of the security of His Holiness and the Apostolic Palace. That is Swiss Guard. The Commandante Generale of the Roman Carabinieri has joined us as well, in an advisory capacity, and the Guardia Nazionale have sent a representative.

LANGDON

(CONFUSED)

So jurisdictionally, this is-

OLIVETTI

A God damn nightmare.

14.

They turn a corner and approach a squat stone building labeled "Offizia della Guardia Svizzera."

TWO SWISS GUARDSMEN are standing outside the entrance to the building. They're somewhat comically dressed in puffy tunics vertically striped in brilliant blue and gold, with matching pantaloons and spats, topped by a black beret.

Langdon can't completely hide a smile. Olivetti notices. The Guards raise their eight-foot swords, allowing the three of them to enter the building.

INT SWISS GUARD OFFICES - CORRIDOR DAY

The interior of the Swiss Guard offices is ornate and filled with artwork, like every other Vatican building. As they walk, Langdon studies the row of statues of male nudes that lines both sides of the hallway, all wearing fig leaves.

LANGDON

The Great Castration.

OLIVETTI

I beg your pardon?

LANGDON

1857. Pius IX felt the male form might inspire lust, so he got a hammer and chisel and unmanned two hundred statues. These plaster fig leaves were added later.

Olivetti stops abruptly, outside a heavy steel door with a security keyguard beside it.

OLIVETTI

Are you anti-Catholic, Professor Langdon?

LANGDON

Me? No, I'm anti-vandalism.

OLIVETTI

I urge you to guard your tone in there. The Swiss Guard is a calling, not a profession, and it encourages a certain -- zealotry. Commander Rocher, the head of the Guard, is a deeply spiritual man, and he was close to the late Pope. Understood?

LANGDON

(SINCERE)

I just hope I can help.

15.

OLIVETTI

So do I. You were my idea.

He enters a five-digit number on the keypad and the steel doors slide open.

INT SWISS GUARD HEADQUARTERS DAY

The headquarters of the Swiss Guard is in a lushly adorned Renaissance library crammed with sophisticated communications and surveillance equipment. It's crowded, Swiss Guard (in suits and ties, the pantaloons are more for show), uniformed Carabinieri, and Vatican Police crammed around different stations, some working together, others arguing, mostly in Italian.

OLIVETTI

Wait here.

He crosses the room to a tall, fair-haired man around sixty, weathered like steel -- maybe "tempered" is the better word.

While they confer, Langdon notices a woman to his left. We recognize Vittoria Vetra, the physicist we saw at CERN.

She catches Langdon's eye, forces a grim smile, recognizes they're both strangers here. Olivetti comes back with COMMANDER ROCHER, the tall man, very much in charge. He speaks with a French/Swiss ACCENT.

ROCHER

(to Vittoria)

Ms. Vetra? I'm Commander Rocher, Commandante Principale of the Swiss Guard. Thank you for coming. And Professor Langdon?

LANGDON

That's right. Rocher looks him up and down, so, you're Langdon.

ROCHER

Thank God, the symbolologist is here. Ms. Vetra, this way, please.

He leads Vittoria across the room, to a surveillance monitor. Langdon, puzzled by the cold shoulder, looks at Olivetti, who leans in.

OLIVETTI

There's been a development. We received another threat from the kidnapper.

16.

Across the room, they hear Vittoria GASP. Olivetti goes to join them, nodding to Langdon to follow.

AT THE MONITOR,

Langdon and Olivetti join Rocher and Vittoria and stare at the image on a video monitor -- it's a familiar-looking canister, in which a metallic drop of liquid shimmers in the middle, suspended. The acronym CERN is stenciled up its side. On its base is an LED display, counting down from about six hours.

At the top of the monitor flashes superimposed text -- LIVE FEED, CAMERA #86.

VITTORIA

(CONTINUING)

-- canister was stolen from our lab around midnight last night. The intruder killed my research partner, Leonardo Bentivoglio, and mutilated him in order to bypass security.

They look at her, don't quite see the connection.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

We use retinal scanners.
(they still don't get it)
They cut out his eyes.

They cringe.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

That canister contains an extremely combustible substance called antimatter. We need to locate it immediately or evacuate Vatican City.

ROCHER

I'm quite familiar with incendiaries, Ms. Vetra. I haven't heard of antimatter.

VITTORIA

It's new, energy research technology. It uses a reverse polarity vacuum to filter out anti-matter positrons generated in particle accelerations in the Large Hadron Collider at CERN.

They look at her blankly. She points at the screen, 17.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

The anti-matter is suspended, there, in an airtight nanocomposite shell with electromagnets at each end. But if it were to fall out of suspension and come into contact with matter -- say, the bottom of the canister -- the two opposing forces will annihilate one another. Violently.

ROCHER

And what might cause it to fall out of suspension?

VITTORIA

The battery going dead. Which it will.

(looks at the screen)

In six hours and eleven minutes.

Silence for a moment.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

Where is that camera? Number eighty-six?

OLIVETTI

It's wireless. It too was stolen. That could be anywhere inside the Vatican walls.

VITTORIA

You've got to find it.

ROCHER

We're a bit preoccupied with four missing cardinals at the moment.

VITTORIA

You don't understand. An annihilation is a cataclysmic event. It would be a blinding explosion, equivalent to about five megatons. The blast radius alone would be --

Softly, Langdon speaks up from behind her.

LANGDON

"Vatican City will be consumed by light."

A few voices fall still. They turn and look at him.

18.

ROCHER

Those are the exact words the kidnapper used.

INT ROCHER'S OFFICE DAY

A few moments later, they're crowded around the communications console at Rocher's desk, where a dimly-lit video recording is playing back on a computer screen. (The office is behind a glass wall to one side of the headquarters.)

The images on the recording are of FOUR OLDER MEN, some in their sixties, the others in their seventies, filmed in dim light behind bars in a dank, dungeon-like space.

A lightly accented VOICE speaks from behind the camera.

VOICE (O.S.)

We will destroy your four pillars...
brand your preferiti and sacrifice them on the altars of science... and then bring your church down upon you.
Vatican City will be consumed by light.

LANGDON

It's an ancient llluminati threat.
(Rocher pauses the recording)
The destruction of Vatican City through light. The four pillars -- he probably means the kidnapped cardinals. You didn't mention they were the preferiti.
(to Vittoria)
The favorites to be chosen as the new Pope. Play it again.

VOICE (O.S.)

We will destroy your four pillars...
brand your preferiti and sacrifice them on the altars of science...

LANGDON

Stop it there.

Rocher does

LANGDON (cont'd)

"Brand" them, another llluminati legend, this one says there are a set of five brands, each one an ambigram.
(MORE)

19.LANGDON (cont'd)

The first four are the fundamental elements of science -- earth, air, fire, water. The fifth -- is a mystery. Maybe it's this.

He pulls the "llluminati" ambigram from his pocket.

ROCHER

He said they'd be killed publicly. In churches.

LANGDON

(nods, not surprised)
Revenge for La Purga.

ROCHER

La Purga?

LANGDON

Don't you guys read your own history?
1668. The church kidnapped four llluminati scientists and branded their chests with the symbol of the cross. To "purge their sins."
Murdered them and left their bodies in the street as a warning to others to stop questioning church rulings on scientific matters. It was after La Purga that a darker, more violent llluminati emerged. This sounds like retribution.
(to Rocher)
Is there any more?

Rocher hits play again.

VOICE (O.S.)

.... and then bring your church down upon you. Vatican City will be consumed by light...

While listening this time, Langdon notices a darkened video monitor, inlaid at an angle on Rocher's desk. It faces away from the outer office, and instead of an on/off switch, there is an oddly-shaped keyhole.

VOICE (O.S.) (cont'd)

A shining star at the end of the Path of Illumination.

Langdon looks up sharply.

20.LANGDON

The Path of Illumination?

Rocher stops the video.

LANGDON (cont'd)

I need to get into the Vatican Archives.

Rocher shakes his head, looks at Olivetti harshly, is embarrassed.

OLIVETTI

Professor, this is not the appropriate moment to-

ROCHER

Your petition has been denied seven times, Mr. Langdon.

LANGDON

This has nothing to do with that,

(FAST)

The Path of Illumination is an ancient trail through Rome that leads to the Church of the Illumination, a secret place where Illuminati members could meet in safety. If I can find the Segno, the sign that marks the start of the Path, I'm willing to bet the four churches along it are where he intends to murder your cardinals. If we can get to one of them before he does, we can stop it. But to find the start of the path, I need to get into the Archives.

ROCHER

Even if I wanted to help you, access is only by written decree of the curator and the Board of Vatican Librarians.

LANGDON

Or by papal mandate.

ROCHER

Yes. But as you've no doubt heard, the Holy Father is-

LANGDON

What about Il Camerlengo? Let me talk to him.

21.

ROCHER

The Camerlengo? He's just a priest here, the former Pope's Chamberlain.

LANGDON

Doesn't the power of the Holy See rest with him during tempe sede vacante?

They just stare at him. Shit, this guy's good. Langdon checks his watch, getting irritated.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Hey, fellas --- you called me.

CUT TO:

INT PAPAL OFFICES DAY

A spectacular view of St. Peter's Square, through the windows of the Papal offices. Moving down, we find a figure dressed in a simple black cassock, his back to us, staring out at the crowd. FATHER SEBASTIAN GUTIEREZ, the Camerlengo, speaks with a soft Spanish accent.

CAMERLENGO

His Holiness once told me that a Pope is a man torn between two worlds... the real world and the divine.

Assembled in the grand office are Langdon, Rocher, Olivetti, and Vittoria. The Camerlengo's back is still turned.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

He warned that any church that ignored reality would not survive to enjoy the divine.

He turns around. He's younger than we thought, in his mid-thirties, deep, dark eyes. The kind of priest who often inspires, before the years of dogma catch up with him.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

It seems the real world is upon us tonight.

(to Langdon)

I'm familiar with Illuminati lore, and the legend of the brandings. La Purga is a dark stain on the church's history; I'm not surprised this ghost has come back to haunt us.

22.

He sits behind the massive desk, and if he seemed young before, he seems like a child now, overcome by the position he's in. But when he speaks to Rocher, he's in command.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

Commandante, have you begun a search for this explosive device?

ROCHER

Of course, but it could be anywhere, and the safety of the cardinals is my primary concern at the moment.

CAMERLENGO

The Sistine Chapel is a fortress, as long as the cardinals are in conclave, your security concerns are at a minimum. Devote as much of your resources as possible to a search for-

ROCHER

Signore, if you're about to suggest we make a naked-eye search of all of Vatican City, I must-

CAMERLENGO

(SHARPLY)

Commander. Though I am not His Holiness, when you address me, you are addressing this office. Do you understand?

ROCHER

Yes, Padre,

CAMERLENGO

Good. Now -- you said the image on screen was illuminated by artificial light. May I suggest methodically cutting the power to various sections of the City. When the image on your screen goes dark, you'll have a more specific idea of the device's location.

Rocher looks at Olivetti -- gotta admit, that's a pretty damn good idea.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

Ms. Vetra. Besides yourself and your research partner, who knew about your antimatter project?

23.

VITTORIA

Only the director of CERN. But Leonardo kept detailed journals; if he told anyone else about what we were doing, he would have made a note of it.

CAMERLENGO

(PAUSE)

Do you have these journals?

VITTORIA

I can have them flown here from Geneva in an hour.

He pauses, thinking, then turns the phone on his desk to face her.
While she picks it up to dial, the Camerlengo comes around his desk to speak privately to Langdon.

CAMERLENGO

Mr. Langdon. You're correct that I may grant you access to the Archives.

LANGDON

Thank you, Padre.

CAMERLENGO

I said you're correct that I may, not that I will. Christianity's most sacred codices are in that archive. Given your recent entanglement with the church -- I need to ask you a question first.

Langdon looks at him -- fire away.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

Do you believe in God, sir?

LANGDON

(DELICATELY)

Father, I simply believe that religions can often-

CAMERLENGO

I didn't ask if you believe what man says about God, I asked if you believe in God.

LANGDON

I'm an academic. My mind tells me I will never understand God.

24.

CAMERLENGO

And your heart?

LANGDON

Tells me I'm not meant to.

The Camerlengo looks at him -- that's not quite good enough.

LANGDON (cont'd)

I believe that faith is a gift, which I have not been fortunate enough to receive.

The Camerlengo looks at him for a long moment. Pretty damn good answer. He puts a hand on Langdon's shoulder and leans in.

CAMERLENGO

Be delicate with our treasures.

CUT TO:

EXT APOSTOLIC PALACE DAY

The back doors of the Apostolic Palace BANG open and Langdon is ushered out (fast) by Olivetti, the head of the Vatican Police.

OLIVETTI

The archives are this way.

They turn down a narrow passageway. A VOICE calls from behind them.

VITTORIA (O.S.)

Professor Langdon!

Vittoria catches up to them.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

If this path really leads to the Church of Illumination, that may be where they've hidden the antimatter.

LANGDON

"A shining star at the end of the Path." My thoughts exactly.

OLIVETTI

(to Vittoria)

If we find this bomb, can you deactivate it?

25.

VITTORIA

No, but I can change its battery, as long as it has more than five minutes of life. That would give us another twenty-four hours to get it back to CERN.

Olivetti nods to her, come on along. They walk again, holds a hand out to Langdon.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

Vittoria Vetra. Are you really a symbologist, or was he mocking you?

LANGDON

Both. You're a physicist?

VITTORIA

(NODS)

Bio-entanglement physics.
Interconnectivity of life systems.

LANGDON

Okay.

VITTORIA

What are we looking for in the archives?

LANGDON

A little book written by Galileo.

VITTORIA

Galileo was Illuminati?

LANGDON

And a devout Catholic. He thought science and religion weren't enemies, but two different languages telling the same story. He wanted like minds to be able to find the Church of Illumination, but he couldn't exactly advertise its location, so he created a coded path. An unknown Illuminati master sculpted four statues, each a tribute to one of the four fundamental elements -- earth, air, fire, water -- and put them out in public, in churches throughout Rome. Each statue held a clue, pointing to the next. And at the end of the trail was the Church of Illumination.

26.

Angels & Demons Script at IMSDb.

Vincenzo, leading them, turns up Via Sentinel and starts up the hill toward the Archives. They follow, quickly.

OLIVETTI

What makes you think he's going to murder the cardinals in the churches?

LANGDON

The Illuminati called those four churches by a special name -- L'Altare di scienza. The altars of science.

VITTORIA

(making the CONNECTION)

"Sacrifice them on the altars of science," he said.

Langdon stops in his tracks.

LANGDON

Oh. Oh, wow.

He's staring up at the impressive facade of the Vatican Archives. He takes a deep breath, then steps forward to enter. But Vincenzo doesn't follow. Langdon looks at him.

LANGDON (cont'd)

We go in alone?

OLIVETTI

Vatican Police aren't allowed access to the archives, only Swiss Guard. Lt. Chartrand will meet you inside. I'll be here when you're done.

Langdon turns back to the Archives with a look of deep contentment -- he's wanted in here for a long, long time.

And steps through the double doors.

CUT TO:

INT APOSTOLIC PALACE DAY

The Camerlengo walks briskly through the hallways of the Apostolic Palace, deep in thought. He reaches the top of the Royal Staircase, and can hear the RUMBLING of activity in the Sistine Chapel below.

Looking down the stairs, he sees the doorway open, and the gathering of cardinals inside. As he reaches the base of the stairs, Cardinal Mortati, who has been summoned, steps outside to meet him, flanked by his aide, Father Simeon.

27.

Vincenzo, leading them, turns up Via Sentinel and starts up the hill toward the Archives. They follow, quickly.

They speak in English, their common language.

CAMERLENGO

You've been informed of the new situation?

MORTATI

(NODS)

May God's mercy be upon us.

CAMERLENGO

And the other cardinals?

MORTATI

Await your word.

The Camerlengo thinks, feels the weight of this decision on his young shoulders.

CAMERLENGO

May I ask your guidance, Padre?

MORTATI

My belief is we should proceed with the sealing of conclave.

CAMERLENGO

At this hour? That would be highly unorthodox.

MORTATI

And yet within church law. It's in my power, I've been chosen Great Elector.

CAMERLENGO

The cruelest honor in Christendom.

MORTATI

The only ambitions I have are for my church. St. Peter's church, which is under attack at its most vulnerable moment. This is not a coincidence. Is it possible our enemies hope to distract us from our sacred task?

CAMERLENGO

The church will not fall in a day. We may be wise to consider evacuation.

28.

MORTATI

That is exactly what they want, publicity and panic. We must not give them oxygen for the media fire.

CAMERLENGO

What of the safety of the cardinals?

MORTATI

Surely there is not an elector present who values his physical being more than the unbroken leadership of the Holy See.

CAMERLENGO

And the people in St. Peter's Square?

MORTATI

They care as deeply about their church as we do. Their faith will sustain them.

CAMERLENGO

But if their faith does not protect them from an explosion?

MORTATI

We're all bound for heaven eventually, are we not?

CAMERLENGO

Spoken like one who has enjoyed the blessings of a long and full life.

Mortati bristles at the thinly-veiled insult.

MORTATI

Signore, do not confuse the power of the office you temporarily hold with your true place here in the Vatican. You were a favorite of His Holiness, but His Holiness is with his Father now.

CAMERLENGO

Mea culpa.

Satisfied, Mortati looks back over his shoulder, at the anxious faces in the Chapel. Then turns back to the Camerlengo.

MORTATI

Seal the doors.

29.

With a heavy THUD, the huge doors close and bolts SLAM into place. An ancient key GRINDS in an ornate lock, two heavy chains RATTLE into place, FOUR SWISS GUARD take position in front of the doors and at that very moment --

INT VATICAN ARCHIVES DAY

-- two huge, modern glass doors WHOOSH open, revealing what looks like a 23rd century library. It's a massive underground space, like a darkened airplane hangar, with a dozen glass boxes evenly spaced throughout. They're lit up from within, each containing row upon row of bookshelves, neatly filled with books, papers, and arcana.

LT. CHARTRAND, a twenty-five year old member of the Swiss Guard (in a suit and earpiece, not the traditional garb), leads Langdon and Vittoria toward the glass enclosures.

CHARTRAND

(Swiss accent)

The chambers are hermetic vaults, oxygen is kept at lowest possible levels. It's a partial vacuum inside. More than ten minutes in the vault is not recommended without breathing apparatus.

He stops at one particular chamber and gestures to the sign on its door -- "Il Processo Galileano."

CHARTRAND (cont'd)

I'll be just outside the door.

Langdon starts toward the entrance to the vault, but Chartrand puts a hand on his chest, stopping him.

CHARTRAND (cont'd)

Watching you, Mr. Langdon.

Langdon looks at him. He's not popular around here.

INT GALILEO VAULT DAY

The electronic revolving door spins and admits Langdon to the interior of the vault. He takes a deep breath, holds it, and lets it out.

Vittoria follows shortly behind him, and she's unprepared -- the lack of oxygen hits her hard, she dizzies.

30.

LANGDON

Take a moment. If you feel double vision, double over.

VITTORIA

(bends over)
Feels like I'm... scuba diving... with the wrong mixture.

LANGDON

Plenty of time.

He checks his watch. It's 7:07.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Uh... actually, I take that back.

CUT TO:

INT A DARK SPACE DAY

In a dark space, a tea bag bobs delicately up and down in a cup of hot water. An elegant man in his forties, dressed in a casual suit, no tie, HUMS softly to himself as he steeps his tea. No idea of his name, but his suit is gray, so how about MR. GRAY.

The tea is on an old wooden table, being heated by a small can of sterno. While Mr. Gray bobs the tea bag, he stares at something to his right.

Money. A lot of it, in a number of different denominations, neatly segmented in a briefcase. And three passports, all different colors (and nationalities), neatly placed on top of it.

Satisfied, Mr. Gray CLICKS the briefcase shut and slides it under the table, tucking it up against the wall. He removes the cup from the heat, still bobbing the tea bag.

He walks, lit by candlelight that throws harsh shadows on strange walls. He heads down a very dark hallway, past a row of stonewalled cells, and within each is the dimly lit figure of the older men we saw on the videotape earlier -- the kidnapped cardinals.

He stops at the last cell, where the man, CARDINAL LAMASSE, looks up at him from the wooden bench he's sitting on.

MR. GRAY

You have no idea what you're missing.

LAMASSE

Conclave will go on without us. The voice of God will not be silenced.

31.

MR. GRAY

I was referring to my tea. Last chance, I'd be happy to make you a cup.

LAMASSE

May God forgive you for what you've done.

MR. GRAY

Father, if God has issues they won't be with what I've done -- (seems genuinely saddened)
-- but with what I'm about to do.

A MOMENT LATER,

Mr. Gray's hand takes the burning tin of sterno and tosses it into a fireplace, where the liquid fire consumes a pile of dry kindling. He picks up something else and places it in the heart of the flames.

A long-handled iron rod.

CUT TO:

INT VATICAN ARCHIVES DAY

Inside the archive, Vittoria is searching the lower shelves while Langdon, on a ladder, digs through folio bins higher up.

LANGDON

-- confiscated from the Netherlands by the Vatican shortly after Galileo's death. I've been petitioning to see it for almost ten years. Ever since I realized what was in it.

VITTORIA

What makes you so sure the Segno is there?

LANGDON

(while searching)

The number 503. I kept seeing it over and over in Illuminati letters, scribbled in the margins, or sometimes just signed that way, "503." It's a numerical clue, but to what? Five, of course, is the sacred Illuminati number -- the pentagram, Pythagoras, a dozen other examples in science -- but why three?

(MORE)

32.

LANGDON (cont'd)

It made no sense. And then I thought -- what if it were a Roman numeral?

VITTORIA

(THINKS)

D-I-I-I?

LANGDON

D3. Galileo's third text.
(ticking them off)
Dialogo. Discorsi.

His eyes light up as he pulls a slender volume out of a folio bin on one of the top shelves.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Diagramma.

A MOMENT LATER,

Langdon, now wearing white cotton gloves, sets the tiny manuscript on a viewing stand.

LANGDON

Diagramma della Verita. The Diagram of Truth.

VITTORIA

I know about Dialogo and Discorsi -- Galileo laid out his theories about the earth revolving around the sun, and the church forced him to recant.
But what was this?

LANGDON

This is where he got the word out. The truth, not what the Vatican forced him to write. Smuggled out of Rome and printed in Holland on sedge papyrus.
That way any scientists caught with a copy could simply drop it in water and the booklet would dissolve.

Carefully, he turns the first page.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Between its delicate nature and the Vatican burnings, it's said this is the only copy that remains.

(turns the second page)

(MORE)33.*LANGDON (cont'd)

And if I'm right the Segno should be hidden --

(and the third)

-- on page number --

(and the fourth)

-- five.

He stops. They study the page,

LANGDON (cont'd)

Latin. Can you --- ?

VITTORIA

A bit.

She reaches for the book, to pull it towards her, but Langdon
SLAPS her hand. He holds up his own, glove

LANGDON

Finger acids.

She rolls her eyes and leans in, studying the page. There are sketches on the page as well.

VITTORIA(READING)

Movement of the planets... elliptical orbits... heliocentricity...

Langdon's nervous. This doesn't sound right. Vittoria turns the page, turns it back.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

I'm sorry, I don't think there's anything that could be interpreted as a-

LANGDON

Do that again.

She turns the page, then turns it back. Noticing something in the deep crevice of the margin as the page moves, Langdon grabs a magnifying glass on the end of a long pole and swings it over.

There, in the print gutter, what looked like a smudge is revealed under the magnifier to be --

LANGDON (cont'd)

A line of text. In English.

(CONT'D)

34.

VITTORIA

English? Why English?

LANGDON

No one spoke it at the Vatican. It was considered polluted. Too free-thinking, the language of radicals like Shakespeare and Chaucer.

He rotates the book.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Another line.

He keeps rotating the book, finds two more tiny lines written at the very edges, barely visible to the naked eye.

LANGDON (cont'd)

"The path of light is laid, the sacred test..." I need a pen, we have to transcribe this.

VITTORIA

Sorry, Professor. No time.

Before Langdon can do anything to stop her, she RIPS the page from the text and shoves it in her pocket.

Langdon's jaw drops. He shoots a look over his shoulder at Lt. Chartrand, but the man's back is turned.

LANGDON

Ah, what the hell.

He SNAPS the magnifying glass off the end of its pole.

CUT TO:

EXT VATICAN ARCHIVES DAY

The doors SLAM on a Vatican police car and the tires SQUEAL as Olivetti hits the gas.

INT CAR DAY

Olivetti is behind the wheel, Vittoria's in front, Langdon leans in from the back seat.

OLIVETTI

Twenty minutes till eight, where are we headed?

35.

LANGDON

I'll know in a minute, give me the paper.

Vittoria pulls the page from the Diagramma out of her pocket and hands it to Langdon. He pulls the magnifier from his coat and studies the thin paper, turning it in his hands.

LANGDON (cont'd)

(READING)

From Santi's earthly tomb with demon's hole...

OLIVETTI

Where did you get that paper?!

LANGDON

'Cross Rome the mystic elements unfold.

VITTORIA

We borrowed it.

LANGDON

The path of light is laid, the sacred test...

OLIVETTI

Are you insane?!

LANGDON

Let angels guide you on your earthly quest.

OLIVETTI

You removed a document from the Vatican Archives?!

LANGDON

Huh? Oh, um -- well, she moved so fast..

VITTORIA

The first marker sounds like it's at Santi's tomb.

LANGDON

(MUSING)

Sounds like.

VITTORIA

But who is Santi?

36.

LANGDON

Raphael.

VITTORIA

Raphael? The sculptor?

LANGDON

Santi was his last name.

VITTORIA

So the path starts at Raphael's tomb!

LANGDON

(not entirely CONVINCED)

Yeah.

OLIVETTI

Raphael is buried at the Pantheon.

VITTORIA

Is the Pantheon even a church?

OLIVETTI

(snatching up the RADIO)

Oldest Catholic church in Rome!

Langdon has fallen silent, but it all makes perfect sense, so he says nothing as Olivetti cranks the wheel hard --

EXT ROME - STREET DAY

-- the car fishtails into a 180, and they take off in the opposite direction, headed for the Pantheon.

CUT TO:EXT PANTHEON - SIDE STREET DAY

The police car pulls to a stop, as quietly as possible, across an open plaza from the Pantheon.

Two black Alfa-Romeos with tinted windows glide to a stop on either side of them. As Langdon and the others get out, Commander Rocher and THREE MORE SWISS GUARD, all in black suits, surround them. Rocher goes straight to Langdon, highly skeptical.

ROCHER

I've just pulled a dozen of my best men from Vatican City during conclave and left the search for the antimatter device in the hands of secondary officers. You'd better be right.

37.LANGDON

I believe I am.

ROCHER

The Pantheon is one of the busiest tourist spots in Rome, how could he hope to get away with it? It's impossible.

LANGDON

As impossible as kidnapping four cardinals from Vatican City? The poem is precise.

Olivetti catches eyes with Langdon, who's still clutching the page pulled from the Diagramma. He slips it quietly into his jacket pocket.

ROCHER

The poem. Unbelievable. I'm basing this operation on an American's interpretation of a four hundred year old poem.

VITTORIA

The information we have clearly refers to Raphael's tomb, and Raphael's tomb is inside that building.

She points to the Pantheon, its edifice shimmering in the early evening light.

LANGDON

The Pantheon is your one chance to catch this guy.

ROCHER

One? I thought you said four. A pathway, four markers. We'll have four chances to catch him.

LANGDON

You would have, a hundred years ago. The Vatican had all the pagan statues in the Pantheon removed and destroyed in the late 1800s. Whatever marker was there to lead us to the next church is gone now. The path is dead. This is your chance.

Rocher looks at him for a long moment, then turns abruptly to a UNIFORMED OFFICER.

38.

ROCHER

Separate approaches. Cars to Piazza della Rotunda, Via degli Orfani, Piazza Sant'Ignazio, and Sant'Eustachio. No closer than two blocks, no uniforms, three minutes. Understood?

The Officer salutes and they snap into action.

ROCHER (cont'd)

And I need a set of eyes inside.

Two BEEFY GUARDSMEN in black suits step forward.

VITTORIA

Wait a minute, you'll scare him off.

ROCHER

They're not in uniform.

VITTORIA

I'm sorry, two weightlifters in matching black suits and earpieces, they're hardly disguised.

ROCHER

There's no time to get undercover men here.

VITTORIA

Fine. I'll go.

ROCHER

I'm not sending a wom-

Her arched eyebrow stops his sentence in its tracks.

ROCHER (cont'd)

-- a civilian into this situation. You have no communications and you can't carry a walkie-talkie, it's too conspicuous.

VITTORIA

Tourists have cell phones, don't they?
(pulls out her own and holds it to her ear)
Hi honey, I'm at the Pantheon, you should see this place!

39.

Rocher seems to be thinking about it. Langdon looks at her, his protective instincts aroused.

LANGDON

You can't send her in there alone.

ROCHER

I don't intend to.

EXT PANTHEON - TWO MINUTES LATER

CLOSE ON a pair of hands, linked. Vittoria and Langdon, holding hands like lovers, walk slowly toward the entrance to the Pantheon. A COUPLE DOZEN TOURISTS, blissfully unaware, mill about the square while up on the rooftops, SNIPERS have them in view.

Langdon looks around, this wasn't what he had in mind. Vittoria glances at him, amused.

VITTORIA

You're crushing my hand.

LANGDON

I'm sorry.

VITTORIA

A nervous newlywed?

LANGDON

Ancient newlywed.

VITTORIA

Try harder.

He puts an arm around her waist, feels a lump in her back.

LANGDON

You really know how to use that gun gave you?

VITTORIA

I can tag a breaching porpoise from forty meters off the bow of a rocking ship.

LANGDON

Thought you said you were a physicist,

VITTORIA

I am. Long story.

LANGDON

Make it short.

40.

VITTORIA(THINKS)

Can't be done.

What time is it?

Langdon raises his hand and checks his watch.

LANGDON

Seven minutes to eight.

VITTORIA

(of the watch)

Was that Mickey Mouse?

LANGDON

Long story.

VITTORIA

Make it short.

LANGDON(THINKS)

Can't be done.

And with that they step through the entrance and into --

INT PANTHEON DAY

-- the Pantheon, a massive, circular room with a 141-foot unsupported span even larger than the cupola of St. Peter's. There are a DOZEN TOURISTS scattered around, and a TOUR GROUP on one side hearing a lecture from a MUSEUM DOCENT.

Langdon looks up at the hole in the ceiling through which a bright shaft of light is shining.

LANGDON

The oculus. That could be the "demon's hole" in the poem.

Looking around, Vittoria sees several sarcophagi scattered around the room, all pointing obliquely in a certain direction. As they move stealthily through the crowd, they speak in low tones:

VITTORIA

Why are the tombs at an angle?

LANGDON

To face east. Sun worship.

VITTORIA

But this is a Christian church.

41.LANGDON*(SHRUGS)

New religions often adopt existing holidays to make conversion less shocking. December 25th was the pagan holiday of the Unconquered Sun. Made it a handy choice for Christ's birthday.

VITTORIA

You're saying Christianity is repackaged sun worship?

LANGDON

Where do you think halos came from?

Not just sun worship though, the Catholics borrowed Communion from the Aztecs, canonization from Euphemerus, the cruciform from the Egyptians ---

VITTORIA

No wonder they don't like you around here.

LANGDON

Just trying to keep the conversation lively.

(POINTS)

Check the recesses. I'll go left.
See you in a hundred eighty degrees.

He starts to the left, she goes to the right, walking in the shadowy recesses behind the pillars at the edges of the room.

Langdon walks slowly, checking out faces. Tourists. Couples. Teenagers. More tourists.

Around every column, there are shadows, and in those shadows --
--- nothing.

He looks at his watch. Five minutes to eight. And then --

--- a SHRIEK from the other side of the room. He whirls, sees Vittoria backing away from something.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Vittoria!

He races across the room, reaches her at the far side. Her face is ashen. She's pointing at something, aghast.

42.

VITTORIA

Raphael's tomb! But --

Langdon rushes forward to the crypt. There doesn't seem to be anything out of the ordinary, except ---

VITTORIA (cont'd)

--- it's the wrong one!

LANGDON

What are you talking about?!

He leans down, looks at the plaque on it.

VITTORIA

He was moved here, in 1759. A century after Diagramma was published!

LANGDON

That's not possible, the poem said-

VITTORIA

Where was he originally buried?

LANGDON

I don't know... Urbino, I think...
(thinking like crazy)
Santi's earthly tomb... what else could it possibly... Santi 's tomb...

His eyes flit around the room, from one ornate sarcophagus to another. And then it hits him:

LANGDON (cont'd)

Damn it! "Santi's tomb" must mean one of the chapels he built! He's not buried in it, he designed it! Rich people commissioned burial chapels in churches all over Rome in his day!

(looks up)

And the "demon's hole," it isn't the oculus, it's an undercroft, a crypt, common sixteenth century term!

At that very moment, the tour group is passing them, and the elderly Docent asks his group the perfunctory wrap-up:

DOCENT

Does anyone have any questions?

Langdon busts in on the group.

43.

LANGDON

Yes! Did Raphael Santi ever design a chapel with an ossuary annex and angel figure commissioned by the Catholic Church?!

The Docent blinks. Wasn't expecting quite so esoteric a question.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Well?!

DOCENT

I'm sorry, I... I can only think of one.

Langdon suppresses the urge to grab him by the lapels and shake it out of him.

LANGDON

One'll do.

CUT TO:

EXT PANTHEON DAY

A clock in the square outside the Pantheon says 7:56. Langdon and Vittoria face Rocher, Olivetti, and half a dozen Swiss Guard.

ROCHER

Wrong? What do you mean, wrong?!

(FAST)

The first altar of science is the Chigi Chapel, in the church of Santa Maria del Popolo, about a mile from here! It used to be called Capella della Terra, Chapel of the Earth. Earth, the first element! This is it, I'm certain.

ROCHER

You were certain of the Pantheon.

LANGDON

Please, we have four minutes!

Rocher looks at Langdon with contempt, then BARKS orders to his men in Italian. They begin to head for their cars.

VITTORIA

Back to the Vatican?! You can't!

44.

LANGDON

Commandante, if you care at all about your church-

ROCHER

My church? My church feeds the hungry, comforts the sick and dying. What does your church do, Professor?

(no answer)

Ah, that's right, you haven't one.

He turns and walks away, glaring at Olivetti.

ROCHER (cont'd)

Take him if you want, but I'm done with him.

CUT TO:

EXT PIAZZA DEL POPOLO DAY

Olivetti's car SCREECHES to a halt in the Piazza del Popolo at sunset. Langdon, Vittoria, Olivetti, and Vincenzo, the Vatican cop who first came to see Langdon, all climb out, start scanning the square.

LANGDON

This is the place.

He points to an obelisk in the center of the square.

LANGDON (cont'd)

An obelisk, with a pyramid at the top. Both Masonic symbols.

VITTORIA

The Freemasons? Are Illuminati?

LANGDON

The Illuminati were infiltrators. There isn't a powerful organization on earth they didn't place members in. Look at a dollar bill some time. A pyramid, an occult symbol representing convergence upward, with the eye of illumination above it, and beneath it the Latin for "New World Order."

45.

VITTORIA

The United States government was infiltrated by Illuminati?

LANGDON

FDR's vice-president was a high-ranking Freemason. Convinced him the words in Latin actually meant "New Deal."

A church bell begins to TOLL.

OLIVETTI

Eight o'clock!

Langdon takes off running, toward an eleventh-century church at the southwest corner of the plaza, covered in scaffolding.

At the front door of the church,

Langdon hops over the sawhorses blocking the entrance and tries the door. Locked. A sign says the place is under construction.

At a side door,

Olivetti races alongside the church, followed by the others. He reaches a door with a large, heavy ring, and pulls it toward him. But the door won't budge. He pushes, throws his shoulder into it. Locked.

LANGDON

(APPROACHING)

No, no, it's an annulus!

But Olivetti just races onward, looking for another door, followed by Vincenzo. As they disappear around the back of the church, Langdon steps up to the large ring, gives it an almighty twist --

INT

SANTA MARIA DEL POPOLO

DUSK

-- and the heavy door CLUNKS open.

The interior of the church is an obstacle course of torn-up flooring, brick pallets, mounds of dirt. Silt drifts in the dying sunlight that shines through the broken windows and walls.

Nothing moves. Dead silence. Langdon and Vittoria walk slowly to the middle of the floor, at one end of the chapel. There are eight recesses, four on either side of a central aisle, all covered with large sheets of plastic, to protect them during construction.

46.

LANGDON

(WHISPERING)

The chapel is in one of those apses.

The plastic RUSTLES ominously. Anything could be behind any one of them.

Vittoria pulls the gun from her waistband and holds it in front of her. Langdon notices, it makes him uncomfortable.

LANGDON (cont'd)

You have to give that back.

She looks at him --- what are you, nuts? Something rushes at them from the side, she whirls --

--- and nearly blows Olivetti to kingdom come as he and Vincenzo barrel in through the side door.

Langdon gestures --- everybody quiet. Olivetti points to the left gestures to Langdon and Vittoria to go to the right.

They separate, to either side of the main aisle.

AT THE FIRST CHAPEL,

Langdon pulls the plastic aside, eyes scan the chapel. Nothing.

ON THE OTHER SIDE,

Olivetti does the same, at another chapel. Nothing.

AT THE THIRD CHAPEL,

Vittoria pushes the plastic aside, gun in front of her. There's a sudden movement to her left, she whirls --

--- and a rat scurries away.

AT THE FOURTH CHAPEL,

Langdon pushes the plastic aside, steps inside --

-- and GASPS.

Moving behind him, we see a Christian chapel like no other we've ever seen. Finished entirely in chestnut marble, overhead it has a domed cupola with a field of illuminated stars and the seven planets (as known in Galileo's day).

Further down the wall, there are tributes to earth's four seasons but most incredible of all are the two huge structures that dominate the room from either side.

47.

Pyramids. Ten feet high.

Vittoria steps in behind him.

LANGDON

Pyramids. In a Catholic church.
This is it.

Behind them, the plastic rustles, as if drawn by a wind, and as Langdon turns, he hears, faintly, a DOOR CLOSING far away.

He turns back, eyes drawn to the floor. There is a large oval medallion there, with a skeleton carved into it. It's slightly off center, raised. As if it's been opened recently, and hurriedly replaced.

LANGDON (cont'd)

The demon's hole.

IN THE DEMON'S HOLE,

we're looking up now as the medallion GRINDS to the side. Faces peer down at us -- Langdon, Vittoria, Olivetti, and Vincenzo. They recoil from a stench.

UP TOP,

Langdon squints, trying to see inside.

LANGDON

Anybody got a flashlight?

Vincenzo hands him one. Langdon shines it down into the crypt.
There are shapes, but thirty feet down and hard to make out.

There's one in particular, in the darkness, seems too short to be a person, but it's moving slightly.

OLIVETTI

Can you tell what it is?

LANGDON

Not from up here.

He reaches down, rattles the ladder that leans against the wall of the crypt. Takes a deep breath, looks at the others.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Those guns. Keep 'em handy?

48.

IN THE DEMON'S HOLE,

Langdon reaches the bottom, still shining the light at the figure in the distance. It's brighter here, he can see it's flesh-colored, but still indistinct. He takes a step toward it --

-- and something CRUNCHES under his feet.

He shines the light down. He's standing on a pile of human skulls

OLIVETTI

(calling down)

You okay?

LANGDON

More or less.

He takes two more steps, closer to the swaying figure on the other side of the crypt. He can now clearly see a man's naked back.

LANGDON (cont'd)

He's here! I think he's -- sitting.

(moves closer)

Hello?

(closer still)

Are you all right?

It's a human figure. As Langdon draws close, he sees the source of the movement --- rats, gnawing at the dead body.

They scurry away as Langdon comes around the front, and we pull back to see what he sees.

It's Cardinal Lamasse.

He's been buried in the earthen floor of the crypt up to his waist his jaw broken, his mouth crammed full of dirt.

But that's not the worst of it. Langdon GAGS as he sees the blackened word that has been branded into the red flesh of the Cardinal's chest. It's an ambigram, like we've seen before, but this time it says --

EARTH.

CUT TO:

INT SISTINE CHAPEL DAY

Cardinal Mortati sits regally at the main altar at the front of the Sistine Chapel as the electors, one by one, cast their votes in the traditional manner.

49.

An AFRICAN CARDINAL at the front of the line kneels before him.

AFRICAN CARDINAL
(SUBTITLED)

I call as my witness Christ the Lord, who will be my judge that my vote is given to the one who before God I think should be elected.

The African Cardinal stands, holds his ballot over his head, t lowers the ballot to the altar, where a plate sits atop a large chalice.

He places the ballot on the plate, then picks up the plate and uses it to drop the ballot in the chalice. He then replaces the plate over the chalice, bows to the cross, and heads for his seat.

The next cardinal steps up to repeat the process.

A SHORT TIME LATER, A DISSOLVE, and the line is gone. Mortati holds the chalice with all the votes. He shakes it, chooses one---

MORTATI
Eligo in summum pontificem --

-- and reads an unfamiliar name.

He makes a note in a ledger, then raises a threaded needle and pierces the ballot through the word "Eligo," sliding the ballot on the thread.

A SHORT TIME LATER, ANOTHER DISSOLVE, and there are a hundred and sixty-one ballots on the thread,

Mortati looks up from his ledger and speaks to the room.

MORTATI
The first ballot has failed.

He takes He thread carrying all the ballots and ties the ends together to create a ring.

He lays the ring of ballots on a silver tray. Dusts the tray heavily with a yellowish powder.

A DOOR OPENS

on a small incinerator. The ring of ballots is hurled inside and bursts immediately into flame.

50.

A dark, brackish smoke billows up from the burning ballots, and we follow the smoke up, up, into the chimney --

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE DUSK

--- and to the roof of the Sistine Chapel, where the black iUPke puffs out into the early evening sky.

Below, a CROWD OF THOUSANDS GROANS in disappointment as the message is sent --- no new pope yet.

But while they are all watching the smoke, we turn our attention?
to the opposite direction, to the east, across Rome, to where ---

CUT TO:

EXT PIAZZA DEL POPOLO DUSK

--- those black Alfa Romeos, four this time, glide silently to a halt outside the church where Langdon just found the corpse. Swiss Guard in black suits pour out of the vehicles and hurry into the church, trying to attract as little attention as possible.

INT SANTA MARIA DEL POPOLO DUSK

The inside of the church is being sealed off as a crime scene. Rocher, just arriving, takes charge as the plastic is RIPPED off the Chigi Chapel.

ROCHER

Get that body out of there and search the rest of the building.

Swiss Guardsmen drop into the demon's hole to remove the body.

ROCHER (cont'd)

(to another Guardsman)

Outside -- a perimeter. Secure but invisible. No lights, no guns, no one knows. Understood?

Langdon, lost in thought, drifts through the small chapel, studying the intricate carvings and other artwork.

LANGDON

Earthly symbology... everywhere...

Rocher passes through his field of vision, livid:

ROCHER

Why the hell didn't you figure this out in the first place?

51.

It was more a rhetorical question, but Langdon answers honestly, still lost in thought, his voice soft.

LANGDON

I made a mistake.

He drifts toward a statue, of the highest quality white marble, resting in a niche on the far side, out of the way of the mayhem.

Vittoria joins him.

VITTORIA

Is it Raphael?

LANGDON

The chapel is. But the sculptures are Bernini.

(STUNNED)

The unknown Illuminati master was Bernini.

VITTORIA

Didn't he work for the Church?

LANGDON

Almost exclusively. It means the Illuminati even infiltrated the Vatican. They hid in plain sight.

He steps closer to the statue. It's of two life-size human figures, intertwined, one a regal, bearded man, the other a cherub, floating overhead.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Habakkuk and the Angel.

VITTORIA

Habakkuk?

LANGDON

The prophet who predicted the annihilation of the earth. This is the first marker.

He steps closer, studying it carefully.

LANGDON (cont'd)

"Let angels guide you on your lofty quest..."

His eyes move slowly over the statue, and ours do too, from the angel's innocent face, down his arm, and to his right hand, which is outstretched, one finger extended --

52.

-- pointing the way.

LANGDON (cont'd)

The Path is alive.

CUT TO:

EXT PIAZZA DEL POPOLO DUSK

Langdon dashes down the stairs outside the church and into the middle of the piazza. It's getting dark now, shadows streaking the square.

LANGDON

Southwest... it points southwest...

He gets his bearings, looks to the southwest, sees nothing but buildings in the way.

He runs back up the church steps, where Vittoria and Rocher are just coming outside. Langdon's mind is racing.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Earth-air-fire-water, we're looking for a Bernini sculpture having something to do with air...

(to Rocher)

And the next church is southwest of here.

ROCHER

You're sure this time?

LANGDON

I need a map. One that shows all the churches in Rome.

Rocher just stares at him, studying him.

LANGDON (cont'd)

I could use it now.

Rocher starts down the steps toward his car.

LANGDON (cont'd)

And a compass!

He looks around, sees the rickety scaffolding outside the church,
and --- 53.

A MOMENT LATER,

--- he climbs into our view, now on the scaffolding. He's moving upward, fast, toward ---

EXT CHURCH ROOF DUSK

--- the roof of the old church, also undergoing renovation. The view of Rome is spectacular from up here, and Langdon rushes to the western wall, looking intently off in that direction.

He sees something that makes him suck in his breath, hears a voice from behind him ---

VITTORIA (O.S.)

Robert!

--- and turns as Vittoria tosses something small and black up to him.

A compass. He catches it, holds it steady, and walks toward the edge of the roof as the compass needle swivels and settles on SW.

Langdon looks up, following the line of the needle, up over the rooftops of Rome, to a massive structure in the distance, exactly in line with the compass needle.

A huge dome on the horizon blots out the setting sun.

ST. PETER'S BASILICA.CUT TO:*INT CAR NIGHT

CLOSE ON a map of Rome, unfolded in the back seat of a racing car and spread out over Langdon and Vittoria's laps. Langdon has a pen and is drawing a line on the map, through --

LANGDON

The black rectangles with crosses are churches, and none of them intersect the line until it comes to an end, right in the middle of St. Peter's Square.

Night has fallen, and the four Alfa Romeos are now speeding across Rome. No sirens, but lots of speed. Olivetti drives, Rocher is in the passenger seat.

54.

ROCHER

Your theory doesn't hold up,
Professor. Michelangelo designed
St. Peter's, not Bernini.

LANGDON

The Basilica is Michelangelo, but the square is Bernini. The second marker must be a statue in the square.

VITTORIA

It's ten minutes till nine! Can we go any faster?!

ROCHER

Not unless we want the full attention of the world press.

She looks down, to two television screens mounted into the backs of the front seats. Both are tuned to coverage of the papal selection process, REPORTERS doing stand-ups from the middle of crowded St. Peter's Square.

We move in on one of the images, then into the image, coming out -

CUT TO:

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

--- on a television monitor in St. Peter's Square. The Reporter, a JAPANESE WOMAN, is giving a stand-up report on the progress so far, gesturing to the chimney over the Sistine Chapel.

The crowd has grown, now four thousand, maybe five. FLASHBULBS POP. A few PROTESTERS CHANT.

Almost silently, behind them all, half a dozen black Alfa Romeos race in, too fast, and come to an abrupt halt.

IN ROCHER'S CAR,

they all get out, trying to avoid causing a panic.

Langdon walks into the square, eyes focused on an object in the middle.

LANGDON

Another obelisk. We're close.

He looks up, at row after row of statues that ring the square from atop the oval colonnades.

SHARPSHOOTERS scurry among the statuary, setting themselves up.

55.

In the crowd, Rocher MUTTERS into his radio and to undercover SWISS GUARD scattered throughout. The crowd is unaware of them.

Langdon keeps walking, turning in circles, looking above him, to the tops of the colonnades that border the square.

VITTORIA

There must be a hundred statues up there, which one is it?

LANGDON

How in God's name would anyone make a sculpture about air?

And indeed there are. Langdon looks at his watch. Two minutes to nine.

And then he freezes. Staring down, not up.

He takes a step back. There is a fresco carved into the square beneath his feet, or more accurately --

LANGDON (cont'd)

Bas relief!

He takes a step back, to look at the carving, as does Vittoria.

LANGDON (cont'd)

The other half of sculpture is bas relief.

(to Vittoria)

Look for more! Something having to do with air!

They move through the crowd, pushing people aside, causing a bit of a ruckus as they try to uncover the elaborate carvings in the stone of the square.

(IF WE ARE EAGLE-EYED, at this point we will see TWO ROBED MEN, one helping the other, who carries a cross, as they pass through the crowd behind Langdon.)

Remembering something, Langdon rushes forward, toward the center of the square, uncharacteristically brusque with the crowd, shoving his way through now.

He draws close to one carving in particular, slows to a stop, and stares down at it, eyes wide.

It's a carving of an angel's face, cheeks billowing outward as it blows a gust of wind, symbolized by five vertical streaks. Its title is --- 56.

LANGDON (cont'd)

"West Ponente." The West Wind. An angel's face and five streaks. Air!

So this is it, but now what? They look around frantically, scanning the crowd. So does Rocher, so does Olivetti. The BELLS of St. Peter's start to TOLL the hour.

NEARBY,

a LITTLE GIRL dances with a doll. Happily unaware of what's going on.

ELSEWHERE,

some PROTESTERS tangle. Some believe one thing, others don't.

Swiss Guard and Vatican Police race in to break it up. But there's no bloodshed.

CLOSE TO THAT, a ROBED MAN carrying a small wooden cross falls to the ground. Somebody near him SCREAMS.

NEARBY,

the Little Girl is jostled by a HOMELESS MAN, drops her doll.

THE ROBED MAN

is helped to his feet by the Police. He's fine. He wanders away, holding his cross high.

And as he passes us, we catch just a glimpse of his face ---

--and recognize Mr. Gray.

THE LITTLE GIRL

bends down, picks up her doll, and sees --

-- IT'S COVERED IN BLOOD.

She looks down at the ground, sees a trail of blood, follows it with her eyes to where ---

-- the Homeless Man, dressed in torn rags, leans against a fountain, gasping for breath.

ACROSS THE CROWD,

57.

Vittoria and Langdon hear the SCREAMS. They're closest, and they're at the fountain in just a few seconds.

Langdon drops to his knees, turns the Homeless Man over. Through the man's torn shirt, he can see a black and red brand burned into his chest.

Three letters, ornate script, reading the same front to back:

AIR.

Vittoria grabs his arm, feels for a pulse.

VITTORIA

He's still alive!

But the dying Cardinal is gasping for breath, his mouth opening and closing like a fish on a dock.

She bends down, arches his neck, closes her mouth over his, and blows air into his lungs.

Immediately, a fog of red mist BILLOWS from two puncture holes in the man's chest, covering Langdon in blood --- his face, his clothes.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

His chest! They punctured his lungs!

Langdon recoils in horror, overcome, completely out of his depth.

Rocher arrives, as does Olivetti, as do a DOZEN MORE SWISS GUARD and VATICAN POLICE. Rocher looks around, defeated and enraged, as the Cardinal expires and the Crowd panics, fleeing in all directions.

He presses his radio to his lips and keys the mic.

ROCHER

Clear the square.

CUT TO:

INT BATHROOM NIGHT

Blood and water swirl down a drain. Langdon looks up from the sink, water rushing from his face. He dries himself, looks in the mirror. He holds up his hands. They're shaking.

He's standing in a lavish marble bathroom, now cleaned up and changed into black pants and a black long-sleeved shirt. No Roman collar, they don't just give you those, but clearly the clothes of a priest. He steps out of the bathroom and into --- 58.

INT PAPAL OFFICE NIGHT

-- the papal office, where the Camerlengo, Rocher, Olivetti, and Vittoria are gathered again, as are HALF A DOZEN other security officers. It's crowded, busy, little knots of jurisdictional arguments and competing theories around the room.

The Camerlengo, at his desk, is stunned, speaking to Olivetti. Langdon edges close enough to hear, but not too close.

CAMERLENGO

When did this call come in?

OLIVETTI

Three, four minutes ago. The same voice as on the tape. We're analyzing the accent now, Alsatian is our best guess at the moment.

CAMERLENGO

And he actually claimed responsibility for the death of His Holiness?

OLIVETTI

Not personally, but he said it was the Illuminati. He said they murdered him.

CAMERLENGO

That's ridiculous, the Holy Father died of a stroke. Did he say how they claim to have done it?

OLIVETTI

The Pope's own medication. A drug known as Heparin?

There is silence for a moment. Rocher looks up. Looks away.

VITTORIA

The Pope took Heparin?

CAMERLENGO

He had thrombophlebitis. He took an injection once a day. But no one knew that.

OLIVETTI

Someone knew.

59.

ROCHER

His Holiness had health concerns; he was subject to seizures as well. But he took steps to make sure he was -- watched. For safety. That's all he wished to be made public, and that's all we should discuss.

VITTORIA

(ignoring him)

Heparin is lethal in the wrong dosage. An overdose would cause massive internal bleeding and brain hemorrhages. At first it might look like a stroke, but in a few days his body would show signs, we could easily-

Rocher spins on her, livid.

ROCHER

Ms. Vetra, in case you're unaware, papal autopsies are prohibited by Vatican Law. We are not about to defile His Holiness's body just because his enemies claim to-

CAMERLENGO

Of course we're not. We'll make a public announcement refuting this absurd claim.

Father Simeon, Cardinal Mortati's aide, steps forward.

FR. SIMEON

I'm afraid that's out of the question.
Cardinal Mortati has insisted this entire matter be kept internal.

CAMERLENGO

Cardinal Mortati shouldn't even be aware of this, he's locked in conclave.

FR. SIMEON

His final instructions before sealing the doors were very clear -- no outside communications unless absolutely necessary.

CAMERLENGO

Cardinal Mortati will remember that he is Dean of the College of Cardinals, not His Holiness himself.

60.

FR. SIMEON

As you say. Yet, technically, now that Conclave has begun, it is his privilege and duty to control public announcements. I've drafted a short release about the incident in the square, but any other statements are specifically prohibited. For that, the Cardinal has asked me to remind you -- we have a chimney.

The Camerlengo just stares at him, a power struggle. Which he is going to lose.

CAMERLENGO

As you say.
(turns away)
Commander Rocher, the search for the device?

ROCHER

We've turned the power off and on to about twenty percent of Vatican City.
Nothing on the video yet.

CAMERLENGO

Mr. Langdon, you've been right so far, if belatedly, about the Path. It's now nine fifteen, how quickly can you find the next church?

Langdon refers to a map spread out on the desk.

LANGDON

The line of the breath in the carving points due east, directly away from Vatican City, but there are five lines, so there's room for error.

While he talks, an AIDE in a business suit is ushered quietly in the door by a Swiss Guardsman. He's carrying a satchel.
Vittoria recognizes him, and he goes to her.

LANGDON (cont'd)

There are about twenty churches that intersect it. None of their names invoke "fire," but there must be a Bernini sculpture inside one of them that does. I'm going to need to get back into the Archives to find it.

61.

CAMERLENGO

(to Olivetti)

Escort him.

Langdon looks to Vittoria -- you coming? She looks up from a table, where she's opened the satchel brought in by the Aide. She holds two leather-bound books in her hand.

VITTORIA

The journals I asked for. I'd like to stay here and study them. If Leonardo told anyone else about our project, that could be the killer.

CAMERLENGO

Fine.

The group starts to break up, half of them headed for the doors.
As Langdon rolls up the map on the desk, the Camerlengo notices his black clothes for the first time.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

Professor, would it surprise you to find those clothes suit you?

Langdon manages a sliver of a smile, starting to like this guy.

LANGDON

It would surprise the hell out of me.

CUT TO:

INT VATICAN ARCHIVES NIGHT

Langdon and Lt. Chartrand, the young Swiss Guardsman, walk quickly down the row of hermetically sealed vaults in the Vatican Archives.

Langdon's leading, looking at the names on the outsides of each of the individual vaults.

63.

CHARTRAND

What are you looking for this time?

LANGDON

Assets.

CHARTRAND

I beg your pardon?

LANGDON

Artwork is valuable, and corporations tend to keep track of their holdings.

CHARTRAND

The Catholic Church is not a corporation, Signore, it is a beacon, a source of inspiration for one billion lost and frightened souls.

LANGDON

Sure sure, I get that.

He stops, pointing up at a sign on the end of one of the vaults -- BANCO VATICANO.

LANGDON (cont'd)

But it's also a bank.

He takes one last breath of oxygen-rich air, pushes through the revolving door --

INT VAULT NIGHT

--- and comes through the other side, eyes scanning the place. A moment later, Chartrand follows him through the door. Langdon looks at him --- you're coming in too?

CHARTRAND

Cfmmmander Olivetti said I was not to leave your side this time.

LANGDON

(a mutter)

Wasn't me, it was her,

MOVING FAST ALONG THE LEATHER-BOUND VOLUMES, Langdon searches the place as fast as he can.

BAM!

A book drops onto a table, pages flip by, Langdon studies it,
SLAMS it shut.

64.

BAM! BAM! Two more books, flipped open, compared, pages rifled, nothing.

BACK IN THE STACKS,

his hand finds a five-inch thick ledger marked "Bernini."

ON A TABLE,

it SMACKS down and opens to the first page. Langdon sits, begins turning the pages, one by one.

LOOKING AT THE PAGE,

his vision momentarily blurs. He rubs his eyes, it clears again.

He looks up, at a vent over the doorway. Thin ribbons flutter in the breeze of the minimal oxygen that's being pumped in.

He goes back to work. Chartrand watches him.

CUT TO:

INT PAPAL OFFICE NIGHT

Looking out the window of the papal office, we see the barricades removed from the edges of St. Peter's Square. The crowds return.

Pulling back, we see the Camerlengo looking out at them, thinking, troubled. There are still half a dozen Security Officials in the papal office, but the Camerlengo turns and looks at Vittoria, working alone at a desk on the far side of the office.

AT THE DESK,

Vittoria pores over the journals sent from Geneva. Sensing something, she looks up. The Camerlengo is standing over her. He speaks quietly.

CAMERLENGO

What sort of signs?

VITTORIA

I'm sorry?

The Camerlengo looks over his shoulder, to make sure their conversation is private.

CAMERLENGO

If the Holy Father were given an overdose of Heparin... what signs would his body bear?

65.

VITTORIA

Bleeding of the oral mucosa.
(off his questioning look)
His gums. Postmortem, the blood congeals and turns the inside of the mouth black.

CAMERLENGO

Even though he died fourteen days ago?

VITTORIA

It wouldn't show up until at least a week after his death.

He looks around the room once more. Then back to her?

CAMERLENGO

He was... very important to me.

VITTORIA

I understand.

He thinks for a long moment, then --

CAMERLENGO

Please come.

--- turns and leaves the room. She makes sure no one's looking, then follows him out.

She leaves the journals behind.

CUT TO:

INT VATICAN ARCHIVES NIGHT

CLOSE ON the Bernini ledger, which Langdon is now almost halfway through. He tiyrns a page, scans the list of items written there, then moves on to the next.

He blinks, his vision blurring again. He looks over at Chartrand, who's suffering even worse, panting for air, hands on his knees.

LANGDON

You don't smoke, do you?

CHARTRAND

(yes, a lot)

A little bit.

LANGDON

Sit down before you fall down.

66.

Chartrand half-stumbles into a chair on the opposite side of the table. Langdon goes back to what he was doing, flipping a page--

--- and then immediately flipping it back.

There is a hand-written notation alongside one of the entries.

LANGDON (cont'd)

My Italian's no good, what does this note say? Next to the entry for The Ecstasy of St. Teresa?

Chartrand leans over the ledger, squinting hard, trying to focus.

CHARTRAND

"Moved at suggestion of the artist."

LANGDON

Moved to another church? At Bernini's suggestion?

Chartrand, really suffering for air, can't follow it.

CHARTRAND

I don't know.

Langdon flips the page back, to a photograph of the sculpture in question.

THE STATUE

is of a woman, seemingly in the throes of ecstasy, while an angel hovering over her holds a spear aloft.

Langdon raises an eyebrow.

The word "Seraphim" jumps up from the page, words in quotes after it -- "Seraphim, meaning 'the fiery one...'"

LANGDON

Fire.

More words pop out at us -- "His great golden spear... filled with fire..."

LANGDON (cont'd)

Fire.

Still more -- "woman inflamed by passion's fire..."

And now a close-up of her enraptured face.

67.

LANGDON

Fire.

And now three things happen in quick succession:

-- Langdon SLAMS the ledger shut,

-- the ribbons on the air vent fall as the oxygen into the vault is cut off, and

-- one by one, ALL THE LIGHTS IN THE ARCHIVES GO OUT.

Total silence for a moment.

Langdon and Chartrand look at each other in the darkness.

LANGDON (cont'd)

The door -- ?

CHARTRAND

Electronic.

LANGDON

That's too bad.

CUT TO:

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA NIGHT

The Camerlengo, flanked by two Swiss Guardsmen, escorts Vittoria rapidly across the deserted floor of St. Peter's Basilica.

VITTORIA

Where are we going?

CAMERLENGO

To see my father.

VITTORIA

I don't understand.

They circle past a pillar and she sees an orange glow up ahead, seeming to emanate from beneath the floor in the center of the basilica.

CAMERLENGO

I was orphaned when I was nine years old. A bombing in Madrid -- Basque separatists protesting the visit of a Catholic archbishop.

As they draw closer, she sees it's the entrance to a sumptuous underground chamber, surrounded by scores of glowing oil lamps.

68.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

The archbishop felt responsible, and he adopted me the following day. I was raised by him, and by the church.

The Camerlengo starts down a winding stairway, rimmed by the lamps,

ON THE STAIRCASE,

they descend, lit by the spectral glow of the oil lamps.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

He was the wisest man I ever met, even with my youthful foolishness. He always saw the middle way. I wanted to be ordained, but I also refused to be excused from military service. So he suggested I fly rescue missions, helicopters bringing the wounded to hospital.

He stops at the bottom of the stairs and looks up at her.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

He was a great man.

VITTORIA

He died?

CAMERLENGO

(NODS)

Fourteen days ago.

Vittoria, stunned, realizes who he's talking about.

CUT TO:

INT VATICAN ARCHIVES NIGHT

KA-CHUNG! Emergency lights switch on in the Vatican Archives, casting a weird, reddish glow over everything.

But the ribbons at the oxygen panel remain limp.

Below, Langdon pushes, again and again, on the deadened exit button, trying to activate the doors. Nothing doing.

He's weak, weaving, barely on his feet.

Chartrand's already slumped against a wall, his radio in hand, keying it over and over again, but getting only static.

69.

LANGDON

Anything?

Chartrand gestures weakly around the room.

CHARTRAND

Walls... lead-lined... no signal.

Langdon blinks, his vision becoming seriously impaired. He holds his eyes closed for a moment, opens them, it's not much better.

Langdon looks at the glass wall on the far side of the vault. Then at the row of bookcases. Gets an idea.

He goes to the last bookcase, which is about six feet from the glass wall. He hoists himself up on the shelf of the bookcase opposite it, wedges himself in.

And pushes with one leg. The giant bookcase teeters, but just barely.

Langdon hoists himself further up, gets both legs up against the bookshelf.

Pushes again -- more movement this time.

Now he puts everything he has into it, straining like hell. The bookcase starts to tip, goes just past the point of no return, starts to fall, gloriously headed straight for the glass wall, which it SLAMS into with enormous power and -- --- stops.

Leaning against the wall. Forget cracks, there's not even a scratch.

Langdon CURSES under his breath, looks around for another idea.

He hears a soft THUD from the other side of the room, sees Chartrand has slumped over, unconscious.

But his jacket has fallen open, revealing the sidearm he carries in a shoulder holster.

LANGDON'S HAND

slips the gun out of the holster and hefts it. Safe bet he's never held one of these before.

He staggers over toward the glass wall, raises the gun, and pulls the trigger. Nothing happens. Trigger doesn't even move.

70.

After a moment of oxygen-poor thinking, he figures out how to CLICK off the safety. Tries again.

(Pow.)

The sound of the shot is barely audible to Langdon. His brain's going fast.

If he was hoping to bring the whole wall down, he failed, but there's a faint HISSING sound coming from the bullethole, and he goes to it and takes a deep breath of air from the outside.

He stands back, his brain clearing momentarily.

Seized by an idea, he looks up at the wall, at its four corners, and at the tiny web of cracks radiating out from the hole he just made in the center.

He raises the gun again and fires off FOUR SHOTS in quick succession. They're in an odd pattern-- upper left corner, upper right, not quite as high, lower middle-left, and the very lower right corner.

Now there are four new holes, each HISSING slightly, and the first hole, in the center.

Shaking his head once more to clear it, Langdon steps forward to the glass wall, but instead of barreling against it or throwing a chair, he simply raises one hand, places it flat over the first hole he made, the one in the center of the glass wall ---

-- and presses gently.

Almost immediately, a SHARP SOUND comes from the hole beneath his hand and a jagged crack leaps out from the first hole, shooting up to connect with the hole in the upper left corner.

He presses just a touch harder and a SECOND CRACK starts, shooting down to the lower right. Then a third, and a fourth, the glass is cracking like ice in springtime, all four extremities connecting with the central hole, and with a huge GROANING SOUND -

-

-- the entire glass wall falls to pieces at his feet.

Air RUSHES into the vault.

And, wouldn't you know it, the power comes back on in the Archives.

CUT TO:

71.

INT VATICAN GROTTOES NIGHT

Vittoria, the Camerlengo, and the two Swiss Guard reach the entrance to the Holy Vatican Grottoes just as -- -- their power goes out.

Two flashlights CLICK on, and the Guardsmen lead the way in. On both sides, hollow niches line the walls. Recessed in the alcoves, as far as the flashlights let them see, the hulking shadows of sarcophagi loom.

On top of each tomb are life-sized marble carvings of each Pope, shown in death and wearing full papal vestments, arms folded across their chests.

CAMERLENGO

If the Holy Father was murdered, the implications are profound. Vatican security is impenetrable, no one from the outside could have gotten anywhere near him.

VITTORIA

Meaning it was someone on the inside.

CAMERLENGO

We can trust no one

He steps up his pace, taking the lead, knows exactly where he's going. The others fall behind, as everyone slowly realizes what he intends to do. And they're not at all sure they're up for it.

AT THE LATE POPE'S SARCOPHAGUS, the Camerlengo closes the last few feet alone. He knees down in front of the bright marble carving, a likeness of the late Pope. He WHISPERS.

CAMERLENGO

Father... Holy Father... You told me when I was young that the voice in my heart was that of God. You told me I must follow it no matter what painful places it leads. I hear it now, asking me the impossible. Give me strength. Forgive me. What I do, I do in the name of everything you believe.

BEHIND HIM,

72.

the others watch as he finishes his private prayer, stands, and turns to them.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

Remove the covering.

Nobody moves. Just stares at him.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

Did you hear me?

SWISS GUARDSMAN

Signore, by law we are at your command. But we are also bound by-

CAMERLENGO

I ask your forgiveness for putting you in this position. Vatican laws are established to protect the church. But it is in that very spirit that I command you to break them now.

A moment of silence, and then --

-- they step forward. Set their flashlights on the floor. And step to the tomb. Bracing their hands against the marble covering near the head of the tomb, they plant their feet and push.

It doesn't move.

They push harder.

Vittoria and the Camerlengo join them.

With an almost primal GROWL of stone on stone, the lid slides, rotating off the top of the casket and coming to rest at an angle.

The Camerlengo picks up a flashlight and shines it in the crypt.

Vittoria leans forward.

The light creeps up the Pope's body, over his burial vestments, past his folded hands, and finally to his face.

His cheeks have collapsed, the Pope's mouth gapes wide --

-- and his tongue is black as death.

EXT VATICAN ARCHIVES NIGHT

The face of Langdon's Mickey Mouse watch is smeared with blood from a cut on his hand, but we can still read the time.

It's 9:41.

Langdon and Chartrand stagger down the front steps of the Vatican Archives, where they're immediately met by three Vatican Police cars. Olivetti leaps out of one and meets them at the base of the steps, holding his hands up in defense almost before Langdon can lay into him.

LANGDON

Are you out of your minds?!

OLIVETTI

Please. In the car.

LANGDON

Someone tried to kill me.

OLIVETTI

Do you know where the next church is?

LANGDON

Yes.

OLIVETTI

Then get in the car!

Langdon jumps in the back seat of the car with Olivetti, and they SQUEAL away from the Archives.

IN THE CAR,

they continue as the DRIVER tears through the streets of Rome.

OLIVETTI

We had no idea that --

LANGDON

You heard me ask permission! You assigned me an escort! Don't try to tell me you didn't know I was in there!

OLIVETTI

(let me finish)

Of course I knew, but we had no idea that portions of our white zones are 74.

cross-wired with that building. Commander Rocher was extending the search, if he'd known the Archives were on that grid, he never would have killed the power.

Langdon looks at him evenly, sees in Olivetti's eyes that they may be thinking the same thing.

LANGDON

Or there is the other possibility.

Olivetti doesn't answer. But he's thinking about it.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Infiltration is the Illuminati specialty -- why not the head of the Swiss Guard?

OLIVETTI

(AGONIZED)

Perhaps.

LANGDON

I want to speak to the Camerlengo.

OLIVETTI

Il Camerlengo is unavailable,

LANGDON

Unavailable? Why?

OLIVETTI

He's found evidence that the Holy Father was indeed murdered. He is seeking guidance.

LANGDON

From whom?

Olivetti looks at him -- what are you, an idiot?

OLIVETTI

From God.

LANGDON

Oh, right.

OLIVETTI

Please. Make an effort.

INT PAPAL OFFICE NIGHT

Vittoria, escorted by the two Swiss Guardsmen from the grottoes, returns to the papal office.

She goes to the desk where she was sitting earlier, to resume her examination of the journals.

But the desk is bare.

VITTORIA

The journals. Where are they?

The Guardsmen look at her blankly.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

Who took the journals from this desk?!

INT APOSTOLIC PALACE - GREAT STAIRCASE NIGHT

The Camerlengo, in deep meditation, slowly descends the stairs that lead to the Sistine Chapel.

At the bottom, Four Swiss Guard (in traditional garb) guard the locked doors.

The Camerlengo reaches them. Hesitates. Looks heavenward for one last word of encouragement, and then --

CAMERLENGO

Unseal the doors.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

There is an audible GASP from the assembled cardinals as the heavy locks CLUNK open, the chains RATTLE away, and the main doors of the Sistine Chapel sweep open.

The Camerlengo walks in, a stark presence in his black cassock amid the sea of red robes. Cardinal Mortati steps from behind the altar to meet him.

MORTATI

Signore, do you realize that for the first time in Vatican history, a Camerlengo has just crossed the sacred threshold of conclave after sealing the doors?

CUT TO:

CAMERLENGO

There has been a development.

EXT ROME - STREET NIGHT

Olivetti's Alfa Romeo races through the streets of Rome, trailed by three other cars.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

The Camerlengo has just passed on the shocking news, and the whispered word "murder" can be heard in several languages.

Even Mortati is shaken. The Camerlengo speaks to the Cardinals.

CAMERLENGO

Please... a moment... if I...

He strides quickly up the steps of the altar to address the group -- again, to the shock and surprise of this most conservative and rule-bound group.

But no one stops him.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

It is true we are under attack from an old enemy. And this time they've struck from within, murdering our Holy Father and threatening us all with destruction at the hands of their new god, science. So what are we to do?

INT OLIVETTI'S CAR NIGHT

CLOSE ON the dashboard clock in Olivetti's car, which now reads 8:57. Langdon looks up from it, staring intently through the windshield.

On the horizon, he sees a faint orange glow.

LANGDON

Oh no.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

The Camerlengo continues, and the cardinals are listening.

CAMERLENGO

Since the days of Galileo, the church has tried to slow the relentless march of science, sometimes with misguided means, but always with benevolent intention. Still, they call us backward, ignorant.

77.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

But who is more ignorant? The man who cannot define lightning, or the man who does not respect its awesome power?

INT OLIVETTI'S CAR NIGHT

Through the windshield of Olivetti's car, we see that orange glow, closer now. It's a building on fire.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

The Camerlengo continues, growing passionate.

CAMERLENGO

The promises of science have not been kept. We're a fractured and frantic species, moving down of destruction in the name of progress.

EXT SANTA MARIA DELLA VITTORIA NIGHT

The police cars come to an abrupt stop in front of the Church of Santa Maria della Vittoria. Flames glow like evil eyes through the stained-glass windows fifty feet above the ground.

A small CROWD has gathered, stabbing at their cell phones. A SIREN WAILS in the distance.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

Mortati's Aide, Father Simeon, takes advantage of the open Sistine Chapel doors and slips inside. He takes a place just behind Mortati as the Camerlengo goes on.

CAMERLENGO

Science and religion are not enemies. But there are things that science is simply too young to understand. We are here to lead, but how?

EXT SANTA MARIA DELLA VITTORIA NIGHT

With three sharp CRACKS, Olivetti fires into the lock in the front door of the church. He KICKS it open -- -- and flame RIPS out into the night air.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

The Camerlengo speaks faster now:

78.

CAMERLENGO

Shall we cloak ourselves in silence and secrecy, as in the past? Or do we open the doors, take down the blackened curtains, and speak to our flock?

INT SANTA MARIA DELLA VITTORIA NIGHT

Olivetti, Langdon, and four other VATICAN POLICE make their way into the burning church. There is a massive pile of church pews in the center aisle, burning wildly.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

The Camerlengo's wrapping up:

CAMERLENGO

Signores, I ask, no, I pray that you break this conclave. Open the doors.

INT SANTA MARIA DELLA VITTORIA NIGHT

In the burning church, two heavy incensor cables run from the walls of the church and rise above the burning pews at an angle, strung tightly to a center point. Langdon follows the wires up with his eyes --

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

INT BURNING CHURCH NIGHT

-- the wires meet at a center point, just above the roaring flames, where --

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

CAMERLENGO

Tell the world the truth.

INT BURNING CHURCH NIGHT

-- the third cardinal, still alive, is suspended over the searing flames.

A word is branded into the center of his bared chest:

FIRE.

79.

Vatican Police, led by Olivetti and Vincenzo, race into the building and draw their weapons. Olivetti SHOUTS to them in Italian, looking for a way to cut down the agonized cardinal.

Langdon races toward the pyre, but is repelled by a wall of heat ten feet away.

The Cardinal SCREAMS, and Langdon looks to the sides, following the cables that reach to the walls.

One of the Vatican Cops ducks

which is lit only by the wild orange flames. He creeps forward, gun in front of him, toward a fire extinguisher mounted on the wall.

He reaches for it --

-- but a HAND reaches for him from behind, he's pulled off his feet and --

IN THE MAIN AISLE,

Olivetti and Vincenzo whirl as TWO GUNSHOTS come from the darkened side aisle. They race toward it.

AT THE BONFIRE,

Langdon SHOUTS to two more Vatican Cops, pointing upward.

LANGDON

The cleat, on the wall! Get something to stand on!

He's pointing at a cleat, maybe ten feet up on the wall, where the right guide wire is attached.

Vatican Cops 2 & 3 drag a half-burned pew out of the fire and pull it underneath, leaning it against the wall for greater height,

Langdon starts to climb it, to uncleat the wire.

IN THE DARKENED LEFT AISLE

Olivetti creeps forward, gun at the ready, Vincenzo close behind him.

They see a form on the floor in front of them and Olivetti bends down -- it's the first Vatican Policeman.

Dead in a pool of his own blood.

80.

Vincenzo, standing behind Olivetti, looks down, horrified, and in that moment of distraction, a figure creeps up behind him --

-- and twists his head 180 degrees with one smooth motion.

Olivetti whirls, but his gun comes around a split-second slower than he does and in that split-second a shadow falls over him, something SLASHES through the air and --

IN THE MAIN AISLE,

Langdon struggles to climb the pew that's leaned against the wall as Vatican Cop 4 finds a long-handled candle snuffer and races toward the edge of the fire with it.

Blinking back the intense heat, he manages to hook the Cardinals manacled foot with it, he turns to Langdon--

-- who, stretched as far as he possibly can, just manages to loose the wire from its cleat, holding tightly to it so as not to let the Cardinal go into free-fall.

But the pew on which he's balanced starts to wobble, then- --

-- BLAM! BLAM!

Two gunshots THUD into the chests of Vatican Cops 2 & 3, who were supporting the pew. They fall, the pew tips --

-- and Langdon, falling --

-- loses his grip on the chain.

The Cardinal falls toward the flames. Vatican Cop 4 tries to pull him to safety, but doesn't have enough of WHIRRS through the pulley until it reaches its the Cardinal to an abrupt stop, six feet lower -- and directly in the middle of the bonfire.

His SHRIEK of agony echoes through the burning church.

Langdon SLAMS to the floor just at the edge of the burning church pews, maybe CRACKING a rib on the hard floor of the church.

A FIGURE steps out of the shadows, looming over him, Langdon looks up, expecting a gunshot, but instead -- -- sees the bleeding figure of Olivetti, staggering toward him, clutching his slit throat in his last moments of life.

NEARBY,

81.

Vatican Cop 4 is desperately trying to pull the Cardinal from the flames, the end of the candle-snuffer is now hooked around the Cardinal's foot, he pulls him closer, reaches out, can almost grab his ankle --

-- until he is SHOT in the back. He falls to the floor, drawing and dropping his gun in the process, losing his grip on the long-handled pole as well.

On the ground, bleeding, he sees his gun, just a foot away from his hand.

He reaches for it.

And a foot steps on his wrist, BREAKING it.

Mr. Gray stands over him, implacable.

FROM A DISTANCE,

we see Mr. Gray fire two shots into the ground where Cop 4 is lying.

Then he turns toward us.

NEARBY,

Langdon, still on the ground, looks up at the sound of the shots. Through the burning church pews he can see Mr. Gray, starting toward him.

Langdon crawls, on all fours, through the outskirts of the bonfire, toward a recessed part of the wall ten or fifteen feet away.

Mr. Gray steps up behind him, raises his gun --

VOICE (O.S.)

Polizia!

-- and turns. TWO MORE COPS, Roman Carabinieri, have run into the burning church and are making their way down the center aisle, straight toward him.

Mr. Gray raises his left (non-gun holding) hand, displaying a leather billfold with a badge in it.

MR. GRAY

(good Italian accent)

Gendarmeria Vaticano!

Recognizing the ID, the two Cops glance away for a second, to search the rest of the church -- 82.

-- and Mr. Gray BLASTS two shots into each of them.

They drop, dead, but one of them squeezes off a single round before falling.

Mr. Gray looks down, at his right shoulder, where a dark red stain is spreading on his suit. He touches it, more annoyed than anything.

UNDERNEATH THE BURNING PEWS,

Langdon has crawled as close as he dares to the raging fire, and the sleeve of his shirt is ablaze. He rolls out the other side of the embers, stamping out the flames, gets to his feet, and takes off running.

Mr. Gray pursues, only slowing his gait slightly to DOUBLE TAP two shots into the head of a dying Vatican Cop.

ACROSS THE CHURCH,

Langdon hurls himself over a balustrade and into a chapel on the far side of the church. Bullets SHATTER the glass of an elevated crypt, three feet off the floor. (Inside is a superbly detailed wax statue of a saint in death.)

Langdon dives under it and crawls backwards, staring in horror at Mr. Gray's feet as they approach the chapel from across the church.

Langdon's back THUDS into a wall.

Dead end.

But there's an old wooden grating in the wall. He turns, KICKS it with both feet.

The grating CRUNCHES into pieces, revealing a narrow crawlspace

IN THE CRAWL SPACE,

Langdon army-crawls through it.

Mr. Gray's face appears in the entry to the crypt. He pauses to change clips on his handgun --

-- the floor beneath Langdon abruptly runs out --

-- Mr. Gray raises his gun --

-- and Langdon disappears. The gunshots THUD into cement wall where he was, not where he is.

83.

UNDERGROUND,

Langdon CRUNCHES to a hard landing on a subterranean stone floor, rolls over, and sees Mr. Gray above him, now pointing down.

But there's another crawl space, and Langdon scurries into it.

IN THE SECOND CRAWL SPACE,

it's hopelessly dark, an even tighter space than the last one, filled with cobwebs that Langdon blindly claws his way through.

He hits another hole in the floor, falls a second time ---

INTO THE CATACOMB,

-- and lands on top of a pile of long-decayed skeletons in the nearly-black bottom of the church's underground warren of hiding places.

He looks up. He's ten feet from the nearest handhold, only a fool would follow him down here

BACK UP IN THE BURNING CHURCH,

-- and Mr. Gray is no fool. He steps back over the balustrade and leaves the chapel.

The waxen face of the carving in the sarcophagus melts in the intense heat of the out-of-control fire.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL - SALON NIGHT

In the salon outside the Sistine Chapel, the Camerlengo waits alone. From inside can be heard the sound of VOICES in debate.

Finally, the big doors open and Cardinal Mortati emerges, goes to him.

MORTATI

My son... God answers all prayers.

He puts a hand on the Camerlengo's shoulder.

MORTATI (cont'd)

But sometimes the answer is no.

The Camerlengo closes his eyes -- this is a terrible, terrible mistake.

84.

MORTATI

The College will not break conclave.

CAMERLENGO

We can't hide this anymore. The burning church --

MORTATI

A despicable act of terrorism.
Father Simeon will make a suitable announcement lamenting the loss of your energies to helping the Swiss explosive device, and leave church leadership --

He gestures to the open doors to the Sistine Chapel, and the assembled cardinals within.

MORTATI (cont'd)

-- to its leaders.

The Camerlengo looks at him for a long moment, then turns and walks away.

Father Simeon, who had been lurking in the open doorway to the chapel, now glides up beside him and touches Mortati's arm.

FR. SIMEON

Eminence. There is a growing fear that without the four prefiriti, a two-thirds majority for any candidate may be impossible. Unless --

He trails off, gestures vaguely.

MORTATI

Speak plainly.

FR. SIMEON

It is the recommendation of many that you ask to be removed from your post as Great Elector --

Mortati raises an eyebrow, seeing where this is going.

FR. SIMEON (cont'd)

-- thereby making yourself eligible to wear the Ring of the Fisherman.

85.

Mortati looks at him for a moment, then looks back, over his shoulder, where a small knot of Cardinals, who have clearly discussed this, are looking at him in confirmation.

MORTATI

If it is God's will, may His will be Commandante Rocher is at his desk, Vittoria's leather-bound journals on the desk in front of him. He's studying them carefully, and seems troubled by what he reads.

Through the glass walls of his office, we can see a commotion in the still-chaotic Swiss Guard headquarters. Someone is walking toward us, briskly, a WOMAN'S VOICE complaining loudly in Italian.

Rocher calmly places the journals on top of the screen of the video monitor inlaid in his desk, the one we saw earlier, with a keyhole where a power switch should be.

He pushes a button and the monitor rotates shut, into an inlaid panel in the desk's surface. It closes just after --

INT SANTA MARIA DELLA VITTORIA NIGHT

As FIREMEN put out the last of the flames (not using water, but Halon gas, which creates no steam), a metallic TAPPING sound comes from somewhere.

One of the Firemen approaches another, gets his attention -- stop what you're doing and listen.

They shut down a hose and stop, listening.

There it is again. They SHOUT in Italian to the others, now everybody shuts down their hoses and listens.

The metallic TAPPING echoes in the smoldering church.

They walk toward it -- it's coming from an oval plate in the floor, like a manhole cover, heavy and carved. We've seen one of these before, it leads to a Demon's Hole.

The TAPPING is louder now, rhythmic. Somebody's down there.
Crowbars are produced, the cover of the Demon's Hole is pried off and shoved aside, revealing --

87.

-- Robert Langdon, wedged into the top of the opening, holding a rock in one hand as he clings precariously to the walls he has climbed.

Strong hands reach down, haul him to his feet --

AT THE FRONT OF THE CHURCH,

-- and those same feet hurry to the front of the smoldering church, coming to a stop in front of -- -- Bernini's Ecstasy of St. Teresa.

The statue he came here to find. Now, as the Italian-speaking police and firemen work around him, Langdon moves, as if in his own world. He looks to the statue, repeating fragments of the poem he has by now memorized:

LANGDON

Let angels guide you on your lofty quest...

Directly over the recumbent saint, against a backdrop of gilded flame, hovers Bernini's angel. The angel's hand clutches a pointed spear of fire.

LANGDON (cont'd)
Cross Rome the mystic elements unfold...

Langdon's eyes follow the direction of the shaft, arcing toward the right side of the church.

VOICE (O.S.)
Professor?

A ROMAN POLICEMAN, a member of the Carabinieri, comes up to Langdon, discussing him in Italian with TWO OTHER COPS as he approaches.

ROMAN COP
Langdon, is it?

Langdon ignores him, pointing at the wall instead.

LANGDON
What direction is that?

ROMAN COP
Direction? West, I think. Mr.
Langdon, we've confirmed with the Vatican that they invited you into this investigation, but what I-

A MOMENT LATER,

as if by command, a map CRINKLES out on the floor of the church. It's detailed, a fire department map, and Langdon drops down on all fours, studying it.

LANGDON
We're here... Piazza Barberini...

Langdon whips a glance over at the angel, gets bearings, and rotates the map to match.

His finger travels over the map and --

CLOSE ON THE MAP,

we watch as his finger crosses church after church after church, tiny black boxes with crosses in them. There must be two dozen.

LANGDON
Damn it.

He sits back for a moment.

The Roman Cop bends down next to him. Treats him like a crazy person.

ROMAN COP
Professor, I need to know what you saw here.

LANGDON
Fire and death. Show me where Santa Maria del Popolo is.

(the Cop doesn't UNDERSTAND)

The Church, it was the first altar of science.

The Cop points to a spot at the top center of the map.

LANGDON (cont'd)

And St. Peter's is...

The Cop points to a spot at the bottom center.

Langdon's eyes widen, he grabs the Cop by the lapels --

-- and pulls a pen from the man's pocket.

89.

He turns back to the map and draws a straight line, from north to south, connecting the two churches the Cop just pointed to.

LANGDON (cont'd)

And we're over here --

He puts the pen on a point on the eastern side of the map.

LANGDON (cont'd)

-- and west is --

He draws a line straight across the map, to the west, sucking in his breath as he realizes something.

LANGDON (cont'd)

'Cross Rome...

Now he stands, slowly, and as he stands, we rise up, to get a birds-eye view of the map on the floor.

On which he has drawn a perfect cross.

LANGDON (cont'd)

It's a cross. The poem meant it literally. The four altars of science form a perfect cross.

The Cop, who has no clue what he's talking about, gets a call on his radio and turns away to take it.

LANGDON (cont'd)

(muttering to himself)

Which means the fourth element, water, should be right about --

He drops to his knees again, and traces the horizontal line to where it stops on the western side of the city, exactly as far from the center line as was the church on the eastern side.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Here.

ROMAN COP

(behind him)

Professor, I am asked to escort you to the Vatican immediately. Commander Rocher has asked to see you.

LANGDON

90.

As Langdon peers down, we see the line on the map comes to a stop in the center of a place called Piazza Navona, and as we go in closer on the map, an odd-shaped object in the middle of the Piazza starts to move, to ripple, right there on the map, and we hear the sound of running water as it slowly dissolves to --

Using a long-handled tweezers, he digs into his own flesh, gets a hold of the bullet that pierced him, and tosses it onto the metal floor of the van with a TING.

It lands beside a lumpy tarp, and as metal hits metal, the tarp jumps.

There's a human being in there. Mr. Gray speaks to the lump.

MR. GRAY

Were it up to me, it would not be this way. It is a sin to kill with pain.

But I am a sinner.

We pan off him quickly and look out the driver's window, up at a clock tower on the far side of the plaza.

CAMERLENGO

At 11:15, if the church is still in peril, give the order to evacuate the cardinals. But with dignity, let them exit into St. Peter's Square,

EXT PIAZZA NAVONA NIGHT

Piazza Navona is lightly peopled on this soft summer night with so much attention directed toward the Vatican.

The hood of a car glides into view, nearly silent, on the far side of the fountain. Langdon and the two Roman Cops step out and survey the area.

Langdon looks to the fountain. Its central core is twenty feet tall, a rugged mountain of marble with caves and grottoes through which water churns. Atop it stands an obelisk that climbs another forty feet.

LANGDON

But the Cop stops mid-sentence as he notices the black van parked on the far side of the fountain.

Silently, the Cops gesture to each other to go opposite ways around the fountain, and to Langdon to stay where he is.

Langdon, frustrated but no action hero, watches them as they slowly encircle the van.

AT THE DRIVER'S SIDE,

the First Cop approaches the Driver's Window, sees Mr. Gray sitting implacably behind the wheel. He taps lightly with a knuckle, his drawn gun at his side, just out of view.

94.

Mr. Gray opens the window.

MR. GRAY

Si?

The Roman Cop looks down, ever so briefly, at a small spreading bloodstain on Mr. Gray's shirt. When he looks back up --

-- there is a silenced pistol pointing directly at him.

PHOOM.

He takes a bullet in the forehead, slumps forward against the window, and --

FROM A DISTANCE,

we see his body pulled rapidly into the van through the driver's window. Whole thing took about three seconds. DINERS at an outdoor cafe don't even notice.

FROM LANGDON'S POINT OF VIEW, on the other side of the fountain, the van rocks slightly, but he can't see anything out of the ordinary.

He turns, looks to the Second Cop, who is just now approaching from the rear of the van.

WITH THE SECOND COP,

this one's got his gun in front of him, he's ready for anything. We creep around the back of the van with him, and just as he comes around to where he can see the driver's side --

-- the barrel of the silencer presses into his forehead. A quick exchange in Italian:

SECOND COP

Per favore?

MR. GRAY

Non posso.

PHOOM.

Another bullet, another slumping Cop, and

FROM LANGDON'S POINT OF VIEW,

the van rocks again, but he can't see anything more detailed than that. All he knows is the two cops aren't coming out from the other side of the van, something is going on -- 95.

-- and the bell in the clock tower starts to BONG.

EVEN UNARMED, LANGDON STARTS TO MOVE FORWARD, JUST AS --

-- the sliding door on the fountain side of the van SLAMS open

-- revealing the figure of the FOURTH CARDINAL, wrapped in chains and with manacled hands and feet. He thrashes against the iron links, but the chains are too heavy. One of the links bisects his mouth like a horse's bit, stifling his cries for help. Mr. Gray hovers over him.

Langdon GASPS --

-- and Mr. Gray shoves the bound figure roughly out of the van.

The Cardinal rolls, falling into the fountain with an enormous SPLASH. His weighted body sinks immediately to the bottom.

There is a moment, frozen in time, in which Langdon locks eyes with Mr. Gray, still hunched in the back of the van as the clock tower continues to BONG, the only sound we can hear.

Langdon looks at him, then down at the body in the fountain, then back up at Mr. Gray--

-- who salutes him ---

-- the van door SLAMS shut, and the van tears ass out of there.

Langdon looks from its receding taillights to the idling police car, its door hanging open, he could jump in and give chase, but then his eyes go back to the fountain, where the drowning cardinal must not have much time left, and it's really no decision at all.

Langdon covers the distance to the fountain in two quick strides and leaps in.

IN THE FOUNTAIN,

the water is waist deep and like ice. Steady streams of bubbles rise up from the bottom, churning it.

Langdon reaches the body of the Cardinal, plunges in --

UNDERWATER,

-- and struggles to get both arms underneath the drowning man.

Through the watery haze, we can see the man's bare chest, branded with the final ambigram:

WATER.

96.

Langdon struggles to lift him, but the weight is too much, he can barely get him a few inches off the bottom of the fountain, much less all the way to the surface.

Langdon, running out of air, bursts to the surface and -- ON THE SURFACE,

-- takes a deep breath, then plunges back --

UNDERWATER,

-- but he still can't move the Cardinal.

He makes eye contact with the dying man, who seems to be accepting his fate, maybe even welcoming it.

Langdon changes his grip, strains like hell, and actually gets him a few inches higher this time, but nowhere close to the air supply.

But with the new position, his eyes fall on something behind the cardinal -- a plastic tube, six inches across, streaming bubbles into the fountain.

He goes back --

ABOVE THE SURFACE

-- takes another breathy and sees the fountain of bubbles rising up to the surface just above the tube. Air!

Several PASSERS-BY notice the commotion in the fountain as Langdon dives back under the water.

UNDERWATER,

Langdon drags the body of the Cardinal a few feet across the bottom of the fountain and RIPS the tube free from its mooring, pulling it to the Cardinal's mouth.

He clamps it down over the man's lips, and the Cardinal sucks a few greedy breaths from it. Enough to keep him alive.

Langdon takes the tube and draws a couple breaths of his own, then digs his hands back underneath the Cardinal to lift him, but this time --

-- SIX MORE HANDS come in from all sides.

Several Passers-by have jumped into the fountain to help, and as they all strain together -- 97.

ON THE SURFACE,

-- the Cardinal's bound body breaks the surface and he GULPS deep lungfuls of air.

He is saved. Langdon sags against the side of the fountain, exhausted and freezing, as the others pull the Cardinal's body to safety.

In the distance, SIRENS.

Langdon, gathering himself, goes to the Cardinal, speaks in rapid Spanish, subtitled.

LANGDON

Cardinale Guidera?

CARDINAL GU

Si...si...

LANGDON

The Church of Illumination. It's where you were being held, isn't it?

Guidera nods weakly as, around them, it seems like everybody arrives at the fountain -- Carabinieri, Swiss Guard, Vatican Police, paramedics -- car after car after car.

LANGDON (cont'd)

(still to Guidera)

Where is it?!

CARDINAL GUIDERA

Castel... Sant'Angelo...

CUT TO:

INT OFFICE OF THE SWISS GUARD

NIGHT

CLOSE ON a row of weapons in a cabinet in the Office of the Swiss Commander Rocher selects a pistol and slips it into a harness.

While his back is turned to the room, Lt. Chartrand, the young Swiss Guardsman who escorted Langdon to the Archives, hurries up behind him.

CHARTRAND

Langdon says Cardinal Guidera will be killed in Piazza Navona. He's on his way there with two Carabinieri.

98.

ROCHER

Send everyone we can spare.

He closes and locks the cabinet, heads for the door. Alone.

CHARTRAND

You?

ROCHER

Staying here to continue the search for the explosive.

He leaves. Chartrand looks back at the weapons cabinet. Sees the space from which the pistol was taken.

CUT TO:

EXT CASTEL SANT'ANGELO

NIGHT

We fly over a bridge, flanked by a dozen angel statues standing sentinel on either side, leading directly toward--

-- the Castel Sant'Angelo, Castle of the Angels, its ancient stone ramparts lit by floodlights. Soaring swiftly up its facade, we close in on a mammoth bronze angel standing atop the citadel.

It points the way, all right, its sword aimed directly downward, at the castle itself, as if to say you've found it.

DOWN ON THE GROUND,

several Police Cars come to a stop in front of the castle at the same time.

Langdon climbs out the back of one just as Vittoria gets out of a car driven by a SWISS GUARDSMAN.

Langdon grabs her, thrilled to see her.

LANGDON

You're all right?

VITTORIA

I'm all right, what about you?!

LANGDON

Angels & Demons Script at IMSDb.

Cold and wet but alive. Where's
Rocher?

VITTORIA

I don't know. He took the journals, he's hiding something.

99.

More Cops arrive, and a SECURITY GUARD is pressed into service behind them, opening the massive front doors to the Castle,

LANGDON

This is it. The Church of Illumination is somewhere in the castle.

Cops pour into the courtyard of the castle. Langdon and Vittoria follow.

EXT CASTEL SANT'ANGELO - COURTYARD NIGHT

They dash around the outer bulwark of the Castle. The courtyard beneath them looks like a museum of ancient warfare -- catapults, stacks of marble cannonballs, fearful contraptions.

As the Cops quickly and silently search every nook, Langdon and Vittoria follow closely.

LANGDON

The Vatican used this place for centuries as a hideout, a prison for enemies of the church -- there are passages and catacombs everywhere. It makes sense, the Illuminati infiltrated the Church's own stronghold. Bernini was chief architect here, he left clues everywhere, it's even surrounded by a pentagonal park!

They reach the central core of the castle.

Another angel statue, similar to the one atop the citadel, stands in front of them, its sword held in the same position, pointing downward at an angle.

Langdon studies it, follows the line of the angel's sword -- and sees a gated drive that cuts across the courtyard itself.

LANGDON (cont'd)

There.

A MOMENT LATER,

he and Vittoria are down in the courtyard, at the mouth of the gated drive. The gate is open and leads to a tunnel, a gaping entry in the central core.

100.

LANGDON

A traforo. Commanders on horseback used them to ride directly into a castle from the outside.

Angels & Demons Script at IMSDb.

He gestures to the nearby Cops, who are already on it, and they all head into the darkened tunnel.

INT TUNNEL NIGHT

Police flashlights switch on and their beams bounce crazily off the walls of the tunnel.

Footsteps CRUNCH as they all press in, Langdon and Vittoria content to let men with guns lead the way.

It gets darker as they descend, and then, by the echo of their footfalls, they can tell they've entered --

A LARGE CHAMBER.

More lights are switched on, illuminating the space, which terminates in three stone walls.

LANGDON

It's a dead end.

But the Police attention is focused on the black van parked in the center of the room.

Roman Police snap into action, flashlight beams bounce everywhere, guns point in every possible window of the van, SHOUTS for whoever's inside to get the hell out now, now, now.

The doors are flung open.

The van is empty.

Except for the two dead policemen from the Piazza Navona.

The police frenzy reaches an even higher level, URGENT MESSAGES passed along on radios, half the Cops turning and heading back out of the tunnel.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Where are they going?

Vittoria listens to the orders being given in Italian.

VITTORIA

Back to search the outer castle.

101.

LANGDON

No... no, it has to be here!

But there's no stopping the Cops, and the only two that remain are posted outside the van, guarding their fallen colleagues.

VITTORIA

Robert, it's a dead end.

Langdon walks forward, to the stone wall at the end of the tunnel, and feels his way along it.

It joins smoothly with the wall on the right side.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

Robert...

But he waves her off, this has to be it. He feels all along the wall toward the other corner, and as he looks down at the ground, his eyes widen.

LANGDON

Bring a flashlight.

Vittoria borrows a flashlight from one of the two remaining Cops, who now get a CRACKLY MESSAGE on their walkie-talkies and race out of the tunnel, toward the top, leaving Langdon and Vittoria alone in the dead end.

She brings the light to Langdon, who shines its beam down at the floor. There, in the corner, is a granite block.

LANGDON (cont'd)

None of the other blocks are granite.
And they're all square.

He bends down, looks closer.

LANGDON (cont'd)

This one's a pentagram. It points --

Sure enough, the block is carved in the shape of a pentagram, with the tip pointing into the corner.

LANGDON (cont'd)

-- at nothing.

But as he shines the light, there's something off about the shadow it casts in the corner of the room. It creates an odd, dark slit.

Langdon crouches in the corner and slides his hand along the back wall of the chamber. When he reaches the point at which it should intersect the side wall -- 102.

-- his hand disappears.

LANGDON (cont'd)

The walls overlap.

He flattens himself against the back wall, shining the light straight at what should be the intersection of the walls. Half the flashlight's beam falls on the side wall, and the other half --

INT SECRET PASSAGE NIGHT

-- shines through into the secret passage behind the wall.

Langdon draws in his breath and forces himself through the tiny slit, just wide enough for a determined person to squeeze through.

Vittoria follows.

They look ahead, shining the light. They're in an extremely narrow passageway.

They start carefully down it, flashlight in front of them. They whisper.

LANGDON

Do you still have the gun?

VITTORIA

You told me to give it back.

She pulls the gun from her waistband.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

I ignored you.

LANGDON

Ignore me any time you like.

To their right, they pass half a dozen tiny jail cells, the iron bars on most eroded away. Several of the larger cells are intact, and on the floor of one they see black robes and red sashes.

They approach an iron doorway in the wall. The door is ajar and beyond it there is some sort of passage. Langdon squints at two words above it -- II Passetto.

Vittoria gestures -- that way?

Langdon shakes his head no.

103.LANGDON (cont'd)*(WHISPERS)

Leads to the Vatican. Or from it.

An ancient escape route.

They round a corner, where the tunnel takes a ninety degree turn to the right. At the corner, Langdon notices another pentagrammal block in the floor.

He bends, studies the direction it's pointing, feels the wall --

LANGDON (cont'd)

Another overlap.

-- and finds another overlapping angle, this one even smaller than the last. The wall is actually joined at the floor, seems to open out at the middle (in roughly the shape of a human form turned sideways), and joins again at the top.

HE TAKES A DEEP BREATH, SLIPS THROUGH THE GAP --

-- and finds himself at the base of a set of steep spiral stairs.

Langdon looks up, to the top of the stairs. There is an archway, adorned with a tiny carved angel.

Vittoria slips through the gap, sees the carving too.

VITTORIA

An angel.

Langdon, sensing they're close, starts up the stairs.

CUT TO:INT APOSTOLIC PALACE - HALLWAY NIGHT

Commander Rocher, eyes dead-set, walks down a hallway in the Apostolic Palace. He passes two Swiss Guardsmen with radios.

ROCHER

Get on the radio and put the word out.
Conclave is to remain sealed.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

But the Camerlengo gave the order for evacuation at eleven fif-

ROCHER

I'm countermanding it.

SWISS GUARDSMANBUT-

104.

ROCHER

That door stays SHUT! Do you understand?

SWISS GUARDSMAN

Yes sir.

Rocher keeps walking.

CUT TO:INT CHURCH OF ILLUMINATION NIGHT

Langdon and Vittoria creep into the Church of Illumination, and we get our first good look at it.

The embellishments, though faded, are replete with familiar symbology. Pentagram tiles. Planet frescoes. Pyramids.

VITTORIA

We have thirty minutes left, I can still change the battery if we can find the cannister.

Langdon nods, but he's fascinated by the place.

In the center of the room, there is an open fireplace, its embers still smoking. The four Illuminati brands, their faces wiped clean, have been placed back in a molded velvet case.

Langdon, fascinated, spots an empty slot in the very center of the case, surrounded by the four used brands.

But this one's missing.

Vittoria arrives over his shoulder, having completed a quick search of the place.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

It isn't here.

LANGDON

There's a fifth brand.

VITTORIA

What?

He touches the indentation in the velvet, puzzling it out.

LANGDON

Two crossed keys.

105.

VITTORIA

The symbol for the Vatican?

LANGDON

The papacy.

(THINKING)

They're going to kill him. Before they blow up the Vatican they're going to kill and brand the pope himself.

VITTORIA

But there is no pope.

LANGDON

Technically, there is.

VITTORIA

The Camerlengo?! We have to-

MR. GRAY (O.S.)

Please place your gun on the floor.

They freeze. Vittoria looks at Langdon, who nods -- you'd better do it. She does.

MR. GRAY (cont'd)

Now turn around.

They turn and face Mr. Gray. He looks quite dapper, and not too much the worse for wear. There is a briefcase on the ground beside him, and he's changed into a fresh shirt.

MR. GRAY (cont'd)

Kick it to me.

She does. He picks it up, ejects the clip and the round in the chamber, pockets them, and tosses the gun into the smoldering fire.

LANGDON

You could have been long gone by now.

MR. GRAY

Some do God's work for love, others for money. Which do you take me for?

As if to answer his own question, he picks up the briefcase from the floor beside him. Then studies Langdon for a moment.

106.

MR. GRAY

You're not one of them.

LANGDON

Neither are you. I was expecting a fanatic.

MR. GRAY

When they call me -- and they all call me -- it is so important to them that I know what they ask is the Lord's will. Or Allah's, or Yahweh's. And I suppose they're right. Because if He were not vengeful, I would not exist, would I?

He picks up his briefcase.

MR. GRAY (cont'd)

Be careful. These are men of God.

He turns to go. Langdon can't help himself:

LANGDON

Why didn't you kill us when you had the chance

Vittoria looks at Langdon like he's nuts.

Mr. Gray turns back, seems puzzled by the very thought.

MR. GRAY

Because no one asked me to.

He leaves.

Langdon and Vittoria pause for a moment, look at each other --

LANGDON

We've got to get to the Vatican.

CUT TO:

INT PAPAL OFFICES - HALLWAY NIGHT

Rocher reaches the office of the Pope. Two uniformed Swiss Guard are stationed outside.

Another Swiss Guardsman steps out of the office, reporting back from within.

107.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

The Camerlengo says he will grant you an audience.

ROCHER

I'd like to see him alone.

The Swiss Guards look at each other.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

That's impossible, sir. No one-

ROCHER

Have you forgotten who you work for?!

Rocher is truly intimidating when he wants to be.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

No, sir.

He nods to the other Guards, who raise their swords, allowing access.

CUT TO:

INT SECRET PASSAGE NIGHT

Vittoria and Langdon barrel down the stone stairs, into the passage, and through the open doorway to Il Passetto.

INT IL PASSETTO NIGHT

The passetto is narrow and dark, lit only by streaks of moonlight coming through the vertical slits in the walls.

But up ahead, there's light. They race for it.

CUT TO:

INT OFFICE OF THE POPE NIGHT

The Camerlengo kneels in prayer in front of the fire. He hears a sound behind him and turns as the door to the papal office opens.

Rocher enters, closes and locks the door behind him.

CAMERLENGO

CUT TO:

108.

INT/EXT IL PASSETTO NIGHT

Vittoria and Langdon race up a flight of stairs, and the passetto comes out into the open for a hundred yards or so as it leaves the Castel Sant'Angelo.

Ahead, they see a rope ladder over the side. They look down.

Directly below them, Mr. Gray is getting into an Alfa Romeo parked discretely at the end of a dead end street, making his escape.

DOWN ON THE STREET,

the car door SLAMS.

IN THE CAR,

Mr. Gray turns the key.

UP ON THE PASSETTO,

Langdon and Vittoria are running toward the Vatican again when the EXPLOSION rips through the still night.

They stagger and turn back, in time to see Mr. Gray's car go up in an enormous fireball.

VITTORIA

Men of God.

Langdon grabs her arm and they take off. The Passetto descends again, into --

INT IL PASSETTO NIGHT

-- another underground space. The outline of a steel gate looms ahead, blocking their way.

But as they draw closer, they find the ancient lock hanging open, and the gate swings freely. This tunnel has been used, and recently.

FURTHER AHEAD,

they plow onward, and now there is a low ROARING sound from above them. Langdon pauses, looks up.

LANGDON

We're under St. Peter's Square.

They keep on.

CUT TO:

109.

INT PAPAL OFFICES - HALLWAY NIGHT

In the hallway outside the Pope's office, there are raised VOICES from behind the closed door. Lt. Chartrand approaches nervously.

He and the Guards look at each other, don't know what to do. From the other direction, Father Simeon, Cardinal Mortati's Aide, strides toward them.

FR. SIMEON

I demand to speak to the Camerlengo.

AN ANGRY SHOUT from behind the door draws their attention --what the hell is going on in there?

CUT TO:

INT IL PASSETTO NIGHT

Langdon and Vittoria hit another gate, this one heavier, but it too is unlocked. The sound of St. Peter's Square fades behind them now.

UP AHEAD,

they turn a corner and, without warning --- the tunnel ends.

There is only a thick iron door, and as Langdon searches it with his flashlight, he finds no handle, no knob, no keyhole, no hinges.

LANGDON

Senza chiave! A one-way portal, the only access is from the other side!

With a ROAR of anger, he starts to POUND on the door. Vittoria joins in.

INT OFFICES OF THE POPE - HALLWAY NIGHT

CLOSE ON a watch -- 11:40. Outside the door to the Pope's office, Lt. Chartrand is desperate.

While Father Simeon attempts to argue with him in Italian, Chartrand turns, hearing the POUNDING coming from down the hall.

He heads toward it, rounds a corner --

INT POPE'S PRIVATE LIBRARY NIGHT

-- and steps into the Pope's private library, where the POUNDING is louder.

110.

He steps to a heavy door in the wall, looks unused for a century, but it's clearly the source of the sounds. He looks down, sees three keyholes in the door, and an ancient key in each of them.

Chartrand puts his ear to the door, hears VOICES --

INT IL PASSETTO NIGHT

-- and, on the other side, Langdon and Vittoria squint at the light as the heavy door is hauled open before them.

Chartrand looks at them in amazement -- how'd you get here?

LANGDON

The Camerlengo is in danger!

INT PAPAL OFFICES - HALLWAY NIGHT

Chartrand, Langdon, and Vittoria round the corner and race down the hallway toward the Pope's office, just as --

-- a BLOODCURDLING SCREAM comes from behind the closed doors. The Swiss Guard move fast, throwing open the door.

INT POPE'S OFFICE NIGHT

Langdon and the others race into the pope's office and find a truly bizarre scene.

Rocher is near the fireplace, brandishing his sidearm, aimed at the Camerlengo, who lays on the floor, writhing in agony.

His cassock is torn open, and his bare chest is seared black. A large, square brand is on the floor at Rocher's feet.

Two of the Swiss Guard act without hesitation -- they open fire.

Two bullets SLAM into Rocher's chest and he crumples.

Father Simeon bursts into the room, and as he does the Camerlengo rolls over onto one side, points his index finger at Simeon, and cries out a single word:

CAMERLENGO

ILLUMINATUS!

FR. SIMEON

You bastard!

You sanctimonious-

He rushes at the Camerlengo and Chartrand reacts on instinct, putting three bullets in Father Simeon's back.

111.

He falls to the floor, dead.

Chartrand and the Guards dash to the Camerlengo, who clutches his chest, convulsing in pain.

Langdon walks toward him, stunned, as the Guards pull the Camerlengo's hands away from his wound, revealing the fifth brand.

The crossed keys, seared into the flesh of his chest.

Langdon looks at Rocher in utter disbelief. Rocher's still alive, trying to say something, holding out a hand.

Everyone else in the room is focused on the Camerlengo, so Langdon bends down, takes the dying man's hand.

Rocher looks up at him, desperation in his eyes, trying to communicate something but too weak to say more than:

ROCHER

For safety.

And his eyes close.

Langdon withdraws his hand from Rocher's, and finds the dying man has pressed something into his palm.

A key.

Langdon looks at it, and it gives him a thought. He turns, looks at the Camerlengo, whose chest is exposed.

The crossed keys are indeed branded there -- but they're upside down.

Langdon slips the key in his pocket and approaches the Camerlengo as Chartrand gets to his feet, on his radio.

CHARTRAND

I need a Medevac to St. Peter's Square, right now!

The Camerlengo struggles to a sitting position.

CAMERLENGO

Order the evacuation. We only have nineteen minutes.

LANGDON

(POINTING)

The keys. They're upside down.

112.

VITTORIA

You think it's a sign?

LANGDON

Everything has been a sign, why should this be any different?

He looks at Rocher, dead on the floor. Back at the branded keys.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Crossed keys -- the symbol for the papacy, upside-down.

CAMERLENGO

St. Peter.

LANGDON

(YES)

The first pope, he was crucified upside-down, on Vatican Hill. Right beneath where we're standing.

CAMERLENGO

"Upon this rock I will build my church..."

LANGDON

Or bring it down upon itself.

He looks back at Rocher, and at Father Simeon, dead on the floor.

LANGDON (cont'd)

They were conservatives, the former Pope was becoming more and more liberal. Maybe they loved their church so much they were willing to destroy it.

CAMERLENGO

(thinking, repeats)

Upon this rock I will build my church.

LANGDON

St. Peter's tomb is the very core of Christendom.

CAMERLENGO

The bomb is in St. Peter's tomb!

LANGDON

(almost admiring it)
The ultimate infiltration.

113.

VITTORIA

I can still change the battery if we hurry!

CUT TO:

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

The square is more crowded than ever, and now the helicopter. Chartrand called SWOOPS in low overhead as Vatican Police frantically try to clear a landing area.

CUT TO:

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA NIGHT

Langdon, Vittoria, the Camerlengo, and two Swiss Guard are hurrying across the deserted floor of St. Peter's Basilica when the lights go out.

CHARTRAND

The grid is still cycling -- the power to this section must be down.

They race down the center aisle, to the candlelit balustrade which surrounds the winding staircase into the grottoes.

CAMERLENGO

Oil lamps. Grab one!

They do, and run down the center stair.

On the staircase,

the ninety-nine burning oil lamps throw exaggerated shadows on stone walls.

VITTORIA

What's down here?

LANGDON

The Necropolis. City of the dead.

Oh.

The Camerlengo drops to his knees and opens an iron grate in the marble floor.

CUT TO:

114.

INT THE NECROPOLIS NIGHT

Vittoria, Langdon, the Camerlengo, and Chartrand drop down through an open hole and into an underground city of ancient, winding streets. Part museum, part ruin, they run past ancient structures, some hundreds, some thousands of years old.

The rectangular tombs are similar to little houses, complete with doorways, thresholds, windows, and terraces.

AROUND A CORNER,

the Camerlengo seems to know exactly where he's going; he leads them down a narrow stone passageway.

AROUND ANOTHER CORNER,

they hurry up a small hill. At the top of the grade, there is a stone grotto, toward which the Camerlengo is racing.

He reaches the grotto, searches, but finds nothing.

Langdon and Vittoria come to a stop behind him, breathing hard.

CAMERLENGO

It must be here! It must be!

He rips aside some protective tarps, finds that underneath the actual burial site is an underground area, part of a dig in progress.

He climbs down into it, we see just the top of his head as -- -- a soft glow seems to emanate from beneath him.

The Camerlengo's head is wreathed in light for a moment, and then, as he climbs out, we see that he's holding in his hands --

-- the glowing canister of anti-matter.

ON THE GROUND NEARBY,

Vittoria drops to her knees, a tiny silver pellet in one hand, two wires leading from opposite ends of it.

VITTORIA

Set it down flat.

The Camerlengo does. Langdon bends close. Vittoria checks the timer.

VITTORIA (cont'd)

We still have seven minutes. Good.

115.

She leans down, reaching for the canister's baseplate.

As she does, a drop of sweat rolls to the tip of her nose She freezes.

Wipes the sweat away, thinking about it

VITTORIA (cont'd)

It's hot down here. Isn't it?

LANGDON

What's wrong?

VITTORIA

Heat decreases battery life. We may have less than five minutes.

CAMERLENGO

So?

VITTORIA

If I pull the power with less than five minutes, the residual charge won't hold suspension. We should leave it and get clear if we can. At least if it goes off down here the damage will be-

CAMERLENGO

NO.

And with that, he snatches up the canister and takes off running,

VITTORIA

Wait!

LANGDON

Father, please!

But he's already gone, around a darkened corner.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

In St. Peter's Square, the helicopter that was brought in for the Camerlengo waits, propellers spinning.

The Crowd seems even bigger now, and a REPORTER tells us why:

REPORTER

-- in St. Peter's Square where, despite a bomb threat and order of evacuation, the crowd is actually growing in size as we await -- 116.

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA NIGHT

The Camerlengo emerges from the spiral staircase, accidentally kicks over one of the oil lamps, spilling its burning oil on the floor of the Basilica.

He ignores it, racing for the front doors.

INT THE NECROPOLIS NIGHT

Langdon and Vittoria come around a corner in the Necropolis, having taken slightly longer to find their way.

Langdon spots the circular entry by which they first came in.

LANGDON

There it is!

They race toward it and climb up.

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA NIGHT

They hurry across the floor of St. Peter's Basilica and burst out the huge doors that open onto St. Peter's Square, just as --

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

-- the helicopter lifts off.

The Crowd watches in amazement, and the PILOT stands in the square, talking animatedly to two Swiss Guard, gesturing toward the helicopter. But if he's not flying it...

Langdon looks up at the helicopter as it climbs, straight upward.

LANGDON

Oh my God...

INT HELICOPTER NIGHT

The Camerlengo is indeed at the controls of the helicopter, piloting it upwards and away from the crowd below. The canister is beside him on the passenger seat.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

The crowd falls silent, all eyes turning upward, watching the helicopter recede into the clouds.

117.

INT HELICOPTER NIGHT

The canister BEEPS on the seat beside the Camerlengo -- still a few minutes left on its timer, but the urgently flashing red power light can't be considered a good sign.

The Camerlengo looks at it.

Crosses himself.

Raises the crucifix from around his neck and brushes it against his lips.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

All eyes are upturned, all voices have fallen still, watching as the helicopter's anti-collision lights disappear into the clouded night sky.

EXT IN THE SKY NIGHT

High above the square, the helicopter still climbs, rotating in circles.

INT HELICOPTER NIGHT

CLOSE ON the canister as the red light flashes even faster, and a shrill BEEPING fills the cockpit.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

In the crowd, faces turn, PEOPLE point. There's something in the sky above them.

Langdon and Vittoria see it too -- a faint white speck, far up in the sky. This is the explosion?

EXT IN THE SKY NIGHT

No, the faint white speck is a billowing parachute -- and the Camerlengo dangles at the end of it.

ABOVE HIM,

the helicopter continues to climb, far up into the night.

INT HELICOPTER NIGHT

And in the canister, the BEEPING sound becomes continuous and the light winks out altogether.

118.

The shimmering bead of anti-matter falls out of suspension and drops, slowly, toward the bottom of the canister, it barely touches the surface --

EXT IN THE SKY NIGHT

-- and the helicopter explodes in a blinding pinpoint of white light.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

Up in the sky over St. Peter's Square, the pinpoint of light is tiny at first, then it shoots out to either side in a searing white line, then the white line balloons out on either side, expanding into a gigantic ball of hot white light.

And then the sound hits.

THIS is the explosion, and it is so much more ferocious than we could have imagined.

The entire image is bleached white, with only the faint outlines of people visible within it.

And then concussive force of the blast hits, like heat waves, rippling everything in its way. SCREAMING and panic.

EXT IN THE SKY NIGHT

The Camerlengo, clinging to the parachute, is buffeted wildly, spun over and over, tangling him in his cords, which makes him fall faster.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

The second wave of the blast comes, and this one's ten times as powerful as the first.

Everything standing is flattened -- PEOPLE, camera trucks, the fountain in the middle of the square collapses in a shower of marble and water.

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA NIGHT

Ceiling tiles fall and SMASH on the floor inside St. Peter's, statues topple.

EXT IN THE SKY NIGHT

The Camerlengo falls, unconscious now, tumbling over and over, dropping too fast. He SLAMS off an angled rooftop, headed for the ground.

119.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

In the square, Langdon and Vittoria dodge falling debris. Vittoria loses her footing as a chunk of plaster CRUNCHES off a building, plummeting toward her.

Langdon pulls her to safety as the plaster PULVERIZES itself in the square.

EXT IN THE SKY NIGHT

The Camerlengo CRUNCHES off the side of another building and drifts downward, fast, toward the crowd in St. Peter's.

His unconscious form SMASHES through a dozen people before SLAMMING to the ground at one edge of the square.

AND IN THE SKY ABOVE, the blast suddenly turns inward on itself, the heat and light and sound all seeming to suck back up into a perfect horizontal line, which then collapses in from the sides, until once again it is just a speck of white hot light --

-- that disappears into the night.

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

The only sound that remains in the square is a soft night wind.

The wounded pick themselves up off the ground.

The crowd, realizing the blast is over, turns its attention to the body of the Camerlengo, on the far side of the square.

Langdon and Vittoria try to make their way toward him, but the crowd surges past them, and we soar over the heads of the crowd, wanting to get there first, wanting to be the first ones to see --- his eyes open. He's alive.

WIDE ON THE SQUARE AS a great CHEER rises up from the crowd.

CUT TO:

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

The CHEERS from outside are clearly audible in the Sistine Chapel, where the doors have been thrown open and they have gotten the news. Jubilation reigns.

A SWISS GUARDSMAN runs in, finds Cardinal Mortati.

120.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

Signore Mortati, he is alive! The Camerlengo is alive!

MORTATI

Praise God.

But he looks around him -- the Cardinals have split into small groups, they're discussing something with great animation amongst themselves.

Mortati watches, doesn't like what he's seeing.

CUT TO:

INT OFFICE OF THE SWISS GUARD NIGHT

Langdon and Vittoria, on a bench in the office of the Swiss Guard, are having superficial wounds treated. The buzz in the office is intense, just as excited as in the square and the Sistine Chapel.

Langdon looks over at Vittoria.

LANGDON

Are you okay?

She looks back at him, nods. Smiles. He reaches over, interlaces his fingers with hers, and takes her hand.

LANGDON (cont'd)

Thank God.

She smiles, turns his hand, noticing the glass on his wristwatch is broken. He notices, seems distressed.

VITTORIA

Do we have time for that story now?

LANGDON

Do I have someone to tell it to?

She smiles and kisses the back of his hand -- yes. A ROAR comes from outside and we see --

EXT ST. PETER'S SQUARE NIGHT

-- the crowd in St. Peter's Square, in rapture. There is SINGING, there's CHANTING of the Camerlengo's name. It's exactly midnight.

121.

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

In the Sistine Chapel, Cardinal Mortati is in hushed, urgent conversation with a group of seven or eight Cardinals.

MORTATI

Signores... you are no doubt aware that by Holy Law the man is ineligible for election to the papacy. He is not a cardinal, he is a priest, a chamberlain. And there is the matter of his inadequate age. I'm sorry, the protocols of conclave are not subject to modification. I will not call a ballot on this matter.

The African Cardinal who cast his vote earlier speaks up.

AFRICAN CARDINAL

But Signore, you would not call the ballot. Surely you remember -- you gave up your post as Great Elector.

Mortati looks at him. Boxed into a corner.

Outside, the crowd in St. Peter's can be heard, singing joyously.

A SECOND CARDINAL steps forward.

SECOND CARDINAL

They are singing in St. Peter's Square! What happened here tonight transcends our laws!

MORTATI

Does it? Is it God's will that we abandon reason and give ourselves over to frenzy? Discard the rules of the church?

A THIRD CARDINAL now, a peacemaker:

THIRD CARDINAL

Perhaps they need not be discarded.

They all look at him.

THIRD CARDINAL (cont'd)

I am thinking now of Romano Pontifici
Eligendo, Numero 63.

Most of the Cardinals look puzzled -- but Mortati's face darkens.

122.

THIRD CARDINAL (cont'd)

Balloting is not the only method by which a Pope can be elected. There is another, more divine method.

MORTATI

"Acclimation by Adoration."

THIRD CARDINAL

Si, signore!

The Second Cardinal sparks to this idea.

SECOND CARDINAL

Of course!

(answering those around him who look confused)

Election by Adoration occurs when all the cardinals, as if by inspiration of the Holy Spirit, freely and spontaneously, unanimously and aloud, proclaim one individual's name.

THIRD CARDINAL

And the law states that Adoration supersedes all other eligibility requirements. The candidate need only be an ordained member of the clergy.

(DRAMATICALLY)

BUT!

(they listen)

He must be present in the Sistine Chapel at the moment of election.

Many cries now of "Bring the Camerlengo to us!"

Mortati looks deeply troubled.

CUT TO:

INT ROCHER'S OFFICE NIGHT

Bandaged now, Langdon and Vittoria are ushered into Rocher's office by a Swiss Guardsman.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

Please wait here while we arrange your transportation. May I get you anything?

123.

They shake their heads, no thanks. Settle into chairs to the side of Rocher's desk.

They look uncomfortable -- it's weird to be in a dead man's office.

Vittoria looks at his desk. Thinks of something.

She gets up and goes to it, running her hand lightly over it.

LANGDON

What are you doing?

VITTORIA

Leonardo's journals. back.

I want them

She feels in the surface of the desk and finds the square outline of the inlaid panel where Rocher hid the journals. She tries prying it open, but that doesn't work, she tries pushing down on the front of it -- -- and the panel slowly rotates open. The journals, which were laid on top of the television monitor, slide out and onto the desk.

Vittoria scoops them up and is about to close the panel again when --

LANGDON

Wait a minute.

He looks down at the monitor. Thinking.

At its odd, key-shaped on/off switch.

He pulls something from his pocket -- the key Rocher gave him, just as he died.

IN LANGDON'S MIND,

he sees Rocher's face, looking up at him, dying:

ROCHER

For safety.

BACK IN THE OFFICE,

Langdon looks at the key, and its odd shape. Looks down at the monitor, the same odd shape where its switch should be.

124.

IN LANGDON'S MIND,

they're back in the Pope's office, but Rocher is alive, and saying words he said earlier:

ROCHER

The Holy Father was subject to seizures... but he took steps.

BACK IN THE OFFICE,

Rocher's voice continues over, but Langdon mouths the words as he remembers them:

ROCHER'S VOICE (O.S.)

"MADE SURE HE WAS WATCHED."

IN LANGDON'S MIND,

Rocher is back in the office again, finishing his sentence:

ROCHER

For safety.

IN ROCHER'S OFFICE,

Langdon holds the key up, repeating those last words:

LANGDON

For safety.

He lowers the key to the monitor, extending it toward the keyhole

-- and it's a perfect fit. He twists it.

And with a ZZZZT of power, the monitor winks to life. An image comes into focus.

VITTORIA

Where's that?

LANGDON

That...is the papal office.

On the monitor,

they are indeed looking at an image of the Pope's office. There are two dead bodies on the floor, covered with sheets, and VATICAN POLICE are photographing everything. Must be live.

IN ROCHER'S OFFICE,

Langdon's figuring it out.

125.

LANGDON

The Pope spent a lot of time in contemplation, alone. If he was worried about seizures, he must have asked Rocher to install a camera without telling anyone. To keep an eye on him. For safety. And maybe --

He reaches down to the screen, toward a touch panel at the bottom.

You don't have to be a symbologist to understand these symbols-- play, pause, fast forward.

And rewind. Langdon touches it.

ON THE MONITOR,

the image ZIPS backwards, rapidly, to the shooting, and the all the way back to when Rocher and the Camerlengo were alone together. Rocher stands just behind him, the Camerlengo still kneels before the fireplace.

As the image starts to play forward, in real time, we go in close on the monitor and come out --

INT POPE'S OFFICE NIGHT

-- in the papal office, to watch the scene in person.

CAMERLENGO

The scientist kept journals? So?

ROCHER

You figure prominently in them.

The Camerlengo turns his eyes back to the flames, stirring the embers with a poker.

CAMERLENGO

Really.

ROCHER

Leonardo wasn't just a physicist, he was a Catholic priest. Deeply conflicted about the implications of his work and in need of spiritual guidance. About a month ago, he requested an audience with the Pope. But you'd know that, because you granted the audience, and were present during it.

The Camerlengo twists the poker in the fire. Speaks softly.

126.

CAMERLENGO

The fool thought he had duplicated the moment of creation.

ROCHER

And the Holy Father urged him to go public. His Holiness thought the discovery might actually prove the existence of a divine power -- begin to bridge the gap between religion and science.

CAMERLENGO

Science. The new God. Ignore the weapons and chaos and madness.

The Camerlengo looks up at him, and his expression is different than we've ever seen it. Contemptuous. Angry. Violent.

CAMERLENGO (cont'd)

His work was not religious, it was sacrilegious!

ROCHER

But you saw the Pope's position as a softening of church law. An old man's weakness. Your father's weakness.

CAMERLENGO

He raised me to protect the church. Even from within.

ROCHER

So you brought an old enemy back from the dead to frighten people.

CAMERLENGO

Nothing unites hearts like the presence of evil.

ROCHER

It didn't work, Father.

CAMERLENGO

It isn't finished.

ROCHER

I've informed Father Simeon of what I learned and he'll get word to the Cardinals the moment conclave opens.

The Camerlengo looks at him calmly for a moment -- 127.

CAMERLENGO

I was planning on doing this alone.

-- and then removes the poker from the fire. But it isn't a poker, it's a long-handled brand, with a cross of some kind at the end.

Rocher pulls his gun, holds it at his side.

ROCHER

Put that down.

The Camerlengo rips open his cassock with his free hand.

CAMERLENGO

But perhaps it's better that you're here.

ROCHER

(raising the gun)

Put it down!

But the Camerlengo RAMS the red-hot brand into the exposed flesh of his bare chest. His skin SIZZLES and smokes, Rocher SHOUTS, the Camerlengo SCREAMS in agony, and we know the rest --

-- the door bursts open, Swiss Guard pour in, Rocher is shot, Father Simeon races toward the Camerlengo --

FR. SIMEON

You bastard! You sanctimonious-

-- and the Camerlengo rolls over, pointing one long finger at Father Simeon and CRYING OUT:

CAMERLENGO

ILLUMINATUS!

As we saw before, Lt. Chartrand FIRES THREE TIMES, killing Father Simeon in his tracks, we pull back, the image turns to --

INT ROCHER'S OFFICE NIGHT

-- video again, and as we complete the move out from the monitor, we see it isn't Langdon and Vittoria watching the image this time --

--- but Cardinal Mortati, flanked by two other red-robed Cardinals and a half-dozen Swiss Guardsman.

Langdon and Vittoria stand to one side as Mortati turns and looks at them. Suddenly, he seems very, very old.

CUT TO:

128.

INT GRAND STAIRCASE NIGHT

The Camerlengo, escorted by two Swiss Guardsman, descends the Royal Staircase that leads to the Sistine Chapel.

Though he is injured and limping, he radiates confidence, even benevolence, a man certain this is the greatest day of his life.

He approaches the chapel doors, speaks to the Swiss Guard posted there as he approaches.

CAMERLENGO

I have been summoned by the College of Cardinals.

Oh, they know all about it. They lift their swords, the doors sweep open, the Camerlengo strides boldly across the threshold --

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

-- and stops, right there, the look of imminent ascendancy frozen on his face.

The Cardinals are looking at him, all right, but not in joy, not in wonder, not for leadership. One hundred sixty-one faces are turned toward his, with an expression of --- -- utter condemnation.

He stands there for a moment, searching their faces, trying to figure out what could possibly have happened.

But it doesn't matter.

They know. And he knows they know.

He takes two steps backwards, almost involuntarily.

Starts to teeter, balances himself in the doorway.

Then straightens himself, smoothes his cassock.

And turns and walks away, back up the staircase.

Two Swiss Guard move to go after him, quickly, but Cardinal Mortati gestures to them.

MORTATI

Gently. But within our walls.

The Swiss Guard follow the Camerlengo up the staircase.

CUT TO:

129.

INT ST. PETER'S BASILICA NIGHT

The Camerlengo comes out of a doorway and into St. Peter's Basilica. He heads for the main doors --

-- just as HALF A DOZEN SWISS GUARD step in from outside, blocking his way. Some MURMUR softly into their radios.

He stops, turns around to come back the way he came ---

-- but TWO SWISS GUARD appear in that doorway, also with radios.

He turns again, no way to go but toward the front of the Basilica.

He sees the candlelit balustrade near the front, the one that leads to the grottoes and the Necropolis. He picks up his pace.

The Swiss Guard follow, at a slight distance.

The Camerlengo reaches the spiral staircase and stops, looking down, seeing the oil lamp he kicked over earlier.

He thinks. He picks up a fresh lamp, holds it to his face --

-- and blows out its flame with a soft PUFF.

ACROSS THE BASILICA,

we're with the Swiss Guard as they walk slowly toward him.

But they hear a CRY from ahead, he's gone down the stairs a short distance, and they can hear the sound of liquid SLOSHING.

Angels & Demons Script at IMSDb.

They break into a run as they realize what he's about to do, they're twenty feet away, then ten, then just close enough to see the Camerlengo as he --

-- SMASHES a burning oil lamp at his feet. The flames leap onto his oil-soaked clothes and --

-- HE IGNITES IN A PILLAR OF WHITE FLAME.

CUT TO:

INT SISTINE CHAPEL NIGHT

INT PAPAL APARTMENT DAY

Inside the papal apartments, Robert Langdon sits stiffly on a straight-backed chair in a hallway. Couldn't look more uncomfortable if he tried.

A Swiss Guardsman stands on either side of him.

The door to his right suddenly opens, another Guardsman nods to him, and Langdon gets to his feet, straightening his jacket.

INT OFFICE OF THE POPE DAY

Langdon is shown into the office, where a robed figure is being dressed by two VATICAN ATTENDANTS -- the clothes he dons are unmistakably papal vestments. The figure, his back to us, gestures to a nearby table.

One of the Swiss Guardsmen goes to the table and picks up an envelope, hands it to Langdon.

SWISS GUARDSMAN

A token of thanks from His Holiness.

Langdon, puzzled, opens the envelope and lets the contents fall into his hand.

It's a thin volume, but a familiar one -- the only surviving copy of Galileo's Diagramma. Langdon nearly GASPS.

The figure in the papal robes turn around. It is, of course,
Cardinal Mortati.

MORTATI

This should help you complete your scholarly work, Professor.

Langdon is too stunned to speak,

MORTATI (cont'd)

I ask only that in your last will and testament you ensure it finds its way home.

LANGDON

I -- yes, I -- of course.

132.

Mortati takes a few steps forward, studying Langdon,

MORTATI

When you write of us -- and you will write of us -- may I ask one thing?

Langdon looks at him questioningly.

MORTATI (cont'd)

Do so gently?

LANGDON

I'll try.

MORTATI

Religion is flawed, Mr. Langdon, but only because man is flawed.
Including this one.

He touches his chest lightly.

The Aides now pick up the miter, the spade-shaped papal hat. He stands still while they place it on his head, completing his attire.

LANGDON

I hear you've chosen the name Luke.
There have been Marks and Johns, but never a Luke.

MORTATI

It's said he was a doctor.

LANGDON

Is that a message? Science and faith all in one?

MORTATI

The world is in need of both.
Science can heal, or science can kill.
It depends on the soul of the man using the science.

Langdon looks at him. Likes the sound of that.

LANGDON

You'll lead wisely.

MORTATI

I'm an old man. I'll lead briefly,

Mortati comes closer to Langdon, raises his right hand, and makes a gentle sign of the cross over him, murmuring softly.

MORTATI (cont'd)

Thanks be to God, for sending someone to protect His church.

LANGDON

I -- don't believe He sent me,
Father.

MORTATI

Oh, my son...

He smiles.

MORTATI (cont'd)

Of course He did.

He turns, and his Aides part the billowing silk curtains that lead to the papal balcony.

Angels & Demons Script at IMSDb.

We move forward with him as he steps out over St. Peter's Square and a great ROAR rises up from below.

Cardinal Mortati, Pope Luke I, holds his arms out to his sides, an embrace to take in the world --

-- and behind him, hidden in the shadows of the papal apartment, just behind the billowing curtains, Robert Langdon folds his hand in front of him --

-- and bows his head.

THE SOUND OF DRUMS, from a great distance, growing louder.

FADE IN:

WE ARE FLYING through mist, a dimly glimpsed forest below.

VOICE (V.O.)

When I was lying there in the VA hospital, with a big hole blown through the middle of my life, I started having these dreams of flying.

We are very low over the forest now, gliding fast, the drums BUILDING to a PEAK --

VOICE (V.O.)

Sooner or later though, you always have to wake up...

CUT TO:

EXT. CITY - NIGHT

A SCREECH OF BRAKES as a vehicle WIPES FRAME, revealing --

JAKE SULLY, a scarred and scruffy combat vet, sitting in a beat up carbon-fiber wheelchair. At 22, his eyes are hardened by the wisdom and wariness of one who has endured pain beyond his years.

Jake stares upward at the levels of the city. MAGLEV TRAINS WHOOSH overhead on elevated tracks, against a sky of garish advertizing.

JAKE (V.O.)

They can fix a spinal, if you've got the money. But not on vet benefits, not in this economy.

The traffic light changes and Jake pushes forward with the crowd, pumping the wheels of his chair. Most of the people wear FILTER MASKS to protect them from the toxic air. In a LONG LENS STACK it is a marching torrent of anonymous, isolated souls.

INT. JAKE'S APARTMENT - NIGHT

The room is a tiny CUBICLE, prison cell meets 747 bathroom. Narrow cot, wall-screen droning away in the B.G. --

PERKY NEWSCASTER

The Bengal tiger, extinct for over a century, is making a comeback. These cloned tiger cubs at the Beijing Zoo are...

Jake laboriously pulls his pants off -- rocking to one side, pushing the fabric down past his hip, then rocking to the other, and so on.

His legs are white and atrophied. Utterly useless. But his arms are tattooed and powerfully muscled. A "Born Loser" tattoo prominent on his shoulder.

JAKE (V.O.)

I became a Marine for the hardship. To be hammered on the anvil of life. I told myself I could pass any test a man can pass.

Jake struggles with his pants a long time.

CUT TO:

INT. ROWDY BAR -- NIGHT

Not the kind of place you'd bring your mom.

We find Jake near the pool table, BALANCING his chair, front wheels off the ground, while holding a tequila shot on his forehead. ONLOOKERS, including some other disabled vets, CLAP and WHOOP.

Jake grabs the glass, SLAMS down the shot as they cheer.

A WALL-SIZED SCREEN filled with the World Cup game -- men RUNNING on antelope legs.

CU JAKE, watching what he can't have. Expression stony.

JAKE (V.O.)

Let's get it straight up front. I don't want your pity. I know the world's a cold-ass bitch.

Jake's eyes shift -- HIS POV, seeing the bar through gaps in the crowd. A MAN on a barstool SLAPS the WOMAN he's with. Hard. She cowers but he's got her arm, shouting, raising his fist. An eternal tableau. People look away.

CU JAKE -- not looking away.

JAKE (V.O.)

You want a fair deal, you're on the wrong planet. The strong prey on the weak.

TIGHT ON JAKE'S HAND as he starts pushing the wheel of his chair.

TRACKING WITH HIM as he rolls forward.

JAKE (V.O.)
It's just the way things are. And nobody does a damn thing.

Jake stops, unnoticed, next to the bullying man. He leans down and grabs one leg of the man's barstool -- and YANKS.

The chair flips. The guy goes down HARD and -- JAKE hurls himself from the wheelchair, toppling on the guy, getting a grip on him like a pit bull and PUNCHING the crap out of him, right there on the floor.

THE BOUNCER jumps in, trying to drag him off and it goes into SLOW MOTION, everybody yelling and pulling...

JAKE (V.O.)
All I ever wanted in my sorry-ass life was a single thing worth fighting for.

CUT TO:

EXT. ALLEY BEHIND BAR -- NIGHT

THE BOUNCER hurls Jake out the door, sending him SPRAWLING on the pavement. A moment later, his chair CRASHES down on him, banging across the alley, landing in the trash.

Jake struggles to rise on one elbow. He's bleeding and bruised, but still crazed and ready to fight.

JAKE
I hope you realize you've just lost a customer!

He collapses onto his back, panting.

JAKE
 (to himself)
 Candy ass bitch.

He stares upwards at the levels of the city. MAGTRAINS ROAR overhead. It starts to RAIN. He just lies there, blinking -- then shouts jauntily to no one in particular --

JAKE
 If it ain't rainin' we ain't trainin'!

CAMERA PULLS BACK high and wide, as Jake lies spread-eagled amongst the trash, getting drenched.

TWO LONG SHADOWS enter FRAME, coming to rest across him.

Jake sees two pairs of SHINY SHOES stop next to him. He squints up at --

TWO MEN. Matching suits. Their features unremarkable and blandly threatening in the way of FBI agents and auditors.

AGENT 1
Are you Jake Sully?

JAKE
Step off. You're ruinin' my good mood.

AGENT 2
It's about your brother.

CUT TO:

INT. MUNICIPAL CREMATORIUM - NIGHT

DOWN-ANGLE on a large rectangular cardboard box. HANDS ENTER FRAME, pulling open the top to reveal a DEAD MAN'S FACE. He looks EXACTLY like a clean-shaven version of Jake. His IDENTICAL TWIN -- TOMMY.

JAKE (V.O.)
The strong prey on the weak. A guy with a knife took all Tommy would ever be, for the paper in his wallet.

WIDER, showing Jake and the two agents in a high tech CREMATORIUM -- a row of stainless steel furnaces. Jake stares down at his own face.

JAKE
Jesus, Tommy.

JAKE (V.O.)
The Suits' concern was touching.

AGENT 1
Your brother represented a significant investment. We'd like to talk to you about taking over his contract.

The ATTENDANT closes the box and seals it with a tape dispenser, like it's a package for shipping. The cardboard coffin is rolled into the furnace.

JAKE (V.O.)
The egghead and the jarhead. Tommy was the scientist, not me. He was the one who wanted to get shot light years out into space to find the answers.

PUSHING IN ON JAKE as he watches, bathed in orange light.

JAKE (V.O.)

Me -- I was just another dumb grunt gettin' sent someplace I was gonna regret.

INSIDE THE FURNACE the burners quickly eat away the cardboard; TOMMY'S FACE is, for a moment, wreathed in flame but not touched by it, as we --

JAKE'S POV -- the inside of a metal coffin. A SERVO WHINE and we are moving, emerging into a large chamber --

INT. CRYO VAULT

JAKE'S POV -- A TECH in medical scrubs FLOATS WEIGHTLESSLY toward us. Wherever we are, we're not on Earth.

Jake squints as the lights flicker on, revealing --

WIDE SHOT -- the multi-tiered CRYO VAULT. Hundreds of CRYO-CAPSULES are opening like morgue drawers, as med techs pull themselves about in ZERO-G, tending to their patients.

JAKE

(a hoarse whisper)
Are we there?

MED TECH

We're there, Sunshine.

TIME CUT -- SCORES OF PEOPLE emerge from their cryo-capsules in ZERO-G. Pale spirits of the dead rising from rows of open coffins.

The MED TECH floats among them, using his announcement voice.

MED TECH

People, you have been in cryo for five years, nine months and twenty two days. You will be hungry, you will be weak. If you feel nausea, please use the sacks provided for your convenience. The staff thanks you in advance.

FOLLOWING JAKE as he pushes away from his capsule, gliding to the LOCKERS across the aisle, his paralyzed legs not an impediment in weightlessness.

CUT TO:

EXT. SPACE

Against the cold infinity of stars glides an INTERSTELLAR SPACECRAFT -- ISV VENTURE STAR. As it moves past like an endless train, we realize this thing is ENORMOUS -- over half a mile long. PAN WITH IT 180 to REVEAL --

A GAS-GIANT PLANET called POLYPHEMUS, ringed with dozens of moons which cast beauty-mark shadows on its vast face.

The ISV diminishes away from us toward the largest MOON-- a blue and surprisingly Earth-like world called PANDORA. The ship dwindles to a speck against the BLUE MOON.

CUT TO:

EXT. PANDORA ORBIT

ISV Venture Star drifts above a spectacular vista -- the sapphire seas and unfamiliar continents of Pandora.

CLOSE ON ISV -- two massive "VALKYRIE" SHUTTLES are mated to a DOCKING NODE. One of them separates from the starship and moves away, its thrusters FIRING in short bursts.

As the shuttle moves away, descending toward Pandora, we hear the sound of DRUMS, building, louder and louder until we--

The trees are alien, the color too cyan. There are waterfalls, rivers, and distant flocks of WINGED CREATURES.

Suddenly the carpet of virgin rainforest gives way to --

AN OPEN-PIT MINE. A lifeless crater -- as if a giant cookie-cutter took a chunk out of the world. Down among the terraces are EXCAVATORS and TRUCKS the size of three story buildings.

And beyond the mine is the HUMAN COLONY --

EXT. HELL'S GATE - TWILIGHT

HELL'S GATE is a cluster of squat concrete and steel structures surrounded by chain-link FENCE 10 meters high, topped with razor wire.

At the corners are towers with automated SENTRY GUNS swiveling on servo mounts.

Visible beyond the gun towers, the VALKYRIE SHUTTLE roars in across the treetops. VECTORING NOZZLES change angle, bringing the ship to a SLOW HOVER.

EXT. RAIN FOREST - TWILIGHT

Through a screen of jungle canopy, we see the VALKYRIE thunder overhead. Camera TILTS with it until leaves block the view.

A BLUE INHUMAN HAND reaches INTO SHOT, parting the foliage to reveal the shuttle hover-taxiing across the compound.

REVERSE -- ECU of two intense, cat-like golden EYES watching.

INT./EXT. SHUTTLE

The CREW CHIEF stomps down the aisle yelling --

CREW CHIEF
Exopacks on!

Passengers don their EXO-PACK breathing gear with practiced moves. Everybody except JAKE, who's turning his this way and that trying to figure out the straps.

CREW CHIEF
Remember people, you lose your mask you're unconscious in 20 seconds and you're dead in four minutes. Let's nobody be dead today, it looks bad on my report.

The crew chief stops by Jake long enough to bark --

CREW CHIEF
Exopack on, let's go!

BENEATH THE SHUTTLE air blasts outward for a hundred meter radius as it settles onto its landing gear.

INSIDE everybody is queued up in the aisles, with duffles ready. Rows of tense, expectant faces in breathing masks -- and we DIP DOWN to find Jake, wheelchair putting him at the level of everyone else's WAISTS.

THE CARGO RAMP OPENS with a hydraulic whine.

CREW CHIEF

Go directly into the base! Do not stop!
Go straight inside!

HAND-HELD, running with the arriving colonists who double time down the ramp. They jog across the exposed apron toward a walkway covered in CHAINLINK which leads to the complex.

Inside the chain-link tunnel are a couple of SEC-OPS TROOPERS, CORPORAL LYLE WAINFLEET and PRIVATE FIKE. Sec-Ops is the colony's private security force. These guys are laid back, hardened, and haggard.

WAINFLEET

Look at all that new meat.

THEIR POV -- Jake rolls down the ramp.

FIKE

Check it out, man. Meals on wheels.

WAINFLEET

That is just wrong.

Jake, pumping his chair, looks around as --

A huge TRACTOR, taller than a house, ROARS past on muddy wheels. He notices something sticking in the tires -- ARROWS. The neolithic weapons are jarring amid all the advanced technology.

Beyond the tractor, two VTOL vehicles take off. Armored and heavily armed, they are AT-99 "SCORPION" GUNSHIPS.

MITSUBISHI MK-6 AMPSUITS -- human operated walking machines 4 meters tall -- patrol the perimeter. They are heavily armored, and armed with a huge rotary cannon called a GAU-90.

Beyond the outer fence stands a black wall of forest hundreds of feet high. A SENTRY GUN OPENS FIRE from a tower. TRACERS light up the twilight. A shadowy SHAPE SHRIEKS and drops off the fence. It is an armed camp in a state of siege.

WAINFLEET and Fike give Jake and his chair the hairy eyeball as he approaches.

JAKE

What're you two limpdicks starin' at?

As Jake rolls past, SOMETHING SWOOPS down behind him and --

K-KRASH! SMASHES against the chain-link right next to his head.

A vicious AERIAL PREDATOR a meter across gnashes glass fangs against the steel. It STABS at him through the chain link with a tail ending in a glistening stiletto. A STINGBAT.

WAINFLEET casually BLASTS IT with his PISTOL. It drops off the fence, tail still lashing.

WAINFLEET

Seen a lotta guys leave this place in a wheelchair. Never seen anybody show up in one.

Jake stares at the gnashing fangs of the dying alien.

ON A WALKWAY of the OPS CENTER, seen from above, a UNIFORMED FIGURE grips the railing, watching Jake pump his chair through the tunnel below.

The hair is clipped short. The scalp is etched by long parallel SCARS where some Pandoran denizen's claws raked across it. The bare arms, below tightly rolled sleeves, seem hewn out of some hard tropical wood. Criss-crossed by scars.

The MAN raises his masked face to look at the sky. He eyes are an icy steel gray.

HIS POV -- the mighty POLYPHEMUS seems to fill the sky, beyond the clouds.

MAN (V.O.)

You are not in Kansas any more...

CUT TO:

INT. COMMISSARY - TWILIGHT

THE MAN from the balcony -- COLONEL MILES QUARITCH -- is the HEAD OF SECURITY for the Hell's Gate colony. A hundred new arrivals watch raptly as he paces like a panther across the front of the large cafeteria. He stops, stance wide.

Without his mask, we see that Quaritch's features are rugged and handsome, except for the SCAR, which runs from scalp to jaw down one side of his face. On one hip he carries a very large PISTOL.

QUARITCH

... You are on Pandora, ladies and gentlemen. Respect that fact every second of every day.

JAKE ROLLS IN, watching from the back.

COLONEL QUARITCH raises his hand and points out the window, toward the dark treeline.

QUARITCH

Out beyond that fence every living thing that crawls, flies or squats in the mud wants to kill you and eat your eyes for jujubees.

The room gets very quiet.

QUARITCH

We have an indigenous population of humanoids here called the Na'vi. They're fond of arrows dipped in a neurotoxin which can stop your heart in one minute. We operate -- we live -- at a constant threat condition yellow.

PAN ACROSS the solid faces of miners, Cat-machine drivers, engineers, geologists, as they take that in.

QUARITCH

As head of security, it's my job to keep you alive. I will not succeed -- (pausing for effect)
-- not with all of you. If you wish to survive, you need a strong mental attitude, you need to follow procedure...

PUSH IN ON JAKE, watching as the briefing continues.

JAKE (V.O.)

Nothing like an old-school safety brief to put your mind at ease.

CUT TO:

INT. CORRIDOR

People are roaming in both directions, looking for rooms, lugging duffels and cases.

An eager young XENOANTHROPOLOGIST, staggering under an overpacked duffel, runs to catch up to Jake.

NORM

Hey, you're Jake right? Tom's brother? You look just like him.
(off Jake's wary look)
Sorry, I'm Norm Spellman, I went through avatar training with him.

Norm offers his hand and Jake shakes it.

NORM

He was a great guy -- funny. It was a big shock to all of us.

JAKE

Yeah.

Jake pumps the wheels of his chair, rolling on. Norm walks with him.

NORM

And duh! -- obviously you look like him. I mean, if you weren't genetically identical, you wouldn't be taking over his avatar.

JAKE

That's why I'm here.

NORM

So -- you want to go check it out?

CUT TO:

INT. BIO-LAB - DAY

JAKE AND NORM enter the BIO-LAB -- a large lab complex with many adjoining rooms.

MAX

Me and Norm were out here to drive these remotely controlled bodies called avatars. They're grown from human DNA mixed with DNA from the natives here.

A scientist, DOCTOR MAX CULLIMORE, is supervising the uncrating of two SHIPPING CONTAINERS. The nearer has the sides removed, revealing -- a ceiling-height acrylic TANK.

Norm stops to stare, and Jake rolls past him as if drawn by some unseen force, toward --

THE AMNIO TANK. There is a FIGURE floating languidly inside, which looks like a man. A very large, very blue, man.

Blood circulates through a synthetic UMBILICAL in the abdomen. As the figure turns in the amniotic fluid, we see that it has a lemur-like TAIL. The skin is cyan-blue. Long black hair drifts, graceful as seaweed.

JAKE

Damn. They got big.

NORM

Yeah, they mature on the trip out.

(to Max)

So the proprioceptive sims worked pretty well.

MAX

Yeah, they've got great muscle tone. Give us a few hours, you guys can take them for a spin.

THE FIGURE'S sleeping face turns toward us, and the features are -- despite feline ears and a long feral snout -- definitely JAKE'S.

JAKE

It looks like him.

NORM

No, it looks like you. This is your avatar now, Jake.

ON JAKE, mesmerized as he stares into the tank.

JAKE (V.O.)

The idea is -- every driver is matched to his own avatar --

STEREOCAM VIDEO SHOT OF JAKE -- facing the camera, talking directly to the lens. JAKE'S VOICE-OVER up until now has been part of this VIDEOLOG.

JAKE

-- so their nervous systems are in tune. Or something. Which is why they offered me this gig, because I can link with Tommy's avatar, which was insanely expensive.

(looking off camera)

Is this right? I just say whatever in these videologs?

WIDER, showing Norm working nearby with Max.

NORM

Yeah. You just need to get in the habit of documenting everything -- what you see, what you feel -- it's all part of the science. Good science starts with good observation.

JAKE

Right.

(to camera)

So, whatever. Here I am. Doing science.

(looks around)

Never been in a lab before.

MAX

Log off. It's time to meet your boss for the next five years.

He leads Jake and Norm through the short corridor to the --

CUT TO:

INT. LINK ROOM - DUSK

The LINK ROOM contains a dozen PSIONIC LINK UNITS, which look like coffins crossed with MRI scanners.

NORM

Grace Augustine is a legend. She's the head of the Avatar Program, and she wrote the book -- I mean literally wrote the book -- on Pandoran botany.

MAX

(low, over his shoulder)

That's because she likes plants better than people.

DR. GRACE AUGUSTINE sits up in her link, stretching and cracking her neck after a long session. She's fifty, with a strong face and fiercely intelligent eyes.

GRACE

(yelling)

Who's got my goddamn cigarette?!

A TECH scurries to bring it to her, already lit. Around here they jump when Grace barks.

Grace stands, scowling, as Jake, Norm and Max approach.

MAX

And here she is, Cinderella back from the ball. Grace, I'd like you to meet Norm Spellman and Ja --

GRACE

Norm. I hear good things about you. How's your Na'vi?

NORM
 (Na'vi, subtitled)
May the All Mother smile upon our first meeting.

Grace nods approvingly, taking a drag on her cigarette.

GRACE
 (subtitled)
Not bad. You sound a little formal.

NORM
 (subtitled)
There is still much to learn.

Jake waits while they ignore him, chattering in fluent Na'vi.

MAX
 Uh, Grace, this is Jake S----

GRACE
 (turning to Jake)
 Yeah, yeah, I know who you are, and I don't need you. I need your brother.
 (to Max)
 You know -- the PhD who trained three years for this mission.

JAKE
 He's dead. I know it's a big inconvenience to everyone.

GRACE
 How much lab training have you had? Ever run a gas chromatograph?

JAKE
 No.

GRACE
 Any actual lab work at all?

JAKE
 High school chemistry. But I ditched.

Grace wheels on Max.

GRACE
 You see? You see? They're pissing on us without even the courtesy of calling it rain.
 (turning away)
 I'm going to Selfridge.

She shoves past Jake.

MAX

Grace, that's not a good idea.

But she's already out the door and clomping down the corridor. Max turns to Jake with a pained look.

MAX

Here, tomorrow, oh eight hundred. Try to use big words.

CUT TO:

INT. OPS CENTER - DUSK

It looks like an air-traffic control tower, with lots of screens and bay windows showing the whole complex.

ADMINISTRATOR PARKER SELFRIDGE takes a ball from a newly opened case of TITLEISTS and sets it on the floor. Selfridge is young, charismatic, focused. Some would say ruthless.

He assumes the stance and lines up his putt, toward a practice cup across the control room floor. He glances up as Grace strides toward him.

GRACE

Parker, I used to think it was benign neglect, but now I see you're intentionally screwing us.

SELFRIDGE

Grace. You know I enjoy our little talks.

GRACE

I need a research assistant, not some jarhead dropout.

Selfridge looks down and hits the ball.

Grace kicks the practice cup aside, and the ball rolls past. Selfridge looks at her with a sigh.

SELFRIDGE

Actually, we got lucky with him.

GRACE

Lucky? How is this in any way lucky?

As Selfridge saunters over to retrieve the ball --

SELFRIDGE

Well -- lucky your guy had a twin brother, and lucky the brother wasn't an oral hygienist or something. A Marine we can use. I'm assigning him to your team as security escort.

GRACE

The last thing I need is another trigger happy asshole out there!

SELFRIDGE

Look, you're supposed to be winning the hearts and minds of the natives. Isn't that the whole point of your little puppet show? If you look like them, if you talk like them, they'll trust you?

Selfridge crosses to his office, behind a glass wall nearby. Grace follows.

SELFRIDGE

But after -- how many years? -- relations with the indigenous are only getting worse.

GRACE

That tends to happen when you use machine guns on them.

On Selfridge's desk is a magnetic base, and hovering in mid-air, in the invisible field, is a lump of METALLIC ROCK. Pure UNOBTANIUM. He grabs it and holds it up between thumb and forefinger, in front of Grace's eyes.

SELFRIDGE

This is why we're here. Unobtanium. Because this little gray rock sells for twenty million a kilo. No other reason. This is what pays for the party. And it's what pays for your science. Comprendo?

He places it back in the magnetic field.

SELFRIDGE

Those savages are threatening our whole operation. We're on the brink of war and you're supposed to be finding a diplomatic solution. So use what you've got and get me some results.

CUT TO:

INT. LINK ROOM - DAY

NEXT MORNING, GRACE, NORM and JAKE approach their link units.

Jake glances through a PRESSURE WINDOW. In an adjoining chamber (the AMBIENT ROOM) JAKE'S AVATAR lies on a gurney, breathing slowly in PANDORAN AIR. NORM'S AVATAR is on a second gurney. Both are attended by med techs in exo-masks.

Norm slips into his LINK CHAIR, expertly donning biometric sensors.

GRACE

How much link time have you logged?

NORM

Five hundred and twenty hours.

Grace looks pointedly at Jake.

JAKE

Like -- an hour.

GRACE

Tell me you're joking.

Grace opens the hood of Jake's link unit. Jake starts hauling himself across from his wheelchair. She reaches to help him but --

JAKE

Don't! I got this.

Grace steps back, hands raised. He drags himself into the unit.

GRACE

So you just figured you'd come out here to the most hostile environment known to man, with no training of any kind, and see how it went? What was going through your head?

He meets her eyes with a defiant glare.

JAKE

Maybe I was just tired of doctors telling me what I couldn't do.

Grace watches him laboriously pull his inert legs into the link chair by hand.

Jake settles into the warm fluid gel packs lining the unit. It seems to enfold him. Grace adjusts his biometric sensors, then lowers the UPPER CLAMSHELL --

GRACE
Relax and let your mind go blank. That shouldn't be hard for you.

JAKE
Kiss the darkest part of my lily white --

But the SLAMMING HOOD muffles the rest.

MAX
Initiate link.

The LINK TECH touches some controls.

ON A LARGE MONITOR a 3D SCAN of Jake's brain appears. Regions of activity flow with complex shifting colors.

MAX
That's a gorgeous brain. Nice activity.

GRACE
Go figure.
(walking away)
Alright, I'm going in.

TECH
Phase-lock at forty percent. He's in transition.

Max watches a display showing the avatar's nervous system aligning with Jake's -- two ghostly networks of light merging.

MAX
That's it. Find your way home.

ECU JAKE, inside the link unit. His eyes move under the lids, like a dreamer in REM sleep as --

INSIDE JAKE'S MIND -- radiant streamers coalesce into a pulsing TUNNEL OF LIGHT and --

THE SCREEN FLARES WHITE -- ZZZWHAP! -- resolving into an overexposed, out-of-focus image -- two BLURRY FACES wearing masks, looking down.

ECU JAKE'S AVATAR -- two very intense eyes FILL FRAME, the pupils contracting. Golden irises pulse with life.

MAX

He's in.

TECH

Phase-lock ninety nine percent. The link is stable.

Blinking, Jake slowly sits up on the gurney. He looks down at his AVATAR BODY, touching his chest with one hand.

MAX

Take it slow, Jake. We need to check your motor control. Try touching your fingertips together --

But Jake isn't listening. He's staring at his legs. He eases them off the gurney and --

HIS BLUE FEET touch the concrete floor, taking his weight.

JAKE STANDS, feeling the strength in his legs. His expression is child-like with wonder.

HIS POV -- looking down at the med techs, who seem the size of children next to his 9' tall frame.

He sees something like a blue tentacle curl across his arm and he JERKS AROUND in alarm. HIS TAIL.

As he turns to see it, the tail sweeps instruments off a table with a crash. Jake laughs and grins at Max.

MED TECH

Easy, Jake, I need you to sit down --

But Jake takes a step, then another. The wires to the bio-monitors pull taut, and he yanks them off his chest.

MAX

Jake! Wait, we have to run some tests --

But Jake pushes past the protesting med techs, toward the door and --

EXT. AVATAR COMPOUND - DAY

Jake emerges, blinking in the morning sun. He finds himself in the AVATAR COMPOUND -- a living and training area.

Nearby, a couple of AVATARS are playing one-on-one in front of a (non-regulation height) basketball net. Others go about their daily activities around the compound.

Jake flexes his legs -- JUMPS -- and lands a little unsteadily, but his expression is joyful.

He takes a few steps and breaks into a RUN. People are calling to him, somewhere, but he doesn't hear them -- he's running. RUNNING!

He finds himself in the COMPOUND GARDEN, and stops amid neatly tended rows of ALIEN PLANTS. He looks down, wiggling his toes in the warm soil. Then inhales deeply -- revelling in the alien smells -- earth, plants, the nearby forest. He looks at his bare footprint in the soil of an alien world.

GRACE (O.S.)
Hey Marine!

Jake turns at the familiar voice to see --

A statuesque FEMALE AVATAR walking toward him. AVATAR GRACE is magnificent, with panther thighs, flat muscular stomach and firm athlete's breasts. She wears shorts and a T-shirt. In human years she would be about 35.

JAKE
Grace?

GRACE
Well who'd you expect, numbnuts? Think fast!

She throws him a piece of Pandoran fruit, which he catches.

GRACE
Motor control is looking good.

Jake bites into the fruit, the juice running down his chin.

NORM (O.S.)
Hey, check it out.

Jake turns to see NORM'S AVATAR posing like a bodybuilder -- chest shot, back shot, bi's.

NORM
I am a living god.

CUT TO:

EXT. MINE PIT - DAY

A WIDE SHOT of the terraced crater of the UNOBTANIUM MINE. A quiet beat, then --

K-WHOOOOM! The entire face of one terrace is blown skyward in a chain of EXPLOSIONS. The "shot" blasts hundreds of tons of rock loose.

LONG LENS ANGLES of enormous WHEEL-LOADERS shovelling up ore-rich rock and dropping it into DUMP TRUCKS.

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

A wall of steel FILLS FRAME. The DOZER BLADE crushes everything in its path, reducing trees to kindling.

WIDER, showing the CLEAR-CUTTING operation near the mine, as a road is cut through the jungle. Remotely operated DOZERS three stories tall rip into the tree-line.

One of the dozers has rotating SLASH-CUTTER, a vicious spinning head, mounted on a hydraulic arm, that hogs through the enormous tree trunks in a spray of wood-shrapnel.

The heavy machines are escorted by AMPSUITS. COLONEL QUARITCH, on foot, leads a squad of troopers wearing breathing masks and carrying almighty big AUTOMATIC WEAPONS.

A BANSHEE -- a fearsome aerial predator -- HURTLES from above, diving toward them on wings 3 meters across. We get a glimpse of glassy fangs before --

P-P-POOM! Quaritch cranks off three rapid SHOTS with his massive sidearm, and the creature drops with a SHRIEK.

It crashes near them and Quaritch FIRES two more well placed rounds. The newbies stare at the thing's barracuda teeth.

QUARITCH

For you pagues, this is a banshee. A small one. See, they like it when I bring fresh meat out here. And this clearcutting really stirs up the hornet's nest. So keep your head on a swivel. If it moves, shoot it. If you're not sure it's moving -- shoot it! If it looks like a bunch of flowers you want to take home to Sally Rottencrotch -- SHOOT IT! What're you gonna do?

TROOPERS

Shoot it, sir!

QUARITCH

Outstanding. Let's roll.

Quaritch leads his squad into the gloom of the forest, his eyes scanning. Flanking the squad, LYLE WAINFLEET drives an AMPSUIT, his massive feet CRASHING through the underbrush.

As his gaze comes down, he sees something ahead of him on the trail -- an intricate TOTEM of woven sticks, bones and feathers hanging across the trail like an orb-weaver's web.

He tears it down with the barrel of his rifle, and stomps it into the mud as he moves on.

INT. AVATAR LONGHOUSE - DUSK

Jake sits on a wooden bed in a long hut of tropical-style construction -- beamed ceiling, open sides covered by screen.

Around him the other avatars are bedding down for the night, pulling insect netting around their cots. In one hand, Jake holds the end of his long braided QUEUE of hair.

CLOSE ON the queue -- the ends of the hair writhe slowly with their own life, like tendrils of a sea creature.

JAKE

That's kinda freaky.

GRACE switches off the overheads.

GRACE

Lights out amigos. See ya' at dinner.

Jake sits in the twilight, listening to the SCREECHES and HOOTS from the forest. Finally he lies down, CLOSING HIS EYES and --

INT. LINK ROOM - NIGHT

ECU HUMAN JAKE -- his eyes OPEN.

Jake blinks, disoriented, as Max opens the upper clamshell of his link unit.

In the next chair Grace sits up, yawning and cracking her neck as the scared tech runs to her with a lit cigarette.

GRACE

(looking down)

Damn. Same old sack a' bones.

JAKE struggles with the dead weight of his legs as he hauls himself out of the unit.

CUT TO

INT. COMMISSARY - EARLY MORNING

JAKE sits with GRACE, NORM and the other avatar "drivers", while around them miners, troopers and other base personnel wolf their breakfasts. Grace is engaged in a heated conversation with another SCIENTIST.

Jake, isolated from the conversations around him, notices --

PILOT TRUDY CHACON approaching, dressed in her flight suit. She's a rock-hard former Marine with thousands of flight hours out in the badlands.

TRUDY

Sully -- Colonel wants to see you in the Armor Bay.

Jake gives Norm a puzzled glance and pivots from the table. He wheels away, led by Trudy.

TIGHT ON GRACE, scowling as she watches him go.

CUT TO:

INT. ARMOR BAY - MORNING

JAKE AND TRUDY enter the ARMOR BAY, passing TILT-ROTORS under repair. There are the heavily armed SCORPIONS as well as several SA-2 SAMSON work-horses outfitted with door guns and rocket pods.

JAKE

You guys're packing some heavy ordinance.

TRUDY

Yeah, 'cause we're not the only thing flyin' around out there. Or the biggest. I'm gonna need you on a door gun, I'm a man short.

JAKE

Yeah, no problem.

She extends her fist and he taps it with his.

TRUDY

See ya on the flight-line, zero nine.
(she points)
He's down there.

Jake rolls his chair along the central gallery of the Armor Bay, passing rows of AMPSUITS standing in service racks. Techs clamber over the 'suits, loading ordinance with cranes and lifts.

At the end of the row is a makeshift GYM area. QUARITCH is bench-pressing massive plates.

QUARITCH

This low gravity makes you soft.

(pushing the last rep)

You get soft, Pandora will shit you out dead with zero warning.

Quaritch racks the bar and sits up, sweating but not winded.

QUARITCH

I pulled your record, Corporal. Venezuela -- that was some mean bush. Nothing like this here, though. You got heart kid, coming out here.

JAKE

I figured -- just another hellhole.

Quaritch chuckles appreciatively, claps him on the shoulder. The CHIEF MECHANIC yells from the nearest AMPSUIT --

MECHANIC

That servo's in, Colonel, if you want to try it.

Quaritch crosses to the 'suit, with Jake following.

QUARITCH

I was in First Recon a few years ahead of you. More than a few. Two tours in Nigeria, not a scratch. I come out here and --

He points to his scarred face.

QUARITCH

They could fix this if I rotated back. But you know what? I kinda like it. Reminds me every day what's out there. Besides, I can't leave --

He looks out, as if he can see through the wall to the tree-line.

QUARITCH

This is my war, here.

Quaritch climbs the 'suit and reaches into the cockpit, throwing some switches. The 'suit's gas-turbine spools up with a rising WHINE.

QUARITCH

The avatar program is a joke -- buncha limp dick scientists. But we have a unique opportunity here, you and I. A recon Marine in an avatar body could get me the intel I need, on the ground, right in the hostiles' camp.

The WHINE is now a roaring WHOOSH as the 'suit trembles with power. The air boils above the exhaust vents.

Quaritch reaches in and operates the controls, flexing one huge hand. He nods to the waiting mechanic --

QUARITCH

Looks good.

(to Jake)

I need you to learn about these savages, gain their trust. Find out how I can force their cooperation, or hit 'em hard if they don't. Maybe you can keep some of my boys from going home like you. Or bagged-and-tagged.

JAKE

(nodding)

That sounds real good, Colonel. So -- am I still with Augustine?

QUARITCH

On paper. You walk like one of her science pukes, you quack like one, but you report to me. Can you do that for me?

Jake nods. Quaritch brings the 'suit to life. He steps forward and pivots smoothly.

He balances the two ton machine on one foot while sweeping the arms in strong, graceful arcs. Jake realizes he is doing a WU-SHOO KATA. A flawless display of strength and control. He's impressive, and Jake is impressed. Quaritch is the kind of man he respects -- focused, hard. Determined.

QUARITCH

Look, son -- I take care of my own. Get me what I need, I'll see you get your legs back when you rotate home. Your real legs.

He raises the 'suit's hand, and slams the canopy shut like the visor of a helmet. Jake watches Quaritch walk past, huge feet CLANGING -- KUNG! KUNG! KUNG!

INT. BIO LAB - DAY

GRACE is on the move, gulping coffee, in a hurry to get their FIRST SORTIE started. She hands a clipboard to MAX.

GRACE
Start calibrating. We're on the flight line in ten minutes.

Max nods and jogs ahead toward the LINK ROOM. JAKE and NORM fall in with Grace as they enter the CONNECTING CORRIDOR.

GRACE
What did Atilla want?

JAKE
Just Marines comparin' tattoos.

GRACE
(not buying it)
Yeah. Well, listen to me, Marine --

She stops, turning to drill him with a look.

GRACE
-- you're driving an avatar, now. That means you're in my world, got it?

JAKE
Got it.

She turns and enters the LINK ROOM.

INT. LINK ROOM

Grace crosses to the controls of Jake's LINK UNIT. As the others catch up --

GRACE
That son of a bitch has screwed up this program enough. All this -- (indicating link room)
-- exists so we can go out there and build a bridge of trust to these people, who could teach us so much. But thanks to Quaritch and his thugs the Na'vi won't even talk to us anymore.

JAKE
Then how's this supposed to work?

GRACE

We have a new face.

(turning to Norm)

You're fluent, you've studied the culture. You're non-threatening. The ones we know best -- the Omaticaya clan -- may give you a chance. Maybe you can get them back to the table before things go tits-up for good.

NORM

This is failing as a pep talk.

Jake hauls himself across from wheelchair to link.

JAKE

How do we contact them?

GRACE

We don't. They contact us. If they see us taking our samples, treating the forest with respect --

(pointedly to Jake)

Not trampling everything in sight -- they may reach out to us.

JAKE

Or they may skin us and make a drum.

Jake lies back, lowering the sensor array over his body.

GRACE

Just keep your mouth shut and let Norm do the talking.

She closes his clamshell, HARD, and we --

CUT TO:

EXT. RAIN FOREST / AERIAL - DAY

FLYING over a carpet of rainforest, past sheer cliffs and cloud-wreathed mesas. TRUDY'S SAMSON TILT-ROTOR chases its shadow across the treetops. Though big as a Blackhawk, it is tiny in the vast primeval landscape.

ANGLE THROUGH the open side doors of the Samson. Trooper WAINFLEET, in exo-mask and body armor, leans on his door gun, scanning for aerial predators.

In avatar form JAKE, GRACE and NORM watch the forest unrolling beneath them, the wind blasting their clothes. Jake mans the other door gun, his feet propped on the skids.

TRUDY flies from a pressurized cockpit. She banks to follow a shallow river.

TRUDY (INTERCOM)
Sturmbeest herd, one o'clock.

Norm grins and points, excitedly. Jake looks in time to see-- A herd of STURMBEEST -- massive six-legged creatures reminiscent of buffalo -- thundering across the river.

GRACE
Looks like a bull, six cows and some juveniles.

NORM
The bull has the red on the dorsal armor?

Grace nods approvingly.

TIME CUT -- Hundreds of purple winged creatures take flight from a lake, startled by the Samson. They skim the water above their own reflections. TETRAPTERONS.

TIME CUT -- the ground drops away as the Samson flies over a WATERFALL hundreds of feet high. Trudy banks hard, rolling in on the gorge below like it's a gun-run.

Wainfleet WHOOPS while Norm looks like he's about to puke.

WAINFLEET
Yo Chacon! Get some!

Jake grins into the airstream.

CUT TO:

EXT. CLEARING - DAY

A small meadow among towering trees. The fern-like "grass" is beaten down in waves by the rotor-wash as the Samson settles to the ground.

Jake pulls the massive door gun off its pintle mount and hefts it like an assault rifle.

He and Wainfleet leap out to secure the LZ, scanning the tree-line warily, weapons aimed.

Grace jogs forward to the cockpit, motioning Trudy to shut down. Trudy kills the Samson's TURBINES.

Grace, towering over Wainfleet, motions him to hang back.

GRACE
 Stay with the ship.
 (for Jake)
 One idiot with a gun's enough.

WAINFLEET
 Whatever you say, Doc.

Jake takes point as they enter the jungle.

WAINFLEET
 (laughing)
 Ya'll have fun out there.

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

The forest engulfs JAKE, GRACE and NORM in cyan gloom. The shadows are alive with the CHITTERING sounds of unseen alien wildlife.

TRACKING WITH JAKE as he moves through the foliage, hyper-alert -- looking around like a tourist in Hell. A monkey-like PROLEMURIS leaping from limb to limb overhead, flashing through the sunlight streaming down in shafts.

A PLANT with swaying tendrils which reach toward Jake as he passes.

This forest is more alive than any on Earth, with plants that react and move like animals. Jake white-knuckles his rifle as if every shadow conceals razor-fanged death.

GRACE
 Relax, Marine. You're making me nervous.

She pushes ahead of him on the trail, forcing him to lower his muzzle as he follows her. Grace moves nimbly on the path, seemingly unconcerned.

CUT TO:

EXT. FOREST/ GLEN

WIDE SHOT as the party moves between the huge trees, tiny as ants. The trail has gotten steeper, the going tougher.

CUT TO:

EXT. SCHOOL RUINS - DAY

They enter a clearing with an OVERGROWN BUILDING made of timbers cut from the local trees, with a thatch roof. It is covered with vines as the jungle reclaims it.

NORM
How will they know we're here?

GRACE
I'm sure they're watching us right now.

Norm gulps. Jake looks behind him as they approach the school, feeling unseen eyes.

CUT TO:

INT. SCHOOL RUINS

TRACKING WITH JAKE'S BOOTS as he steps among dried leaves and a few moldering CHILDREN'S BOOKS. Floorboards CREAK.

GRACE (O.S.)
The kids were so bright, so eager to learn... they picked up English faster than I could teach it to them.

WIDER as Jake explores the room. Grace and Norm are selecting INSTRUMENTS from storage cases on a wooden table.

GRACE
Bring the soil probe -- right there, yellow case.

Jake looks up at a RUSTLING among the dark rafters. Roosting STINGBATS eye him warily, fluttering their wings.

Grace picks up a moldering copy of "The Lorax" by Dr. Seuss from the floor and puts it back on a shelf.

GRACE
(wistfully)
The stingbats knock them off. I guess I always hope somebody will come back and read them.

NORM
Why don't they come back?

GRACE
(grimly)
The Na'vi learned as much about us as they needed to know.

Jake sees something, and approaches the blackboard -- reaches out to touch a pattern of holes blasted into the slate. Unmistakably BULLET HOLES.

JAKE
(turning to her)
What happened here?

GRACE
(sharply)
Are you going to help with this gear?
We've got a lot to do.

She turns away. Jake watches her as he jams equipment into his pack.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

CLOSE ON Grace's blue hand gently brushing away soil, exposing a tangle of ROOT TENDRILS.

GRACE
See, right here where the roots of the two trees interact.

WIDER -- GRACE and NORM crouch among enormous octopoidal roots. She takes a tiny sample using a needle-like probe. Norm uses a digital DEVICE to scan the roots.

JAKE, bored, scouts ahead a few meters.

He comes to a GLADE filled with shoulder-high SPIRAL PLANTS called HELICORADIANS.

He BRUSHES one and SHTOONK! -- it SUCKS DOWN into a tube in the ground so quickly it seems to simply vanish.

Curious, Jake touches another -- SHTOONK! And another -- like popping balloons after a party. SHTOONK! SHTOONK! SHTOONK!

A chain reaction begins and the whole colony pulls down into the ground, REVEALING --

A HAMMERHEAD TITANOTHERE. Like a six-legged rhinoceros, but twice that size. Its massive, low-slung head has projections of bone giving it the look of a hammerhead shark.

Its baleful eyes lock onto him. Jake raises his rifle.

Grace, alerted by the creature's SNORTS, runs to where she can see the tableau. She presses her THROAT MIKE.

GRACE
Don't shoot. You'll piss it off.

The bull HAMMERHEAD bellows and lowers its 3 meter wide sledgehammer of a skull.

JAKE

It's already pissed off!

GRACE

Jake, that armor's too thick. Trust me.

Jake starts to back away. The hammerhead bellows again, pawing the earth.

GRACE

It's a territorial threat display. Do not run, or he'll charge.

JAKE

What do I do?

GRACE

Hold your ground!

The hammerhead SLASHES its head sideways, splintering saplings. It bellows again, lowers its head and CHARGES --

Jake SCREAMS at the top of his lungs, spreads his arms wide and runs straight at the thing.

It STOPS abruptly, with an oversized BLEAT.

ON JAKE -- amazed the gambit worked.

JAKE

Oh yeah! Who's bad?! That's right.

SOMETHING rises up behind him out of focus --

A THANATOR. The most awesome land predator the universe has ever conceived This thing could eat a T-rex and have the Alien for desert.

It is a black six-limbed panther from Hell, with an armored head and massive distensible jaws.

JAKE, unaware of the advancing thanator, is still bracing the hammerhead --

JAKE

That's what I'm talkin' about, bitch!

The bull wheels around, TRUMPETING in fear, and CRASHES away through splintering undergrowth.

JAKE

That's right motherf--

A guttural SNARL behind him. Jake spins in time to see --

THREE TONS of rippling thanator LAUNCH over him, landing between him and the hammerhead. The ground shakes.

The thanator emits an earsplitting ROAR, enraged that the hammerhead got away. It twists on itself, turning to face Jake, and bares its fangs with a lethal HISS.

JAKE

What about this one? Run, don't run?
What?

GRACE

Run. Definitely RUN!

Jake BOLTS as --

The thanator LEAPS after him and --

Jake launches himself between two large trunks, forcing the beast to claw its way around to the side while --

Jake scrambles up -- around -- over a tangle of roots and --

SK-RASH!! CLAWS SLASH the air behind him, EXPLODING bark off a trunk as -- JAKE wills himself forward in a frenzy. With rippling muscle the beast is airborne again, blacking out the sun but --

JAKE dives under a massive root system, and --

CRASH! Kindling rains around him as the beast tears into the root-trunks above him. Claws SLASH down next to him as he rolls and crawls -- Glistening jaws SMASH and SNAP against the barrier trunks, sending chunks of wood flying. It's spittle sprays across Jake, jaws inches away as --

He rolls onto his back, and FIRES his AR point blank but the rifle is SNATCHED out of his hands. The beast SCREECHES an ungodly WAIL of pain and rage and -- RIPS the ENTIRE TRUNK away. Jake scrambles to escape but --

GLISTENING JAWS lunge downward, SNAP SHUT and --

The creature rips Jake out of the tree, shaking him like a junkyard dog with a rabbit, only --

It has him by the BACKPACK, so Jake unlatches it and --

He FLIES FREE as the thanator crushes the pack with its teeth. Giving Jake a moment to sprint away, but --

With a hideous BELLOW the thanator crashes after him, splintering trees.

JAKE RUNS in a blur, dodging between trunks as a glistening black tornado shreds the forest behind him and --

He sees WATER ahead and DIVES OUTWARD with all his might --

The thanator's jaws SNAP SHUT inches behind him as he flies out into open space and --

JAKE SPLASHES down into a swiftly moving river.

The thanator LEAPS DOWN AFTER HIM, pursuing from rock to rock, its claws swiping like a grizzly fishing for salmon.

Jake ducks under as -- FWHOOSH! -- black claws SLASH past his face amid turbulent bubbles.

A WATERFALL ahead. Jake is swept over the falls, with the thanator SWIPING at him from a rock, just MISSING and -- Jake disappears down the throat of the thundering cataract.

EXT. RIVER BELOW FALLS - DAY

The water boils below the cataract. Jake's head bursts through the surface, and he gasps for breath.

He is carried along by the current, but manages to grab a limb on a fallen tree. He weakly pulls himself up, and just lies there gasping on the trunk.

Above him, on the cliff, the THANATOR BELLOWS, a roar which echoes across the jungle.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

JAKE, wet and bruised, crouches under a screen of giant leaves. He hacks manically at the end of a cut sapling with his knife, forming a crude but sharp tip.

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

TRACKING with Jake as he walks through the forest like it's a minefield, carrying his SPEAR white-knuckled. He is freaked and hyper-alert.

The trees here are a hundred meters high, blocking out the sky. A few pencil beams of sunlight filter down into the cyan gloom.

POV FROM ABOVE -- looking down through leaves we watch Jake move warily through the forest.

ECU -- TWO GOLDEN EYES, bright in the shadows.

DOWNANGLE as Jake passes under a tree limb. Invisible to him, draped on the limb like a leopard, is a striking NA'VI GIRL. She watches, only her eyes moving.

She is lithe as a cat, with a long neck, muscular shoulders, and nubile breasts. And she is devastatingly beautiful -- for a girl with a tail. In human age she would be 18. Her name is NEYTIRI(nay-Tee-ree).

Jake passes less than 2 meters beneath her, oblivious.

NEYTIRI rises soundlessly. In one fluid, sinuous movement she NOCKS an arrow to her BOW and DRAWS, aiming RIGHT AT JAKE. Utterly silent.

Below her Jake is totally unaware of the arrow aimed at his THROAT.

ON NEYTIRI as she follows him with the bow, muscles tensing for the shot --

-- and SOMETHING drifts down in front of her, F.G. She hesitates.

RACK FOCUS to the tip of the arrow -- where a single WOODSPRITE floats down to land on the arrow-head. Like a dandelion seed, but larger, the WOODSPRITE waves its silky CILIA, feather light, as it balances on the deadly point. It glows faintly in the dark shadows.

NEYTIRI frowns, puzzled, and LOWERS her bow slowly. The woodsprite WHIRLS away into the gloom.

CUT TO:

INT./EXT. SAMSON - SUNSET

GRACE and NORM peer down into the shadowed forest as TRUDY banks in a search pattern.

TRUDY (INTERCOM)
I'm going to have to call it, guys. We're not allowed to run night ops. Colonel's orders.

Grace looks to the west. The sun setting behind alien trees.

GRACE

Shit.

TRUDY

Sorry, Doc. He's just gonna have to hang on 'till morning.

GRACE

He's not going to make it till morning.

Grace stares into the dark forest as the Samson banks hard, thundering away toward the setting sun.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - NIGHT

LONG LENS-- POLYPHEMUS. The giant planet rises behind the black trees.

Jake's got a new problem. He sees shapes moving with liquid grace in the NIGHT shadows behind him. He is being stalked by a pack of VIPERWOLVES.

Jake catches only glimpses -- a glint of eyes, a slinking black movement -- then nothing. Darkness.

TIME CUT -- TIGHT ON Jake's hands as he knots his T-shirt around the butt end of the spear.

ANGLE ON THICK SAP trickling down a tree-trunk. Jake jams the makeshift torch into the sap, soaking the shirt with it.

A WATERPROOF MATCH from his survival kit lights the torch.

The torch creates a pool of light surrounded by pulsing, leaping shadows. Jake turns warily as he moves along the trail.

Behind him are several pairs of reflective green EYES. Another pair flanking him beside the trail. Black-on-black SHAPES which seem to flow like liquid.

He looks up -- sees one cross a limb overhead. Another on his opposite flank.

Then a hideous sound, like a hyena's psychotic LAUGH.

The VIPERWOLVES can run like a dog and climb like a monkey. They are hunting Jake from the ground and the trees.

JAKE RUNS by torch-light, on the edge of panic. He reaches a steep banked stream and -- without thinking -- runs across it on a horizontal trunk --

-- and STOPS DEAD on the other side. The torch illuminates GREEN EYES cutting ahead of him across the trail. The viperwolves have him encircled.

The psychotic BARKS become more intense as they signal each other, getting excited. ONE MAKES A RUN at him, angling on his legs from behind but --

JAKE WHIRLS, jamming the torch in its face. It yips and goes past, but ANOTHER moves in --

He jabs it with the business end of the spear and it SNARLS, retreating, baring its fangs.

Now half a dozen are circling him in the open, and he sees what he's up against. The VIPERWOLVES are six-limbed with shiny chitinous skin, their paws leathery BLACK HANDS. Intelligent eyes. Glistening black teeth in dead white gums.

Jake realizes that he is making his final stand. He whirls the torch in an arc, keeping them at bay --

And feels a rush of adrenaline. It goes through him like a lightning bolt and the fear is gone.

JAKE
(screaming)
I don't have all goddamn night! Come on!
Come on!

With snarls and a blur of motion THEY ATTACK.

Jake CRACKS the spear down on one, then SPINS as --

ANOTHER LEAPS at him and he plants the spear in it, striking true, but --

Its momentum wrenches it from his hands, and the torch goes flying. Left in semi-darkness, Jake draws his KNIFE as--

A WOLF LUNGES, sinking its teeth into his arm. He YELLS in pain and fury, SLASHING with the knife which -- CUTS deep into the beast's shoulder and it lets go.

JAKE SPRINTS, trying to escape, but a snarling viperwolf leaps, GRABBING him by the ankle with its fore-hand. Jake tears away, sprawling, SCRAMBLING to get up as --

THREE WOLVES charge at once. The nearest LEAPS at his throat just as --

THUNK!! -- an ARROW appears in its chest.

The wolf lands on him, already a dead weight. He pushes it off in time to see --

A BLUE AMAZON emerge from the trees, nock another arrow, draw and FIRE in one fluid motion. AN UNEARTHLY YOWL as another wolf falls.

NEYTIRI LEAPS right over Jake, and CRACKS her bow down on the skull of a circling wolf.

ANOTHER SPRINGS at her and she drops under its weight, but rolls, coming up on top of it with a knife in her hand.

Her knife FLASHES down, buried to the hilt in its chest.

SNARLING, a wounded wolf attacks Jake, and he KICKS it away, but --

It SPINS and leaps back onto him, and Jake barely catches its throat in time to keep the SNAPPING JAWS away from his face.

MEANWHILE Neytiri swings her bow in a big arc, CRACKING IT across the heads and shoulders of two remaining wolves.

NEYTIRI
Rrreeyaaah! Hyaaaah!!

The wolves slink and circle, yelping as the bow whistles past them. Finally they break and run, with Neytiri chasing and--

They bound away through the foliage as she SHOUTS after them--

NEYTIRI
Raaaarrrrr!

Jake has his adversary pinned and is choking it with all his weight. Finally it stops thrashing. Panting, he releases it and looks up at -- NEYTIRI. Her tail LASHES as she scans the forest, listening to the fading YELPS of the wolves. Satisfied the attack is over, she turns.

She regards him coldly for a second, then walks past him. Neytiri picks up the torch and extinguishes it in a stream.

JAKE
Wait, don't --

Jake blinks around at the darkness -- realizing he can still see. In fact, with the blinding torchlight gone, the forest is transformed.

The jungle has come alive with BIOLUMINESCENCE -- spots and patterns, ghosts and galaxies of blue-green light.

Jake scrambles to recover his spear. Neytiri kneels beside --

A DYING WOLF. It's CRIES are pitiful. It paws the air, trying to raise its head. She pulls her KNIFE from its chest.

NEYTIRI
(in Na'vi)
Forgive me, my brother.

She cuts its throat, ending the pitiful cries. She touches its head gently, regarding it with sadness.

Neytiri wipes the knife and returns it to the sheath at her waist. She crosses to another slain wolf and kneels, pulling the arrow from its heart.

JAKE
Look, um, I know you probably don't understand this. But -- thanks. Thank you. I owe you.

Neytiri ignores him, assuming a prayer posture over the dead animal.

NEYTIRI
(in Na'vi)
Forgive me. May your spirit run with the Great Mother.

JAKE
I would have been screwed if you hadn't come along --

She rises and walks away without looking at Jake.

JAKE
Hey, wait. Wait! Where you goin'?

He crashes through some plants, catching up to her.

JAKE
Slow down a second will you. I just want to thank you for killing those --

He makes the mistake of grasping her shoulder and --

WHACK! She WALLOPS him upside the head with her bow in a fierce backhand swing, laying him out flat.

He looks up to see a FURY standing over him. A Fury who speaks English -- accented, halting, angry English.

NEYTIRI

Don't thank! You don't thank for this!
This is sad. Very sad, only.

JAKE

Okay, I'm sorry. Whatever I did -- I'm sorry.

She gestures at the bodies of the viperwolves.

NEYTIRI

All this is your fault! They did not need to die.

JAKE

They attacked me. How'm I the bad guy here--

She silences him with the tip of her bow at his throat.

NEYTIRI

Your fault! You are like a baby, making noise, don't know what to do. You should not come here, all of you! You only come and make problems. Only.

Jake gets up, slowly, facing her.

JAKE

Okay, fine, you love your little forest friends. So why not just let them kill my ass? What's the thinking?

CU Neytiri -- looking away. Finally, reluctantly, her eyes MEET HIS for the first time -- a riveting gaze with those big gold orbs.

NEYTIRI

Why save you?

JAKE

Yes, why save me?

NEYTIRI

You have a strong heart. No fear.

She leans closer --

NEYTIRI

But stupid! Ignorant like a child!

She turns away, stalking off, but Jake goes after her.

TRACKING WITH Neytiri as she climbs nimbly along a huge ROOT.

WIDER as she trots with perfect balance along the root, which forms an elevated walkway.

Jake runs to catch up, realizing suddenly that he is far above the forest floor. Throughout the following they move through a GLOWING PHANTASMAGORICAL FOREST.

JAKE

If I'm so ignorant, maybe you should teach me.

NEYTIRI

Sky people can not learn. You do not See.

She leaps to another elevated root. Jake follows, surprised that he made it.

JAKE

Whooaa.

He runs to catch up with her easy jogging pace.

JAKE

Then teach me to "see."

She stops and he almost runs into her.

NEYTIRI

No one can teach you to See.

Then she turns and trots on.

EXT. GORGE - NIGHT

They run across the elevated root of an enormous tree -- a horizontal trunk big as an oak.

WIDE SHOT as they cross a DEEP GORGE. A waterfall shimmers silver in the Polyphemus-light. Vines hang down a hundred feet into the gorge, and among them swoop stingbats and other night flyers.

JAKE

Hey, slow down. Look, I think we just got off on the wrong foot and -- Jake looks down, suddenly aware of the height.

JAKE
--you just have to get to know me. I'm
Jake. Jake Sull--

A vine catches his spear and spins him off balance. He drops the spear and almost falls off the root.

JAKE
Whooaaa -- shit!

Neytiri catches him with one hand, gripping his bicep. He watches the spear cartwheel down to splash in the river.

She pulls him upright. Shouts at him in English and Na'vi.

JAKE
I need your help.

NEYTIRI
You should not be here.

JAKE
So take me with you.

NEYTIRI
No. You go back.

DOWN ANGLE FROM FAR ABOVE -- several WOODSPRITES float down through the trees. FOLLOW THEM as they descend silently toward Jake and Neytiri.

NEYTIRI, sensing a presence, looks up to see --

The WOODSPRITES, PULSING with purpose, float right towards Jake. They dance gently around his shoulders and head.

JAKE
(off her amazed look)
What?

More woodsprites gather around him. Several ALIGHT on him.

Jake holds still, knowing he should be afraid -- but somehow he's not. He spreads his arms. More sprites come, landing all over his arms, hands, body.

JAKE
What are they?

CU NEYTIRI -- reacting with a mixture of wonder and dread.

NEYTIRI
Atokirina'. Seeds of the Great Tree -- very pure spirits.

Jake -- now a pulsing, glowing, fluttering MASS OF LIGHT -- moves one hand slowly, not wanting to break the spell. He studies one of the sprites dancing on his palm until --

-- WHOOSSHH! the woodsprites whirl up and away, scattering into the darkness.

JAKE
 What was that all about?

Neytiri seems shaken. She seizes his hand and pulls him after her.

NEYTIRI
Come!

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - NIGHT

TRACKING WITH JAKE as he gazes about him in growing wonder.
 He touches leaves as he passes, watching the bioluminescence shiver through them.

Jake looks down as -- they cross a bed of purple MOSS which reacts to the pressure of their footsteps. Rings of green light, like ripples on a pond, expand outward from each footfall. Exploding rings of light where his feet touch down. Dream-like, surreal beauty.

WIDE ON THEM as they run over a large root, across a mirror-like POOL at the base of a WATERFALL.

Jake follows Neytiri, running along a raised root-trunk.

JAKE
 What's your name?

JAKE hears WHOOSH-WHOOSH and snaps a look as a BOLO flies at him, spinning end for end and --

SHWHAP!! -- tangles around his legs. He topples off the root and crashes into the foliage below.

JAKE untangles himself, getting up to run just as --

SEVERAL NA'VI RIDERS thunder toward him. They are riding DIREHORSES -- six-legged, armor-skinned alien Clydesdales.

We see that the riders' QUEUES are connected to the horses' long moth-like antennae -- a neural-link with which they can command the horse, leaving hands free for weapons.

The riders aim bows and spears at Jake as they approach. Jake turns to bolt, but --

NA'VI HUNTERS melt out of the shadows, weapons aimed -- blocking his retreat.

Neytiri drops to the ground next to Jake and confronts the LEAD RIDER. She shouts sharply in Na'vi --

NEYTIRI

(subtitled)

Tsu'tey, what are you doing?! He is my captive!

TSU'TEY(tsu-Tay)is young and powerfully built, with sculpted features and a proud jawline, piercing eyes. Tsu'tey swings off his mount with fluid grace.

TSU'TEY

(subtitled)

These demons are forbidden here. I will kill this one as a lesson to the others!

Tsu'tey draws his bow but Neytiri leaps between him and Jake, confronting him warrior to warrior.

NEYTIRI

(subtitled)

Stop! There has been a sign. This is a matter for the Tsahik.

Tsu'tey clenches his jaw with frustration -- frustration with her as much as the situation. He turns and angrily remounts his direhorse, barking a command to the HUNTERS.

TSU'TEY

(subtitled)

Bring him.

They grab Jake and haul him to his feet. Encircled by spears and bows, he is shoved forward along the trail, as Tsu'tey and the others ride ahead.

CUT TO:

EXT. HOMETREE - NIGHT

JAKE is hauled roughly toward Neytiri's village, which is sheltered inside one of the GREAT TREES. HOMETREE is 250 meters tall, with a trunk four times the diameter of the largest Sequoia, and a base of massive mangrove-pillars.

TSU'TEY rides inside the columns at the base of Hometree, shouting an ululating WARNING.

Jake is force-marched through the pillars into --

INT. COMMONS/HOMETREE - NIGHT

An open CENTRAL AREA. The villagers gather to see the arriving hunt party. We see the people of the tribe -- mothers with babies, old women, young hunters.

They gawk at the alien, expressions ranging from curiosity to outright hostility. The huge eyes of the children follow him.

Jake is amazed at the size of HOMETREE inside. By the light of the COOK-FIRES he can see up into a vast cylindrical gallery -- a living cathedral.

Clear membranes -- sturmbeest bladders -- filled with fluttering bio-luminescent insects, act as area lighting.

The central space is dominated by the SKULL of some enormous creature, mounted with much embellishment on a TOTEM. Standing in front of this, awaiting their approach, is -- EYTUKAN (AY-too-kahn), the Clan Leader. Eytukan has deeply chiselled features and a long chest mantle of THANATOR CLAWS. His normally stern features are clouded further by anger.

EYTUKAN

(subtitled)

Why do you bring this creature here?

Neytiri addresses Eytukan in Na'vi.

NEYTIRI

(subtitled)

I was going to kill him, but there was a sign from Eywa.

He glowers at her as he responds, pointing at Jake.

EYTUKAN

(subtitled)

I have said no dreamwalker will come here, to offend our home! His alien smell fills my nose

Neytiri stands her ground, answering in a respectful but not submissive tone.

NEYTIRI

(subtitled)

Father, many atokirina came to this alien.

JAKE

What's going on?

NEYTIRI

My father is deciding whether to kill you.

JAKE

Your father!?

(to Eytukan)

Uh, good to meet you, sir.

Jake steps forward, offering his hand, and the hunters JUMP to restrain him, shouting. But they all FREEZE as --

A commanding FEMALE VOICE echoes through the chamber.

MO'AT

(Na'vi)

Step back!

Everybody looks up.

MO'AT (MOH-aht) stands on the second level, looking down. She is a severe woman in her 50's. Her bearing is haughty, her expression friendly as a hanging-judge. Her outfit is elaborate, denoting her rank as CLAN MATRIARCH.

MO'AT

(subtitled)

I will look at this alien.

There is an expectant hush as Mo'at descends the helical core of Hometree, a kind of natural spiral staircase.

NEYTIRI

That is Mother. She is Tsahik -- the one who interprets the will of Eywa.

JAKE

Who's Eywa?

Neytiri kneels before her like an acolyte as Mo'at passes.

The villagers stare silently as the Matriarch circles slowly around Jake, examining his tail and the end of his queue.

MO'AT
(thick accent)
What are you called?

JAKE
Jake Sully.

She produces a long THORN between her fingertips. With a flourish she strikes his chest.

Jake flinches. RED BLOOD wells up and Mo'at rubs some between her fingertips. She tastes it.

MO'AT
Why did you come to us?

JAKE
I came to learn.

MO'AT
We have tried to teach other Sky People.
It is hard to fill a cup which is already full.

JAKE
My cup is empty, trust me. Just ask Doctor Augustine. I'm no scientist.

MO'AT
What are you?

JAKE
I don't know. I was a Marine -- uh, a warrior. Of the Jarhead clan.

TSU'TEY
(subtitled)
A warrior! I could kill him easily!

EYTUKAN
(subtitled)
No! This is the first warrior dreamwalker we have seen. We need to learn more about him.

JAKE
What's going on? What are they saying?

MO'AT
(to Neytiri, subtitled)
Daughter. You will teach him our way, to speak and walk as we do.

NEYTIRI looks shocked, then angry.

NEYTIRI
(subtitled)
Why me? That's not fair! I only--

MO'AT
(subtitled)
It is decided!

Neytiri subsides, turning to glare at Jake.

MO'AT
(to Jake)
My daughter will teach you our ways.
Learn well, Jakesully. We will see if your insanity can be cured.

She turns to Neytiri, her expression stern --

MO'AT
(subtitled)
He is your responsibility.

Neytiri nods, accepting, but she's not a happy camper. She grabs Jake's arm and pulls him roughly away.

JAKE
So it's all good, right? You and me --

NEYTIRI
Do not speak.

CUT TO:

INT. SECOND LEVEL/HOMETREE

LATER, Neytiri leads Jake up the spiral to the SECOND LEVEL. He now wears only a ratty LOINCLOTH. His wounds are bound with plant-fiber bandages.

THE ENTIRE CLAN is squatting at dinner in a huge circle. They stop talking and turn to gaze at Jake as he enters the circle.

JAKE
Don't get up.

Neytiri crosses the circle to the cook pit and returns with several large leaves heaped with food. She kneels next to Jake, placing the food in front of him almost DEFIANTLY.

JAKE
You never told me your name.

NEYTIRI
Neytiri te Ckaha Mo'at'ite.

JAKE
 Okay, again, a whole lot slower.

NEYTIRI
 (exaggerated slowness)
 Neytiri. Nay-TEE-ree.

Jake knows she's baiting him. He smiles in response.

JAKE
 Nay-TEE-ree. That's nice. Nay-TEE-ree.

ACROSS THE CIRCLE, Tsu'tey, Mo'at and Eytukan sit together, glancing up occasionally from their food to the stranger.

TSU'TEY
 (subtitled)
These aliens try to look like people, but they can't.

MO'AT
 (subtitled)
He seems dim to me. And his eyes are too small.

NEYTIRI motions for Jake to take portions from the serving leaves onto his own leaf.

JAKE
 Your mom likes me. I can tell.

MO'AT, watching Jake and Neytiri, leans over to Eytukan.

MO'AT
 (subtitled)
Neytiri will test this "warrior." Hey may learn nothing -- but we will learn much.

EYTUKAN
You speak truth. We must understand these Sky People if we are to drive them out.

Jake munches on a white shrimp-like thing.

JAKE
These rock. What are they?

NEYTIRI
 Teylu. You call beetle larvae.

Jake blanches. She heaps some more onto his leaf -- a CHALLENGE -- and Jake meets her eyes, takes a handful, and starts munching enthusiastically.

JAKE
That's some damn fine teylu. That's like grandma's teylu.

CU TSU'TEY, warily eyeing Jake --

TSU'TEY
(subtitled)
I say she will kill him.

CUT TO:

INT. THIRD LEVEL - NIGHT

The sleeping level -- families nesting in groups on woven hammocks the size of trampolines. The hunters sleep along SPOKES joining the inner trunk to the tree's outer shell.

Jake lies awake in a hammock, people rustling in the darkness around him. Neytiri is nearby, curled up like a little girl. She stares at him for a moment, then closes her eyes.

Jake watches the glowing bugs fluttering inside a night-light, a pulse of life energy. A strange peace spreads through him. He closes his eyes and --

CUT TO:

INT. LINK ROOM - NIGHT

GRACE is over JAKE in the Link, SLAPPING him, as Max and NORM hover.

GRACE
Come on back, kid, that's it.

JAKE
Wha --? Oh.

He looks around, blinking. Reality crashing in.

GRACE
Damn, you were dug in like a tick.
(she helps him sit up)
Is the avatar safe?

JAKE
(huge grin)
Yeah, Doc -- and you are not going to believe where I am.

CUT TO:

INT. COMMISSARY - MORNING

BREAKFAST the next day. The other drivers lean forward, hanging on Grace's re-telling of the tale.

GRACE

-- so the kid's out there one night and he's got the Queen Bitch herself offering him the spare room and the car keys. Unbelievable.

JAKE

It's not something you can teach.

Some of the other scientists clap Jake on the shoulders in congratulation.

MAX

That's awesome, Jake.

NORM chomps his bacon, fuming.

GRACE

(to Jake, getting serious)
For reasons I cannot fathom, the Omaticaya have chosen you. God help us all.

CUT TO:

INT. OPS CENTER - MORNING

JAKE has reported to SELFRIDGE and QUARITCH. Quaritch turns from gazing out at the wall of forest, displaying a feral grin.

QUARITCH

Jarhead clan?
(he laughs)
And that worked?

JAKE

(grinning)
Yeah. They want to study me. See if I can learn to be one of them.

QUARITCH

That's how you seize the initiative. I wish I had ten more like you.

SELFRRIDGE

Look, Sully -- find out what these blue monkeys want.

(MORE)

SELFRIDGE (cont'd)
We try to give them medicine and education. Roads! But no -- they like mud. I wouldn't care except --

Selfridge turns to a large 3D GRAPHIC DISPLAY, pointing. A road runs from Hell's Gate to a proposed new mine miles away.

SELFRIDGE
Their damn village is sitting right over the richest unobtainium deposit for a hundred clicks in any direction. Which sucks -- for them -- because they need to relocate.

JAKE
(taking that in)
Does Augustine know about this?

SELFRIDGE
Yeah, she does, and she's on the next ship back if she tries to cock-block me on it.

JAKE
So -- who talks them into moving?

QUARITCH
(turning) Guess.

JAKE
What if they won't go?

QUARITCH
(icy)
I'm betting they will.

SELFRIDGE
Killing the indigenous looks bad, but there's one thing shareholders hate more than bad press -- and that's a bad quarterly statement. Find me a carrot to get them to move, or it's going to have to be all stick.

Jake is shaken by the enormity of this new responsibility.

QUARITCH
You got three months. That's when the dozers get there.

JAKE
I'm on it.

CUT TO:

INT. BIO LAB - MORNING

JAKE pumps his chair across the lab, flanked by GRACE and NORM. Grace holds STEREO STILL PICTURES in front of him, one at a time -- images of clan members she has shot over the years -- a kind of flash card drill.

JAKE

Tsu'tey.

(next photo)

Mo'at.

(next photo)

Eytukan.

GRACE

He's the clan leader --

(indicating Mo'at)

-- but she's the spiritual leader. Like a shaman.

INT. LINK ROOM

The dialogue is continuous as they enter.

JAKE

Got it. So who's this Eywa?

NORM

Who's Eywa? Oh, only their deity. The Great Mother. The goddess made up of all living things. You'd know that if you had any training whatsoever.

He hauls himself from wheelchair to Link.

JAKE

Who's got a date with the chief's daughter?

GRACE

Knock it off. Jesus, it's like kindergarten around here.

As Jake settles into the soft embrace of the link, Grace inputs commands at the control station.

GRACE

Neytiri was my best student. She and her sister Silwanin. Just amazing girls.

JAKE

I didn't meet the sister.

GRACE
(quietly)
No, she's dead.
(turning to him)
Okay, let's go -- village life starts early.

MAX
Link is ready.

Grace lowers the bio-sensor array over Jake's chest.

GRACE
Don't do anything unusually stupid.

She closes the clamshell and we --

INT. HOMETREE/ THIRD LEVEL - DAY

CU JAKE'S AVATAR, blinking awake, staring up at --

HOMETREE, like a gothic cathedral overhead. Sunlight streams down through gaps in the towering vault.

CUT TO:

INT. COMMONS - DAY

JAKE walks among the villagers, who go about their daily tasks.

-- young girls sit together, weaving and SINGING. They look up as he passes, then go back to work.

--two men clean the fish they've caught.

-- a young mother pounds seeds into meal, while nursing an infant.

--children chase each other and climb like monkeys. One bold LITTLE GIRL runs up to Jake, stops -- staring -- then shrieks with laughter as she runs back to her playmates.

GRINNING, Jake turns to see NEYTIRI cantering toward him on a DIREHORSE. She leads a second horse, an old sway-backed MARE. His grin drops.

EXT. RIVER NEAR HOMETREE - DAY

JAKE nervously grips the surcingle of the mare. Neytiri holds its nose-ring while Jake clumsily mounts.

Jake bends one of its ANTENNAE down to the tip of his queue.
He hesitantly touches them together and --

TIGHT SHOT -- the tendrils INTERWEAVE.

Jake's PUPILS DILATE and his mouth drops open. The horse's eyes also go wide and it HONKS nervously. Neytiri touches her fingertips to the neural interface.

NEYTIRI

This is shahaylu -- the bond. Feel her heartbeat, her breath. Feel her strong legs.

Jake closes his eyes, nodding. One with the horse.

TSU'TEY and another young hunter come out of the forest leading TWO DIREHORSES. The magnificent animals drink from the edge of the pool. Tsu'tey watches Jake's riding lesson with disdain.

NEYTIRI

You may tell her what to do --
 (she touches her head)
 -- inside. For now, say where to go.

JAKE

Forward.

The horse LAUNCHES into a GALLOP. Jake flops around, with no idea how to sit the animal, and is promptly THROWN OFF. He lands painfully in the mud.

He gets up, brushing mud off knees and ass, as Neytiri leads the horse back to him.

NEYTIRI

Again.

SERIES OF JUMP CUTS -- Jake falls off the horse in various ways, seemingly landing harder each time.

ON JAKE, face down in the mud of the riverbank. He painfully rises to hands and knees. Which is when he sees -- TSU'TEY and another HUNTER thundering across the shallow river on their direhorses. Spray blasts up from their hooves.

Jake stands, covered in mud, as Tsu'tey stops his horse next to him, looking down with disdain.

TSU'TEY

You should go away.

JAKE
 (to Neytiri)
 I knew this guy could speak English.

Tsu'tey turns to Neytiri, who is leading the old mare back.

TSU'TEY
 (subtitled)
This alien will learn nothing. A rock Sees more.

She sighs in agreement. Tsu'tey and the other hunter wheel their horses around and THUNDER OFF into the woods.

NEYTIRI gestures to Jake's horse.

NEYTIRI
Again.

CUT TO:

OPS CENTER - NIGHT

Grouped around a table are JAKE, COLONEL QUARITCH, SELFRIDGE and few ENGINEERS and OFFICERS. Jake is talking them through plans he's made of Hometree's inner structure.

JAKE
 You've got outer columns, then a secondary ring here, and an inner ring. Then a core structure, it's like a spiral, that's how they move up and down.

QUARITCH
 I'm going to need accurate scans of all these columns.

JAKE
 Roger that.

ANGLE ON MAX, at the stairwell. He's been watching Jake talking rapidly to Quaritch, but can't hear him. Frowning, he backs away, down the stairs.

CUT TO:

INT. BIO LAB - DAY

JAKE, GRACE and NORM are packing science gear and supplies.

GRACE
 I'm not about to let Quaritch and Selfridge micro-manage this thing.
 (she looks pointedly at Jake)
 We're going up into the mountains.
 (MORE)

GRACE (cont'd)
 There's a mobile link up at Site 26 that we can work out of.

NORM
 The Hallelujah Mountains?

GRACE
 That's right.

NORM
 Yesssss!
 (off Jake's look)
 The legendary Floating Mountains of Pandora? Heard of them?

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - AERIAL - DAY

A SAMSON THUNDERS over the rainforest, climbing into the mist-shrouded mountains.

In the SEALED COCKPIT, Norm is up front, sitting left seat so Trudy can talk him through the flight controls. Jake and Grace are behind them, in the jump-seats.

Grace and Norm's UNCONSCIOUS AVATARS ride in the open back compartment.

TRUDY
 It only takes tiny inputs. Here, put your hand on the cyclic --

She points to the stick between her knees. Norm hesitantly reaches over and rests his hand on hers.

TRUDY
 Feel how small the moves are? You barely have to think it, and the aircraft reacts.

ON NORM -- reacting to tiny inputs from the hot lady-pilot.

THE SAMSON is dwarfed by enormous ARCHES OF ROCK.

GRACE
 See these magnetic formations. We're getting close.

TRUDY
Yeah we are. Look at my instruments.

On the dash, many of the displays are fritzing out.

GRACE

Yup. We're in the flux vortex.

AHEAD, a cloud bank parts, revealing --

THE HALLELUJAH MOUNTAINS. Right in front of them.

NORM

Oh. My. God.

Jake leans forward between the seatbacks for a good look out the front canopy.

JAKE'S POV -- enormous islands of rock are hovering a half mile above the ground. They are overgrown with rainforest, and straggly beards of vines hang down beneath them. Waterfalls stream down the sides and dissolve into spray at the bottom.

ON JAKE, staring in amazement. It is both awe-inspiring and disturbing.

Trudy turns, grinning at Jake.

TRUDY

You should see your face.

WIDE AERIAL -- the Samson is tiny as it approaches the floating islands of rock. An archipelago among the clouds, they cast great shadows over the forested slopes below.

JAKE (V.O.)

Yeah, so what does hold them up? Grace explained it to me -- some kind of maglev effect because unobtanium is a superconductor, or something. At least somebody understands it. Just not me.

CUT TO:

EXT. SITE 26 - DAY

A remote RESEARCH STATION -- TWO SHACKS and a few clusters of instruments perched on a promontory near the Hallelujah Mountains. The shacks are AIRLIFT MODULES the size of buses.

THE SAMSON LANDS, beating the grass with its rotor-wash. The humans hop out, wearing MASKS.

They move toward the Shack, taking in the spectacular panorama.

CUT TO:

INT. SHACK - DAY

NORM and TRUDY assist JAKE with his chair as they cycle in through the AIRLOCK. GRACE is already inside, starting the GENNY. She turns on the lights and equipment.

There are 4 bunks, a clutter of science gear, and -- through a short connecting corridor -- THREE LINK UNITS in the second module.

As Grace powers up the Link equipment, Jake stops to look at STEREO STILL PICTURES which are taped and tacked up around her workstation.

CLOSE ON PICTURES -- Grace posing at the school with various grinning children. There is one of her with two lanky girls, a younger Neytiri and an older girl who looks much like her.

GRACE

Jake, take number two, it's the least glitchy. Norm, I need you to operate Jake's link.

Norm glares at Jake as he passes.

JAKE

Hey. You got a problem?

Norm turns to Grace, his frustration boiling over.

NORM

I trained three years for this mission.
I speak the language fluently.
(he points at Jake)
He falls off the frickin' turnip truck and all of a sudden he's cultural ambassador!?

GRACE

It's not our choice, Norm.

He glowers at Jake.

NORM

Yeah, well I didn't come out here to wash the dishes while you're on some interspecies booty call.

He stalks off.

GRACE

He can't go far.

She points to Jake's link.

GRACE
Let's get you in.

CUT TO:

INT./EXT. HOMETREE - BANSHEE EYRIE

LOOKING DOWN the central shaft of Hometree, 80 meters to the ground. Villagers are ant-like.

Jake tries to keep up with Neytiri as she leaps up the core trunk like a lemur. He climbs the last section, arriving out of breath beside her. She leads him OUTSIDE, onto --

A large branch. Through gaps in the foliage Jake can see other Great Trees scattered across the landscape, like enormous umbrellas above the rainforest.

NEYTIRI strides out across the branch toward some kind of STRUCTURE -- a WEB made of thick woven fiber. DARK SHAPES clinging to it stir with a leathery RUSTLING SOUND.

Neytiri makes a series of TRILLS and CLICKS. One of the shapes MOVES toward them, emerging into a shaft of sunlight.

A huge MOUNTAIN BANSHEE. Much larger than the forest banshees, this thing is taller than a Na'vi with a 10 meter wingspan. A leathery FWHOOOP, like the crack of sails, as it alights on the branch right in front of her.

JAKE
Holy shit.

NEYTIRI
Do not look in her eye.

Neytiri feeds it a large scrap of meat, which it SNATCHES and gulps down. She murmurs to it and strokes its NECK.

It lets out a signature SHRIEK, and some of the others in the shadows nearby answer.

Neytiri flip-catches her queue and gently connects it to the Banshee's ANTENNA. It shivers and stretches its wings as the neural connection is made.

NEYTIRI
Ikran is not horse. Once shahaylu is made, ikran will fly with only one Hunter in the whole life.

She climbs smoothly onto the animal's back.

NEYTIRI

To become taronyu -- Hunter -- you must choose your own ikran. And he must choose you.

JAKE

When?

NEYTIRI

When you are ready.

The BANSHEE shivers with anticipation.

NEYTIRI

Heeyaaahh!

Jake ducks as the great wings EXPLODE OPEN and the banshee DROPS off the branch. It swoops down across the forest canopy, banks hard, lets out a CRY and beats its wings in a power climb.

Completing the bank, Neytiri directs the banshee into a close SWOOPING FLYBY, and Jake instinctively ducks.

ON NEYTIRI -- flying in perfect fusion with her winged mount, the rainforest rolling beneath her.

CUT TO:

INT. SHACK - NIGHT/EXT

STEREO VIDEO-LOG IMAGE -- Jake has just switched on the camera. He looks tired.

JAKE

Do I have to do this? I need some rack.

GRACE, behind him, looks up from her MICROSCOPE, scowling.

GRACE

No -- now, when it's fresh.

JAKE

Yeah, yeah.

(to camera)

The days are starting to blur together.
The language is a bitch, but I figure it's like field-stripping a weapon.
Repetition.

THIS THROWS US INTO A TEACHING MONTAGE:

JAKE AND NEYTIRI kneel together inside Hometree. Neytiri touches her lips with her fingertips.

JAKE

Seyri.

She touches her nose, her ears, her eyes in quick sequence.

JAKE

Ontu, mikyun, nari.

NEYTIRI stands next to him, correcting his position as he draws a longbow.

BARKING commands, she SMACKS him on the shoulder, then the elbow, repositioning him roughly.

JAKE (V.O.)

Neytiri thinks I'm some kind of retard.

HUMAN JAKE emerges from the LINK to see --

TRUDY and NORM caught IN THE ACT on Norm's bunk. Norm blushes and Trudy waves, pulling the blanket over their heads.

JAKE (V.O.)

Norm's attitude has improved lately.

NORM works with JAKE at the small table in the SHACK kitchen.

NORM

Thank you?

JAKE

Ireiyo.

Norm comically exaggerates the pronunciation.

NORM

Irrrreiyo. Irrrreiyo. You've gotta roll the R, r-r-r-oll it.

Norm makes Jake repeat the word, getting more frustrated.

JAKE (V.O.)

It's good he's back on board, but he thinks I'm a retard too.

TRACKING WITH JAKE'S FEET as he runs over rocks, leaping onto a thick root, running on across the rough bark.

JAKE (V.O.)

My feet are getting tougher. I can run farther every day.

Neytiri leads him along a massive root, and soon they are running 30 meters above the ground.

He sprints with her through the trees, trying to keep up. She CLIMBS and LEAPS with the ease of a spider monkey.

JAKE (V.O.)

I have to trust my body to know what to do. With Neytiri it's learn fast or die.

Neytiri LEAPS off into space, falling, falling until --

She catches an enormous palm leaf and, gripping it, allows its DROOP to slow her fall. She lets go, plummeting, and catches another.

JAKE FOLLOWS in a leap of faith. THE CAMERA PLUNGES with him, from leaf to leaf, down and down in a dizzying kinetic rush.

He drops down from the last leaf, landing next to her on a game trail. He is exhilarated to still be alive.

Neytiri is surprised -- that he followed. That he lived.

TIGHT ON HUMAN JAKE, in the shack. Thinking as he looks at the pictures of Grace with the laughing kids at the school.

IN THE COMMONS -- AVATAR NORM formally greets MO'AT. The Matriarch looks on as GRACE kneels to hug children she knows. Grace's eyes sparkle as she chats with them in Na'vi.

JAKE (V.O.)

I sweet-talked Mo'at into giving Norm and Grace a hall pass. Now Grace even makes me coffee before link every morning.

Grace looks up to see Neytiri approaching. It is an awkward moment between them. Grace makes the formal gesture of greeting.

GRACE

(Na'vi, subtitled)

I See you, Neytiri Mo'at'ite.

NEYTIRI

I See you, Doctor Grace Augustine.

ANOTHER DAY -- NEYTIRI kneels on a game trail, pointing out the tracks in the mud to Jake. She touches the edges of the plants around her, and sniffs the air.

JAKE (V.O.)
I'm learning to read the trails, the tracks at the water-hole, the tiniest scents and sounds.

JAKE AND NEYTIRI watch through a screen of leaves as --

A HERD of huge, armored STURMBEEST walks through the shallows of a lake. In the middle of the herd, the babies are sheltered from predators among their parents' legs.

One of the BULLS trumpets, and a flock of TETRAPTERONS takes flight, an explosion of purple wings.

Jake stares at the strange and wild alien tableau.

ANOTHER PLACE -- NEYTIRI STANDS utterly still, except for her ears, which move with a life of their own. Her eyes are closed. She speaks very softly to Jake --

NEYTIRI
 When you hear nothing, you will hear everything. When you see nothing, you will See everything.

JAKE (V.O.)
Sometimes I have no idea what she's talking about.

Jake and Neytiri creep quietly, stalking a large male HEXAPEDE -- a six legged deer-like creature.

Jake expertly nocks an arrow and draws his bow as Neytiri watches. He takes a bead on the hexapede -- tracks it for a beat with the drawn bow, then RELAXES his arm. Zen archery.

JAKE (V.O.)
It's been a month and I'm still not allowed to make a kill. She says the forest hasn't given permission.

OMIITED

NEYTIRI and JAKE crawl through the undergrowth. She points and he parts some leaves to see --

A MOTHER VIPERWOLF bringing meat to her cubs, which frisk around her legs. She licks their faces.

JAKE (V.O.)
There's a lot of crap like that. She's always going on about the flow of energy-- the spirits of the animals and what not --

VIDEO-LOG IMAGE -- HUMAN JAKE talks into the lens. He's changing -- un-shaven, cheeks hollow. Pale.

JAKE
(smirking)
I just hope this treehugger shit isn't on the final.

Visible behind him, Grace is hunched over her samples.

GRACE
(without looking up)
This isn't just about eye-hand coordination out there. You need to listen to what she says. Try to see the forest through their eyes.

JAKE
Excuse me -- this is my video-log here,
okay?

NEYTIRI AND JAKE move through the NIGHT FOREST, surrounded by galaxies of shimmering bioluminescence. They move gracefully, soundlessly -- two forest spirits.

CU JAKE -- the pupils of his cat eyes dilated. The night forest floods his brain with its million bio-sources.

NIGHT SHOT, from overhead -- Jake and Neytiri bow-fishing from a dugout canoe over huge glowing ANEMONES at the bottom of a pool.

A large fish swims silhouetted against the pastel glow. ZAP! Jake drills it. He holds up the fish, triumphantly.

ANOTHER DAY -- Neytiri stands close behind Jake, adjusting his position as he draws his bow. Only now her hands are GENTLE as they move on his arms, his shoulders.

Aware of her touch, Jake's focus is broken. Their eyes meet, and she pulls away quickly.

NIGHT -- they enter a CLEARING filled with chest-high ferns. Neytiri signals him to move slowly. They approach a creature on one of the ferns. An ugly, stick-like LIZARD-THING perched on a frond. As he approaches --

SNAP! A long spine whips in a circle, unfurling a bioluminescent membrane -- a disk a meter across, opening like a Chinese fan. It FLIES OFF, a living Frisbee.

THE FAN LIZARD FLOATS across the clearing.

Neytiri plunges among the ferns with a SHARP CRY. An EXPLOSION OF COLOR as dozens of FAN LIZARDS take flight.

Grinning widely, she hops around like a little girl, until they are all flying. And for the first time, she is unguarded and joyful, totally herself with him.

INSIDE THE LINK -- Jake's eyes open in the darkness. He doesn't know where he is. He weakly pushes open the lid, blinking at the light.

JAKE (V.O.)
Everything is backwards now. Like out there is the true world, and in here is the dream.

TIGHT ON AVATAR JAKE silently drawing his bow, his eyes focused in intense concentration. A beat -- the arrow flies.

JAKE PULLS the arrow from the twitching body of a hexapede. He dispatches it with his knife.

He speaks haltingly, but with feeling, in Na'vi.

JAKE
 (Na'vi)
I See you Brother, and thank you. Your spirit goes with Eywa, your body stays behind to become part of the People.

NEYTIRI watches with approval.

NEYTIRI
 A clean kill. You are ready.

CUT TO:

INT. SHACK - NIGHT

Lying in the link, Jake looks exhausted, pale, thin. Norm helps Grace get him to his chair.

GRACE
 You're still losing weight. Here --

She hands him a microwaved burrito. He looks at the now alien food. Bites into it without enthusiasm.

JAKE
 I made a kill today. We ate it. I know where that meal came from.

GRACE

Other body. You need to take care of this body.

JAKE

Yeah yeah.

GRACE

Jake, I'm serious -- you look like crap.
You're burning too hard.

Jake takes the cigarette out of her mouth and stubs it out.

JAKE

Get rid of this shit, then you can lecture me.

GRACE

I'm telling you, as your boss and someone who might even consider being a friend someday, to take some down time.

JAKE

Not now. Tomorrow we leave for Iknimaya.

GRACE walks past Jake, starts making herself coffee.

GRACE

Yeah -- you're gonna go ride a banshee.
Or die trying.

JAKE

That's right, Grace. This is what I've been working for.

GRACE

And this is your check up from the neck up, Marine. You're getting in way too deep.

(she turns away)

Trust me, I learned the hard way.

Jake scans the pictures tacked up around Grace's workstation.

JAKE

What did happen at the school?

GRACE looks up from making coffee. Her eyes track across the pictures of the laughing children. Finally --

GRACE

Neytiri's sister -- Sylwanin -- stopped coming to school. She was angry about the clear-cutting.

GRACE sips her coffee, grimaces at the taste.

GRACE

One day, she and a couple of other young hunters came running in, all painted up -- they'd set a bulldozer on fire -- I guess they thought I could protect them.

GRACE'S voice stays oddly CALM as he tells this terrible story, while getting MILK out of the refrigerator.

GRACE

The troopers pursued them to the schoolhouse.

MACRO as she pours the milk -- her hand is SHAKING.

GRACE

They killed Sylwanin in the doorway. Right in front of Neytiri. Then shot the others.

(mildly)

I got most of the kids out, before they shot me.

JAKE

Jesus.

GRACE

Yeah.

Jake realizes that Grace is on the verge of tears and desperately trying to hide it.

GRACE

A scientist stays objective -- we can not be ruled by emotion. But I poured ten years of my life into that school. They called me sa'atenuk. Mother.

(turning to him)

That kind of pain reaches back through the link.

GRACE sits down at the table, looks intently at Jake.

GRACE

It's a job. Learn what you can -- but don't get attached.

GRACE looks at him with real PAIN in her eyes.

GRACE

It's not our world, Jake. And we can't stop what's coming.

CUT TO:

EXT. MOUNTAIN TRAIL - DAY

TSU'TEY leads three direhorse riders up the trail -- two TEENAGE HUNTERS and JAKE, who's riding well enough to keep up. The horses' hooves CLOP right next to a sheer drop into a misty canyon.

JAKE (V.O.)

Iknimaya translates roughly as stairway to heaven. It's the test every young hunter has to pass.

TSU'TEY signals a stop.

UP-SLOPE AHEAD is an astounding formation. Thick vine-like trees have trapped large FLOATING BOULDERS of UNOBTANIUM in their gnarled grip.

A hundred meters above them more boulders are WOVEN into the twisted vine-trunks. This is some sort of freak natural occurrence -- like the mythical beanstalk, going up into the clouds.

There is a THUNDERING ROAR, like an artillery barrage, and the ground SHAKES. Jake looks around at --

One of the FLOATING MOUNTAINS grinding against the flank of a nearby mesa. A huge rockfall is set loose. The mountain is drifting toward them, filling half the sky.

The Hunters dismount.

JAKE looks up at the beanstalk going into the clouds. He turns to Tsu'tey, who is checking the young hunters' gear.

JAKE

We doin' this?

Jake leaps to catch up as Tsu'tey and the hunters swarm up the base of the beanstalk.

CUT TO:

EXT. BEANSTALK - DAY

200 METERS up the BEANSTALK, the hunters nimbly climb along the vine-trunks. They clamber over one of the unobtainium BOULDERS which is lifting this incredible tree.

JAKE looks down -- the massive trunk dwindles to the size of a licorice stick. A chunk breaks off a boulder as he climbs over it -- it floats upward.

They reach the upper branches of the beanstalk. Above them, the craggy underbelly of MONS Veritatis looms. Spray from one of the waterfalls hits them.

Some of the HANGING VINES are brushing over the upper branches of the beanstalk with a crackling hiss.

One by one the hunters grab onto vines as they pass.

Jake shrugs and leaps to a passing vine, his feet dangling over nothingness. They climb toward the floating islands above.

EXT. MONS VERITATIS - DAY

TINY FIGURES cross a causeway of vines connecting a small island of unobtainium to the main mass of Mons Veritatis.

WIDE SHOT looking down a rock face bigger than Half Dome -- the sheer side of Mons Veritatis.

Banshees circle next to the cliffs, flashing in shafts of sunlight. Waterfalls dissolve into nothingness below.

EXT. GROTTO/BANSHEE ROOKERY - DAY

A waterfall THUNDERS down into the void like a faucet of the gods. Jake looks down the sheer cliff at the world far below -- a view from Olympus.

A SHRIEK and the THWAP THWAP of leathery wings -- NEYTIRI'S BANSHEE swoops in to perch at the edge of the grotto. She dismounts and, like a falconer, covers its eyes with a woven HOOD. It waits, docile, as --

She joins Jake and the hunter party. Tsu'tey leads them through the cave until they emerge onto a CLIFF FACE. And Jake sees --

The BANSHEE ROOKERY. HUNDREDS of banshees huddle on rock outcroppings as far as the eye can see. They cling to the walls with the fore-claws on their wings, or perch on ledges.

TSU'TEY

Jakesully will go first.

Tsu'tey smirks at Jake, a challenge in his eyes. The two teenage Hunters are scared but trying to act tough.

Tsu'tey scowls when Neytiri leads Jake out onto the ledge.

NEYTIRI

(whispering)

Now you choose your ikran. This you must feel -- inside. If he also chooses you, move quick, like I showed. You will have one chance.

JAKE

How will I know if he chooses me?

NEYTIRI

He will try to kill you.

JAKE

Outstanding.

Out of sight of Tsu'tey, Neytiri takes his hand and squeezes it. Jake feels a rush of emotion, but she breaks away like it didn't happen. He is on his own, on the ledge with --

The BANSHEES. They eye him as he approaches. Several SHRIEK and take flight. Others flap their wings and yawn, showing rows of fangs, in a threat display.

Jake unrolls a weighted leather strap, like a one-ended BOLO.

A LARGE MALE spreads enormous wings, SHRIEKS, and glares straight at him.

Jake looks directly into its eyes -- and strides toward it.

JAKE

Let's dance.

The challenged banshee HISSES and leaps at him, jaws wide as--

Jake times the lunge, swinging the bolo, feinting and then slipping aside as the banshee's jaws miss him, SNAPPING SHUT.

Jake WHAPS the bolo across its snout. The weighted thong whips twice around its long jaws, tying them shut. A MUFFLED SCREAM and it SLASHES at his stomach with razor talons but -- Jake is already leaping, over the talons and tackling the banshee around the neck. It topples on its side, and he SWARMS IT -- arms around its thrashing head.

Jake grabs its whip-like antenna and brings it toward his queue but --

The bony head SLAMS sideways, and BAM! -- clocks him right in the face, almost knocking him out and --

IT WRITHES, flinging him to the ground. He slides on the rock and almost goes over the edge as -- NEYTIRI gasps. Tsu'tey laughs and yells mockingly.

The bolo is coming loose as the creature shakes its head, way pissed off now, but --

Jake scrambles up and leaps straight at it. Claws rake his leg but he gets his arms around its head and CLAMPS DOWN HARD. They flop to the ground and he scrambles on top, pinning it and --

Grabs its whipping antenna, locks it under his arm, and jams the end of his queue into it. They FUSE together and --

The banshee stops struggling. It lies there panting. They are locked together, literally eye to eye.

JAKE

That's right! You're mine.

ECU BANSHEE -- the pupil like a deep black well.

Jake relaxes his grip and slowly, warily, slides his leg over the creature's back.

Neytiri runs to him.

NEYTIRI

First flight seals the bond. You cannot wait.

Jake sits astride the creature, feeling its power. He grips a hank of the beast's main, and --

JAKE

Heeeyyyaaaah!

THWAP! THWAP! The banshee is off like a shot. Jake SCREAMS as they PLUMMET off the cliff -- the banshee WAILS and --

They fall together, spiralling out of control, and he is almost tossed lose. The thing is SQUAWKING and SHRIEKING so much he can't think.

JAKE
Shut the hell up!!

It does.

JAKE
Level out! Fly straight!

It levels out. Jake cocks his head, only thinking "bank left" and the animal complies. He settles the banshee into an easy loping beat of its huge wings, while he catches his breath.

NEYTIRI'S BANSHEE falls into formation with him. She signals "follow me" and DIVES.

Jake guides his banshee clumsily after her. Neytiri's banshee moves with precise movements of its wingtips, while Jake's wobbles and dips, almost falling out of the sky.

THE CAMERA SWOOPS after them as Neytiri leads an arcing DIVE around the flank of Mons Veritatis. The scenery is stunning. They pass waterfalls and swoop between hanging vines.

Neytiri leads Jake in a sharp bank, skimming close to the cliffs. They punch through streamers of cloud and emerge into sunlight.

Jake is getting the hang of it. He jinks left, then right, then dives, tucking himself tight against the animal's back. He's reckless, fearless. Half in control and LOVING IT.

Neytiri dives next to him as he lets out a long WHOOP of joy.

INT./EXT. GROTTTO/MONS VERITATIS - DAY

FLIGHT MONTAGE:

NEYTIRI squats with Jake, using her hands to explain flight principles like one fighter pilot to another.

LOOKING DOWN a sheer cliff. SWOOOSH! Jake and Neytiri dive their mounts STRAIGHT DOWN PAST CAMERA, pulling out and soaring into a series of aerobatic turns.

JAKE (V.O.)
I may not be much of a horse guy. But I was born to do this.

THEY FLY in close formation with TSU'TEY and the young HUNTERS, 5 banshees flashing through scarves of mist.

ANOTHER DAY. Jake dives, playing hide and seek with Neytiri among the clouds. They are wild and free in a wild world. She grins and banks hard, diving -- catch me if you can. He DIVES after her.

IN THE GROTTO, by firelight, JAKE'S BANSHEE snaps at a piece of meat which he playfully pulls back. He's teaching it to take the food more slowly. He strokes its long head.

TSU'TEY is nearby with the young hunters. He eyes Jake with frustrated hostility.

ANOTHER DAY -- Jake and Neytiri fly abreast, soaring easily. She points and Jake sees --

A BIZARRE GEOLOGICAL FORMATION. Arches of magnetic rock form rainbows of stone above a deep CALDERA. In the center of the caldera is a single, enormous WILLOW TREE, gnarled and ancient. This, we will be told, is THE WELL OF SOULS.

CUT TO:

EXT. RIDGE

JAKE flies with Neytiri along a forested ridge. She is teaching him to hunt from his banshee. They carry their bows at the ready, scanning below them for prey.

A HUGE SHADOW covers him and Neytiri SHOUTS a warning. Jake looks up to see --

A LEONOPTERYX in a delta-dive, whistling straight at him.

Like a banshee, only several times larger, it is the king predator of the air: the GREAT LEONOPTERYX. Striped scarlet, yellow and black, with a midnight blue crested head -- it is both gorgeous and terrifying.

The hunter has become the prey. JAKE snap-rolls and dives toward the forest canopy. He plummets into the gloom as -- K-CRASH -- the leonopteryx tears through foliage, following him down, both diving like missiles and --

JAKE yanks into a hair-pin bank, right through a gap between two huge branches --

Forcing the leonopteryx to brake with a loud FWOOSH of wings. It banks away with a frustrated SHRIEK. Two flaps of its mighty wings and it is gone, back above the canopy.

CLOSE ON THE LEONOPTERYX, as its fanged mouth opens in a bloodcurdling SCREECH which echoes among the mountains. The lord of its domain.

ON JAKE, shaken. Neytiri flies up, her expression the Na'vi equivalent of Oh my God. A beat -- they both crack up.

CUT TO:

INT. SHACK - NIGHT

Jake ponders images Grace has called up at her workstation-- science graphics of the Leonopteryx. Trudy and Norm are crowded around as well.

GRACE

The Great Leonopteryx is the apex aerial predator. Not only rare, but the sightings tend not to get reported.

Trudy makes a clicking motion with her thumb.

TRUDY

There usually isn't time to key the mike.

JAKE

The People call it Toruk.

NORM

(translating)
Last Shadow.

JAKE

Last one you ever see.

TRUDY

I saw one take out a gunship once --
WHAM! Total frickin' yard sale. Ate the crew like peanuts.

TIME CUT -- Grace is scanning through images and Jake stops her on one -- a 3D aerial shot of the strange arched formation.

JAKE

That's it.

GRACE

Vitraya Ramunong -- The Well of Souls.
It's their most sacred place.

She moves the virtual camera, and we seem to fly around the Well of Souls, catching only a glimpse of the interior.

GRACE

Something big is going on in there, biologically. I'd die to get samples, but outsiders are strictly forbidden.

TIME CUT -- Jake looks through the pressure window at HUMAN GRACE and NORM outside. Wearing masks, they are taking readings from some time-series experiments Grace has set up.

As TRUDY watches, JAKE works fast to download Grace's images of the Well of Souls onto a memory chip.

TRUDY

They're coming back.

Jake pulls the chip, then hesitates. Torn by what he is doing.

TRUDY

If you don't give him something, he's gonna shut us down.

He hands her the chip and she slips it into a pocket of her flight-suit just as Grace and Norm enter from the airlock.

JAKE

Hey, guys.

CUT TO:

INT. HOMETREE - NIGHT

JAKE STARES up at the TOTEM SKULL, which we now recognize as that of a GREAT LEONOPTERYX. NEYTIRI watches as he reaches up to touch the tall indigo crest.

NEYTIRI

My grandfather's grandfather was Toruk
Macto -- Rider of Last Shadow. Toruk chose him. It has only happened five times since the time of the First Songs.

JAKE

That's a long time.

Neytiri takes his hand, because that's what the Na'vi do when they're telling you something important.

NEYTIRI

Toruk Macto was mighty -- he brought the clans together in a time of great sorrow.
All Na'vi people know this story.

PUSH IN SLOWLY on the skull totem, then --

CUT TO:

EXT. RIVER BED - DAY

JAKE, NEYTIRI and other FLYING HUNTERS swoop low above a HERD OF STURMBEEST -- a rapids of thundering muscle. Dust rises from this living river like steam from a python's back.

TRACKING WITH the herd. A HUNTER appears in FG, astride a direhorse at full gallop. The sight is breathtaking. He hurls a 3 meter spear and one of the sturmbeest CRASHES down, flipping twice from momentum.

JAKE ROLLS IN like a fighter jet, his banshee screaming. He draws and fires his bow. The arrow strikes true, in the plexus between the armored shoulders and --

THE BEAST crashes to the ground. Skids to a stop in a cloud of dust.

NEYTIRI swoops in next to Jake, arms raised and grinning wolfishly.

CU TSU'TEY, banking around Jake's kill. Jake looks up, and Tsu'tey SALUTES in grudging admiration.

CUT TO:

INT. COMMONS/HOMETREE - NIGHT

The central space is lit by a BONFIRE, around which the HUNT FESTIVAL is in full swing. Wild dancing. People gnawing on massive sturmbeest ribs. A bowl of some kava-like intoxicant is passed around.

NEYTIRI dances in a flowing costume as the BANSHEE SPIRIT. NORM is dancing seductively with his own tail.

JAKE, surrounded by young hunters, acts out the leonopteryx attack with his hands. The leaping fire-light plays across the eye sockets of the TORUK SKULL, bringing it to life. It seems to watch Jake.

TSU'TEY squats next to Jake, the usual scowl on his face.

Jake braces himself -- and Tsu'tey holds up the KAVA BOWL, offering it to him. A challenge or an olive branch?

Jake takes a long, hearty drink as some of the young hunters hoot and clap hands in a fast rhythm.

GRACE

Watch that stuff. It'll knock you into next week.

Jake offers the bowl back to Tsu'tey. They lock eyes.
Tsu'tey drinks.

LATER -- AN EMPTY BOWL drops, landing on a pile of empty bowls near the fire.

WIDER ON JAKE and TSU'TEY, sitting amid the rowdy hunters.
Tsu'tey looks a little blearily at Jake. Finally, he GRINS.

TSU'TEY

I thought -- enough drink -- you would not be so ugly.

JAKE

Sorry.

Tsu'tey looks deep into the fire.

TSU'TEY

Your warriors -- hide inside machines -- fight from far away.

(he looks at Jake)

I did not think a sky person could be brave.

Before Jake can answer, NEYTIRI'S lithe shape runs through the circle of silhouetted dancers toward them. She takes Jake by the hand and pulls him up --

NEYTIRI

You must dance! It is the way.

TSU'TEY watches as she leads him away, his face darkening -- the moment of connection to Jake lost to anger.

The hunters WHOOP and CHEER as Jake joins the circle of dancers.

Jake takes Grace's hand and pulls her up, protesting.

JAKE lets the DRUMS and CHANTING flow through him. He lets himself go, dancing from the inside, channeling the primal energy.

GRACE is rocking out, grinning. We see the young girl, so repressed, who lives within her.

Jake and Neytiri flow amongst the dancers, but they are looking only at each other.

A couple of the young girls watching from outside the circle are giggling and talking about them. Mo'at and EYTUKAN follow their look, seeing the obvious connection.

MO'AT
(subtitled)
We cannot let this seed grow. Her path is with Tsu'tey.

ON JAKE, dancing with abandon to the primal beat, eyes locked with Neytiri.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

WIDE VISTA -- mist blowing through the treetops as the morning sun burns it away. A spectacular panorama of a vast, primeval land.

UP ANGLE TRACKING among the trees, the sunlight shafting down like light in a cathedral.

JAKE (V.O.)
It's hard to put in words the deep connection the People have to the forest.

HIGH IN THE BRANCHES of a tree, Jake watches as Neytiri gently bends a large pitcher-like flower toward her, sipping nectar which is sweet and thick as honey. An incredibly sensuous image.

JAKE (V.O.)
They see a network of energy that flows through all living things. They know that all energy is only borrowed--

MACRO SHOT of a purple flower, beaded with raindrops. A blue hand picks the flower.

JAKE (V.O.)
-- and one day you have to give it back.

LOOKING DOWN into a hole dug among tree roots. The body of an old Omaticaya WOMAN lies curled there like an unborn baby in the womb of the earth. The purple flower is gently placed on her body, joining flowers, totems and beads.

Mo'at recites a prayer as Neytiri, acting as acolyte, places a WOODSPRITE, a seed of the Great Tree, on the body.

Earth is poured over the LENS and we CUT TO -- JAKE WAKING UP in the Link. DARK as a coffin. He pushes the lid off, letting in light, and lies there. He looks pale and haggard, with a scraggly beard.

JAKE (V.O.)
Hard to believe it's only been three months.

JAKE SITS in front of the video log camera, late at night. It is many log entries later. He has lost a lot of weight. He looks like a junkie watching a test pattern.

JAKE
 (to the lens)
 I can barely remember my old life. I'm not sure who I am anymore.

CUT TO:

EXT. COMPOUND - DAY

Under a sky of thunderheads, the forest is a dark wall beyond the fence. SELFRIDGE, wearing an exopack, TEES UP while GRACE and JAKE approach from the direction of the Ops Center.

SELFDRIDGE
 Good of you to stop by. How's it going out there? Our blue friends all packed up yet?

Selfridge swings his DRIVER with good form.

SELFDRIDGE
 See, I keep hooking it. It's the damn pack.

THE BALL drops into the mud just past a marker which reads 220. A TROOPER walks over to retrieve it.

SELFDRIDGE
 The low gravity and the high air density cancel out so --

JAKE
 You called us back to report -- you want to hear it or not?

SELFDRIDGE
 Go ahead.

GRACE
 Jake is making incredible progress, years worth in just a few months. But -- we need more time.

SELFRIDGE

Not what I was hoping to hear.

It starts to rain. Selfridge calmly pulls an umbrella from his golf bag and snaps it open.

GRACE

Parker, it's their ancestral home. They've lived there since before human history began. You can spare them a few more weeks.

SELFRIDGE

This thing is inevitable. What does it matter when it happens? I'm sorry, Dr. Augustine. You're out of time.

He leaves them standing there to get drenched.

CUT TO:

INT. ARMOR BAY

A break table, under a harsh overhead light. Quaritch pulls up a chair, turns it around, and sits astride it facing Jake. He studies Jake's pale, sunken face. The scraggly beard.

QUARITCH

You're not gettin' lost in the woods, are you son?

Jake can't meet his eyes.

QUARITCH

Your last report was two weeks ago. I'm starting to doubt your resolve. From what I see, it's time to terminate this mission.

Jake eyes flare with alarm.

JAKE

No. I can do this.

QUARITCH

Look, you've given me plenty of usable intel. Like this "Well of Souls" place -- I've got them by the balls with that, when it turns into a shit-fight. Which it will.

Jake feels hollow inside, knowing what he's done.

QUARITCH

So you'll get your legs back, like I promised.

(puts his hand on Jake's shoulder)

It's time to come in.

Jake ponders this. Isn't this what he was doing all this for?

JAKE

I've gotta finish this thing. There's one more test -- the Dream Hunt. It's the final stage of becoming a man. Then I'm one of them. They'll trust what I say...

It's hard for him to even form these words --

JAKE

... and I can negotiate the terms of their relocation.

QUARITCH

Then you need to get it done, Corporal.

CUT TO:

EXT. HALLELUJAH MOUNTAINS - NIGHT

Strange horizontal LIGHTNING branches through the floating mountains, twisted by the magnetic fields. The sky is black and heavy with clouds.

INT. SHACK KITCHEN - NIGHT

Jake is gulping black coffee like a tequila shot, looking pretty STRUNG OUT. GRACE is smoking furiously.

GRACE

Jake, I can't allow this. You're just not strong enough.

JAKE

It's the last door -- I'm going through it. You can help me or get out of the way.

Jake pushes past her toward the corridor --

GRACE

(grabbing him)

Will you listen to me? Sometimes the Na'vi themselves die in these vision quests. The venom takes you to the edge of death.

(MORE)

GRACE (cont'd)
 And the psychoactive alkaloid in the worm-
 - we have no idea what that'll do in an avatar brain.

Jake breaks free and wheels away, down the corridor.

GRACE follows JAKE as he crosses to the Link. A sheet of LIGHTNING flashes across the sky outside.

Norm is initializing the Link.

NORM
 Calibrating. Thirty seconds.

She puts her hands on his shoulders.

GRACE
 No matter what you prove out there-- you are still in here.
 (shaking him)
Right here.

JAKE
 I have to go all the way -- become one of them--

GRACE
 (furiously)
 Goddammit, Jake, you can never be one of them!

Norm looks up, startled at the VEHEMENCE in GRACE' voice.

GRACE
 Our life out there takes millions of dollars of machinery to sustain. You visit -- and you leave.

During this, Jake pulls himself from his wheelchair, levering himself into the Link, hauling his useless legs inside.

GRACE
 (softening)
 You can never truly be with her.

Jake stops, pinioned by the truth. He seems suddenly very lost.

JAKE
 You know why I'm here? Because Quaritch sent me.

NORM
 What?

JAKE

That's right -- to embed with the Omaticaya. To find out how to screw them out of their home. By deceit or by force, he didn't care. And if it turned out to be force, then how best to do it.

Norm is in shock. But Grace is eerily calm.

GRACE

And what about now, Jake?

JAKE

I'm not that guy any more.

Grace nods. She's been on his journey every step of the way.

GRACE

I know.

JAKE

But if I tell Quaritch the truth, he yanks me out -- I never see her again. And if I tell her the truth, the clan throws me out -- that's if they don't cut my heart out and show it to me.

Jake looks hopelessly at the two of them. In his own perfect Hell.

NORM

They won't understand what you've done.

JAKE

They don't even have a word for "lie" -- they had to learn it from us.

Grace sees he is on the verge of tears. Lost and alone, between worlds.

GRACE

I know. I taught it to them.

JAKE

(pleading)

Grace. I've gotta go. They're waiting.

NORM

Link is ready.

Grace stops him as he tries to close the lid.

GRACE

Jake. You can't carry this burden much longer.

JAKE

(smiling wanly)

It's okay. Mo'at says an alien mind probably can't survive the Dream Hunt anyway.

Grace closes the lid. It feels like closing a coffin. She watches his psionic patterns aligning to his avatar, somewhere out in the night.

GRACE

(to Norm)

Prep my link. I'm going in.

CUT TO:

INT. COMMONS/HOMETREE - NIGHT

JAKE SITS, eyes closed, as Neytiri and another young hunter paint his face and body in preparation for uniltaron -- the Dream Hunt.

NEYTIRI

When your Spirit Animal comes, you will know.

Their eyes meet with emotion neither can conceal any longer.

TIME CUT. GRACE stands with the crowd at the ramp to HOMETREE'S LOWEST LEVEL. Jake barely sees her as he goes down the spiral. She tries to follow, but is barred by a hunter.

BELOW, seemingly in the womb of the earth, Jake walks slowly into the center of a tight circle of seated elders and hunters. An ELDER is slowly rapping a large WATER DRUM.

TIME CUT -- MO'AT purifies him with smoke from burning herbs, CHANTING in a low monotone. Jake, squatting, washes the smoke over himself with his palms.

MACRO - MO'AT'S FINGERS unwrap a piece of wood riddled with holes. She catches the end of a glowing purple WORM, and draws it out of the wood.

MO'AT

(subtitled)

Oh wise worm, eater of the Sacred Tree -- bless this worthy Hunter with a true vision.

MO'AT places the worm on Jake's out-stretched TONGUE. It twists on itself, lighting his mouth before he closes it. She indicates he should chew. He does.

MACRO -- AN EARTHEN JAR is opened. EYTUKAN removes a writhing black ARACHNOID, the Pandoran equivalent of a scorpion.

He places it against the back of Jake's neck and presses. The insect drives its stinger into Jake's skin and -- Jake grimaces. Mo'at and Eytukan step back, leaving Jake alone in the circle.

Neytiri watches intently, joining in the low chant.

SLOW DOLLY IN on Jake. His eyes OPEN. He looks around at the faces -- they seem to TRANSFORM, becoming threatening.

Jake looks down at the palms of his hands.

JAKE'S POV -- his hands recede, his whole body, the ground and --

INSTANTLY the circle of Na'vi recedes, as if to a distant horizon, leaving vast ground in between. SPACE is utterly distorted, and SOUND as well -- echoing, THUNDEROUS.

ECU JAKE -- pupils DILATED black. He looks around and --

The onlookers are gone, replaced by a ring of glowing trees, which seem miles high. The whole image is bathed in spectral radiance. Jake looks down --

JAKE'S POV -- his body and hands transforming -- fingers stretching into tendrils, legs becoming roots which spread outward across the ground, a thousand glowing dendrites which connect to the roots of the trees and --

CUT TO REALITY -- Jake is on his hands and knees, PUKING in the dirt. He contorts, crying out in agony as the venom contracts his muscles but --

IN HIS VISION Jake stands serene on a FLOATING MOUNTAIN CLIFF. A GREAT BLACK SHADOW covers him, the unmistakable X silhouette of a diving LEONOPTERYX. The LAST SHADOW.

CAMERA SCREAMS down on him as the shadow grows larger -- WE RUSH into his face, into the blackness of his pupil which FILLS THE UNIVERSE and --

REAL JAKE writhes in the dirt, his back arched as his muscles seize. He foams and thrashes, his eyes rolled back in his head, while inside --

TIME ITSELF HAS ACCELERATED -- clouds scream around the mountain tops, mist boils through the forest. He feels the wind of time blowing through him as --

REAL JAKE claws the ground, moaning, staring blindly while --

INSIDE, IN POV he FLIES over the landscape of Pandora --

--but the forest is BLASTED. Fires flicker among trees that are BURNED black and lifeless in a smoky twilight.

A great WINGED SHADOW is cast below, rippling over the devastated ground. AVATAR JAKE looks down at the shadow. Realizes HE is casting it, and we RUSH IN to his PUPIL and --

PULL BACK from the eye of a GREAT LEONOPTERYX, flying lordly and terrible over the land. It lets out an almighty SHRIEK which seems to echo to eternity and -- SLAM CUT to Jake, on his back, GASPING -- back in his body. He weakly rolls up to one elbow and looks around the room.

MO'AT

It is finished.

Neytiri's face is flooded with relief. The faces of the clan elders look at Jake expectantly.

EYTUKAN

(subtitled)

Did your Spirit Animal come?

Jake looks from Eytukan to Mo'at, Tsu'tey and the elders. How can he tell them what he has seen?

Mo'at puts her splayed fingers against his face, seeming to peer into his troubled soul.

MO'AT

(to Jake)

Something has come.

(to the others, subtitled)

It will take time for the meaning to be clear.

She steps back, and Eytukan motions for Jake to stand. He gets up, weakly.

OUTSIDE THE ENCLOSURE -- Eytukan emerges with Jake and the others. The entire clan is gathered, waiting to hear what has happened. Jake looks up at the Leonopteryx Skull Totem, which seems to stare down at him.

GRACE watches, her eyes brimming. Proud. Relieved. Amazed.

Eytukan places both hands on Jake's chest and holds them there.

EYTUKAN

(subtitled)

You are now a son of the Omaticaya. You are part of the People.

All the members of the clan press forward, crowding around and putting their hands on Jake's shoulders, back, chest -- hands upon hands, until he is connected to everyone.

DISSOLVE TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - NIGHT

JAKE and NEYTIRI run silhouetted in the night. Behind them waterfalls cascade down in the silvery light. POLYPHEMUS RISES behind the trees.

NEYTIRI DIVES from a rock, slicing into a mirror of water. Jake follows her and --

UNDERWATER, they swim over glowing ANEMONES.

They seem to float in a cosmic dance above a luminous garden of waving shapes. Tiny purple fish swirl around them.

Their hands come together, fingers twining, as they float weightlessly, as if between worlds.

DISSOLVE TO:

EXT. WILLOW GLADE

Laughing, they run together into a stand of WILLOWS. Their trunks are as gnarled as bonsai. Long faintly glowing tendrils hang straight down in pastel curtains.

Underfoot, a bed of moss glows faintly. It REACTS to their footsteps with expanding rings of light.

It is an exquisitely beautiful spot.

The willows stir, responding to their presence. She holds up her hands, letting the TENDRILS caress her.

NEYTIRI

This is a place for prayers to be heard.
And sometimes answered.

Jake puts out his hands and the tendrils play over his fingers, his palms, his forearms. His eyes go wide. We hear the WHISPERING of ancient Na'vi VOICES.

JAKE

It's like -- a sound you feel.

NEYTIRI

We call this utraya mokri -- the Tree of Voices. The voices of our ancestors, who live within Eywa.

A few WOODSPRITES circle around them, some alighting on their shoulders and arms.

They stand, very close together now. Her eyes are intense, almost luminous. He feels drawn into them.

But she pulls back a little.

NEYTIRI

You are Omaticaya now. You may make your own bow from the wood of Hometree.
(she looks away)
And you may choose a woman.

The Amazon warrior trying so hard to sound casual. Jake suppresses a smile.

NEYTIRI

We have many fine women. Ninat is the best singer --

JAKE

I don't want Ninat.

NEYTIRI

There is Beyral -- she is a good hunter --

Jake puts his fingers on her lips to stop her.

JAKE

I've already chosen. But this woman must also choose me.

She takes his hands and their fingers intertwine, moving gently over each other.

NEYTIRI

She already has.

He puts his face close to hers. She rubs her cheek against his. He kisses her on the mouth. They explore each other.

Then she pulls back, eyes sparkling.

NEYTIRI

Kissing is very good. But we have something better.

She pulls him down until they are kneeling, facing each other on the faintly glowing moss.

Neytiri takes the end of her queue and raises it. Jake does the same, with trembling anticipation. The tendrils at the ends move with a life of their own, straining to be joined.

MACRO SHOT -- The tendrils INTERTWINE with gentle undulations.

JAKE rocks with the direct contact between his nervous system and hers. The ultimate intimacy.

They come together into a kiss and sink down on the bed of moss, and ripples of light spread out around them.

THE WILLOWS sway, without wind, and the night is alive with pulsing energy as we DISSOLVE TO --

LATER. She is collapsed across his chest. Spent. He strokes her face tenderly.

JAKE

Neytiri, you know my real body is far away, sleeping.

She raises up, placing her fingertips to his chest --

NEYTIRI

This body is real.

(she touches his forehead)

This spirit is real.

Her eyes are luminous, honest, infinitely deep.

NEYTIRI

When I was first your teacher, I hated all Sky People. But you have also taught me.

(whispering)

Spirit is all that matters.

She lays her head down, against his chest, listening to his heartbeat.

NEYTIRI

I am with you now, Jake. We are mated for life.

JAKE

We are?

NEYTIRI

Yes. It is our way.

(innocently)

Oh. I forgot to tell?

He rouses up, making her look at him.

JAKE

Really, we are?

NEYTIRI

We are.

Jake considers this.

JAKE

It's cool. I'm there.

He lays his head down, and her arms enfold him, sheltering him as he sleeps.

INT. SHACK - NIGHT

Jake's eyes open in the darkness. He just lies there, thinking. In his coffin. In another world.

CUT TO:

EXT. WILLOW GLADE - DAWN

DAWN BREAKS in the sacred glade. Shafts of orange morning light. Jake and Neytiri asleep in each others' arms. Maxfield Parrish painting. But then --

THE ROAR OF ENGINES. Neytiri awakens with a start. The SPLINTERING, CRACKLING of forest being crushed under enormous treads gets louder.

SHE WATCHES in growing horror as the BLADE of a bulldozer becomes a dark wall behind the sheltering ring of willows. She shakes Jake, shouting at him in Na'vi to wake up.

NEYTIRI

Jake! Wake up! Where ever you are, come back to me now. Jake!

INT. SHACK - DAWN

HUMAN JAKE is in a hurry to get back to the link. GRACE, still groggy, chases him with coffee and microwaved eggs.

GRACE

Here -- eat this. I'd hate to have to force-feed a cripple.

She slams the lid shut before he can enter and sticks the plate under his nose.

GRACE

(grinning)
She's not going anywhere.

He sighs heavily and starts wolfing the eggs.

EXT. WILLOW GLADE - DAWN

Neytiri SCREAMS as --

The willows begin to fall before the blade, to be ground under the treads. AVATAR JAKE is directly in the path. She tries to lift him, but he is too heavy. She is screaming at him, frantically trying to wake him, as --

INT. SHACK - DAWN

Jake adjusts himself in the link chair. He hands Grace the empty plate.

GRACE

And when was the last time you took a shower? Jesus, Marine.

Jake pushes her hands away and pulls the lid down.

EXT. WILLOW GLADE

AVATAR JAKE wakes up to see --

NEYTIRI dragging him, screaming. He leaps up as --

THE DOZER pushes inexorably into the glade, splintering the trees, plowing the earth before it.

JAKE RUNS into the path of the bulldozer, waving his arms.

JAKE
Hey! Heeeeey! Stop! Stop!

He positions himself where the camera-eyes of the robotic juggernaut will see him.

INT. OPS CENTER - DAY

CLOSE ON MONITOR -- Jake shouts but there's no sound feed.

WIDER as the TRACTOR OPERATOR sees him and pulls back on the remote throttles. He yells to his SUPERVISOR.

OPERATOR
Hey, I got one of the natives blockin' my blade here.

This attracts the attention of Selfridge, who comes over to the workstation.

ON THE SCREEN -- Jake, in his Omaticaya loincloth and ceremonial body paint, is unrecognizable.

SUPERVISOR
(to Selfridge)
What do we do?

SELFRIDGE
Roll on. He'll move. These people have to learn that we don't stop.

TIGHT ON THROTTLES as the operator pushes them forward.

ON THE SCREEN Jake stumbles back, tripping, disappears below the blade for a second -- reappears, running to the side.

EXT. WILLOW GLADE

JAKE grabs a rock and LEAPS onto the dozer. He climbs quickly to the CAMERA MAST.

SMASH! The rock crashes into the lens of the camera. Jake beats the rock furiously against it, pounding it to junk.

INT. OPS CENTER

CLOSE ON MONITOR -- as Jake's demonic face is replaced by noise.

OPERATOR
I'm blind.

He pulls back on the throttles.

EXT. WILLOW GLADE

THE JUGGERNAUT grinds to a stop. But the ROAR of engines continues because --

MORE DOZERS and TRACTORS advance nearby, crushing the forest before them. Trees are slashed down by the PLASMA CUTTERS. Terrified animals flee before the onslaught.

POWERSUITS and TROOPERS stride through the ravaged forest, blasting anything that moves. A trooper sees Jake on the dozer. He rips off a BURST and --

Rounds CLANG into metal as Jake dives off the machine. He grabs Neytiri and they run into concealing foliage. From behind a screen of leaves, they watch as --

THE DOZERS advance, obliterating the sacred site, leaving only mud and wood splinters in their path.

CU NEYTIRI, stunned by the nightmarish, unfathomable wrongness of it. She sobs as the willows die.

INT. OPS CENTER

MINUTES LATER, the operator is playing back the CAMERA'S FEED for Quaritch and the others.

QUARITCH

Freeze it, right -- there.

ON MONITOR -- the image expands, until Jake's face is clear, frozen in an animal snarl.

SELFRIDGE

Son of a bitch!

PUSH IN ON QUARITCH as his jaw clenches in cold fury.

He turns and strides toward the door, shouting to his WATCH COMMANDER as he passes.

QUARITCH

Get me a pilot!

CUT TO:

INT. COMMONS/HOMETREE - DAY

A RAIDING PARTY of hunters, their bodies painted, raise weapons overhead. AVATAR GRACE watches with growing alarm.

EYTUKAN
 (subtitled)
Tsu'tey will lead the war party!

Tsu'tey steps forward, face full of hate, raising a war cry among the hunters.

GRACE
 (subtitled)
Please -- this will only make it worse --

TSU'TEY
You do not speak here!

JAKE and NEYTIRI cross the commons toward them. Jake feels all eyes turn toward him. He takes her arm, stopping her.

JAKE
 (to Neytiri, low)
 Okay, listen. There's something I have to tell you. It's gonna be hard. I just need you to --

He sees TSU'TEY striding toward them, his face a mask of fury.

TSU'TEY
You!

Tsu'tey walks right up and SLAMS Jake in the chest with both hands. It is so unexpected, that Jake topples on his ass.

TSU'TEY
You mated with this woman?!

GRACE
 Oh shit.

Jake stands. He reaches out for Neytiri. She goes to him, clutching his hand.

MO'AT
 Is this true?

NEYTIRI
 (subtitled)
We are mated before Eywa. It is done.

Tsu'tey turns to Mo'at and Eytukan, his face anguished.

TSU'TEY

(subtitled)

Neytiri was promised to me! Everything is changing. Everything is being destroyed!

Tsu'tey points at Jake, his pain shifting to rage.

TSU'TEY

(subtitled)

These aliens kill everything they touch, like poison.

MO'AT

Neytiri! If you choose this path, you can never be Tsahik. Your life will be wasted.

Neytiri looks at her mother -- sees the grief in her eyes.

NEYTIRI

I have chosen.

Tsu'tey draws his knife and --

TSU'TEY

Yeeeeeeaaa!

LUNGES AT JAKE, who's ready this time -- he sidesteps, blocking the knife, and elbows Tsu'tey HARD in the face.

Tsu'tey reels back, nose bleeding. He starts forward on a second attack but -- Eytukan grabs his arm and spins him around.

EYTUKAN

(subtitled)

Stop! This is not a proper challenge.

Tsu'tey glares at Jake while sheathing his knife.

TSU'TEY

I challenge you.

GRACE

Jake, don't --

JAKE

I accept.

CUT TO:

INT./EXT. SAMSON - DAY

QUARITCH rides left seat as Trudy pilots through the mountains. She glances at him, then toggles the aircom.

TRUDY
Loveshack this is Samson One Six inbound hot to your pos. I have Colonel Quaritch with me and --

But Quaritch SLAMS the switch, cutting her off.

QUARITCH
Did I tell you to announce us?

TRUDY
Sorry sir, it's procedure.

INT. SHACK

Norm punches buttons on the comms console.

NORM
Samson One Six? Trudy?
(no answer)
Crap.

He looks helplessly at Jake and Grace's link units -- no way to warn them.

INT. HOMETREE - DAY

TSU'TEY AND JAKE square off. Each holds a long, solid staff. The entire clan crowds around them in a circle.

GRACE
What the hell are you doing?

JAKE
It's the only way to get him to goddamn
listen.

TSU'TEY LEAPS at Jake with a sharp cry and Jake parries with his staff. The staves CLACK off each other as the two combatants LEAP, DUCK and STRIKE furiously.

Tsu'tey sweeps Jake off his feet with a roundhouse hit to the ankles, but --

Jake ROLLS out of it and catches Tsu'tey in the belly with the blunt end.

EXT. SITE 26 - DAY

TRUDY'S SAMSON lands. QUARITCH and a posse of troopers jump down and rush the Shack.

INT. COMMONS

TSU'TEY wades in with a series of short, sharp blows. Jake swings with equal fury. Both fighting from the heart.

The staves whistle through the air, and CLACK together like gunshots. Jake presses hard, and Tsu'tey staggers back, stumbling as --

Jake lands a SOLID HIT, dropping him to his knees, just as --

INT. SHACK

THE INNER DOOR bangs open and QUARITCH stomps toward Grace's Link controls.

NORM

Hey, hang on, you can't interrupt a link in progress, it's dangerous -- wait!

Quaritch shoves him aside and SMACKS his fist down on the POWER switch. Grace's unit goes dead and --

INT. COMMONS

AVATAR GRACE'S eyes roll back and she keels over. NEYTIRI barely catches her before she hits the ground.

JAKE parries as Tsu'tey swings but then --

Jake's eyes go blank just as -- K-RACK! Tsu'tey puts one alongside his head. Jake sprawls, completely inert. Tsu'tey pokes him with his staff, then raises it and lets out a piercing VICTORY CRY.

INT. SHACK - DAY

JAKE SLAMS OPEN the Link, amped from the fight, furious --

JAKE

Are you out of your goddamn mind?!

QUARITCH

You crossed a line.

Quaritch PUNCHES HIM HARD. Jake flops back, dazed. The troopers yank him out and ZIP-TIE his wrists.

INT. COMMONS

TSU'TEY draws his KNIFE, and bends down, grabbing Jake by the hair.

TSU'TEY
(subtitled)
This is a demon in a false body. It should not live.

He puts his knife to Jake's throat but --

NEYTIRI BLIND-SIDES him at full tilt. Tsu'tey sprawls, rolls, comes up to see --

Neytiri crouched like a lioness over Jake, her KNIFE and teeth bared, her ears flattened. She SNARLS with primal fury.

Tsu'tey stands panting. He pushes through the crowd and walks away, calling for his hunters.

CUT TO:

INT. OPS CENTER - DUSK

TIGHT ON MONITOR -- showing JAKE'S AVATAR FACE on the dozer camera, as he pounds a rock into the lens. The shot FREEZES on Jake's ANIMAL SNARL.

WIDER -- HUMAN JAKE sits, bruised and bleeding, watching himself on the monitor. GRACE and NORM stand nearby, rubbing their wrists where the zip-ties bit in. SELFRIDGE and QUARITCH watch with disdain.

QUARITCH
You let me down, son. You got a little local pussy and completely forgot what team you play for.

Jake meets his gaze with a defiant glare.

GRACE
Parker, listen, there may still be time to --

QUARITCH
Shut your fucking hole!

Grace is momentarily stunned by Quaritch's fury. But she meets it with her own intensity, not backing down an inch.

GRACE

Or what, Ranger Rick? You gonna shoot me?

(to Selfridge)

You need to muzzle your dog!

SELFRIDGE

Can we just take this down a couple notches, please.

JAKE

(to Quaritch)

You say you want to keep your people alive. Start by listening to her.

Jake nods to Grace to continue.

GRACE

(to Selfridge)

This is bad, Parker. Those trees were sacred to the Omaticaya in a way you can't imagine.

SELFRIDGE

You know what? You throw a stick in the air around here it falls on some sacred fern.

GRACE

I'm not talking about pagan voodoo here -- I'm talking about something real and measurable in the biology of the forest.

SELFRIDGE

(frustrated)

Which is what exactly?

Grace's nerve fails. A rush of conflicting emotions -- the need to act, to do something, colliding with her scientific rigor.

GRACE

(to Jake)

I can't do this. How am I supposed to reduce years of work to a sound bite for the illiterate?

JAKE

Just tell him what you know in your heart.

She turns to Parker, steeling herself.

GRACE

Alright, look -- I don't have the answers yet, I'm just now starting to even frame the questions. What we think we know -- is that there's some kind of electrochemical communication between the roots of the trees. Like the synapses between neurons. Each tree has ten to the fourth connections to the trees around it, and there are ten to the twelfth trees on Pandora --

SELFRIDGE

That's a lot I'm guessing.

GRACE

That's more connections than the human brain. You get it? It's a network -- a global network. And the Na'vi can access it -- they can upload and download data -- memories -- at sites like the one you destroyed.

SELFRIDGE

What the hell have you people been smoking out there? They're just. Goddamn. Trees.

GRACE

You need to wake up, Parker. The wealth of this world isn't in the ground -- it's all around us. The Na'vi know that, and they're fighting to defend it. If you want to share this world with them, you need to understand them.

QUARITCH

We understand them just fine. Thanks to Jake here.

Jake shares a look of alarm with Grace as Quaritch selects a NEW CLIP on the main monitor -- TIGHT ON MONITOR -- VIDEO-LOG IMAGE of Jake, looking haggard and borderline deranged, rambling in a late-night monologue.

JAKE (RECORDED)

They're not going to give up their home -- they're not gonna make a deal. For what? Lite beer and shopping channel? There's nothing we have that they want. We're a horror to them. We're the monsters from space.

JAKE watches with a growing dread as his words condemn the people he has grown to love.

JAKE (RECORDED)

They're never going to leave Hometree.

Quaritch FREEZES the recording.

QUARITCH

Since a deal can't be made -- it gets real simple.

(to Jake, icily)

So thanks. I'm getting all emotional. I might just give you a big wet kiss.

GRACE

Parker, we have to talk, like rational people.

SELFRIDGE

Well, I'd cherish that, but unfortunately you're out of here on the next shuttle. All of you. I'm shutting down the Avatar Program, effective now.

ON JAKE, GRACE AND NORM, speechless.

SLOW DISSOLVE TO:

A WALL OF FIRE. Silhouettes of direhorse riders cross in SLOW MOTION, spears and bows held high.

INT. OPS CENTER - MORNING

MONITOR SCREEN IMAGE -- WAINFLEET pans a camera across the smoldering hulks of BURNED DOZERS. The toppled remains of a charred ampsuit. Dead troopers bristling with arrows.

WAINFLEET

They hit with banshees first. Set the ampsuit on fire. Driver's toast.

Quaritch and Selfridge look on grimly.

QUARITCH

The rest of the squad?

WAINFLEET

Six bodies -- that's all of 'em. And the equipment is totalled.

SELFRIDGE

Christ.

INT. SELFRIDGE'S OFFICE - DAY

Selfridge is stares soberly as Quaritch outlines the plan.

QUARITCH

I can do it with minimal casualties to the indigenous. We'll clear them out with gas first. It'll be humane. More or less.

Selfridge sighs and rubs his face.

QUARITCH

Hey, don't go limp on me now. This is exactly the incident we needed.

SELFRRIDGE

Alright, let's pull the trigger.

CUT TO:

INT. BIO LAB

MAX and the lab staff are glumly packing files and equipment, under the watchful eye of armed SEC-OPS TROOPERS. JAKE, GRACE, NORM stare bleakly at each other.

GRACE

They bulldozed a sacred site on purpose, to trigger a response. They're fabricating this war to get what they want.

NORM

I can't believe that.

JAKE

Yup. That's how it's done. When people are sitting on shit you want, you make them your enemy. Then you're justified in taking it.

TRUDY RUNS into the lab, breathless. She's wearing full flight gear and carrying her helmet.

TRUDY

Sec-ops is rolling the gunships. They're gonna hit Hometree!

JAKE

When?

TRUDY

Now. We're spooling up now! I gotta go.

GRACE

My God.

Jake pumps furiously toward the door, Grace following.

INT. OPS CENTER - DAY

SELFRIDGE surveys the airfield, where crews swarm over the gunships, loading ordnance. He turns as JAKE and GRACE charge toward him.

GRACE

Parker, wait. Stop! These are people you're about to --

SELFRIDGE

They're fly-bitten savages who live in a tree! Look around -- I don't know about you but I see a lot of trees. They can move.

GRACE

For God's sake, there are children in there. Babies!

JAKE

Look Selfridge, you don't want this kind of blood on your hands. Let me try to talk them out. They trust me.

ON SELFRIDGE, considering this.

CUT TO:

INT. LINK ROOM

SELFRIDGE and an escort of armed TROOPERS accompany Jake and Grace to the links. The two enter their units, as NORM and MAX prep the system.

SELFRIDGE

You've got one hour. Unless you want your girlfriend in there when the axe comes down, you get them to evacuate. One hour.

Jake lowers the upper clamshell. Norm starts the sequence.

CUT TO:

INT. COMMONS -DAY

The entire clan is gathered, with Eytukan and Mo'at presiding. Jake looks around, feeling the gaze of the People upon him. He steels himself, and speaks in clear Na'vi --

JAKE
 (subtitled)
Eytukan, I have something to say, to everyone.

EYTUKAN
 (subtitled)
Speak, Jakesully.

JAKE
 (subtitled)
A great evil is upon us. The Sky People are coming to destroy Hometree. They will be here soon.

A murmur of fear and anger goes through the crowd.

JAKE
 (subtitled)
You have to leave, or you will die.

MO'AT
 Are you certain of this?

JAKE
 They sent me here to learn your ways. So one day I could bring this message, and you would believe it.

NEYTIRI
 What are you saying, Jake? You knew this would happen?

He is unable to meet her eyes.

JAKE
 Yes.
 (anguished)
 At first it was just orders. Then everything changed. I fell in love-- with the forest, with the Omaticaya People -- (he looks at her)
 -- with you. And by then, how could I tell you?

Neytiri can barely breathe. She is shaking with the enormity of it, her voice cracking with rage and pain --

NEYTIRI
 I trusted you, Jake!

JAKE
Neytiri. Please, I only wanted to --

NEYTIRI
You will never be one of the People!
NEVER!

TSU'TEY yells to his HUNTERS --

TSUTEY
(subtitled)
Bind them.

They grab Jake, who doesn't resist. Others seize Grace.
Both are driven to their knees, and their arms bound.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

SCORPION GUNSHIPS darken the sky as they come over the tops of the trees. At the head of the formation is one much larger ship, a monster 150 feet long -- the GENERAL DYNAMICS C-21 DRAGON GUNSHIP.

Quaritch, next to the pilot of the Dragon, surveys the world below like Napoleon astride his horse.

EXT. HOMETREE

JAKE and GRACE are lashed to posts at the front entrance to Hometree. The People look up as --

THE DRAGON and its escort of GUNSHIPS arrive over the trees. The DOWN-BLAST from their rotors creates a maelstrom of flying leaves and debris.

IN THE DRAGON COCKPIT Quaritch watches a targeting screen -- a telescopic image of Jake and Grace tied to posts.

QUARITCH
Well, I'd say diplomacy has failed.

TSU'TEY and another HUNTER hold knives to the throats of the two avatars, glaring defiantly at the gunships.

QUARITCH
I think they mean to cut their throats if we don't back off. Make sure you get a nice close-up of that. I can tack it onto the after-action report.

JAKE YELLS to Neytiri, Tsu'tey, the others gathered nearby --

JAKE

You have to get out of Hometree! Run to the forest! Please, I'm begging you!

EYTUKAN scowls at Jake, then GRABS TSU'TEY and yells --

EYTUKAN

(subtitled)

Take the ikran! Attack from above!

Tsu'tey grabs some hunters and runs up the roots of Hometree.

IN THE COCKPIT Quaritch grows impatient.

QUARITCH

Alright, let's get this done. Give me forty millimeter gas rounds, right in the front door.

GUNNER

Roger. CS forties. Going hot.

QUARITCH

Fire.

On the Dragon's stub-wings the 40mm ROCKET LAUNCHERS open up with a BARRAGE of leaping fire which FLASHES down and --

K-WHOOM!K-WHOOM!K-WHOOM! -- the inside of Hometree ERUPTS with multiple EXPLOSIONS of TEARGAS.

THE GAS rolls across the confused villagers. They begin to cough and gag.

Eytukan and the remaining HUNTERS bravely fire at the gunships with their longbows.

IN THE DRAGON'S COCKPIT, Quaritch laughs as arrows CLINK against the armored windows.

AMID CLOUDS of teargas, the Omaticaya run, stumble, collapse.

EYTUKAN

(yelling/subtitled)

Everybody outside! Go to the Forest.

The villagers pour out of Hometree. Everyone is yelling. Piercing SCREAMS in the boiling gas.

JAKE, eyes streaming, struggles with his bindings.

KA-WHOOM! An INCENDIARY ROUND explodes inside the Commons. FLAMES ROAR through the base of Hometree.

INSIDE HOMETREE it is a burning smoky HELL. Flames roar up the inside like a chimney. STRAGGLERS scramble outside, coughing and dragging wounded with them.

High up in the trunk, TSU'TEY and his hunters leap rapidly from spoke to spoke, climbing barely ahead of the fireball.

OUTSIDE the fire is driven by the rotor-wash toward JAKE and GRACE who are still bound tightly to the posts.

Out of the smoke, MO'AT appears in front of Jake. She raises a KNIFE and -- SLASHES DOWNWARD. Jake looks down, surprised, to see his bonds falling away. He meets her eyes, which are filled with horror, but also something else. Call it faith.

MO'AT

You are one of us. Help us!

Jake takes the knife and cuts Grace free.

JAKE

We've gotta move! He's gonna blow the columns.

As Grace realizes what he means, he grabs her and they RUN. Around them the Omaticaya flee in horror and confusion.

IN THE COCKPIT, Quaritch watches as the Omaticaya stream away from the Great Tree, running along roots and branches.

QUARITCH

That's how you scatter the roaches. Okay, switch missiles. Give me H-E's at the base of the west columns.

PILOTS (V.O.)

Copy, switching missiles.

IN TRUDY'S SAMSON -- she hears the other pilots acknowledging Quaritch's order.

TRUDY

Screw it.

She takes her finger OFF the fire-control and pulls her aircraft out of formation.

PUSHING IN ON QUARITCH, the Hometree reflecting in his glasses.

QUARITCH
Bring it down.

MISSILES stream down from the DRAGON and the other gunships and --

The base of Hometree VANISHES in a chain of HIGH-EXPLOSIVE BLASTS. The massive PILLARS fragment into matchsticks, and --

The Omaticaya watch in horror as --

HOMETREE GROANS and starts to MOVE.

In a cacophony of cracking, splintering roots, the mighty tree TOPPLES with agonizing slowness.

AT THE BANSHEE EYRIE, TSU'TEY and the other hunters spur their mounts into flight. They swoop among the branches as the tree, the one fixed thing in their lives, MOVES.

It CRASHES DOWN through the forest canopy, crushing the lesser trees in its path, FALLING PONDEROUSLY.

HOMETREE hits the ground like the end of the world, raising a great cloud of dust and pulverized debris.

IN THE DRAGON cockpit, Quaritch surveys the destruction.

QUARITCH
Nice work people. Alright, let's light it up.

INCENDIARIES launch from the gunships, EXPLODING into gouts of FIRE in the debris of Hometree.

THE GUNSHIPS fan the flames through the trees like a fire-storm. The Omaticaya retreat as a WALL OF FIRE advances.

JAKE SEARCHES for Neytiri amid swirling smoke and sparks.

JAKE
Neytiri! Neytiri!

GRACE is gathering crying CHILDREN, and herding them away from the fire-storm.

NEYTIRI stumbles through the burning wreckage at the edge of the INFERNO. She sees -- EYTUKAN. A large shard of wood is driven through him like a spear. He recognizes her as she kneels over him.

EYTUKAN
 (subtitled)
Daughter -- take my bow. Protect the People.

In his last living moment he places his bow in her hands.
 She collapses over him, her face crumpling in grief.
 JAKE reels out of the smoke. Kneels next to her.

JAKE
 I'm sorry --

She shoves him away and stands, screaming at him as tears stream down her face.

NETYIRI
 Get away from me, Jake. Go away! Never come back!

Jake stumbles back as she slumps down by her father's body.
 Sparks and smoke swirl around him. He watches as -- NETYIRI kneels, grieving. Slumped over, clutching her stomach. Keening like an animal.

SLOW MOTION -- Jake staggers lost and alone through the burning forest. Utterly shattered. Eyes vacant.

JAKE (V.O.)
I was a warrior who dreamed he could bring peace. Sooner or later though, you always have to wake up...

INT. LINK ROOM

SELFRIDGE watches a video feed of the destruction on one of the monitors. Max and NORM stare in shock.

SELFRIDGE
 Pull the plug.

A TROOPER crosses to the console and grabs the handle of the MASTER BREAKER --

EXT. RAINFOREST

The strings are cut. Jake flops to the ground, limp.

Elsewhere in the smoky Hell, Grace slumps unconscious. The crying kids pull at her. Mo'at, leading a group of Omaticaya, comes upon the scene.

She grabs the kids and pulls them away, leaving Grace's avatar helpless in the path of the flames. She hesitates, then --

MO'AT
(subtitled)
Bring her.

INT. LINK ROOM

BLACKNESS. Then the top clamshell of Jake's unit is yanked upward, and troopers grab him, zip-tie his wrists as we --

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DUSK

ON A HILLSIDE -- a grieving Neytiri stands with Mo'at and the Omaticaya refugees. Two hunters pull Grace's avatar on a travois.

They watch as the flames burn like a funeral pyre below. A great pall of smoke darkens the landscape.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. LOCK-UP - NIGHT

Jake, Grace, and Norm are in a common holding cell. They sit, staring in silence. Too wired to sleep, too emotionally drained to move.

GRACE
They never wanted us to succeed.

AT THE DESK OUTSIDE, the lone TROOPER looks up as -- TRUDY approaches along the corridor, pushing a stainless steel trolley.

TRUDY
Personally I think steak's too good for these traitors.

GUARD
They get steak? That's bullshit. Let me see that --

The guard bends to look into the hot cart and --

THE MUZZLE of Trudy's pistol presses behind his ear.

TRUDY

Oops.

(shoving him down)

All the way down, pendejo.

She WHISTLES and MAX trots around the corner.

Trudy binds the guard with one of his own zip-ties as Max grabs his KEY CARD and runs to the cell. Swipes the card. The door is rolling open when -- ANOTHER TROOPER rounds the corner. Trudy takes him down with a sharp BLOW to the windpipe and a THAI KNEE to the ribs.

Meanwhile the first TROOPER is getting up, but Max CLOCKS him heartily with a coffee urn. He goes down and stays down.

MAX

That was unexpectedly satisfying.

Trudy plants a kiss on Norm as he runs out of the cell.

NORM

Baby, you rock.

Jake wheels out, grabbing the sidearm from the fallen trooper as Trudy binds his wrists.

JAKE

(to Max and Trudy)

Thanks.

Jake faces his motley group, chambering a round.

JAKE

So what do you say? Time for a revolution?

GRACE

I'm free.

Trudy grins and taps his fist.

JAKE

Come on.

CUT TO:

INT. UTILIDOR

In the utility corridor under the base, Jake pumps the chair furiously, as the others jog. They reach an AIRLOCK and start donning EXOPACKS.

JAKE
(to Trudy)
Get your ship fired up.

Trudy nods. She grabs Norm and enters the airlock. Jake turns to Max.

JAKE
Stay here. I need somebody on the inside
I can trust.

Max nods. Jake grips his hand tightly.

CUT TO:

EXT. AIRFIELD - NIGHT

IN THE SAMSON, Norm is helping Trudy race through the preflight checks as the turbines spool up. A LIGHT hits them.

An armored TROOPER approaches, aiming his AR at them.

TROOPER
I need you to shut down and step out of the vehicle! Now!

JAKE rolls up behind him, aiming his pistol.

JAKE
Take it nice and easy, troop.

The trooper turns, sees the gun.

JAKE
On the ground, face down. Hands behind your head.

The trooper hesitates.

GRACE
Do what he goddamn says!

He does. Norm jumps down and grabs the trooper's rifle and side-arm, covering him, while Grace helps Jake from chair to the back bay of the chopper. She throws his chair in, and jumps in herself.

JAKE
Go! Go! Go!

INT. OPS CENTER - NIGHT

QUARITCH, watching a monitor, sees what's happening down at the airfield. He slams his palm down on an ALARM BUTTON.

He draws his PISTOL. Strides toward the EMERGENCY DOOR. He undogs it.

EXT. OPS CENTER/AIRFIELD - NIGHT

HOLDING HIS BREATH Quaritch yanks the hatch open and strides onto the outer landing. Inside people scramble for MASKS.

THE SAMSON lifts off in a blast of rotor-wash just as --

QUARITCH OPENS FIRE and --

ROUNDS rake the ship. Trudy banks hard, using the bottom to shield them. Bullets WHACK into the ship as she climbs-out over the tree-line.

Jake's fist pumps the air exultantly.

JAKE

Oh yeah, baby!

GRACE

Aaahh, crap. Not again.

He looks over at Grace and freezes. She is looking down at a BLOODY HAND. She clutches her abdomen, covering the spreading stain. Looks at Jake, wide-eyed.

GRACE

This is gonna ruin my whole day.

JAKE

Hang on, Grace.

CUT TO:

EXT. SHACK / SITE 26 - NIGHT

NORM'S AVATAR, with an AR slung over his shoulder, stands on the roof of the LINK MODULE. He gives a thumbs up signal. The lift cable goes taut and --

The shack LIFTS OFF THE GROUND.

Trudy's Samson beats the grass of the mountain meadow, straining to lift the module on a long-line sling. The shack sways as Trudy banks across forested slopes and heads deeper into the HALLELUJAH MOUNTAINS.

INT. SAMSON CABIN - NIGHT

Outside the windows, clouds and cliffs pass by, lit by Polyphemus.

Jake is yanking stuff out of the Samson's trauma bag, while Grace lies curled across two back seats, hugging her blood-soaked abdomen. She is pale and shocky.

Trudy is flying on visual only, by the light of Polyphemus. Her instruments are showing gibberish.

TRUDY

Well, at least they won't be able to track us up here. Not this deep in the vortex.

JAKE

It's strongest at the Well of Souls, right?

TRUDY

Yeah.

JAKE

Good, 'cause that's where we're going.

TRUDY

Copy.

He gives Grace an ampule of morphine for the pain.

JAKE

I'm gonna get you some help, Grace.

GRACE

Forget it, it doesn't matter.

Jake grabs her shoulders.

JAKE

No! The People can help you. I know it.

CUT TO:

EXT. WELL OF SOULS - AERIAL - DAWN

Dawn light paints the massive ARCHES of magnetic rock above the Well of Souls.

Tiny as an insect, the SAMSON passes.

JAKE (V.O.)
The Well of Souls. The heart of the forest. I knew the People would go there.

EXT. WELL OF SOULS - DAWN

The WELL OF SOULS is a deep caldera 100 meters across. It is ringed with enormous WILLOWS whose roots seem to pour down the sheer rock walls like candle wax.

AT THE BOTTOM, in a natural amphitheater, the Omaticaya refugees are clustered around a central rock outcropping which forms a kind of dais and altar.

Shafts of dawn light reach to the bottom of the grotto, lighting a single willow -- the MOTHER TREE. Ancient and gnarled, it grows in the center of the rock.

Its ROOTS spread down to the grotto floor, where they merge with the roots of the willows ringing the Well -- forming a braided mat resembling the surface of a brain.

Mo'at stands on the dais, leading them in a CHANT.

MO'AT
 (subtitled)
Wise ancestors who live within Eywa, guide us. Give us a sign.

CUT TO:

EXT. FOREST CLEARING - DAWN

The shack descends from the sky like a gift from the gods. It bumps to the ground.

CUT TO:

INT. SHACK -- DAY

Grace lies, comatose, in her open link. Trudy gives Jake a look that says "not much time." Jake feels Grace's cold forehead, then crosses to his own link.

As Trudy helps him in, Norm rapidly preps the system.

NORM
 (low)
Tsu'tey is Olo'eyctan now. He's not going to let you get near that place.

JAKE
I've gotta try, Norm.

Jake pulls the clamshell down and we --

CUT TO:

EXT. RUINS OF HOMETREE - DAY

CU JAKE'S AVATAR -- HIS EYES OPEN. He sits up. The forest is silent, shrouded in smoke that the sun can't penetrate. The animals have fled. Ash blows on the wind.

JAKE (V.O.)
Outcast. Betrayer. Alien. To ever face them again, I was gonna have to change the rules.

DISSOLVE -- JAKE reaches the top of a rise. The forest beyond is utterly DEVASTATED. The trees burned and fallen. Small fires still flicker across a landscape in Hell.

JAKE stares. It is his vision, made real. He stumbles through the dark wasteland, sparks and ash swirling around him.

A SCREECH. Jake looks up as --

HIS BANSHEE -- bonded for life -- flaps down to a landing in front of him. He steps to it, and strokes its head. It nudges his chest like a horse.

JAKE (V.O.)
Sometimes your whole life boils down to one insane move.

JAKE
 Come on, boy. Time to fly.

OMIITED

EXT. MOUNTAINS - DAY

THE GREAT LEONOPTERYX glides effortlessly along the ridge where Jake and Neytiri first encountered him.

It scans for prey below, its magnificent indigo-crested head cocking left, then right.

JAKE (V.O.)
The way I had it figured, Toruk is the baddest cat in the sky. Nothing attacks him. So why would he ever look up?

FROM ABOVE -- THE SMALL SHADOW of Jake's banshee falls across the back of the mighty Toruk.

JAKE (V.O.)
But that was just a theory.

JAKE DIVES and WE RUSH DOWN toward the great beast and our own shadow then --

CUT TO:

EXT. WELL OF SOULS - LATE AFTERNOON

The Omaticaya people lift their voices in a SONG filled with tragic loss and yearning for deliverance.

CLOSE ON NEYTIRI, singing. A SHADOW CROSSES HER FACE. She looks up, and her eyes go wide as --

A TERRIBLE CRY echoes, turning all eyes skyward. AN ENORMOUS SHADOW covers the crowd as -- TORUK comes out of the sun, beating its huge wings to slow its descent. Its crimson and black wings, backlit by the sun, seem to glow from within.

The People CRY OUT in alarm and scatter as the dreaded beast alights in their midst. And that's when they see -- JAKE, riding high on its shoulders, plugged-in to its antenna. It folds its wings and stands calmly amid the paralyzed Na'vi.

Toruk lowers its body. They stare in awe as Jake dismounts and strokes the magnificent animal's flank.

NEYTIRI, TSU'TEY and MO'AT watch in stunned amazement as the legendary Rider of Last Shadow walks toward them.

NEYTIRI
 (breathing the words)
Toruk Macto.

Neytiri raises her arms.

NEYTIRI
 (shouting)
Toruk Macto!

ON THE FACES of the Omaticaya -- new hope dawning in their eyes. WHISPERS flow among them, the words REPEATED --

CROWD
Toruk Macto... Toruk Macto...

Jake walks through the crowd, straight to Neytiri at the foot of the dais. He looks into her enormous eyes, and the emotion between them is powerful and pure.

NEYTIRI

I See you.

JAKE

(a hoarse whisper)

I See you.

Neytiri's eyes brim with tears.

NEYTIRI

I was afraid Jake -- for my people. I'm not any more.

Jake takes Neytiri's hand and climbs the steps of the dais.

MO'AT steps back in awe as he approaches. He turns to Tsu'tey, who stares at him with fear and incomprehension. Jake plays to the rapt crowd as he says --

JAKE

(subtitled)

Tsu'tey of the Rongloa, son of Ateyo. I stand before you, ready to serve the People.

(then just for Tsu'tey)

You are Olo'eyctan, and you are the best warrior. I can't do this without you.

Tsu'tey struggles with his emotions. Finally --

TSU'TEY

I will fly with you.

JAKE

Ireiyo.

JAKE turns to the MATRIARCH.

JAKE

Grace is dying. I beg the help of the Great Mother.

MO'AT

Bring her, Jakesully.

TIME CUT -- AVATAR JAKE carries Grace's HUMAN BODY, lightly in his arms like a child. Jake walks through the crowd to the dais, followed by NORM, who carries GRACE'S AVATAR.

JAKE

Look where we are, Grace.

Her eyes flutter open. She looks up wonderingly at the Mother Tree.

GRACE

(with a wan smile)

I need to take some samples.

Mo'at directs them to lay both bodies among the roots on the altar-rock.

Mo'at touches Jake's shoulder and he steps back.

MO'AT

(quietly)

The Great Mother may choose to save all that she is --

Mo'at's hand indicates Grace's AVATAR --

MO'AT

-- in this body.

CU JAKE, realizing the enormity of what she's saying.

JAKE

Is that possible?

MO'AT

Possible, yes. She must pass through the Eye of Eywa -- and return. But Jakesully-- she is very weak.

Jake kneels next to Grace, taking her tiny human hand in his avatar hand.

JAKE

Hang on, they're gonna fix you up.

Grace is barely conscious. She grips his hand.

GRACE

I -- always held back. But you gave them your heart. I'm proud of you, Jake.

Jake feels his throat close with emotion.

Grace's eyes blaze with intensity though her voice is faint.

GRACE

Help them. You do whatever it takes. You hear me?

JAKE

I will.

TIME CUT -- MO'AT stands in a kind of trance amongst the tendrils of the Mother Tree.

NEYTIRI and the other acolytes dance hypnotically. All the Omaticaya sway and chant to the rhythm of the drums.

MACRO SHOT -- fine, hairlike THREADS have emerged from the roots and are gently spreading over Grace's HUMAN skin.

JAKE, still holding her hand, watches her body being fused to the root-floor by a thousand connections.

GRACE'S AVATAR is gently connected by the same questing ROOT-
CILIA-- they entwine with the QUEUE and spread over the body.

The grotto is dark except for the spectral GLOW of the willows. The CHANT continues, hypnotically. MO'AT, on her knees beneath the Mother Tree, writhes her arms in the trance state. Her eyes are rolled back, showing only WHITE.

GRACE GASPS and her eyes SNAP OPEN. Her expression is AMAZED, as if seeing something so beautiful it can never be explained.

ON HER HAND -- GRIPPING Jake's convulsively, as she tries to anchor herself to this world for a few more seconds --

GRACE

I'm with her Jake --
(an amazed whisper)
-- she's real --

Grace SHUDDERS, as pain shoots through her. BLOOD seeps through the silken white root-cilia growing across her abdomen. Drowning WHITE in shocking CRIMSON.

She exhales a last shuddering breath -- and goes STILL.

JAKE

Grace!

He sees the roots falling away from her human body.

JAKE TURNS hopefully toward her AVATAR -- but the roots are falling away from it as well. It sleeps -- VACANT.

MO'AT stops the chant. She crosses to Jake and kneels with him, touching his shoulder.

MO'AT

Her wounds were too great, there was not enough time. She is with Eywa now.

NEYTIRI removes Grace's mask and gently closes her eyes.

Jake stands slowly, barely holding it together.

NEYTIRI comes to him and he sees the despair and hope conflicting on her face --

-- and he raises his head. TURNS to face TSU'TEY and the CROWD.

JAKE

With your permission, I will Speak now.
You would honor me by translating.

Tsu'tey gestures assent, and they face the clan together.

JAKE SPEAKS, the pain of Grace's death in the passion and fury of his voice. Tsu'tey TRANSLATES beside him.

JAKE

The Sky People have sent a message that they can take whatever they want, and no one can stop them. But we will send them a message. Ride out, as fast as the wind can carry you, tell the other clans to come. Tell them Toruk Macto calls to them. Fly now with me brothers and sisters! Fly! And we will show the Sky People that this is our land!

TSU'TEY finishes with a bloodcurdling war-cry, and the entire CLAN responds, their shouts echoing across the forest.

JAKE takes Neytiri's hand and runs to the leonopteryx. He vaults onto its back and pulls her up behind him.

THE HUNTERS run to their banshees, mounting quickly. Jake's leonopteryx rises on mighty wings into the night sky. With a thunder of wings, the banshees take off after it.

LONG LENS -- POLYPHEMUS. Across its face, the banshees rise like a swarm of bats. Groups of riders peel off in different directions.

CUT TO:

EXT. CLAN GATHERING - NIGHT

JAKE and NEYTIRI stand before the gathered members of ANOTHER CLAN. Jake speaks as she translates. We don't hear the words.

TRACK ACROSS the faces of the clan, a sea of eyes in flickering fire-light.

JAKE (V.O.)

We rode out to the four winds. To the horse clans of the plain, to the ikran people of the mountains. When Toruk Macto called them, they came.

VARIOUS ANGLES -- SLOW MOTION as riders vault onto their armored direhorses. Banshee riders raise spears and bows, spurring their mounts to leap skyward.

CUT TO:

EXT. WELL OF SOULS - DAWN

With a WHOOSH and the crack of mighty wings, JAKE RETURNS. Jake and Neytiri alight from his legendary mount.

Around them HUNDREDS OF BANSHEES are landing. A gathering of eagles.

FROM ABOVE we can see hundreds of Na'vi streaming down into the Well of Souls and many hundreds more camped in the forest above it.

DIREHORSE RIDERS are arriving along many trails.

BANSHEE RIDERS circle and swoop, darkening the sky above the grotto.

JAKE, standing next to the Leonopteryx, watches his army gathering.

CUT TO:

INT. COMMISSARY - DAY

It's standing room only as all base personnel are crowded into the dining hall. A portable 3D GRAPHICS PROJECTOR has been set up, and the lights are down. QUARITCH stands in front of the display image -- a classic pre-mission briefing.

QUARITCH

People, you are fighting for survival.
There's an aboriginal horde out there massing for an attack. First slide.

The display shows an overhead image of the Well of Souls. It looks like Woodstock in the jungle.

QUARITCH

These orbital images show the hostiles' numbers have gone from a couple of hundred to over two thousand in one day, and more are pouring in. By next week it could be twenty thousand. Then they'll be overrunning our perimeter here. We can't wait. Our only security lies in pre-emptive attack. We will fight terror with terror.

TRACKING ACROSS the grim faces of the miners and troopers. Fear transforming to hatred in their eyes.

QUARITCH

Next slide. This mountain stronghold is supposedly protected by their deity. When we destroy it, we will blast a crater in their racial memory so deep they won't come within a thousand clicks of this place.

CUT TO:

INT. ARMOR BAY - DAY

TROOPERS issue automatic weapons and magazines to a long line of mine workers. The miners lock and load like the red-blooded redneck NRA supporters they are.

BLASTING TECHS are setting radio-detonated primer charges into two-ton stacks of EXPLOSIVE COMPOUND. The stacks are band-strapped together on pallets.

TRACKING WITH SELFRIDGE, staring around him in growing dismay as he walks through the full-scale mobilization.

He approaches Quaritch, who is barking orders amid a hive of activity around the ampsuits.

SELFRIDGE

This thing is completely out of control!

Quaritch ignores him, turning away to focus on ordnance loading.

SELFRIDGE

Listen to me! I am not authorizing you to turn the mine-workers local into a freakin' militia!

QUARITCH

I declared threat condition red. That puts all on-world assets under my command.

SELFRIDGE

You think you can pull this palace coup shit on me?! I can have your ass with one call --

Quaritch grabs him and PINS him against the side of an ampsuit.

QUARITCH

You're a long way from Earth.

Selfridge is paralyzed. Physical force -- against him? Quaritch releases him and walks away.

QUARITCH

(to his men)

Get him out of here.

Several troopers converge on Selfridge.

SELFRIDGE

You touch me you're so fired.

He pushes through them and they escort him toward the door.

CUT TO:

INT. SHACK - DAY

HUMAN JAKE, NORM and TRUDY are gathered around the comms monitor, talking to MAX.

MAX

I don't know how secure this channel is.

JAKE

Talk fast.

MAX

It's crazy here, Jake. It's full mobilization. They're rigging the shuttles as bombers. They've made up these big pallets of mine explosives. It's for some kind of shock and awe campaign.

TRUDY

Frickin' daisycutters.

NORM

Holy shit.

JAKE

(to Max)

Can you talk to Selfridge? Maybe we can cut some kinda deal before this thing goes all the way.

MAX

No, Quaritch has taken over. He's rolling and there's no stopping him.

JAKE

When?

MAX

Oh six hundred tomorrow.

Jake takes that in.

JAKE

Thanks.

Max signs off.

NORM

We're screwed.

TRUDY

You know he's gonna commit those bombers straight to the Well of Souls.

JAKE

That's right. Because I gave it to him on a plate.

TRUDY

We both did.

NORM

If he takes out the Well of Souls -- it's over. It's their main line to Eywa, to their ancestors -- it'll destroy them.

JAKE

Then I guess we better stop him.

Jake looks like he's about to collapse. He's gaunt, eyes deeply shadowed, hands shaking.

TRUDY

You need to get some rack.

He grabs a packet of freeze-dried crystals and pours them directly into his mouth, chewing them up.

JAKE

Gonna have to settle for coffee.

CUT TO:

EXT. BATTLE CAMP - DUSK

TRACKING through the warrior camp above the Well of Souls. Hundreds of hunters from many clans prepare their weapons.

Hunters paint the wings of their banshees like war ponies. DIREHORSES are painted and ornamented with totemic streamers.

The Na'vi paint and pierce themselves. Dance. Bathe in the smoke of cleansing herbs -- RITUAL PURIFICATION. HUGE DRUMS are beaten. A dark primeval energy. They are psyching themselves up for battle.

JAKE (V.O.)

I was a warrior who dreamed he could bring peace. But there was only one thing I was ever really good at. Ooh-rah.

TIME CUT -- Jake, Neytiri a group of banshee riders squat around an animal skin on which he has drawn the silhouette of a Scorpion gunship -- like a hunt totem.

JAKE

(Na'vi/subtitled)

Strike here and here.

Jake splats red dye at the centers of the circles symbolizing the rotors. The Na'vi absorb the lesson eagerly, like kids.

He sees TRUDY approaching and breaks off. Neytiri stays with the hunters, talking about what they've learned.

TRUDY

(low)

You know our chances suck.

JAKE

Yeah.

TRUDY

Going up against gunships with bows and arrows...

JAKE

What's your point?

TRUDY
 (nodding)
 Right.

She taps his fist and walks away toward her SAMSON.

CUT TO:

EXT. WELL OF SOULS - NIGHT

The cook-fires of the battle camp FLICKER like a constellation around the edge of the Well of Souls as --

JAKE slips down into the darkened, empty amphitheater.

He moves to the MOTHER TREE -- gnarled, ancient, MAJESTIC. The roots spread in all directions, like the center of the world.

Jake steps forward. The willow-like tendrils SWAY toward him, moving in a breeze that isn't there.

JAKE
 I've never done this in my life.

He squats at the base of the tree.

JAKE
 And I'm probably just talking to a tree right now. But if you're there -- I need to give you a heads up.

He looks up into the tree. The hanging tendrils undulate softly. It's easy to imagine a presence.

JAKE
 If Grace is there with you -- look in her memories -- she can show you the world we come from. There's no green there. They killed their Mother, and they're gonna do the same thing here.

FROM UP IN THE TREE, looking down. WOODSPRITES float in silence, moving around aimlessly.

JAKE
 More Sky People are gonna come. They're gonna come like a rain that never ends --

Neytiri approaches silently behind him, listening.

JAKE
 -- until they've covered the world.
 Unless we stop them.
 (MORE)

JAKE (cont'd)

Look, you chose me for somethin'. And I'll stand and fight, you know I will.
But I could use a little help here.

Jake senses Neytiri and turns.

NEYTIRI

Our Great Mother does not take sides.
She protects only the balance of life.

She comes to him, intertwining her long fingers with his.

JAKE

It was worth a try.

They lean in, foreheads touching, bodies pressed together.
Holding each other -- in this, the last moment of peace.

CUT TO:

TIGHT ON a turbine as it starts to turn. Its RISING WHINE carries over --

A SERIES OF RHYTHMIC CUTS:

MAGAZINES are slammed into automatic weapons. AMMO BELTS are fed into rotary cannons. MISSILES are attached to gunship stub-wings.

TIGHT ON BLUE HANDS sharpening wooden arrows. Stringing bows. Cinching direhorse harnesses.

TROOPERS DROP into amsuit cockpits. PILOTS close gunship canopies. TROOPERS run up shuttle ramps.

LONG LENS STACK, tight and abstract on gunships as they rise in a swarm amid boiling turbine exhaust and blasting rotor wash.

EXT. RAINFOREST/ AERIAL - DAWN

WIDE SHOT -- TILTROTORS fill the sky. Deadly armored beetles.

The DRAGON leads the formation, flanked by SCORPIONS. Behind that is a wave of SAMSONS, and last, the two enormous VALKYRIE shuttles, packed with troops and amsuits.

INSIDE THE DRAGON, Quaritch surveys his armada as they skim over the tree tops.

THEY SWEEP toward the Hallelujah mountains in a thundering wave.

EXT. MOUNTAINS/ AERIAL - DAWN

SQUADRONS OF BANSHEES darken the sky in waves, led by a single GREAT LEONOPTERYX. Jake sits astride his mount, flanked by Neytiri and Tsu'tey on their banshees.

EXT. MOUNTAINS - DAWN

THE DRAGON DESCENDS on final approach to a large clearing -- the LZ. The Samsons flair and touch down, disgorging troops, while the gunships hover protectively.

THE VALKYRIES blast the ground with their powerful lift jets. They land. The ramps drop. Troopers pour out, weapons leveled, advancing in a cordon.

UP ANGLE as AMPSUITS descend from the Dragon on cables. Their massive feet smash down, and they march forward, leading the army into the forest.

LYLE WAINFLEET, walking point in his hydraulic suit, scans his cockpit screens. He sees movement on the FLIR display -- ghostly THERMAL SIGNATURES.

WAINFLEET

Contact. Two hundred meters.

A chilling SOUND echoes through the forest -- the ululating WAR CRIES of untold Na'vi. The troopers, look around, spooked. They can't tell where the sound is coming from.

Then they feel it -- the GROUND ITSELF SHAKING. They grip their weapons, bracing themselves as --

THREE HUNDRED NA'VI HORSEMEN charge through the forest at a full gallop, their hooves POUNDING the earth. It is an awesome sight.

NORM SPELLMAN rides with the Na'vi hunters, carrying an assault rifle.

THE NA'VI CHARGE thunders toward the human line. The hunters raise their bows as --

THE AMPSUITS raise their GAU-90's.

ON THE THERMAL IMAGERS target-cursors track the ghost riders.

QUARITCH

Fire for effect.

The entire line of troopers opens fire. TRACERS riddle the jungle, blasting foliage into confetti.

CHARGING DIREHORSES crash down, flipping over. Riders are flung off. The withering fire continues, and the ranks are decimated as --

RIDERS LAUNCH their arrows at a full gallop. A few hit their marks among the troopers. NORM FIRES his AR on full auto.

TWO CHARGING DIREHORSES have a heavy log slung between them like a battering ram. At a full gallop they hit an amsuit, FLIPPING IT onto its back with a blown-out canopy. Victory is short lived as the two riders are cut down.

NORM'S HORSE is hit by tracer fire. He is flung off as the creature cartwheels. He hits hard, scrambling for cover as --

A WARRIOR HURLS his spear a moment before his horse is cut down. It SLAMS through an amsuit's canopy but --

THE MERCILESS FIRE continues. Horses rear and collapse. Riders pivot their mounts to flee and --

THE THERMAL SCREENS show the remaining ghost riders scattering.

LYLE signals and the line advances, firing sporadically at moving targets.

OVERHEAD, NA'VI HUNTERS stream through the trees, running along the branches.

As the troopers advance into bow range, the NA'VI open fire and --

TROOPERS SPROUT ARROWS in throat, legs, masks -- the targets Jake taught them, but --

THE FIRING LINE aims upward, tracking the THERMAL TARGETS. TRACERS rip through the foliage and -- NA'VI FALL while others retreat as bark and wood is blasted off the limbs beneath their feet.

NORM sprints frantically through the woods, shouting into his HANDSET --

NORM
Jake! Jake! We're falling back!

SURVIVING NA'VI flee the horrific onslaught. It is a total rout.

IN THE DRAGON, Quaritch catches glimpses of the figures streaming through the forest below.

QUARITCH

Blue team, switch forties. Fire at will.

Led by the Dragon, the gunships FIRE streamers of 40mm ROCKETS ahead of them. The jungle EXPLODES with HE bursts. Circular SHOCK WAVES flash outward through the jungle -- STROBOSCOPIC GLIMPSES of terrified horses rearing, Na'vi leaping, as the jungle rocks with the concussive onslaught.

HUNTERS LOOK UP as a dark shape hovers overhead. The downblast of the VALKYRIE'S lift jets shreds the forest.

INSIDE THE SHUTTLE'S cargo bay, a row of DAISYCUTTERS are lined up. Troopers roll the first pallet down the ramp.

THE PALLET falls into the jungle below and --

BA-WHOOOOOM! -- an enormous high-explosive blast rips a huge hole in the forest. A white concussion wave flashes out across the ground for hundreds of meters in all directions.

AT GROUND LEVEL it is an apocalypse. Running Na'vi are blasted out of existence by fire and shock waves.

IN THE CARGO BAY the troopers WHOOP and high-five.

TROOPERS

Yeah baby! Get some!

GROUND TROOPS ADVANCE, firing flamethrowers, AR's and GAU-90's.

EXT. FLOATING MOUNTAINS - AERIAL

Quaritch's fleet flies into the shadow of the Mountain of Truth.

QUARITCH

Blue team, stay with the ground units.
Red team, with me. We're punching for the main target.

Quaritch glances up to see --

A squadron of WINGED SHAPES, diving out of the morning glare like birds of prey.

CLOSE ON JAKE, rushing straight down, SCREAMING a war cry as he leads the charge and --

SCORES OF BANSHEES SLAM into the gunships and Samsons like falcons hitting fat turkeys. The air battle is joined.

JAKE'S GREAT LEONOPTERYX flairs into its signature crimson X shape just before --

K-WHAM!! -- it knocks a Scorpion tumbling. It coils around the gunship, slashing furiously as they spin together. JAKE can barely hang onto the gyrating creature.

The pilot of the Scorpion sees nothing but jaws slamming into his canopy. Jake releases the gunship and it careens into a CLIFF, tearing off one rotor -- then plummets into the trees. There is a satisfying FIREBALL.

SCORPIONS fall out of formation to pursue individual banshee riders, FIRING cannons and rockets.

JAKE BANKS as the cliff face next to him explodes with cannon rounds. SCREAMING down on him is another Scorpion.

JAKE tucks and dives along the cliff, feeling the rounds splitting the air around him and --

The Scorpions bank after the furiously jinking banshees as they head for cover among the floating mountains, or dive down into the trees.

DOOR GUNNERS in a SAMSON are shooting down banshees like Messerschmidts from a B-17 as --

WE FOLLOW TSU'TEY'S BANSHEE in a full delta dive. He swoops in from its blind spot and --

THE GUNNERS SWIVEL too late as Tsu'tey flashes past them, SHOOTING ARROWS with deadly accuracy.

A SCORPION gunship dives after a banshee. It fires an air-to-air missile and the banshee vanishes in an EXPLOSION.

WIDE SHOT as thirty ships and hundreds of banshees wheel and dive, like the Battle of Britain. Banshees are hit by guns and missiles, falling out of the sky. The occasional trail of smoke and fire marks the demise of a tilt-rotor.

IN THE CENTER the Dragon is pouring out hellacious fire -- tracer rounds from multiple turrets and missiles from the stub-wing pods.

NEYTIRI BANKS hard as TRACERS flash past her. A Scorpion is right on her ass as --

SHE ROLLS inverted and dives under the edge of Mons Veritatis, then rolls out, zig-zagging through the dangling vines but --

THE GUNSHIP stays on her. It rips through the vines, and tracers FLASH toward us as --

SHE JINKS the banshee around a thundering waterfall but --

HER PURSUER explodes right through the curtain of water. It launches an air-to-air missile. NEYTIRI jinks hard, diving. The missile hits a rock outcropping, pummeling her with the shock wave.

THE GUNSHIP follows her through a narrow slit between Mons Veritatis and a smaller floating island. They run this slot rolled up on their sides and --

THE SCORPION GUNNER locks up Neytiri for a missile shot but --

A SHADOW crosses his canopy. Out of the sun comes a crimson demon, shrieking over the roar of the turbines, and --

K-WHAMMM!! The leonopteryx SLAMS the gunship, driving it downward in a dive. The leonopteryx lashes at it with claws and teeth as they fall together out of control.

Jake kicks the gunship loose and it falls like a brick, breaking its back on a rocky promontory and EXPLODING.

FLYING WITH A SAMSON as a SECOND SAMSON falls in beside it. This one has its pilot door off, and the PILOT is wearing a breathing mask. The door gunners wave at -- TRUDY, her expression grim behind her mask. She holds the cyclic stick between her knees while she RAKES the other ship with BURSTS from an AR in her lap.

The pilot slumps over and the craft tumbles out of control.

TRUDY

You're not the only ones with guns, you pricks.

NEYTIRI JINKS her banshee hard, an enemy Samson right behind her. The pilot is a hotdog, following her down into the trees, under the canopy.

They slalom among the trunks at high speed. The gunners hang half out the doors, firing. Bark and leaves explode around Neytiri as she zig-zags through the jungle.

THE BANSHEE dives under a huge tree limb, and the pilot follows. He looks up at the last second, catching a glimpse of blue-skinned figures.

THE HUNTERS drop a net of woven vines behind Neytiri and --

The SAMSON hits it hard. The net fouls the ship, FLIPPING IT backwards. It crashes upside down to the forest floor.
KABOOM!!

NEYTIRI'S BANSHEE is hit by GROUND-FIRE. It folds up like a broken kite, crashing down through branches and --

SHE SLAMS into the ground, stunned.

IN THE DRAGON Quaritch looks ahead, seeing the WELL OF SOULS. He taps the pilot and points --

QUARITCH

There it is.

(into his headset)

Valkyrie One, this is Dragon. Target is in sight.

IN THE CARGO BAY of Valkyrie One, the troopers ready their deadly loads.

TROOPER

Target in sight.

CIRCLING ABOVE, Tsu'tey falls in beside Jake, who talks to him by AIRCOM HEADSET.

JAKE

We have to stop the shuttles, no matter what it takes.

TSU'TEY nods. He signals, gathering other hunters, who fall in with him as he dives. Jake rolls in after them but --

A GUNSHIP drops in behind him and he is forced to evade as --

TSU'TEY LEADS the attack on the first shuttle. Hunters jink and weave through WITHERING FIRE from the escort ships.

GUNNERS with jerry-rigged gun mounts ride the broad backs of the shuttles, picking off banshees who get past the escort.

TSU'TEY is RAKED by a burst from the dorsal gunners. His mount crumples, plummeting with a dying scream and --

WE SPIRAL DOWN with him, the forest rushing up and --

A BLINDING BLIZZARD of green as he tears downward, catching at leaves and vines. He SLAMS to the ground, badly injured.

NEARBY, amsuits and troopers advance across the forest floor, firing their cannons and flamethrowers. The GAU-90s rip the forest to shreds.

Norm, firing as he retreats, is HIT. He collapses, his avatar body mortally wounded as --

HYDRAULIC FEET approach, passing the bodies of direhorses and Na'vi hunters. Norm painfully tries to load another magazine, panting in fear and pain as --

AN AMPSUIT stomps up. Aims its cannon point blank. B-BLAM!

INT. SHACK

The top of Norm's LINK bangs open. He reels out, collapsing onto the floor, clutching himself as if he can still feel the pain of death.

He sits, huddled, shivering -- crazed.

EXT. RAINFOREST

TSU'TEY lies gasping, mortally injured. He looks up, grimacing, as an ampsuit looms over him.

LYLE WAINFLEET reaches down and grabs Tsu'tey by his queue, lifting him painfully.

WAINFLEET

I hear this is worse than death for you,
chief.

WAINFLEET cuts Tsu'tey's queue off near the base. TSU'TEY SCREAMS in agony, his nervous system exploding on overload. Grinning, Lyle holds up the queue -- Tsu'tey's only connection to the world-consciousness which is his life.

NEYTIRI -- bleeding, bruised -- staggers amid burning wreckage. AMPSUIT footsteps approach and she crouches behind a tree. Troopers are seconds from seeing her as --

NEYTIRI knocks an arrow to HER FATHER'S BOW, and readies herself for a last kamikaze shot when --

THE TROOPER on the far right of the firing line sees something on his screens.

TROOPER

Right flank -- something's coming! It's all lit up out there.

The troopers become aware of the GROUND SHAKING. A slow building thunderous ROAR and --

AN AMPSUIT comes FLYING out of the trees, cartwheeling past them, and the SHAKING BUILDS --

EXT. WELL OF SOULS

Mo'at opens her eyes in sudden realization as --

EXT. FOREST

The troopers pivot to face --

A WALL OF CHARGING HAMMERHEADS CRASHING out of the foliage in a shower of broken branches as --

THE TROOPERS open fire but -- the stampede drives over them like a wave. Tree-trunk feet shatter the amsuit cockpits. Troopers are crushed or asphyxiated.

NEARBY the foot-soldiers see LIVING SHADOWS flow out of the gloom as -- VIPERWOLVES race among them with flashing jaws. The troopers FIRE wildly as they go down, hitting each other as much as their attackers.

The survivors break and run as more viperwolves bound out of the shadows.

JAKE BANKS, watching as HUNDREDS of rider-less WILD BANSHEES converge on Quaritch's ships. They literally darken the sky.

JAKE

What the hell -- ?

The wild banshees wheel among the ships, ripping into them.

ON JAKE -- slowly getting it. EYWA is in the fight.

JAKE

WHOO-HOOOO!

A GUNNER fires from the door of a Samson. There is a CRASH and the head of a BANSHEE lunges in the open door, jerking him out. Other banshees tear at the pilot's windshield.

NEYTIRI watches in awe as the ground troops scatter in disarray. The viperwolves flash past her, ignoring her.

She senses something and turns slowly to see --

A THANATOR emerging from the smoke behind her. A glistening black demon. She stands paralyzed before its stygian gaze--

-- and the thanator lowers itself, until its head is just above the ground. It holds that position -- waiting.

Trembling, she approaches the waiting demon.

EXT. FOREST

A smoky hell. Fires burn all around. The troopers are disorganized, falling back. Shooting at shadows. Panicked yelling fills the comm freq.

WAINFLEET and another AMPSUIT are charging together through the smoky gloom.

WAINFLEET

A and C squads -- rally at my pos. I want --

(screaming on the comm)

Who's screaming God damn it?!

TROOPER (ON RADIO)

We gotta get outta here! Whoever's in charge, call for extraction!

WAINFLEET

Shutup you crybabies!

SOMETHING slams into the other 'suit, tackling it OUT OF FRAME. Wainfleet whirls to see his squad-mate missing. He moves through a screen of foliage to reveal --

The AMPSUIT -- ripped open. Driver gone. Blood inside the cockpit. He WHIRLS at a sound in time to see --

A THANATOR LEAPING straight at him -- WAINFLEET raises his cannon but--

WHAM!! It's on him, slamming him to the ground. The cannon goes flying. He's face to face with its nightmare jaws, right outside his canopy--

On its back is NEYTIRI, and it's a toss up which one looks more pissed off. The thanator rears back, muscles rippling as it poises to strike and --

K-KRAAACKK! Slams its teeth right through his canopy. Wainfleet's SCREAM is brief.

Neytiri's demon mount rears up and its triumphant ROAR echoes through the forest.

INT. CORRIDOR

Max runs down the hall, leading the other scientists. He's yelling into an AIRCOM HANDSET --

MAX

Rogue One, Rogue One, this is Max. Tell
Jake we are in motion.
(to the scientists)
Get in there. Barricade the door!

INT. LINK ROOM

The door is hurled open and the SCIENTISTS charge in.

Science geeks barricade the door as AVATAR-DRIVERS scramble into their link units, pulling the clamshells down.

INT. CORRIDOR

Max checks the door is secure from his side then runs down a connecting corridor.

CUT TO:

EXT. SHACK

HUMAN NORM emerges from the airlock, wearing breathing gear and carrying an AR. He stumbles, dazed, toward the battle.

EXT. MOUNTAINS/ AERIAL

JAKE SIGNALS and a formation of hunters rolls in, diving at the lead shuttle, which is already besieged by winged creatures.

THE CARGO RAMP is the scene of a pitched battle. Na'vi hunters hurl themselves off their mounts in waves, overwhelming the troopers.

HUNTERS are shot, falling out of the ship, as others fly in. They shoot arrows and spears from the end of the ramp, and troopers fall back deeper into the fuselage.

The panicked CREW CHIEF slams a switch and the ramp begins to close, a second before he is cut down by a spear.

JAKE'S LEONOPTERYX plummets at the shuttle from behind. He swoops down, flairs to reduce speed, rolls off his mount and lands, tumbling on the shuttle's broad back as --

GUNNERS try to swing their guns toward him but he RAKES them with his AR, still running forward and --

JAKE PULLS two grenades from his battle harness, yanking the pins out with his teeth. He hurls them down the intakes of the VTOL turbofans as --

HIS LEONOPTERYX BANKS in a tight arc back toward him and --

HE SPRINTS ON as the grenades EXPLODE, shattering the turbines, which riddle the fuselage with shrapnel and --

JAKE LEAPS INTO SPACE, landing on the back of his mount and reconnecting. They flap away, gaining altitude as fire BLASTS out of the bottom of the shuttle.

ON THE FLIGHT DECK, the pilot feels the ship dropping.

PILOT

Mains to a hundred percent! Get me airspeed!

The pilot and copilot slam the throttle levers forward and --

The FUSION ENGINES BLAZE, thrusting the shuttle forward. It still falls, its remaining lift fans screaming, until --

IT'S CLIPPING the tree tops when it gets enough translational lift to fly and --

THE PILOT PULLS back on the stick, lifting the nose.

PILOT

We're good!

BEHIND HIM, a surviving Na'vi hunter runs forward and -- THOONK! ARROWHEADS sprout from the pilots' necks and chests.

THE SHUTTLE CLIMBS out of control, at full acceleration. It SLAMS into the underside of MONS Veritatis. It EXPLODES, and hundreds of tons of flaming debris drop back into the forest.

ON THE FLIGHT DECK of the other SHUTTLE, the pilots watch the wreckage falling.

PILOT

Valkyrie Two is breaking off. And if any of ya'll want to get off this piece of shit planet, you better cover our ass,
'cause we're the only way back to orbit.

GUNSHIP PILOT

Roger that.

FROM THE DRAGON COCKPIT Quaritch watches the shuttle bank away, with most of the remaining gunships following.

QUARITCH

Get back here you worthless pukes!

PILOT
Are we breaking off?

Quaritch draws his pistol.

QUARITCH
What do you think?

He is over the edge-- no logic in his brain now. Only death.

INT. OPS CENTER/CORRIDOR

Techs and troopers crowd around consoles, listening to all the yelling and confusion as they try to plot the disintegrating battle.

SELFRIDGE
(in growing alarm)
What the hell is going on out there?

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST

Regular troopers and volunteers FLEE through the jungle, scrambling to board SAMSONS as they touch down.

INT. DRAGON COCKPIT

The pilot listens to comms from Hell's Gate.

PILOT
Sir, all ground units are falling back to the LZ.

Quaritch's jaw clenches.

QUARITCH
Stay on target.

EXT. WELL OF SOULS

Mo'at LOOKS UP as the DRAGON appears over the trees like the shadow of Death. Around her, the Na'vi mothers clutch their children to them. We see AKWEY'S BOY among them.

INT. DRAGON COCKPIT

Quaritch sets the target cursor on the MOTHER TREE and what we recognize is the ghostly figure of Mo'at.

QUARITCH
Switch missiles. Arm all pods.

PILOT

Arming.

QUARITCH

Let's see what these blue bastards do when I bitch-slap their goddess.

EXT. MOUNTAINS/ AERIAL

JAKE'S LEONOPTERYX drops toward the Dragon like a Mig 29. He pulls out, skimming over the ship. Uncoupling, he rolls backward off his mount and --

JAKE HITS, skidding, on the hull of the Dragon. He rolls to his feet, already running as --

QUARITCH sees the leonopteryx WHOOSH overhead and flap away with no rider. He snap-looks aft to see --

JAKE SPRINTING along the spine of the ship, yanking two grenades from his battle-harness, pulling the pins with his teeth, then --

QUARITCH's hand shoots out and SLAMS the pilot's CYCLIC STICK hard over. THE DRAGON lurches sideways, rolling sharply with a ROAR of protesting rotors and --

JAKE IS FLUNG off his feet. The grenades miss the TURBINE INTAKES. One bounces off the ship. The other lodges against a cowling and --

JAKE SLIDES OFF the ship, falling as -- K-BLAM! The grenade blows a two meter hole in the hull --

WHOOOSHH! Pandoran air swirls inside.

QUARITCH

(to the pilot)

Put your mask on.

Quaritch leaps out of his seat, heading aft as --

JAKE GRABS the edge of a weapons pod, his feet dangling over open space.

HOLDING HIS BREATH, Quaritch blows a RESCUE HATCH and leans outside. Jake sees him aim his massive PISTOL.

K-WHAM! K-WHAM! Rounds clang next to Jake's head. He LETS GO, plummeting into the trees --

Jake plunges through jungle canopy. He catches a HUGE LEAF, as Neytiri taught him -- it bends down, breaking his fall --

HE LETS GO, dropping again only to catch ANOTHER LEAF, and then another, and --

WE RUSH DOWN with him through this green blur. Jake drops to the ground in a feral crouch. Unhurt.

JAKE
(into his headset)
Quaritch is gonna take out the Well of Souls! He's got a clear shot. Hit him, anybody that can! Do it now!

IN HER SAMSON Trudy Chacon is all business.

TRUDY
On it.

SHE BANKS hard, pulling g's, coming around on the Dragon. She pours on the coal and the Samson leaps forward, straight at the WARSHIP.

QUARITCH, DRILLS a stream of tracers at her, tearing through her canopy, ripping chunks off her fuselage.

IN THE JUNGLE BELOW, Norm watches her kamikaze run --

NORM
No!

TRUDY
(clipped, pilot-like)
Norm, I love you.

TRUDY DIVES, raking through treetops and then, at the last instant, YANKS BACK on the stick and --

THE SAMSON leaps straight up and -- K-KRASH!! SHEARS OFF THE COCKPIT of the Dragon as --

QUARITCH THROWS HIMSELF aft along the aisle and -- TRUDY'S SAMSON disintegrates, the wreckage burning as it tumbles into the jungle.

MILES QUARITCH grips the bulkhead as he stares out the open front of the fuselage. Wind howls through wreckage where the pilot used to be. The forest rushes up to meet him and --

THE DRAGON CRASHES through splintering trees, IMPACTING in a lake with a WHITE BLAST of water.

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

Norm takes a few steps and drops to his knees. Imploded by grief.

INT. OPS CENTER/ HELL'S GATE

ON THE PLOTTING DISPLAY as Quaritch's TRANSPONDER ICON disappears.

TROOPER

Dragon is down. It's off the board.

SELFRIDGE

What do you mean, off the board?!

Selfridge is stunned. Suddenly the ROAR of an ENGINE makes them all look up.

OUTSIDE THE WINDOW, MAX sits in the cab of an enormous SLASH-CUTTER. Max flips Selfridge the bird and pushes a lever forward --

SELFRIDGE

Oh shit.

Selfridge DIVES as --

K-RASHHHHH! The SPINNING TEETH of the SLASH-CUTTER tear through the window in a blast of glass and lethal air. Alarms go off. The technicians dive for cover in a blizzard of glass and shredded debris.

The slash-cutter head pulls back, and AVATARS SCRAMBLE through the gaping hole into the Ops Center --

The TROOPERS look up to see blue giants aiming weapons down at them. The battle is over in seconds. The avatars are holding the Ops Center.

Selfridge lies there gasping, in his emergency mask. In shock. How could this be happening?

CUT TO:

EXT. LAKE

THE DRAGON lies half submerged. Out of the water FG, a shape rises -- a AMPSUIT. Inside -- MILES QUARITCH, his face bloody, his eyes burning.

He slogs out of the water, covered with mud, then strides into the forest.

QUARITCH'S AMPSUIT THUDS relentlessly through the jungle. He sees something through the foliage ahead -- the SHACK.

INSIDE THE SHACK Jake is oblivious under the link. Through a window we see Quaritch's AMPSUIT step into the clearing.

QUARITCH levels his GAU-90 at the shack. His finger goes to the firing button--

WHAM!! A six-legged BLACK DEMON tackles him.

Quaritch pivots as he falls, FIRING the cannon. It misses Neytiri by inches. He grapples with the THANATOR as its razor claws SCREECH over his metal armor.

THE TITANS twist and struggle. QUARITCH UNLEASHES a long burst from the cannon. Rounds tear into the creature, which SHRIEKS but --

NEYTIRI wills it to SMASH the cannon hard against a rock, tearing it loose from the 'suit's hand but --

Quaritch SLAMS the thanator back against a tree-trunk, almost crushing Neytiri.

CLOSE ON one hydraulic hand, as it draws the 'suit's KNIFE and -- QUARITCH TWISTS violently, ramming the knife up under the thanator's chest armor. The creature ROARS and Quaritch flips on top of it, stabbing.

QUARITCH STABS DOWN AGAIN. The thanator slumps, pinning Neytiri's legs under its great bulk. She is trapped.

Quaritch looks down at Neytiri. She glares back at him, panting, scared but defiant.

JAKE (O.S.)
It's all over Quaritch --

Quaritch turns, seeing Jake DROPPING from a tree limb. The 'suit rises slowly, knife glinting in the morning sun.

QUARITCH
Nothing's over while I'm breathing.

JAKE
Kinda hoped you'd say that.

QUARITCH SURGES forward. JAKE closes fast, snatching up the broken CANNON as --

Quaritch SLASHES DOWN with the knife and Jake parries, blocking it with the cannon. He CLOSES faster than the suit can move and --

K-CRACK! -- SLAMS the end of the cannon into the canopy, crazing it with a web of cracks as QUARITCH SLICES air with the huge knife. Jake ducks, coming up to meet the next slash and -- SMASHES the knife hand with the cannon once -- twice -- again -- in a furious attack -- knocking the knife flying.

QUARITCH catches him with the other arm, hurling him away. Jake rolls just before --

THUDD! -- the massive foot stomps down where he just was. He scrambles up as Quaritch CHARGES and --

JAKE DUCKS another round-house, LEAPING forward to smash the canopy again -- then again -- until it is WHITE with cracks. Quaritch manages to GRAB the cannon barrel but --

INSIDE THE COCKPIT, he sees nothing but the sun on the shattered glass. HE HURLS the cannon blindly, but Jake ducks. The massive cylinder cartwheels toward the shack and --

FROM INSIDE we see it CRASH against pressure window, crazing it but not penetrating. Jake's link sits just inside.

INSIDE THE COCKPIT, Quaritch yanks a yellow handle and --

P-FOOM! -- the canopy BLOWS OFF, flying through the air. Quaritch can see again. He dons his breathing mask. Bends to pick up his KNIFE.

NEARBY NEYTIRI struggles furiously, trying to get her legs free from underneath three tons of thanator.

QUARITCH, panting, glowers at Jake.

QUARITCH

How does it feel to betray your own race?

Then, inexplicably, he TURNS. Walks away.

FROM INSIDE the shack, we see him charge straight toward us and --

CRASH! -- he puts his hydraulic fist right through the window. He is reaching inside for the Link when --

JAKE HITS in a flying tackle with every ounce of force he has, knocking the ampsuit sideways and --

JAKE REACHES around the suit, grabbing Quaritch's shoulder and, yanks him forward HARD, SMASHING his face into the edge of the cockpit but --

QUARITCH flings him off with a sweep of his arm, and Jake slams to the ground.

INSIDE THE LINK Jake is holding his breath as the toxic Pandoran air swirls in. GAS ALARMS SHRIEK.

NEYTIRI shoves with one free leg, desperately trying to pull her other leg out.

THE AMPSUIT charges, the knife flashing down and --

JAKE just manages to catch it in both hands, but the force of the attack drives him to his knees as --

QUARITCH pushes the knife down inexorably, until Jake is pinned against a rock, the blade now inches from his throat.

INSIDE THE LINK Jake is straining to stay conscious, to stay connected as --

THE KNIFE reaches his throat as --

THWAP! AN ARROW APPEARS in Quaritch's chest. He looks up.

NEYTIRI STANDS -- a FURY released. A classic archer figure, she NOCKS another arrow. Then draws and releases smoothly.

TH-WHAP! The machine TOPPLES off Jake and lies still.

QUARITCH STARES at the two arrows in his chest. He touches the feathers of the ancient weapon, then -- with an ironic laugh -- he dies.

NEYTIRI runs up, another arrow nocked, bow drawn. Seeing Quaritch, she lowers her father's bow.

JAKE sees her, then goes limp, his eyes rolling back, and --

INT. SHACK

HUMAN JAKE EXPLODES out of the Link, slamming to the floor where he gags for breath. With his last strength, he claws toward an emergency breathing mask -- across the room.

He scrambles toward it, on the edge of unconsciousness.

NEYTIRI VAULTS through the shattered window, landing in the debris like a cat. She GRABS the mask and flashes to Jake's side -- puts the mask over his face and -- JAKE drags in breath after breath. He looks up at Neytiri, studying him as she holds him -- seeing his human body for the first time.

Jake touches her face, his pale human hand against the blue of her skin. Their eyes meet across the glass of the mask -- together, separate. Worldless.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

MO'AT tends to the mortally wounded TSU'TEY as AVATAR JAKE arrives with Neytiri. Mo'at has bound his wounds, but by her expression, it is clear he cannot be saved.

Jake kneels and Tsu'tey opens his eyes. Through a haze of pain, he recognizes Jake.

TSU'TEY
(Na'vi)
I See you, Jakesully.

JAKE
I See you, Tsu'tey te Rongloa Ateyitan.

TSU'TEY
Are the people safe?

JAKE
They're safe.

Tsu'tey weakly clutches his severed queue.

TSU'TEY
I can never ride again, or bond with my woman -- or hear the voice of Eywa. I can not lead the People. You will lead them, Jakesully.

JAKE
No. I'm not officer material.

TSU'TEY
It is decided. Now do the duty of Olo'eyctan. Set my spirit free.

JAKE
I'm not killing you.

TSU'TEY
I am already dead.

JAKE

No.

TSU'TEY

It is the way. And it is good. I will be remembered --

Tsu'tey's voice is weak, but thick with emotion.

TSU'TEY

-- I fought with Toruk Macto, we were brothers -- and he was my last shadow.

TSU'TEY'S HAND clasps with Jake's in a fierce grip. Jake draws his knife.

TSU'TEY'S POV -- Jake leans forward, blocking the sun. HIS SHADOW falls across Tsu'tey.

JAKE

(Na'vi)

Forgive me, my Brother. Go now to the Mother Spirit.

By his movement, we know that he has ended Tsu'tey's pain. Jake's eyes well with tears as he continues reciting the prayer for the dead, and his Na'vi words carry over as we --

DISSOLVE TO:

EXT. HELL'S GATE -DAY

Na'vi ride direhorses among the abandoned machines of Hell's Gate.

Banshees roost on the roofs of the modules, and stingbats flutter about, unimpeded. The SENTRY GUNS are silent, and the GATES are open to the forest.

JAKE (V.O.)

A few chose to stay. Fewer were chosen.

Max, Norm, and a few of the avatars hold AR's as the personnel of Hell's Gate file up the cargo ramp of the remaining shuttle. The evicted humans are sullen and angry, like POW's.

JAKE and NEYTIRI stand together, watching the departure of the Sky People.

PARKER SELFRIDGE shuffles up the ramp. His eyes -- the eyes of a lost soul -- meet JAKE'S. He disappears into the ship.

CUT TO:

EXT. SPACE

ISV VENTURE STAR hangs suspended against the dark side of PANDORA. The ISV's antimatter engines BLAZE to life and it accelerates out of orbit.

What remains IN FRAME is a virgin, primeval world. Spanning the black continents is a vast reticulated lace-work of BIOLUMINESCENCE -- a ghostly WEB connecting all of Pandora.

CUT TO:

EXT. RAINFOREST - DAY

The sun's rays shaft down through the layers of canopy.

JAKE (V.O.)

The forest will heal, and so will the hearts of the People. New life keeps the energy flowing, like the breath of the world.

NEYTIRI, obviously pregnant, is bow-fishing in the shallows. Children jump and squeal with laughter in the river.

JAKE (V.O.)

This is my last videolog.

INT. LINK ROOM

VIDEO IMAGE -- Jake sits in a chair, talking straight TO CAMERA. He is thin, pale. He looks around the high tech room.

JAKE

The science guys will keep the lights on, here. But I won't miss this place.

EXT. WELL OF SOULS - NIGHT

THE WILLOWS glow softly. The entire Omaticaya clan is gathered, seated in a prayer circle around the Mother Tree.

JAKE (V.O.)

I better wrap this up. There's a funeral tonight, and I don't want to be late. It was someone very close to me.

WIDE SHOT, moving in across the concentric rings of people, all plugged-in and softly chanting. MOVING toward the center, over the figure of Mo'at, to hover above --

NEYTIRI, kneeling beside two FIGURES on the dais --

JAKE and his AVATAR lie head to head. Human Jake is wearing an exomask. Both figures are still, hands folded, covered in translucent silken shrouds of ROOT-CILIA.

CAMERA CLOSES IN as Neytiri removes the mask from Jake's human face. She gently closes his dead eyes with her fingertips. Then bends and kisses him.

MOVE INTO CU on AVATAR JAKE as Neytiri's hand comes into frame, stroking his cheek. TIGHTENING slowly to--

ECU JAKE'S EYES. Hold a beat, then --

They open.

A WEIRD FLICKERING WHITE LIGHT strobes the screen, accompanied by PROJECTOR NOISE and an OFFSCREEN CONTROL VOICE.

CONTROL VOICE

5...4...3...2...1...detonate!

The light becomes brighter as we pan over to MARTY MCFLY, 17, a good looking kid wearing Porsche mirrored sunglasses. The mirrored lenses reflect the MUSHROOM CLOUD of an ATOMIC EXPLOSION.

THE RED HOT OPENING MUSIC KICKS IN; MAIN TITLES BEGIN.

Marty starts bopping along to the rock and roll: he's plugged into a WALKMAN STEREO.

2 We are in a contemporary HIGH SCHOOL CLASSROOM where 30-odd STUDENTS are watching a 16mm documentary about nuclear tests of the 1950's. 2

3 SERIES OF SHOTS — MAIN TITLE SEQUENCE 3

BORED STUDENTS watch the black and white movie. Only MARTY is enjoying himself as he listens to his stereo. MARTY'S FOOT taps in time to the music.

The teacher, MRS. WOODS, 45, looks around the classroom, making sure the students are paying attention. She has her "Classroom Planner" in hand.

The DOCUMENTARY depicts preparations for another atomic test, noting that as many as 20 were done per year in the 1950's. Footage shows how tract houses were constructed and peopled with mannequins to measure the effects of radiation.

MARTY continues bopping along.

MRS. WOODS notices the one head in the classroom bobbing. MARTY'S FOOT continues tapping in time. Now a PAIR OF WOMAN'S SHOES step into FRAME.

MRS. WOODS is standing next to Marty, arms crossed, staring at him. But Marty is oblivious to her.

SUZY PARKER, 17, an attractive girl, looks over at the situation in horror.

Mrs. Woods waves her hand in front of Marty's sunglasses. No reaction.

Suzy turns her head — she can't bear to watch.

Mrs. Woods gently removes Marty's sunglasses. His eyes are closed.

Now Marty opens his eyes. He looks up at Mrs. Woods and smiles weakly.

Mrs. Woods does not smile back. She rips the headphones off — the MUSIC abruptly stops.

MRS. WOODS

Mr. McFly: detention!

CUT TO:

4 INT. STRICKLAND'S OFFICE — DAY

4

CLOSE ON MARTY'S WALKMAN in a pair of ELDERLY MALE HANDS being placed in a WOODWORKING VISE mounted on the corner of a desk.

WIDER — STRICKLAND'S OFFICE

Marty fidgets uneasily in an uncomfortable wooden chair in the sparse office as MR. STRICKLAND, a humorless disciplinarian, tightens the vise. Strickland looks 60, but he could be 160 — he was born old and stayed that way, and has been at this school forever.

Strickland gazes at Marty, then gives the vise a hard, mean wrench. The Walkman CRUNCHES... it sounds like bones breaking.

Marty cringes.

Strickland smiles sadistically and hands it back to him.

MR. STRICKLAND

That's number three, isn't it, McFly?

MARTY

Four.

MR. STRICKLAND

You don't like school, do you, McFly?

Marty rolls his eyes. Is this question for real?

MARTY

Oh, no. sir. I LOVE school.

MR. STRICKLAND

(snaps at him)

You've got a real attitude problem, you know that?

(opens a file on his desk)

You're a slacker, McFly. You've got aptitude, but you don't apply yourself. You remind me of your father: He was a slacker, too.

Marty just sits there, bored.

MR. STRICKLAND

Now, for slacking off in class and for having a serious attitude problem, your punishment is two weeks in detention, with me, starting this afternoon.

MARTY

This afternoon? But I can't! Me and my band have an audition at 3:45 for the YMCA dance. It's really important that I be there — they're counting on me. I gotta be there at 3:45.

MR. STRICKLAND

Too bad, McFly. I guess this isn't your day.

Marty is sick.

CUT TO:

5 INT. DETENTION CLASSROOM — ON A WALL CLOCK — DAY 5
It's 3:28.

WIDER

A regular math classroom used as detention after hours. Again, we see signs of an old school dressed to be more modern: green chalkboards, repainted walls, new desks, and a sprinkler system. *

8 or 10 STUDENTS are seated far apart from each other throughout the room. All are supposedly studying. One of them has a SKATEBOARD along with his books.

MARTY is at the pencil sharpener in the back, sharpening a pencil...but the look on his face indicates he's up to something. He looks at the clock, looks up at the SPRINKLER PIPE, then glances toward the front of the room.

MR. STRICKLAND sits at the teacher's desk, grading a LARGE STACK OF PAPERS.

Marty finishes at the sharpener. He sticks a PIECE OF GUM in his mouth and starts chewing like mad. Then he steps alongside the CAROUSEL SLIDE PROJECTOR and surreptitiously sneaks the lens into his jacket pocket. He quickly returns to his seat.

Now, Strickland stands up and starts toward Marty! Did he see Marty swipe the lens? No, he's merely "patrolling" the room.

When Strickland isn't looking, Marty produces a matchbook and a rubber band from the pencil pouch of his loose leaf binder. He opens the matchbook cover and sticks his gum to the backside.

He waits for Strickland to walk past him, then quickly, Marty stands and, using the rubber band, fires the matchbook at the ceiling.

Strickland whirls around upon hearing the snap, but Marty is already seated, "studying." Strickland looks around suspiciously, but sees nothing. He continues along.

Marty glances up: The gum is holding the matchbook on the ceiling, right near the sprinkler valve. He smiles.

Now Marty sets his mirrored sunglasses on his leg positioning them to reflect the rays of the sun up at the matchbook.

That done, he pulls the lens out of his pocket and focuses the beam onto the matchbook. He adjusts the lens ever so slightly... there! Perfect! A hot white pinpoint of light is focused on the matchbook.

MR. STRICKLAND returns to his paper grading. He marks an entire set of answers wrong and puts "F" at the top of a paper. The next paper has two right. Strickland gives it an "F+."

MARTY continues holding the lens as steady as he can, watching anxiously for results.

ABOVE there is a faint trace of SMOKE on the matchbook.

THE CLOCK now reads 3:37.

STRICKLAND grades his LAST PAPER, THEN STANDS UP AND STARTS PULLING DOWN THE WINDOW SHADES!

MARTY is horrified! Strickland is 3 shades away from Marty's window. Marty looks anxiously up at the matchbook.

MARTY
(under his breath)

Come on, come on...!

Strickland pulls down the next shade.

There is more smoke from the matchbook...

MARTY
Burn, you sucker...!

Strickland pulls down another shade. The next one is Marty's...

Strickland steps toward it...

Suddenly the matchbook ignites! FIRE!

Immediately the FIRE ALARM SOUNDS and the SPRINKLERS GO OFF!

MARTY
FIRE!!!

Students jump up and scream as water sprays all over them! They rush for the door. MARTY grabs the kid with the skateboard, named WEEZE.

MARTY
Weeze — let me borrow this! I'll bring it back tomorrow!

Marty takes the skateboard and dashes out.

MR. STRICKLAND
Stop! Wait! We must file out in an orderly fashion!

Another sprinkler goes off and sprays Strickland right in the face!

| 6 | EXT. HILL VALLEY HIGH SCHOOL — DAY | 6 |
| | It's a classic WPA style high school, built in the 1930's. Marty dashes out, jumps on the skateboard, and skateboards down the front steps! | |
| 7 | EXT. HILLY RESIDENTIAL STREET — DAY | 7 |
| | Marty comes from around the corner, skateboards down a hill, weaving through traffic. He skateboards like a champ. | |
| 8 | EXT. STREET — TOWN SQUARE — DAY | 8 |

This is HILL VALLEY, a northern California town; it's October. The town has been here a while — and its town square business district is beginning to deteriorate... undoubtedly because there's a mall someplace.

The old courthouse, now the Department of Social Services, has a clock tower — but the clock is stopped at 10:02.

A time and temperature clock on the BANK reads 3:43.

MARTY skateboards down the business street and across traffic, narrowly missing being hit by a car!

9 INT. YMCA — STAGE — DAY 9

3 MEMBERS of the PINHEADS rock band, KEYBOARDS, BASS and DRUMS, exchange nervous glances, repeatedly checking their watches. They're all set up on stage.

SUZY PARKER is also here — but she's not part of the band. *

Suddenly, Marty skateboards onto the stage. *

SUZY

Marty!

Marty gives her a wink; she smiles.

Marty's guitar, amp and microphone have already been set up for him. He picks up the guitar and tunes up, then looks over at Suzy.

Suzy smiles and holds up her crossed fingers. Marty grins back. Clearly, they're "an item."

Marty practices a riff...and he's great. You can't tell where the guitar ends and the man begins. He turns and addresses the dance committee.

MARTY

All right, we're the Pinheads, and we're gonna rock 'n roll!

They kick into a red hot number. Marty's fingers dance across the strings and frets in a complicated lead line. He's terrific, and the band sounds great.

They get only about 25 seconds into the number when a VOICE calls out.

DANCE COMMITTEEMAN

That's enough. Thank you.

Marty and the group stop playing, exchanging bewildered glances. *

CUT TO:

10 EXT. TOWN SQUARE — DAY 10

On some of the boarded up buildings are ELECTION POSTERS: "RE-ELECT MAYOR 'GOLDIE' WILSON: HONESTY, DECENCY, INTEGRITY" and a picture of the incumbent Mayor Wilson is black, about 45, with a GOLD FRONT TOOTH.

MARTY and SUZY are walking together. She carries her schoolbooks: he has the skateboard. And he's depressed.

SUZY

Marty, one rejection isn't the end of the world.

MARTY

I don't know. Maybe I'm just not cut out for music.

SUZY

But you're good, Marty. You're really good. And this audition tape of yours is great... (she gives him back a CASSETTE TAPE) You've got to send it in to that record company.

*
*
*

MARTY

But what if they hate it? What if they say, "get outta here, kid, you got no future?" Why should I put myself through all that anxiety? (He sighs.) I'm sorry. I guess I sound like some kinda schizoid neurotic.

SUZY

Well, according to my shrink, all of our emotional anxieties are a direct result of the influence our parents had in our childhood.

MARTY

In that case, you can kiss me off right now. You've met my old man. You know what a zero he is.

Suzy nods knowingly. They are walking past a TOYOTA DEALERSHIP.

*

SUZY

At least he's letting you borrow the car tomorrow night. That's a step in the right direction.

MARTY

Hey, I'm TAKING the car tomorrow night. That way it saves him the anxiety of making a decision.

Marty spots a tricked-out black SUPRA in the showroom.

*

MARTY

Hey, check out that tricked-out Supra. Now THAT'S a car. (sighs, admiring it longingly) Someday, Suzy, someday...

*
*

SUZY

What about your mother? Does she know?

MARTY

Are you kidding? She thinks I'm going camping with the guys. If she found out I was going camping with you, she'd shit.

Marty sprays some BINACA in his mouth.

SUZY

(nods knowingly)

My shrink says a lot of parents are sexually repressed.

MARTY

My mom's not sexually repressed. How can you be repressed about something you know absolutely nothing about?

They pause across from the former courthouse building.

SUZY

(flirting)

She's just trying to keep you respectable.

MARTY

(flirting back)

She's not doing a very good job, is she?

They move closer...

SUZY

Terrible...

They're about to kiss...

CLOCK WOMAN (O.S.)

Save the Clock Tower!

Marty and Suzy turn. A middle-aged CHURCH GROUP TYPE WOMAN has a donation can and an armful of printed FLYERS.

CLOCK WOMAN

Please make a donation to save the clock tower.

MARTY

Lady, can't you see I'm busy here?

CLOCK WOMAN

Mayor Wilson is sponsoring an initiative to repair that clock...

She points to the stopped clock on the old courthouse building.

CLOCK WOMAN

(continuing)

We at the Hill Valley Preservation Society think it should be preserved exactly the way it is.

MARTY

But it doesn't tell time. What good is it?

CLOCK WOMAN

It's part of our history. Here — it's all in this flyer. (gives Marty one) 30 years ago, lightning struck that clock tower, and the clock hasn't run since. We at the society feel it's a landmark of scientific importance, attesting to the power of the Almighty.

MARTY

All right, lady. Here's a quarter.

Marty drops a quarter into her can.

She nods and moves along to bother someone else.

MARTY
(to Suzy)

Now... you were saying that my mother wasn't doing a very good job...

They move closer again as before, about to kiss...

Suddenly, a MALE VOICE booms out over a P.A.

SPEAKER VOICE (O.S.)

Marty! Marty McFly!

Marty turns.

A medium sized RV with speakers mounted on the side is idling across the street. The vehicle is quite used. It's towing a tarped vehicle on a trailer.

Marty recognizes it, and rolls his eyes.

MARTY

Doc, I'm busy.

DRIVER

It'll only take a minute...

MARTY
(to Suzy)

Come on, you should see what's inside this thing.

They go over and step inside.

11 INT. RV — TOWN SQUARE — DAY

11

The driver is DR. EMMETT BROWN, about 65. He looks like an old hippie, with shoulder length white hair, Hawaiian shirt, faded jeans, an Indian turquoise around his neck and lively — almost wild — eyes. He's full of energy, full of life, talks fast, and is immediately likable for his eccentricities.

With him in the RV is his big DOG, "EINSTEIN."

The inside of the vehicle is full of CLOCKS — every imaginable type, a Cuckoo, a Grandfather, even a classic "Felix the Cat with moving eyes". All of them are in dead sync. There is also a bank of state-of-the-art component video and audio equipment. The 25-inch monitor is tuned to MTV. There are discarded fast food cartons, and a spilled box of sugar coated cereal, an unmade bed, a doggie dish, and tools and electronic parts. We might also notice a lead canister with purple radiation symbols.

MARTY

What's up, Doc?

BROWN

One a.m., right, Marty? You're gonna be there, right? Twin Pines Mall.

*

MARTY

Yeah, right.

Brown takes the “Save the Clock” flyer out of Marty’s hand.

BROWN

Let me write it down for you so you don’t forget... (writes on the back) “Twin Pines Mall... one a.m.” Twin Pines Mall — remember when that used to be Peabody’s farm? It was all farmland out there. No — I guess that was before your time, Marty.

*
*
*
*

He folds the flyer and sticks it in Marty’s pocket.

BROWN

(continuing)

You’re feeling all right, Marty? You’ve been getting plenty of rest?

MARTY

Yeah, but Doc, exactly what are we gonna do at one a.m.?

BROWN

You want me to spoil it for you? Don’t worry about it — it’ll be great.

MARTY

You’re not planning on breaking into another power plant or something...? That was kinda risky.

BROWN

That’s the point, Marty. Risk. Risk makes life worth living. What would you rather do, sleep?

Brown checks one of the 4 watches on his arm.

BROWN

(sudden urgency)

It’s almost time — quiet!

Suzy gives Marty a bewildered look, but Marty knows what’s about to happen...

It’s exactly 4 o’clock, and all of the clocks CHIME at once — dings, dongs, electronic tones, cuckoo birds...

Brown loves it — he drinks it up like a proud father.

BROWN

I love that!

MARTY

Look, Doc, we’ve gotta go. I’ll...see you tonight.

BROWN

Yes! At one a.m.! It could change your life.

Marty and Suzy step out of the RV.

Marty and Suzy watch the RV go.

SUZY

I don't know if you should be hanging out with a guy like that after midnight.

MARTY

Doc Brown's all right — he's just a little hung up on time. A couple of years ago, he showed up at my house and hired me to sweep out this garage of his. He pays me 50 bucks a week, gives me free beer... and gives me total access to his record collection — he's got this great old record collection.

(a beat)

Hard to believe he was one of the world's greatest nuclear physicists.

Down the street, Brown's RV waits for an ELDERLY MAN to hobble across the street. Brown's voice booms out over his P.A.

BROWN (V.O. P.A.)

Let's move it, Gramps! You're not that old!

Suzy gives Marty a look of disbelief.

MARTY

(shrugs)

Too much radiation, I guess.

(a beat, moves closer to her)

Where were we?

She smiles and moves toward him.

SUZY

I think we were right here...

Again they're about to kiss...

A CAR HORN HONKS LOUDLY. Suzy turns away.

SUZY

That's my Dad. See you tomorrow.

She hops into the waiting car. Marty watches it go.

MARTY

This is not my day.

14 EXT. MCFLY HOUSE — DUSK

14

A WRECKER is in the McFly driveway with a 1979 Plymouth Reliant in tow: its front end is completely smashed, as if someone rammed it into a brick wall. The truck driver is unhitching it.

Looking on with horror is timid GEORGE McFLY, 47, a balding, boring, uninspired man who wears a suit he bought at Sears 4 years ago.

Next to him is BIFF TANNEN, 48, an intimidating lout, who wears gold chains and pinky rings, with sartorial taste to match.

MARTY skateboards up to the scene and is shocked. He listens as Biff lambasts his father.

BIFF

I can't believe you did this, McFly. I can't believe you loaned me your car without telling me it had a blind spot. I could have been killed!

GEORGE

Biff, I never noticed any blind spot before.

BIFF

It's there, McFly. How else can you explain this?

GEORGE

Can I assume that your insurance will pay for this?

BIFF

My insurance? It's your car. Your insurance should pay for it. I wanna know who's gonna pay for THIS! (indicates his stained suit) I spilled beer all over it when that car hit me. Who's gonna pay the cleaning bill?

George hesitates, then meekly pulls out his wallet.

GEORGE

Do you think 20 dollars will cover it?

Biff snatches the 20 dollar bill out of George's hand.

BIFF

It's a start. And hey... where's my reports?

GEORGE

Well, I haven't finished them yet. I figured since they weren't due till Monday...

BIFF

(knocks on George's head)

Hello? Anybody home? Think, McFly, think! I've gotta have time to get 'em retyped. If I turn in my reports in your handwriting, I'll get fired.

GEORGE

Okay, I'll finish them tonight and run them over first thing in the morning.

BIFF

Not too early — I sleep in on Saturday.

(about to leave)

Oh, hey, McFly: your shoe's untied.

GEORGE
(falling for it)

Huh?

He looks down and Biff hits him on the chin. Biff laughs loudly.

BIFF

Don't be so gullible, McFly!

Biff walks over to his sparkling year old CADILLAC on the street. He spots Marty.

BIFF

Hiya, kid. How do you like my new paint job?

Marty doesn't. He steps over to his father, outraged. He's about to say something, but George raises his hands and cuts him off.

GEORGE

I know what you're going to say, son, and you're right. You're right. But he happens to be my supervisor, and I'm afraid I'm just not very good at confrontations.

MARTY

But Jesus Christ, Dad, look at the car! Look what he did to the car!

GEORGE

I know. And I know you were counting on using it, and I'm sorry.

MARTY

Do you have any idea how important this was to me, Dad? Do you have any idea at all?

GEORGE
(shrugs)

Well... I guess I don't...

Biff screeches out in his Cadillac.

MARTY

Dad, did it ever occur to you to say "no?" To just once try saying "no?"

GEORGE

Son, I know it's hard for you to understand, but the fact is, I'm just not a fighter.

MARTY

Try it once, Dad. Just one time, say "no."

Now the NEXT DOOR NEIGHBOR sticks his head out the window of the adjacent house. He's 40, pot-bellied, named HOWARD.

HOWARD

Hey, McFly! My kid's selling Girl Scout cookies! I told her you'd be good for a case.

Marty shakes his head. George gulps, then calls back.

*

GEORGE

Well... okay.

Marty shakes his head hopelessly.

CUT TO:

15 INT. AT THE McFLY DINNER TABLE — NIGHT

15

The McFly family is dining on meat loaf, Kraft macaroni and cheese, Bird's Eye mixed vegetables, and French's instant mashed potatoes.

Marty's mother, LORRAINE, 47, was once very attractive. Now she's OVERWEIGHT, in a rut, a victim of suburban stagnation. She has more food on her plate than anyone else, and a glass of vodka.

GEORGE has papers in front of him instead of food: he's doing the work Biff gave him. He's also glancing at the TV, which is tuned to a "Honeymooners" rerun.

Sister LINDA, 19, is cute but wears too much eye makeup; brother DAVE, 22, wears a MCDONALD'S UNIFORM and is wolfing down his food.

GEORGE

(to Marty)

Believe me, son, you're better off not having the aggravation of dealing with that YMCA dance. You'd have to worry about getting all your equipment there, making contingency plans in case someone got sick, making sure you got paid correctly, settling with the Musician's union... and what if you were so good that other people wanted to hire you? You'd have to worry about scheduling your jobs around school. Believe me, son, you're better off without those headaches.

*
*
*
*
*
*
*
*
*

MARTY

Thanks for the pep talk, Dad.

*
*

LORRAINE

Kids, your Uncle Joey didn't make parole again. I think it would be nice if you all dropped him a line.

MARTY

Uncle "Jailbird Joey"?

DAVE

He's your brother, Mom.

LINDA

Yeah. I think it's a major embarrassment having an uncle in prison.

LORRAINE

We all make mistakes in life, children.

*

DAVE
(checks watch)

Damn, I'm late.

He wipes his mouth and hurries off.

LORRAINE
Please watch your language, David.

LINDA
(to Marty)
Suzy Parker called... wants you to call her back.

LORRAINE
I don't like her, Marty. Any girl who calls up a boy is looking for trouble. Pass the mashed potatoes, please.

Marty passes them and Lorraine takes a big helping.

LINDA
Oh, Mother, there's nothing wrong with calling a boy.

LORRAINE
Well, I think it's terrible, girls chasing boys. I never chased a boy when I was your age. I never called a boy, or asked a boy on a date, or sat in a parked car with a boy. Because when you behave like that, boys won't respect you, Linda. They'll think you're cheap.

Linda rolls her eyes. She's heard this a million times.

LINDA
Then how are you ever supposed to meet anybody?

LORRAINE
It'll just happen. Like the way I met your father.

LINDA
But that was so stupid! Grandpa hit him with his car.

LORRAINE
It was meant to be.

LINDA
I still don't understand what Dad was doing in the middle of the street.

LORRAINE
What was it, George? Birdwatching?

GEORGE
(absorbed in his work)
Huh? Did you say something, Lorraine?

LORRAINE
(to Linda and Marty)
Anyway, Grandpa hit him with the car and brought him into the house. He seemed so helpless... like a little lost dog. And my heart just went out to him.

LINDA

Yeah, Mom, you've told us a million times: "Florence Nightingale to the rescue."

LORRAINE

(thoughtfully, remembering)

The next weekend, we went on our first date: the "Enchantment Under the Sea" school dance. I'll never forget it — it was the night of that terrible thunderstorm. Remember, George?

*

GEORGE

What's that, dear?

LORRAINE

(ignores him; to Marty and Linda)

Your father kissed me for the very first time on the dance floor... and that was when I realized I was going to spend the rest of my life with him.

Marty and Linda exchange a look and shake their heads.

LINDA

I can't believe Dad actually got up enough nerve to kiss you in public.

LORRAINE

Well, I may have encouraged him a little...

MARTY

I'll bet you had to practically jump on his bones.

Marty gets up, finished eating.

LORRAINE

You watch your mouth, young man. And excuse yourself when you get up from the table.

Marty is already out of the room.

MARTY (O.S.)

May I be excused?

CUT TO:

16 INT. MARTY'S BEDROOM — NIGHT

16

Marty's walls are covered with posters of rock stars and cars — particularly Toyota Supras. *

There is also a portable home synthesizer, a tape recorder, and a stack of lead sheets.

Marty sits at his desk, with a submission form that has an "R & G RECORDS" letterhead, an envelope, and the cassette tape Suzy Parker gave him. There's also a picture of Suzy there. *

*

He signs the form and puts it in the envelope, along with the cassette tape. He is about to seal it — then he hesitates, and ponders a moment. He stares at the envelope — it's addressed to the "R & G RECORDS, NEW TALENT DIVISION." He sighs, shakes his head, pulls the tape out and chucks the envelope and application into the trash can.

*

CUT TO:

16-A INT. MARTY'S BEDROOM — CLOCK ON MARTY'S NIGHTSTAND

16-A*

It's almost 12:30. CAMERA PANS to pick up Marty lying asleep on the bed fully clothed.

*

Now Marty's CORDLESS PHONE beeps. Marty stirs and answers it.

*

MARTY
(into phone)

Hello?

(a beat, rolls his eyes)

No, I haven't forgotten, Doc. One a.m., Twin Pines Mall.

*

He hangs up and shakes his head.

CUT TO:

17 EXT. TWIN PINES MALL PARKING LOT — NIGHT

17*

CAMERA PANS from the lit entrance sign, depicting 2 PINE TREES with "TWIN PINES MALL" in lettering below (along with a digital clock at 12:59) to pick up MARTY on his skateboard with another WALKMAN (it's a different brand than the one Strickland smashed). Marty skateboards around a corner of the mall and sees Brown's RV on the vast, sodium vapor lit parking lot. DR. BROWN is dad in a white radiation suit, hood off, (still with his Indian turquoise around his neck) and EINSTEIN, are both next to

*

A SLEEK, STAINLESS STEEL DELOREAN SPORTS CAR. It's been modified with some wicked looking units on its rear engine, giving it a particularly dangerous feel. There are coils along the front and rear decks.

There are also several small cases of supplies and equipment, and a piece of American Tourister luggage around the RV.

Marty skateboards over, totally blown away by the car.

MARTY
Jeez, Doc, a DeLorean! What the hell did you do to it?

BROWN
Grab the camera and start taping, Marty. I'll explain as we go.

Brown indicates a HOME VIDEO CAMERA nearby. Marty picks it up.

MARTY
And what's with the Devo suit?

Brown lifts open the driver's side gull wing door.

BROWN
Come on, Einstein. Get in, boy.

The dog obediently jumps in and sits in the driver's seat. Brown buckles him in with the shoulder harness. The dog has a BATTERY OPERATED DIGITAL CLOCK hanging around his neck.

Marty begins taping, handheld, cinema verite style.

BROWN

(to Marty and video camera)

All right, this is test #1. Please note that Einstein's clock here is in precise synchronization with my control watch.

Brown holds up a digital watch next to Einstein's clock; indeed, the two are in dead sync.

BROWN

(to the dog)

Good luck, Einie.

Brown reaches in and starts the ignition. The DeLorean engine ROARS to life. Brown turns on the headlights and lowers the gull wing door, sealing Einstein in.

He steps back and picks up a REMOTE CONTROL UNIT, similar to one for a radio controlled toy car. There are buttons labeled "Accelerator" and "Brake", a joystick, and an L.E.D. digital readout labeled "Miles Per Hour." Brown flicks the power switch on and, using the accelerator button and joystick for steering, sends the DeLorean down to the far, far end of the parking lot. He turns the car around so that it's pointing toward them, idling.

BROWN

Here we go, Marty. If my calculations are correct, when the car hits 88 miles an hour, you're gonna see some serious shit.

Brown takes a deep breath, then pushes the accelerator button.

The DeLorean takes off, shifting gears automatically.

The L.E.D. speedometer passes 30.

The stainless steel vehicle zooms faster... past 40...

Marty is getting it all on tape.

Brown watches intently. The speedometer climbs past 60.

IN THE CAR, Einstein remains calmly in the driver's seat. Gauges and instrument lights mounted behind him begin flashing.

Brown's finger holds the accelerator button down.

The meter passes 75.

The DeLorean keeps accelerating, approaching Marty and Brown. The coils mounted around the car begin glowing.

The speedometer hits 85... 86... 87... 88...

The automobile is suddenly engulfed by a BLINDING WHITE GLOW — then, BLAM! It's gone, a TRAIL OF FIRE left in its wake.

19 Brown and Marty are hit by a sharp blast of air. Marty blinks in disbelief: it's as if the car never existed. Only the LICENSE PLATE is left behind — a vanity plate: "NO TIME." 19

BROWN
(elated)

What'd I tell you? 88 miles per hour! Temporal displacement occurred at (checks watch) exactly 1:02 a.m. and zero seconds.

MARTY
(shocked)

Christ Almighty! You disintegrated Einstein!

BROWN

Calm down, Marty. I didn't disintegrate anything. The molecular structure of both Einstein and the car are completely intact.

MARTY

Then where the hell are they?

BROWN

The appropriate question is: WHEN the hell are they. You see, Einstein has just become the world's first time traveler. I sent him into the future — one minute into the future, to be exact. And at exactly 1:03 a.m. and zero seconds, we shall catch up to him... and the time machine.

MARTY

Time machine? Are you trying to tell me you built a time machine out of a DeLorean?

BROWN
(smiles, modestly)

The way I figured it, if you're gonna build a time machine into a car, why not do it with some style? Besides, the stainless steel construction made the flux dispersal—

(his digital watch BEEPS)

Ten seconds! Roll tape — and brace yourself for a sudden displacement of air.

Marty aims the camera right where the DeLorean disappeared. Brown grips the remote control unit tightly and counts down.

BROWN

5...4...3...2...1...

Their hair stands up on end, charged up with static electricity...

20 Suddenly, a SHARP BLAST OF WIND comes up out of nowhere, along with a DEAFENING SONIC BOOM — and the DELOREAN REAPPEARS right where it vanished, still going 88 m.p.h.! 20

21 Brown hits the brake button. 21

The car wheels lock up and the DeLorean comes to a SCREECHING HALT, smoke pouring off the body.

Brown and Marty rush over to the car. Brown approaches cautiously and reaches for the door handle. He touches it and recoils in pain.

MARTY

Is it hot?

BROWN

It's cold. Damned cold.

Brown raises the driver's side door: there sits Einstein, none the worse for wear. Brown again compares his watch with Einstein's.

22 INSERT — WATCHES

22

Einstein's reads 1:02:10; Brown's is 1:03:10.

23 BACK TO SHOT

23

BROWN

Exactly one minute difference — and still ticking!

MARTY

Is Einstein all right?

Brown unbuckles the shoulder harness, and Einstein bounds out, happy and playful. Brown gives the dog a Milk Bone reward.

BROWN

Good boy, Einie!

(to Marty)

He's fine. And he's completely unaware that anything happened. As far as he's concerned, the trip was instantaneous. That's why his watch is a minute behind mine — he "skipped over" that minute to instantly arrive at this moment in time. Come here, let me show you how it works...

Marty is still a bit skeptical, uneasy. Brown waves him over, like a kid who wants to show off a new toy. Marty approaches cautiously.

BROWN

First, you turn the time circuits on...

Brown flips the labeled switch. An array of indicator lights go on inside.

BROWN

(continuing)

This readout, tells you where you're going, this one tells you where you are, this one tells you where you were.

The three readouts are respectively labeled "DESTINATION TIME," "PRESENT TIME" and "LAST TIME DEPARTED."

BROWN
(continuing)

You input your destination time on this keypad. Want to see the signing of the Declaration of Independence?

He punches 7-4-1776. The “DESTINATION TIME” readout lights up with the date.

BROWN
(continuing)

Or witness the birth of Christ?

He punches in 12-25-0.

BROWN
(continuing)

Here’s a red letter date in the history of science: March 19, 1955...

He pauses, realizing something — as if something suddenly makes sense to him.

BROWN

Yes, of course... March 19, 1955...

MARTY

What happened then?

BROWN

That was the day I invented time travel. Actually, it was night. I remember it vividly: I got hit over the head, and when I came to, I had a revelation — a vision — a picture in my head. A picture of THIS...

Brown points to a particular centerpiece unit mounted inside the DeLorean.

Marty aims the video camera and gets it on tape. He continues taping as Dr. Brown explains.

BROWN

This is what makes time travel possible: the T.F.C. — Temporal Field Capacitor.

MARTY

Temporal Field Capacitor, huh? How’d you get beaned?

BROWN

Well, I was trying to— (stops short, thinking better of it) Well, it’s not important. What is important is that it works. It’s taken me over 30 years to fulfill the vision of that night.

He faces the DeLorean proudly.

MARTY

Heavy duty, Doc. And it runs on, like, regular unleaded gasoline?

BROWN

Unfortunately, no. It requires something with a little more kick...

Brown indicates a container with purple radioactivity symbols on it.

*

MARTY
(reads the label)

Plutonium?! You mean this sucker's nuclear?

BROWN

Electrical. But I need a nuclear reaction to generate the 1.21 jigowatts of electricity I need. The T.F.C. stores it, then discharges it all at once, like a gigantic bolt of lightning. Oh, you'd better put on this radiation suit before I reload. Not that there's any danger, but it never hurts to take precautions.

Brown hands him the YELLOW RADIATION SUIT which is near the RV. Marty puts the camera down.

*

*

MARTY

Hold the phone, Doc — plutonium's illegal. Did you rip it off?

*

BROWN

No, of course not. Here, let me help you with that.

*

Brown helps Marty get into the suit.

BROWN

Put your hood up, Marty, while I reload... and keep Einstein covered, too.

*

Marty and Brown both pull their hoods over their heads. Marty covers Einstein with a sheet of the same radiation proof material.

*

*

Brown opens the container and removes a 4-inch clear cylinder with a plutonium rod within (it's surrounded by water), then closes the container.

*

*

Brown steps over to the rear of the DeLorean and places the plutonium cylinder into the loading hopper. The plutonium rod drops down into the reactor, which then seals shut.

*

*

BROWN

(removes his hood)

It's safe now. Everything is lead lined.

Marty removes his hood and releases Einstein. He picks up the video camera and starts taping again.

*

*

BROWN

Oh — I mustn't forget my luggage...

Brown grabs his suitcase and puts it in the trunk (it's in the front).

BROWN

Who knows if they'll have cotton underwear in the future? I'm allergic to all synthetics.

Brown slams the trunk shut.

MARTY

The future? Is that where you're going?

BROWN

That's right. 25 years into the future. I've always dreamed of seeing the future — looking beyond my years, observing the progress of mankind. It's almost like cheating death.

(pauses, then smiles wryly)

I'll also be able to find out who wins the next 25 World Series.

*
*
*
*
*

Suddenly, Einstein starts BARKING at something.

BROWN

What is it, Einie?

Brown turns, and reacts with horror to an APPROACHING PAIR OF HEADLIGHTS: it's an ominous VAN.

BROWN

Oh, no — they found me. I don't know how, but they found me.

MARTY

Who?

BROWN

The Libyans!

*

MARTY

What Libyans?

*

BROWN

The Libyans who got me the Plutonium! They wanted me to build 'em a bomb — I told 'em I would, but I lied!

*
*

The van side door slides open and a SWARTHY CHARACTER who resembles Yasser Arafat leans out with an AK 47 submachine gun. He OPENS FIRE.

BROWN

Run for it, Marty! I'll draw their fire!

Brown pulls a .45 revolver from inside his radiation suit and FIRES at the van! He then breaks for the mall, a good 500 yards away.

The terrorist van SCREECHES around sharply and gives chase. The terrorist FIRES a machine gun blast.

*

MARTY

Doc — no! Wait!

But Brown keeps running and firing — and the van closes the distance. No way can Brown outrun it to the mall.

The Terrorist gunner screams a Libyan curse, then FIRES a burst at Brown.

*

The bullets rip into Brown's chest and the scientist goes down.

Marty stands frozen in horror, video camera still in hand.

MARTY

Doc! Oh my God!

(at the terrorists)

You bastards!

As if hearing Marty, the van makes a U-turn: it's coming for Marty!

Marty looks around. He's out in the open, and has only one chance: The DeLorean.

Marty dashes for it, even as the van accelerates toward him, and dives into the still open driver's door.

24	IN THE CAR	24
	Marty swings the door shut, then looks over the array of switches and buttons on the console with frightened bewilderment: how do you start this thing?

26 INT. MOVING DELOREAN, BEHIND MARTY, THRU THE WINDSHIELD 26

The mall parking lot is suddenly changed into an OPEN FIELD with a SCARECROW in the middle of it!

Marty is speeding toward it at 88 miles an hour — he hits it! The scarecrow's face is hideously smashed against the windshield.

Marty continues toward a HAYSTACK! He's completely disoriented.

27 EXT. FARM FIELD AND BARN — NIGHT 27

The DeLorean speeds right through the haystack, and then into an OPEN BARN.

We hold on the barn exterior — we hear a CRASH; hay and dust are kicked up out the door... then a CRACK OF WOOD — and A LARGE SECTION OF THE BARN ROOF CAVES IN!

We hold on the barn. We hear a DOG start BARKING.

28 EXT. NEARBY FARM HOUSE — NIGHT 28

A light goes on in the nearby FARM HOUSE. Now, FARMER PA PEABODY, 45, comes out in his red flannels, carrying a lantern. Behind him is his wife, MA; their buxom 14 year old DAUGHTER, and lively 11 year old son SHERMAN.

They approach the barn and cautiously enter through the rear doors.

29 INT. BARN — NIGHT

29

The Peabodys stare in open-mouthed astonishment:

The stainless steel vehicle faces them head on, headlight beams shining through the dust. With its wheels buried in the straw and amber hazard lights blinking, it looks like a SPACE SHIP!

The COWS in the barn don't seem to care much, but Ma and Pa look up at the hole where the roof caved in, then exchange an uneasy look.

MA

What is it, Pa?

PA

Looks like an airplane.. .without wings...

SHERMAN

Airplane? It's a flying saucer, Pa! From outer space!

The driver's gull wing door rises slowly... just like a hatch.

Pa motions them all back. They watch expectantly, uneasily, with expressions of curiosity mixed with fear.

Now Marty steps out, dazed — he's in the radiation suit, and the HOOD IS DOWN, giving him the appearance of an alien!

Ma SCREAMS and faints!

PA

Run, children! Run for your lives!

They all run like hell out of the barn!

Marty takes a few steps, then removes the hood.

MARTY

Hey! Hello? Where am I?

Marty looks around. The cows in the barn just chew their cud.

Marty shakes his head, then steps out the barn door.

30 EXT. BARNYARD — NIGHT

30

Marty steps out into the barnyard.

MARTY

Excuse me! Anybody here?

EXT. FARM HOUSE — NIGHT

PA busts out of the farmhouse with a double-barreled shotgun. Sherman is right behind him, with something rolled up in his hand.

SHERMAN

Look, Pa — it's already mutated into human form! Shoot it!

Pa raises his shotgun and FIRES!

Buckshot cracks into the barn wall behind Marty.

PA

Take that, you mutated son-of-a-bitch!

He squeezes off the second barrel!

Shot explodes in the dirt near Marty's feet! He dashes back into the barn!

Pa breaks the gun and reloads, then moves cautiously toward the barn. Just as he's about to enter, the DELOREAN THUNDERS OUT!

Pa Peabody jumps back!

The car spins around in the barnyard, and smashes through a white picket fence surrounding 2 NEWLY PLANTED PINE TREES IN A LINE, just like on the sign at "TWIN PINES MALL." The DeLorean takes out one of the small trees, then finds the dirt access road and ROARS AWAY.

*

*

PA

You space bastard! You killed one of my pines!

Pa FIRES both barrels at the departing vehicle, then runs over to his "pine grove."

PA

(extremely upset)

Now I only got one.

*

Now he looks up and sees Ma coming out of the barn. She's dazed, rubbing her head.

PA

Ma! Are you all right!

Sherman runs over, terrified, with a rolled up something in his hand.

SHERMAN

Pa! No! Don't go near her! She's a zombie! She's got no more free will! The spaceman took over her brain!

PA

What the hell are you talking', boy?

SHERMAN

Read this! It's all right here!

Sherman shows him his WEIRD SCIENCE COMIC BOOK: On the cover is a space ship that resembles a 50's version of the DeLorean. An alien is stepping out who looks something like Marty in the radiation suit, and he appears to have enslaved several human females. The title of the story is "Space Zombies From Pluto."

Pa looks at it, then glances over at his wife with trepidation.

MARTY

This is definitely not my day.

On the back of the newspaper is an AUTOMOBILE ADVERTISEMENT with a picture of a “new” 1955 Studebaker. The copy clearly says “YOU’LL BE NOTICED driving the car of the future — the All New 1955 Studebaker.”

Marty looks at the DeLorean, looks again at the ad copy, then looks at the garage door of his house-to-be.

MARTY

Why not...?

He tries to open the garage door: it’s locked.

Then he reaches in his pocket and pulls out his KEYS. He tries one in the garage lock. It works! Marty smiles and opens the garage door.

42 EXT. HILL VALLEY TOWN SQUARE — DAY

42

The town square is immediately recognizable because the courthouse clock tower is now working. In 1955, the town square is a healthy, vibrant center of commerce. The same buildings are well kept and clean, and the street bustles with Saturday morning activity. Marty notices

THE MOVIE THEATER is now playing "Cattle Queen of Montana" starring Barbara Stanwyck and Ronald Reagan.

THE TOYOTA DEALERSHIP is now a STUDEBAKER DEALERSHIP selling new 1955 cars.

*

AN APPLIANCE STORE is selling "modern" small appliances.

A WOMAN'S STORE displays the latest fashions.

A TRAVEL AGENCY advertises "Fabulous Vacations in Cuba."

THE BANK has a round clock instead of the digital version of 1985. A sign in the window promotes "Passbook Savings at 2-1/4%."

A RECORD STORE displays the latest records and albums: Eddie Fisher, Perry Como, Pat Boone. There is no Rock and Roll.

AN ELECTION POSTER: "Re-elect Mayor Frank 'Red' Thomas. Honesty, Decency, Integrity." With the exception of the name and face, it's the same as the "Goldie Wilson" poster of 1985.

MARTY walks along the street staring at the places and people. The people stare at him too, particularly his green shoes.

The previously boarded up CAFÉ is now open for business. Marty notices a PUBLIC TELEPHONE SIGN on the window: he's got an idea. He enters.

43 INT. CAFÉ — DAY

43

A typical café/soda fountain of the period; 2 or 3 CUSTOMERS are at the counter.

Marty stares at the signs advertising menu items: Hamburger — 25 cents. Ham & Cheese — 30 cents. Chocolate Sundae — 15 cents. A sign over the cigarette display says "All Brands 20 cents."

LOU, the counterman, spots Marty.

LOU

Lou points it out, in back: a phone booth.

47 INT. CAFÉ 47

Marty saunters out of the phone booth and takes a seat at the counter. A NERDY LOOKING KID is seated nearby, sipping a soda and reading a comic book.

Marty looks at Lou, indicating the address on the phone book page. *

MARTY *

LOU

MARTY
No, a Pepsi Free — you know, diet soda?

Lou looks at him like he's from another planet.

LOU
No, I don't know.

MARTY
Uh, well, just give me something to drink that doesn't have sugar in it.

Lou gives him a look, then puts a cup of coffee in front of him. Marty looks at the bowl of sugar cubes in front of him.

MARTY
Have you got any Sweet 'N Low?

LOU
Sweet and what?
(eyeing him suspiciously)
Say, kid, you'd better pay for this right now.

MARTY
Okay.

He pulls out his wallet and gives Lou a crisp, new 20 dollar bill. Lou's eyes nearly fall out of his head.

LOU

A 20? What do you think this is, a bank? I can't break a 20 for a nickel cup of coffee. (suddenly suspicious) Say, what's a kid your age doing with a 20 dollar bill anyway?

Marty gulps, pulls a nickel out of his pocket and takes back his 20. Lou gives him a look, then walks away.

Marty raises his coffee cup and just as he's about to take a sip...

VOICE (O.S.)

Hey, McFly!

MARTY

Huh?

He spins around on his stool.

The voice came from a PUNK, 17; behind him are 3 OTHER PUNKS. The lead punk is coming right toward Marty... no, he's stepping over to the NERDY KID next to him.

NERDY KID

Uh, hi, Biff, how's it going?

Yes, the punk is BIFF TANNEN, aged 17! And the nerdy kid is GEORGE McFLY, also 17. Biff takes George's soda and drinks it all.

*
*

Biff's boys buy cigarettes at the counter. They are MATCH, perpetually chewing a wooden matchstick; SKINHEAD, who has a crewcut just this side of being bald; and 3-D, who always wears red-green 3-D glasses.

Marty watches the exchange between Biff and George with utter amazement.

BIFF

You got my homework finished, McFly?

GEORGE

Well, no. I figured since it's not due till Monday...

Biff knocks on George's head.

BIFF

Hello? Anybody home? Think, McFly, think! I've gotta have time to recopy it. Do you realize what would happen if I turned in MY homework in YOUR handwriting? I'd get kicked out of school!

(notices Marty staring at him)

What are you lookin' at, dipshit?

SKINHEAD

Biff — get a load of his shoes. This dork thinks he's a leprechaun — he painted 'em green!

They all laugh. Biff turns back to George.

BIFF

So how about my homework, McFly?

GEORGE

Um, okay, Biff, I'll do it tonight and bring it over first thing tomorrow.

BIFF

Not too early — I sleep in on Sundays. Oh, hey, McFly — your shoe's untied.

GEORGE

(looks down, falls for it)

Huh?

Biff hits him in the chin. He laughs loudly, as do his cronies... and they leave.

Marty, still in disbelief, turns to George.

MARTY

I don't believe it. You're George McFly...?

GEORGE

Uh-huh.

MARTY

Your birthday's August 18th, and your mother's name is Sylvia?

GEORGE

Uh-huh. Who are you?

MARTY

I'm a relative of yours. A very distant relative.

A BLACK BUSBOY has been sweeping up in the background, making his way over. He looks at George. As he talks, we see he has a gold front tooth — it's GOLDIE WILSON, aged 22!

GOLDIE

Say, what do let that boy push you around for?

GEORGE

Well, uh, he's bigger than me...

GOLDIE

Stand tall, boy. Have some respect for yourself. You let people walk over you now, they'll be walkin' over you for the rest of your life. Look at me. You think I'm gonna spend the rest of my life in this slophouse?

LOU

(has heard the remark)

Watch it, Goldie.

GOLDIE

(he's on a roll)
No, sir! I'm gonna make something of myself! I'm going to night school —
I'm gonna be somebody!

MARTY
That's right — he's gonna be Mayor someday.

This is an idea that's never occurred to Goldie.

GOLDIE
Mayor? That's a good idea! I could run for mayor!

George slips out as the conversation continues.

LOU
Ha! A colored mayor! That'll be the day!

GOLDIE
You wait and see, Mr. Carruthers. I'm gonna be mayor.

LOU
Just keep sweeping, Goldie.

Now Marty notices that George has left. He goes out after him.

GOLDIE
(to himself)
"Mayor Goldie Wilson." I like the sound of that.

48 EXT. — HILL VALLEY TOWN SQUARE 48

Marty looks around and sees GEORGE bicycling down the street.

MARTY
George! Hey, George! I want to talk to you!

But George doesn't hear him. He disappears around a corner.

Marty runs after him.

49 EXT. — A RESIDENTIAL STREET — DAY 49

The homes evoke pleasant nostalgia: front porches and white picket fences.

MARTY comes from around the corner and sees GEORGE'S BIKE parked underneath a tree. Marty looks around, then spots

GEORGE up in the tree, precariously out on a branch overhanging the street, about 12 feet up. George has a PAIR OF BINOCULARS trained on a second story window in the house across the street.

MARTY can't figure it out. He moves closer for a better view.

GEORGE focuses the binoculars.

MARTY

It was terrible. It was a terrible place to be. The music was awful — they didn't have rock. The cars were ugly. My neighborhood hadn't been built yet, and everything was so weird looking.

*
*
*

WOMAN

Well, you're safe and sound, back where you belong, in good old 1955.

MARTY

1955!

She turns on the bedside lamp. It's the same girl George was spying on, and Marty recognizes her just as we do...

MARTY

Oh my God. You're — you're my— my—

LORRAINE

My name's Lorraine. Lorraine Baines.

Marty stares at her for a long moment.

MARTY

But — but you're so thin!

LORRAINE

Just relax, Calvin. You got quite a bruise on your head.

MARTY

(looks under the blankets)

Uh... where are my pants?

LORRAINE

(points)

Over there on the chair.

(notices the color of his underwear)

I've never seen red underwear before, Calvin.

*

Marty covers himself up.

*

MARTY

Calvin? Why are you calling me Calvin?

LORRAINE

Well, isn't that your name — Calvin Klein? It's written in your underwear.

(suddenly realizing)

Oh — I guess people call you Cal.

MARTY

No, well, actually people call me Marty.

LORRAINE

Well, I'm pleased to meet you, Marty.

She comes over and sits on the bed right next to him. She's very interested in him.

LORRAINE

Mind if I sit here?

MARTY
(gulps, nervous)

Uh... no...

Marty moves as far away as he can without falling off the bed. He holds the blanket tight around his waist. She looks at him, fascinated.

LORRAINE

That is quite a bruise there...

She gently strokes his bruised forehead... and then runs her hand through his hair. Marty moves even further — and falls off the bed! He covers himself with the blankets.

STELLA (O.S.)

Lorraine? Are you up there?

We hear FOOTSTEPS coming up the stairs.

LORRAINE
(to Marty)

It's my mother! Quick, put your pants back on!

She throws him his pants.

MILTON, 12, wears a DAVY CROCKETT COONSKIN CAP; SALLY is 6, TOBY is 4.

STELLA
(continuing)

...and next to you there in the playpen is little Joey.

Marty turns and looks with amazement at 11-month old JOEY rattling the bars of his playpen.

MARTY
(whispers to him)

So you're my Uncle Joey. Get used to those bars, kid.

STELLA

Oh, yes, little Joey loves being in his pen. He actually cries when we take him out, so we leave him in there all the time — it seems to make him happy. Have some meat loaf, Marty.

She hands him a plate of MEAT LOAF. It looks like the same meat loaf he had for dinner in 1985... in fact, the whole dinner is the same!

STELLA

(calls into the other room)

Sam, would you quit fiddling with that thing and come in here and eat?

(to Milton)

Milton, don't eat so fast!

(to Lorraine)

Lorraine, you're not eating enough. Have some mashed potatoes.

LORRAINE

No thanks, Mom.

Now gruff SAM BAINES, 45, rolls in a brand new television, on a plywood dolly of his own construction.

SAM

Look at this: it rolls. Now we can watch Jackie Gleason while we eat.

MILTON

Oh boy!

Sam fiddles with the rabbit ears and brings in a rather muddy image of a cigarette commercial.

56 ON TV

She gives him a flirtatious smile.

STELLA

Marty, Lorraine is right. You must spend the night. You're our responsibility.

MARTY

Uh, gee, I don't know...

LORRAINE

And he can sleep in my room.

UNDER THE TABLE, Lorraine puts her hand on Marty's leg. Marty immediately jumps to his feet.

MARTY

Uh, actually, I've really gotta be going...

(he's backing out, toward the front door)

So, thank you for everything, and I'll see you all later. Much later.

*

He turns and hurries out of the house.

Lorraine sighs romantically.

The house at 1640 Riverside Drive is spectacular, the home of a very wealthy man.

Marty ogles it as he walks up to the front door. He checks the address against the page he ripped out of the phone book: it checks.

All the lights are on — a PARTY is going on inside. Marty rings the doorbell.

It's answered by DR. BROWN, aged 35. Brown is dressed in evening clothes, and is flanked by TWO LOVELY GIRLS.

*

BROWN

MARTY

Uhhh, Dr. Brown — yeah, you ARE Dr. Brown... Boy, am I glad to see you.

(he takes a deep breath)

I'm from the future.

BROWN

(smiles)

Great sales pitch, kid — terrific. So what are you selling? Floor wax?

MARTY

No, I'm serious! You've gotta believe me! You're the only one who can get me back home!

BROWN

Get you back home? Kid, I think you got me confused with the Wizard of Oz.

MARTY

Look, I can prove I'm from 1985!

Marty pulls out his wallet and starts showing the contents to Brown.

MARTY

See this? My driver's license — expires 1987. Look at my birthdate — I haven't even been born yet.

(pulls out a 20 dollar bill)

Look at this money: "Series 1981."

(pulls out a color snapshot)

Here's a picture of me, my sister, and my brother. Look at her sweatshirt: it says "Class of '84."

Brown gives it all a cursory look, particularly the snapshot.

BROWN

Oh, I get it — you're selling trick film. This is great — it really looks like the guy's got no head. Very clever.

MARTY

Huh?

Brown hands it back to Marty. Marty looks at it.

Doctor Brown, this is no trick. I really am from the future.

Brown rolls his eyes.

BROWN

Well then, tell me something, young man from the future: who's the president of the United States in 1985?

MARTY

Ronald Reagan.

Brown and the girls burst out laughing.

BROWN

That's a good one! The kid's a riot! A regular riot!
(pulls out his wallet)

Here's 5 bucks, kid! Thanks for the laughs!

He hands Marty a five, then closes the door.

Marty sighs, then walks around the side of the house and looks in the window.

She walks off in a huff.

Brown rubs his head... then his eyes open wide in the same crazed expression we've seen in 1985.

BROWN

Of course. Of course! It's so obvious!

(jumps to his feet, shouts)

All right, the party's over! Everybody go home! I have work to do!

The guests exchange looks.

*

BROWN is hunched over his workbench, furiously scribbling down notes and plans. He's disheveled — he's been here for a while.

Brown's DOG is sitting near its "bed." The name on the dog dish is "COPERNICUS." Copernicus suddenly reacts to something...

MARTY appears at a partially open WINDOW. He opens it the rest of the way and climbs in.

MARTY
Doc, listen, you gotta hear me out—

BROWN
Get lost kid! I'm working!

*

MARTY
I know! And I know what you're doing — you're inventing time travel. It came to you in a vision when you got hit over the head with that beer bottle. And that thing you're drawing is the T.F.C. — the Temporal Field Capacitor!

Brown is totally astonished.

BROWN
My God. How did you know that?

MARTY
I told you — I'm from the future.

With that, he walks over to the garage door and raises the overhead door, revealing THE DELOREAN sitting there in the driveway.

Brown's mouth falls open as he stares at it — and the mechanism visible through the open gull wing door. He grabs the DRAWING he's been working on and runs over to the DeLorean to compare it.

It's a DRAWING OF THE T.F.C.! It matches the real thing perfectly.

The DeLorean is now in the garage; the garage door is closed. The 1985 suitcase is open, and we can see its contents — clothes, toilet articles, and a CONAIR (battery) HAIR DRYER.

MARTY is busily attaching the video camera into a 1953 model TV.

MARTY

Okay, Doc. Take a look at this...

*

Brown comes over and Marty rolls the tape he shot in the mall parking lot where Brown is explaining the operation of the time machine.

Brown is amazed to see himself as a man of 65.

BROWN

Why — that's me! I'm an old man! Incredible! Thank God I've still got my hair... baldness runs in my family, you know. But what on earth am I wearing?

MARTY

A radiation suit!

BROWN

Of course, because of all the fallout from the Atomic wars. And what's that thing around my neck?

MARTY

Indian jewelry.

BROWN

I'm not even gonna ask.

Plutonium? You mean this sucker's nuclear?

OLD BROWN

(on TV)

Electrical. But I need a nuclear reaction to generate the 1.21 jigowatts of electricity I need...

67 YOUNG BROWN is taken aback.

67

BROWN

1.21 JIGOWATTS? Kid, you're outta gas, going no place fast.

MARTY

Huh?

BROWN

Look, I'm sure that in 1985, plutonium is available in any corner drug store. But in 1955, it's a little hard to come by. And unless you figure on driving out into a nuclear test site while an A-bomb's going off, I'm afraid you're stuck here.

MARTY

But isn't there some other way to generate that kind of power?

BROWN

1.21 gigowatts? Oh, sure. We can tie into Hoover Dam with a very long cable. Or we build a turbine on the back of this thing and you can drive it over Niagara Falls. Or you can drive across the country at 88 miles an hour and hope that you get struck by a bolt of lightning.

MARTY

Lightning! Hold the phone, Doc — check this out!

Marty pulls out the "Save the Clock Tower" flyer from his pocket (with it is the mysterious "headless snapshot" we saw earlier). Marty shows the flyer to Brown.

68 INSERT — FLYER

68

It includes a photocopy of a NEWSPAPER ARTICLE, dated March 27, 1955, with a picture of the clock tower stopped at 10:02." The headline: "CLOCK TOWER STRUCK BY LIGHTNING. CLOCK STOPPED AT 10:02."

69 BACK TO SHOT

69

Brown reads it, nodding. He's getting an idea.

BROWN

Kid, if this is true, we just might be able to get your ass back to the future! It's totally insane, but it's certainly no crazier than building a nuclear reactor onto the back of a car... According to this, we know the exact moment lightning will strike a specific spot — at 10:02 p.m. and 11 seconds on next Saturday. All I have to do is rig up a conducting system that'll channel the lightning directly into the T.F.C. As long as you're doing 88 miles an hour when it happens... See you later, alligator.

But Marty isn't paying attention. He's looking at the snapshot again, and he's quite concerned.

BROWN

What's wrong, kid?

MARTY

I don't know, but something weird is going on with this picture. My brother — he's fading out...

BROWN

Lemme see that...

Brown studies it. He too reacts with concern.

70 INSERT — SNAPSHOT

70

Indeed, more of Dave has faded away — his neck is gone, along with part of his shoulders.

71 BACK TO SHOT

71

MARTY

It looks like he's being erased or something...

BROWN

Erased from existence...

(to Marty, urgently)

Kid — we've gotta get you some new clothes!

CUT TO:

72 EXT. HILL VALLEY HIGH SCHOOL — DAY

72

Hill Valley High looks pretty much the same in 1955, but with a little less graffiti. There is not much activity in front — school is in session.

BROWN'S PACKARD pulls up and DR. BROWN and MARTY get out.

Marty is now dressed in total 1955 period garb. He and Brown ascend the school steps. Marty seems unsure, confused.

MARTY

Are you sure about this?

BROWN

Figure it out, kid. Your old man was supposed to get hit by your Grandpa's car, not you — therefore, you interfered in your parents' first meeting. If they don't meet, they don't fall in love; if they don't fall in love, they don't get married; if they don't get married they don't have kids. That's why your older brother's fading out — he's being erased from existence. He's first, since he's the oldest. Your sister'll be next... and then you... unless you repair the damage by getting your folks back together. Once you introduce 'em to each other, nature will take its course.

(a beat)

I hope.

Marty pauses to check his reflection in the windowed door. He combs back his slicked down hair in a ducktail, only to get a handful of "greasy kid stuff."

MARTY

I can't believe you actually put this crap in your hair.

BROWN

Come on kid, let's get this over with.

Brown pulls him inside.

73 P.O.V. THRU A CLASSROOM DOOR

73 on the STUDENTS OF AN ORDINARY 1955 History class, taking a test. LORRAINE can be clearly seen.

74 MARTY AND DR. BROWN are watching from the HALL.

74

MARTY

(points her out to Brown)

That's her — in the 2nd row... Jesus! She's cheating!

LORRAINE, copying an answer from the boy sitting next to her.

ANOTHER CLASSROOM DOOR opens and students head out for the next class. GEORGE McFLY is one of them. His shirt tail is out, his hair is poorly combed, and papers are practically falling out of his 3-ring binder.

MARTY AND DR. BROWN watch from down the hall.

BROWN

So which one's your father?

MARTY
(points)

That's him...

As GEORGE walks down the hall, students laugh at him behind his back, and some of the boys kick him in the ass.

George turns. He has a "KICK ME" sign hooked on his collar. DR. BROWN shakes his head at this pathetic sight.

BROWN
(to Marty)

Are you sure you're not adopted?

Now a hand yanks George by the arm: MR. STRICKLAND — and he looks exactly the same! Marty is amazed.

STRICKLAND

McFly! Shape up, man!

He pulls the sign off George's shirt and shows it to him.

STRICKLAND

You're a slacker! Do you want to be a slacker for the rest of your life?

George shakes his head unconvincingly.

Marty and Brown look down the hall in the opposite direction where LORRAINE is at her locker, giggling with a girl friend.

ON MARTY AND BROWN

BROWN

Looks like a match made in heaven.

MARTY

My mom always said it was meant to be. I sure hope she's right...

Marty takes a deep breath and starts walking toward George.

MARTY

George! Hey, buddy, you're just the guy I wanted to see! You remember me — from Saturday? I saved your life, remember?

GEORGE

Oh...yeah...

MARTY

Listen, there's somebody I want you to meet. C'mere...

He pulls him down the hall to Lorraine, who has her back to them.

MARTY

Excuse me, Lorraine...

Lorraine turns.

LORRAINE

Calvin! I mean, Marty!

She's so delighted to see Marty, she drops her books.

MARTY

Oh, let me get those...

He picks up her books and gives them back to her. She's totally infatuated.

LORRAINE

Thank you.

MARTY

Lorraine, I want to introduce you to someone. This is my good friend, George McFly. George, this is Lorraine.

GEORGE

Hi. It's really a pleasure to meet you.

Lorraine doesn't pay George the slightest bit of attention. She only has eyes for Marty.

LORRAINE

Oh, Marty, I was so worried about you running off like that the other night with that bruise on your head. Is it all right?

MARTY

Um, yeah....

The BELL RINGS.

LORRAINE

I'm late. See you later.

She hurries off down the hall, joining a girl friend. They pass by Dr. Brown.

LORRAINE
(to her friend)

Isn't he a dreamboat?

George has run off in the opposite direction. Marty stands in the middle of the hall, completely bewildered.

Brown joins him.

MARTY

She didn't even look at him!

BROWN

Obviously, you being in the picture is a real distraction for her. You've got to get him to ask her out on a date — so they can be alone together.

MARTY

A date? What kinda date? I don't know what kids do in the 50's.

BROWN

What do they do in the 80's?

MARTY

Sex and drugs and rock 'n roll.

BROWN

No comment, kid.

Brown notices a hand-painted banner in the hall announcing the "Enchantment Under The Sea Dance" this Saturday night.

BROWN

Look — there's a dance coming up. Get him to take her to that.

Marty sees the sign and has a revelation.

MARTY

That's right! "Enchantment Under The Sea!" They're SUPPOSED to go to that dance — that's where they kiss for the first time!

BROWN

Well then, kid, you gotta make sure they go to that dance. Together.

GEORGE is seated at a table, having lunch and writing furiously. He has a copy of AMAZING STORIES SCIENCE FICTION MAGAZINE with his books.

*
*

MARTY comes over and sits down next to him.

*

MARTY	*
Hi, George. What are you writing?	*
GEORGE	*
Stories.	*
MARTY	*
Yeah? What kind of stories?	*
GEORGE	*
Science fiction stories... about space travel... and visitors from other planets coming to earth.	*
MARTY	*
I never knew you did anything creative. How about letting me read one of 'em?	*
GEORGE	*
Oh, no. I never let anybody read my stories.	*
MARTY	*
How come?	*
GEORGE	*
What if they didn't like 'em? What if they told me I was not good? I couldn't take that kind of rejection.	*
Marty's having a bad case of deja vu.	*
GEORGE	*
(continuing)	*
My father's always telling me that if I never let anyone read my work, I'll have no future as a writer. I know he's right... but I guess that's just the way I am.	*
(a beat)	*
This must be pretty hard for you to understand, huh?	*
MARTY	*
No, George, it's not that hard at all.	*
There is a long moment as Marty looks at George in a new light... and sees himself.	*
MARTY	*
Listen, George, you know that girl I introduced you to? Lorraine? She really likes you. And I think you should ask her to the "Enchantment Under The Sea" dance. I think you'd have a great time with her.	*
GEORGE	*
Well, I really couldn't ask her.	*
MARTY	*
Why not?	*
GEORGE	*
What if she says "no?" I'd hate to be rejected.	*

Marty is starting to get exasperated.

MARTY

George, I'm telling you, if you don't ask Lorraine to that dance, you're gonna regret it for the rest of your life... and I'm gonna regret it for the rest of mine.

GEORGE

Well, it's not like I don't want to... It's just that I kinda think she'd rather go out with somebody else.

MARTY

Who?

GEORGE
(points)

Biff.

Marty looks and reacts with horror

AT ANOTHER TABLE

BIFF is trying to put his hands on LORRAINE. She's trying to push him away.

LORRAINE

Quit pawing me, Biff! Leave me alone.

BIFF

Come on, Lorraine, You want it, you know you want it, and you know you want me to give it to you.

LORRAINE

Shut your filthy mouth! I'm not that kinda girl!

BIFF

Maybe you are and you just don't know it yet.

LORRAINE

Get your hands off me!

But Biff persists.

MARTY (O.S.)

She said to get your hands off her.

Biff turns to find himself facing Marty.

BIFF

What's it to you, dipshit? You know, you've been looking for—

MR. STRICKLAND approaches behind Marty. Biff sees him and plays it cool.

BIFF

Since you're new here, I'll give you a break. Today. But if you don't shape up, I'm shippin' you out.

Biff walks off.

Lorraine looks at Marty and sighs with infatuation.

LORRAINE
Oh, Marty, that was wonderful! Thank you.

MARTY
Oh, yeah. You're welcome.

82 INT. BROWN'S GARAGE — DAY

82

Brown is fiddling with the video camera, playing the end section of the mail tape over his TV set. Brown seems particularly curious about what happens at the end, why it cuts off so abruptly.

*
*
*

MARTY enters as the tape reaches the end...

83 ON TV

83

OLD BROWN reacts to the dog barking.

OLD BROWN
(on TV)
What is it, Einie?
(reacting with horror)
Oh, no, they found me! I don't know how—

The tape ends abruptly.

84 MARTY reacts with pain, remembering what followed.

84

MARTY

Say, Doc—

Brown turns, surprised that Marty has been watching.

*

BROWN

Oh, hi, kid.

(indicates video camera)

Fascinating device, this camera. I can't believe it's made in Japan.

MARTY

Doc, there's something I haven't told you about what happens... (gulps)
...on the night we make that tape...

BROWN

Hold it right there, kid. Don't tell me anything, I don't want to take any more chances of screwing up the space-time Continuum. No man should know too much about his own destiny. If I know too much about the future, I could endanger my own existence. Besides, I've always hated fortune tellers.

(a beat)

And speaking of endangered species, how did it go today with your pop?

MARTY

Terrible. He just doesn't want to go out with my mom. I tried everything. I reasoned with him, begged him, pleaded with him, yelled at him... I even tried bribing him. The only thing I haven't tried is scaring him—

Marty stops short. He's getting an idea...

CUT TO:

85 EXT. GEORGE'S HOUSE — NIGHT

85

All is quiet; the house is dark.

86 INT. GEORGE'S BEDROOM

86

Close ON A CLOCK on the nightstand. It's almost 1:30. We PAN OVER to GEORGE'S FACE. He's sleeping soundly, in bed.

Now a PAIR OF GLOVED HANDS place FEATHERWEIGHT HEADPHONES on George's ears. George doesn't stir.

THE HANDS now insert a cassette tape labeled "VAN HALEN" into a Walkman. A finger dials the volume level to "10," then presses "PLAY."

GEORGE AWAKENS SCREAMING! He opens his eyes and reacts in further terror: He sees A FRIGHTENING YELLOW MONSTER... Marty, in full radiation suit... at the foot of his bed!

WIDER

Marty turns off the music. When he talks, his voice is distorted through the mouth filter in the hood. An open window indicates how Marty got in.

MARTY

Silence, Earthling!

GEORGE

Who — who are you?

MARTY

(imitating Darth Vader)

My name is Darth Vader. I am an extra-terrestrial from the planet Vulcan.

GEORGE

I must be dreaming...

MARTY

This is no dream! You are having a Close Encounter of the Third Kind! You have reached the Outer Limits of the Twilight Zone!

GEORGE

Mom! Dad!

George throws off the covers, but Marty pulls the portable hair dryer (from Brown's suitcase) out of his belt like a gun. He fires a blast of heat at George.

MARTY

Silence! My heat ray will vaporize you if you do not obey me!

George raises his hands in surrender.

GEORGE

All right! I surrender! Turn it off!

Marty lowers it. Now his digital watch alarm begins BEEPING. Marty raises his wrist as if it were a radio.

MARTY

Silence! I am receiving a transmission from the Battlestar Galactica!

(after several more beeps)

You, George McFly, have created a rift in the space-time continuum. The Supreme Klingon hereby commands you to take the female earth-person called "Baines Lorraine" to the location known to you as Hill Valley High School exactly 4 earth cycles from now — Saturday night in your language.

GEORGE

You mean, take Lorraine to the dance?

MARTY

Affirmative.

GEORGE

But I don't know if I'll be able—

Marty turns on the Walkman again. George SCREAMS!

GEORGE

Turn it off! Please, turn it off!

Marty turns it off.

MARTY

Insolent Earthling! Do you wish me to melt your brain?

GEORGE

No! Please! I'm sorry, I'll do it! I'll take her to the dance — but please don't turn that noise on again.

MARTY

Very good, Earthling. You will tell no one of this visit. Now, close your eyes, and see me no more....

GEORGE

Okay, Okay.

George closes his eyes.

Marty holds a vial under George's nose and George passes out. Marty removes the featherweight headphones from George's head, takes off his hood, and goes back out the window.

87 EXT. GEORGE'S HOUSE — NIGHT

87

Marty climbs down a trellis and jumps down into Dr. Brown's waiting Packard convertible.

BROWN

How'd it go?

MARTY

Great! That chloroform sure put him out — I hope I didn't overdo it.

CUT TO:

88 EXT. TOWN SQUARE — DAY

88

MARTY is loitering in the grassy town square. Now GEORGE comes running up from the street. He's disheveled and wild-eyed.

MARTY
(spots him)

George! You weren't at school. Where've you been all day?

GEORGE

I just woke up — I overslept. Look, you've gotta help me! I want to ask Lorraine out, but I don't know how to do it.

MARTY

All right, keep your pants on. She's over there in the café, having a soda. Come on...

They head across the street toward the CAFÉ — it's the local teen after school hangout.

TWO KIDS on homemade scooters (roller skates nailed to a 2 x 4 with an orange crate on top) cruise down the sidewalk past them.

Marty points through the café window.

MARTY

Look, there she is.

89 THEIR P.O.V. THRU THE WINDOW OF

89

LORRAINE, seated with 2 GIRLFRIENDS (BETTY and BABS) in a booth, sipping ice cream sodas and talking.

90 BACK TO SHOT

90

MARTY

It's simple, George. You just go in there and invite her.

GEORGE

All right. but what do I say?

MARTY

Say whatever feels natural — whatever comes to your mind.

George thinks about this a moment, then shrugs.

GEORGE

Nothing's coming to my mind.

MARTY

Christ, it's a miracle I was even born.

GEORGE

Huh?

MARTY

Nothing. Just tell her destiny has brought you to her and you think she's the most beautiful girl you've ever seen. Girls like to hear that — what are you doing, George?

George has taken out pencil and paper and is writing.

GEORGE

I'm writing it down. This is good stuff.

91 INT. CAFÉ — DAY

91

The place is really jumping — it's full of kids. A JUKEBOX is playing.

Marty enters with George.

MARTY

There she is. Just go and ask her.

Marty points George in the right direction, and takes a stool at the counter, out of Lorraine's immediate view.

George looks at his "script" and mouths the words to himself. He gets up his nerve and approaches Lorraine. Despite his awkwardness and fear, there's something endearing about him, like a lost dog.

*
*
*

GEORGE

Uh, Lorraine...

(reads)

"My density has brought me to you."

LORRAINE

I beg your pardon?

GEORGE

Oh — what I mean to say is...

LORRAINE

(looks at him curiously)

Haven't I seen you somewhere?

GEORGE

(big smile)

Yes! I'm George. George McFly. I'm your density — I mean, destiny.

Lorraine giggles with her girl friends.

We hear the sound of the door being thrown open and a familiar VOICE calls to George.

BIFF (O.S.)

McFly, I thought I told you never to come in here!

George turns and sees Biff and his gang standing there. He shudders.

Marty drops his head in his hands and sighs.

BIFF

Well, it's gonna cost you, McFly. How much money you got on you?

GEORGE

(quickly pulls out his wallet)

How much do you want, Biff?

As Biff starts to walk toward George, Marty sticks out his leg and TRIPS HIM! Everyone in the malt shop laughs, but Biff doesn't think it's very funny. Now Biff sees who tripped him.

BIFF

You!

(getting up)

All right, wise ass, it's fat lip time...

Marty jumps off his stool, ready for action. Biff throws a punch which Marty easily avoids; then Marty delivers a left jab to Biff's gut, and slams a right into his face, sending Biff reeling backward into a table.

*

Match, 3-D and Skinhead rush Marty.

Marty doesn't like the odds. He bolts out.

The 3 guys pull Biff to his feet and they all run out after Marty.

LORRAINE
(to her girlfriends)

That's Calvin Klein! Oh, God, he's a dream!

92 EXT. CAFÉ AND STREET

92

Marty dashes down the street, followed by Biff and the boys. Most of the kids in the café hurry outside to watch, including LORRAINE and her friends.

Marty looks behind him — Biff and company are gaining. Then one of the kids on the scooters comes by. Thinking quickly, Marty yanks the scooter out from under him, kicks off the orange crate and creates a homemade SKATEBOARD! Marty hops on it and sails off down the sidewalk!

Biff and the boys have never seen anything like it — nor has the kid whose scooter it was! Everyone stares as Marty whizzes down the sidewalk.

KID

Wow! Look at him go!

ANOTHER KID

What is that thing?

BIFF
(to his boys)

In the car!

Biff and the gang jump into Biff's convertible parked nearby. Biff peels out after Marty.

93 FURTHER DOWN THE STREET

93

Marty looks over his shoulder and sees the convertible closing in. He cuts a sharp turn into the street, crossing right in front of Biff's car, and heads back in the opposite direction.

93-A INT. BIFF'S MOVING CONVERTIBLE

93-A

Biff and the boys are stunned!

*

94 EXT. STREET

94

Another car comes up from behind Marty. As it passes, Marty grabs onto the back and hooks a ride!

Biff cuts a U-Turn and continues the pursuit.

95 EXT. CAFÉ

95

Marty, towed by the car, zooms past the café. The spectators are truly amazed. Lorraine stares in open-mouthed awe.

LORRAINE

He's an absolute dream...!

Now Biff's convertible comes racing after Marty.

95-A MARTY 95-A
again looks over his shoulder and sees that Biff is closing in, fast. Things don't look good.

Up ahead is an intersecting street: Hill Street. Marty lets go of the car and cuts a sharp left onto Hill Street.

BIFF
95-B is coming too fast to make the turn. He overshoots the intersection and has to make 95-B another U.

His boys are watching Marty with amazement. *

MATCH *

What is that thing he's on? *

SKINHEAD *

It's a board with a roller skate nailed under it. *

3 -D *

Hey — we could build those things and sell 'em — we could call 'em "Roller Boards!" *

96 EXT. HILL STREET 96

It's an incredibly steep hill, and at the bottom is a railroad crossing. Marty accelerates and he coasts down. Now Biff's convertible shoots onto Hill Street, actually lifting off the ground as it comes over the hill!

Biff drives like hell after Marty and he's closing fast. Then Marty drops into a crouch, cuts his wind resistance and speeds away!

97 AT THE RAILROAD CROSSING, 97

the warning bells start ringing and the gate begins to lower.

Marty reacts with fear.

A Diesel Freight is approaching.

The gate drops all the way down.

Biff speeds up to stay on Marty's tail.

98 Marty has no choice — he vaults over the crossing gate and lands back on his 98
"skateboard," crossing the tracks just inches in front of the barreling Diesel!

99 Biff slams on his brakes. His wheels lock up and rubber SCREECHES across the 99 pavement... but nevertheless, he CRASHES through the crossing gate, coming to a stop right at the edge of the tracks... and the Diesel engine runs over his front bumper!

99-A MARTY 99-A
continues on with a euphoric yell as the train roars on behind him, completely cutting off Biff's pursuit.

99-B ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE TRACKS, 99-B
BIFF is pissed.

BIFF
I'm gonna get that son of a bitch.

CUT TO:

100 EXT. TOWN SQUARE — LATER 100

Time has passed; things are quiet at the café.

Marty comes gliding down the street on his "skateboard," looking around for somebody. He hops off and sticks his head in the café.

MARTY
George?

VOICE (O.S.)
Hi, Calvin — I mean, Marty.

Marty turns: LORRAINE is standing on the sidewalk behind him.

MARTY
Oh, hi.

LORRAINE
You know, you're the first person who's ever given Biff a taste of his own medicine.

Marty shrugs it off as no big deal.

She moves toward him. He backs away.

LORRAINE
Marty, this may seem a little forward, but I was hoping you might take me to the "Enchantment Under the Sea" Dance on Saturday.

MARTY
Uh, well, funny you should bring that up, because you know who really wants to take you, and I really think you'd hit it off with him, is George McFly.

LORRAINE
Yeah, he asked me, but I turned him down.

MARTY
You did WHAT?

LORRAINE
George just isn't my type. He's sort of cute and all, but he's such a... well, you know, a chicken.

(moving closer to him)

I think a man should be strong...so he can protect the woman he loves.
Don't you?

She moves closer. Marty gulps. This is REALLY getting out of hand!

LORRAINE

So what do you say about Saturday?

MARTY

Uh...well...yeah, sure. Okay. It'll be...great. You and me... on a...
(coughs, nearly chokes)
...date.

CUT TO:

101 INT. BROWN'S GARAGE — NIGHT

101

Brown is shocked to hear what Marty has just told him.

BROWN

What do you mean you said "yes"?

MARTY

I had to. At least that way I'll know she'll be there. Now all I've gotta do is figure out some way to make her end up with George.

BROWN

You're not gonna have much time, kid. You've gotta make everything happen by 9:30 — 9:45 at the latest — because you've gotta beat it back to the courthouse square in time for the fireworks.

Come here, I'll show you the set-up.

Brown takes him over to a CRUDE PLYWOOD TABLETOP MODEL of Hill Valley town square which he's constructed himself.

A "lightning rod" (a nail) has been attached to the top of the "clock tower" (a piece of wood with a watch strapped around it). A wire runs down from the "lightning rod," across "town square" and between two "lamp posts" (candles in candlesticks) across the "street."

Brown explains the layout to Marty.

BROWN

We put a lightning rod on the clock tower and we run some industrial strength electrical cable from the lightning rod, across the street.
Meanwhile, we've outfitted your car with a big hook directly connected into the T.F.C....

*
*

Brown brings out a wind-up toy car with a wire sticking straight up from the back. There's a hook on the top of it. (There is a similar rig on the real DeLorean, visible in the background.) Brown winds up the toy car.

BROWN

(continuing)

On a signal, you'll take off down the street toward the cable, accelerating to 88...

*

Brown releases the toy car from one end of the model, toward the strung wire...

He picks up a STRIPPED WIRE, plugged into the AC outlet and brings it toward the "lightning rod."

BROWN

(continuing)

Lightning strikes, electrifying the cable, just in time to...

He touches the live wire to the nail. The toy car's antenna snags the cable. SPARKS FLY, and the toy car catches FIRE! It flies off the table top, into some drapes, and they catch fire as well!

Brown grabs a FIRE EXTINGUISHER and puts everything out. Marty shakes his head.

MARTY

You're instilling me with a lot of confidence here, Doc.

BROWN

Don't worry. I'll take care of the lightning. You just take care of your old man.

Marty has another look at the fateful snapshot.

102 INSERT — SNAPSHOT

102

Dave is entirely gone, and now Linda's head is beginning to go.

103 MARTY

103

MARTY

Yeah...

CUT TO:

104 EXT. GEORGE'S BACKYARD — DAY

104

GEORGE seems very bewildered about what MARTY has been trying to explain to him.

GEORGE

I still don't understand. How can I go to the dance with her if she's going with YOU?

MARTY

She wants to go with YOU George — she just doesn't know it yet. That's why we've gotta convince her that you're not a chicken — so she'll realize that.

Now come on, hit me in the stomach. Right here, go ahead.

Marty makes himself a target, but George seems quite unwilling. In the background, a homemade body bag (a duffel bag filled with clothes) is hanging from a clothesline pole.

GEORGE

I don't want to hit you in the stomach.

MARTY

You're not gonna hurt me. Just give me a punch.

GEORGE

Look, I'm not a fighter.

MARTY

How many times do I have to explain it to you? We know you're not a fighter. You know it, I know it...but she doesn't know it. That's why we've gotta make you look like a fighter, somebody who'll stand up for her, somebody who'll protect her. And you're not gonna look like a fighter if you can't hit me in the stomach.

GEORGE

But I've never picked a fight in my life!

MARTY

You're not picking a fight, you're coming to her rescue. Maybe we'd better go over the plan again.

Where are you gonna be at 8:55?

GEORGE

At the dance.

MARTY

And where am I gonna be?

GEORGE

In the parking lot, with her.

MARTY

Okay. So right around 9:00, she's gonna get very angry with me—

GEORGE

Why?

MARTY

Why what?

GEORGE

Why is she gonna get angry with you?

MARTY

(it's hard for him to say)

Well...because...well, nice girls get angry at guys who... who try to take advantage of 'em.

GEORGE

You mean you're gonna—

MARTY

George, don't worry about it. Just remember that at 9 o'clock, you'll be strolling through the parking lot and you'll see us...

(gulps)

...struggling in the car, you'll run over, open the door, and say...?

George doesn't say anything.

MARTY

Your line, George.

GEORGE

Oh. Uh... "Hey, you! Get your damn hands off her." You really think I should swear?

MARTY

Yes, definitely, George, swear. Then you hit me in the stomach, I go down for the count, and you and Lorraine live happily ever after.

GEORGE

You make it sound so easy. I wish I wasn't so scared.

MARTY

There's nothing to be scared of. Now come on and hit me in the stomach.

George takes a deep breath and throws a flimsy punch into Marty's gut.

MARTY

No, George, put a little emotion into it. A little hostility, a little anger.

George tries to get himself angry. He makes some faces and throws another punch. It's not much better.

MARTY

Anger, George, anger.

GEORGE

Maybe if I used my left...

MARTY

No, George. Just concentrate on the anger. Anger.

George throws another punch. This one is slightly better than the last one.

MARTY

(sighs)

Well... I think you're starting to get the hang of it. Just keep practicing. I'll see you later. Remember, anger, George. Anger.

Marty walks off, leaving George with the body bag. He stares at it, trying to make himself mad.

GEORGE

...anger...

He hits it. He hits it again, harder... again... harder... again — he hits the tree! George howls in pain!

GEORGE

Yeeeowww!! Goddammit!!

He's really angry now, and he socks the bag with his left — and KNOCKS IT CLEAR OFF THE TREE!

105 George is astonished!

EXT. TOWN SQUARE CLOCK TOWER — NIGHT

It's a few minutes before 8 o'clock.

We hear a RADIO WEATHER FORECAST as the CAMERA takes us from the lightning rod atop the clock tower, along the cable strung down across the square, to the STREET where Brown's Packard is parked nearby — the weather report emanates from the car radio.

BROWN is on a ladder; he's connecting the paddle plug end of the clock tower cable to the socket on an extension cable tied around a lamp post.

The DeLorean is nearby covered with a tarp. MARTY arrives, dressed up for the dance.

FORECASTER

(V.O. radio)

Area weather on this Saturday night: An electrical storm in the vicinity will bypass Hill Valley, but we can expect continued cloudiness and some light rain...

Brown reacts to the weather report.

BROWN

Kid, are you sure about this storm?

MARTY

Doc, since when can a weatherman predict the weather — let alone the future?

Brown smiles. He plugs in the cables, then descends the ladder.

BROWN

Right.

(a beat)

You know, kid, I... well, I'm gonna be sad to see you go. You've really made a difference in my life — you've given me something to shoot for. Just knowing that I'm gonna live to see 1985... that I'll succeed in this... that I'll get a chance to travel through time... well, it's just gonna be hard for me to wait 30 years before we can talk about everything that's happened in the past few days. I'm gonna really miss you.

Marty is particularly uncomfortable, knowing the fate of Dr. Brown.

MARTY

Yeah... uh, Doc, about the future...

BROWN

No, kid. We've already agreed that having knowledge of the future can be extremely dangerous. Even if your intentions are good, it could backfire drastically. Whatever it is you want to tell me, I'll find out through the natural course of time.

This is not what Marty wanted to hear, but he can see there's no arguing with Brown.

MARTY

(sighs)

Yeah... Listen, I'm gonna get a candy bar or something. You want anything?

BROWN

No thanks.

CUT TO:

106 INT. CAFÉ — INSERT — ON A LETTER

106 as a HAND with a pen writes.

107 INT. CAFÉ — WIDE ANGLE — NIGHT

107

MARTY is sitting at a booth writing. He reads it over.

MARTY

"Dr. Brown, on October 5, 1985, at about 1:30 a.m., you will be shot by terrorists. Please take whatever precautions are necessary to prevent this terrible disaster. Your friend, Marty. March 26, 1955."

Satisfied, Marty folds the letter, puts it in an envelope, and writes something on it.

108 INSERT — ENVELOPE

108

"Dr. Brown: do not open until October 1, 1985."

CUT TO:

109 EXT. ON STREET — NIGHT

109

Brown is on the ladder stringing electrical cable across the street, between the two lamp posts. MARTY returns with a candy bar. Brown's trenchcoat is laying on the tarped DeLorean. Making sure that Brown isn't watching, Marty surreptitiously places the ENVELOPE into a pocket.

Now a COP meanders over and watches.

COP

Evening, Dr. Brown. What's with the wire?

BROWN
Oh, I'm just doing a little weather experiment.

COP
(notices the tarped DeLorean)
And what's under here?

BROWN
Some new specialized weather sensing equipment.
Brown comes down from the ladder.

COP
You got a permit for this?

BROWN
(smiles)
Of course I do... right here.

He takes out his wallet and gives the cop a 50 dollar bill.

COP
(hesitant)
You're... not going to set anything on fire this time, are you, Dr. Brown?

Brown looks to Marty for guidance. Marty shakes his head.

BROWN
(to cop)
Naw.

COP
In that case, good luck.

He continues down the street.

BROWN
Thank you, officer.
(to Marty)
Say, kid, you'd better pick up your mom and get going.

Marty is about to get into the Packard. He hesitates and pulls the snapshot out of his pocket.

*
*

110 INSERT — SNAPSHOT

110

Marty is the only one in the picture now, it's as if his siblings never existed.

111 BACK TO SHOT

111

Marty stares at it, then puts it back in his pocket. He is uneasy and scared.

*

BROWN
You look a little pale. Are you okay?

*
*

MARTY

Oh sure, I feel great. Why shouldn't I? I'm going on a hot date with my mother.

CUT TO:

112 INT. SCHOOL GYMNASIUM — DANCE — NIGHT

112

"Enchantment Under The Sea" is well underway.

On stage is the band: Marvin Berry and the Midnighters. They're all black. Marvin plays lead guitar and sings; there is also a drummer, piano player, sax and bass. They're playing "3 Coins In The Fountain."

The gym has been decorated in an undersea motif: seaweed, fish on the walls, a paper mache sunken ship, a "treasure chest," and a single school locker labeled "Davey Jones." There is also a BUBBLE MACHINE, ala Lawrence Welk.

As usual at school dances, there are teachers acting as chaperones (including Mr. Strickland), a busy refreshment table (including a cake in the shape of a fish), and wallflowers on the sidelines.

GEORGE is on the sidelines, bopping out of time to the music. He's quite nervous.

113 EXT. SCHOOL PARKING LOT

113

Brown's Packard pulls into the lot and parks.

114 INT. PACKARD — MARTY, LORRAINE

114

Marty, at the wheel, is very uneasy; Lorraine next to him looks beautiful in her best party dress. Marty glances at the clock on the dashboard. It's 8 minutes before 9.

MARTY

Uh, you don't mind if we, uh, park for a few minutes...?

LORRAINE

Why do you think I'd mind?

MARTY

Well, I don't know, some girls just don't like to...

LORRAINE

Marty, I'm almost 18 years old. It's not like I've never parked before.

She scoots over, very close to him. Marty fidgets. Boy, is he nervous!

LORRAINE

You seem nervous, Marty. Is anything wrong?

MARTY

Uh, no...

LORRAINE

Have some of this — it'll help you relax.

She pulls a pint bottle of gin out of her purse. Marty is shocked.

MARTY

What are you doing with that?

LORRAINE

I swiped it from the old man's liquor cabinet.

She takes a nip.

MARTY

Lorraine, you shouldn't drink!

LORRAINE

Why not?

MARTY

Well, it's just not healthy.

LORRAINE

Don't be so square, Marty. Everybody who's anybody does it.

She hands it to him.

MARTY

Maybe I could use a hit....

Just as he takes a swig, she pulls out a pack of cigarettes and lights up. Marty spits out the gin in surprise.

MARTY

Jesus — you smoke, too?

LORRAINE

Now, Marty, you're not going to tell me that smoking is unhealthy. Everyone knows that it calms your nerves and it's good for the circulation.

MARTY

It'll give you cancer!

LORRAINE

You know, you sound just like my mother. When I have kids. I'm gonna let them do anything they want. Anything.

MARTY

I'd sure like to have that in writing.

The comment goes right past Lorraine.

LORRAINE

So what are your parents like? Are they as square as mine?

MARTY

Lorraine, lately I've come to the conclusion that I don't know anything about 'em.

Marvin Berry and the Midnighters finish up a number. Everyone applauds. Marvin steps up to the microphone.

MARVIN

We're gonna take a break now, but we'll be back in just a little while, so don't go away.

The band members leave their instruments on the stage and head out a side door.

GEORGE now glances at the clock in the gym. It says "8:59." Alarmed, he checks his own watch.

116 INSERT — GEORGE'S WATCH which reads "8:55."

116

117 GEORGE
is even more alarmed. He runs over to a nearby STUDENT.

117

GEORGE

What time do you have?

STUDENT

Five after nine.

George is panic stricken! He runs like hell out of the gym!

118 INT. PACKARD — MARTY, LORRAINE — NIGHT

118

Marty fidgets and looks at the clock again.

LORRAINE

Marty, why are you so nervous?

Marty takes a deep breath.

MARTY

Well, have you ever been in a situation where, well, you know you have to act a certain way, but when you get there, you don't know if you can go through with it?

LORRAINE

You mean like how you're supposed to act with someone on a first date?

MARTY

Well, sort of...

LORRAINE

I think I know exactly what you mean.

MARTY

You do?

LORRAINE

(nods)

And you know what I do in those situations?

Marty looks at her.

LORRAINE

I don't worry about it!

And with that, she throws herself on him, kissing him passionately. Marty is absolutely shocked!

119 INT. SCHOOL HALL — NIGHT

119

George is in a PHONE BOOTH, dialing a number. It rings and a WOMAN answers.

WOMAN

(V.O. phone)

At the tone, the time will be nine o'clock, exactly....

A KID named DIXON (class prankster type) sticks a broom through the phone booth door handle. George tries to get out, but he's trapped.

*

*

Dixon LAUGHS loudly.

George jerks the door frantically, and Dixon just laughs louder.

120 INT. PACKARD — NIGHT

120

Lorraine continues her passionate assault of Marty — then abruptly stops and pushes him away. She's very confused.

LORRAINE

This isn't right.

(sighs)

I don't know what it is, but... when I kiss you, something's wrong. I almost feel like... like I was kissing my brother... or my father. I don't understand it, but I just know it's wrong. I guess that doesn't make any sense, does it?

MARTY

Believe me, it makes perfect sense.

We hear the sounds of APPROACHING FOOTSTEPS on gravel.

LORRAINE

Sounds like somebody's coming.

Marty hears it too. He looks at the dashboard clock: 9:00. He sighs with defeat.

MARTY

Yeah... I know...

Suddenly the driver's door is opened, an arm reaches in, yanks Marty out, and Marty finds himself face to face with
BIFF!

Match, 3-D and Skinhead are with him.

BIFF

You caused $300 damage to my car, dipshit. And I'm gonna take it outta your ass... Hold him, guys.

*

Biff shoves him roughly into the arms of Skinhead. Marty struggles, but Skinhead and Match grab him and restrain him

LORRAINE

Let go of him! Leave him alone, Biff! You're drunk.

Biff takes a look at Lorraine in the car.

BIFF

Well, lookee what we have here. Maybe I'll take it out of your ass...

She lunges at her door to escape, but Biff grabs her and climbs into the car.

BIFF

Oh, no, you're stayin' right here with me.

Biff pulls her toward him.

MARTY

Get you hands off her, you son-of-a-bitch.

Biff leers at Marty.

BIFF

I'll take care of you after I take care of her. (to his boys) Take him around back. I'll be there in a minute.

(a beat)

Go on! This ain't no peepshow!

They drag Marty away. Biff shuts the car door and tries to kiss her. She struggles, and in a moment, all we can see through the windshield are tussling arms and legs, accompanied by Lorraine's muffled screams.

121 EXT. SIDE OF SCHOOL

121

Skinhead, Match and 3-D drag Marty around the corner to the side of the school where a CADILLAC is parked with its trunk open.

SKINHEAD

Hey — let's lock him in that trunk!

They throw Marty into the car trunk and slam the lid shut. Then, the Cadillac's driver's door is thrown open and the DRUMMER from the band steps out. He's smoking a reefer.

DRUMMER

Say, what you messin' with my car for?

3-D

Beat it, spook, this don't concern you!

The other 3 car doors open, and MARVIN BERRY and the OTHER BAND MEMBERS get out. They look real “bad” with their processed hair.

MARVIN

Who you callin’ “spook,” peckerwood?

Biff’s boys exchange worried looks as the band members advance on them.

SKINHEAD

Hey, I don’t want to mess with no reefer addicts!

Biff’s boys take off (in the opposite direction from the Packard), but Marvin and the band manage to kick ‘em all in the ass as they run away.

Now we hear beating on the trunk from the inside, and Marty’s muffled voice.

MARTY’S VOICE

Lemme out! Lemme out!

MARVIN

Hey, Reginald, where’s your keys?

The drummer checks his pockets, and inside the car. He can’t find them.

MARTY’S VOICE

They’re in here! The keys are in here!

MARVIN

Dammit, boy, you left them suckers in the trunk!

122 INT. — PACKARD

122

Lorraine is trying to fight off Biff. It’s a real struggle for her.

123 EXT. PARKING LOT — ON THE PACKARD

123

Through the windshield we see arms and legs flailing about in a struggle. We hear SCREAMING.

Now GEORGE arrives. He spots the car and goes into his act. He adjusts his pants, strides to the car like John Wayne, and opens the driver’s door.

GEORGE

Hey, you! Get your damn hands — uh, oh!

George realizes he’s facing Biff. Now he’s really scared.

BIFF

I think you got the wrong car, McFly.

LORRAINE

George! Help me!

George doesn’t know what to do. He stares in dumbfounded amazement.

BIFF
Just close the door, McFly and walk away.

GEORGE
Uh, okay, Biff...

He turns and takes a few steps.

LORRAINE
George! Please! Help me!

George can't stand it. He stops and goes back. He takes a deep breath.

GEORGE
All right, Biff. You let her alone.

BIFF
Who's gonna make me?

GEORGE
(gulps)
I am.

Biff steps out of the car and laughs loudly.

BIFF
Yeah? You and what army, McFly?

George balls his right hand into a fist and takes a swing at Biff — but Biff grabs his arm and starts twisting it.

George grimaces.

124 EXT. AT THE CADILLAC 124

Meanwhile, Marvin is trying to pop the trunk lock with a screwdriver. He's not having much luck.

125 EXT. PACKARD 125

Biff twists George's arm harder.

LORRAINE
Stop it, Biff! You'll break his arm!

She tries to pull him away. He slaps her backhand, knocking her down.

Biff laughs.

George's expression immediately goes from pain to rage — intense rage... and George lets go with a TREMENDOUS LEFT HOOK, SMACK INTO BIFF'S FACE!

Biff hits the ground, out cold!

George can't believe he did it! He looks at his fist, looks down at Biff, and grins widely.

LORRAINE

Oh, George, you were wonderful!

She looks at him with adoring eyes.

126 AT THE CADILLAC

126

Marvin has his screwdriver in the lock. He gives it a hard jerk: the trunk pops open, but he puts a big gash in his hand.

MARVIN

Damnit — I sliced my hand!

Marty jumps out of the trunk.

MARTY

Thanks a lot!

He dashes back toward the Packard.

127 MARTY

127

rushes onto the parking lot and is astonished to see GEORGE AND LORRAINE EMBRACING... and BIFF out cold on the ground. He keeps his distance, allowing them to have their moment.

Nearby, a few KID BYSTANDERS come over to them.

BYSTANDER #1

George, we never knew you had it in you!

BYSTANDER #2

Yeah! Ever think about going out for the team?

BYSTANDER #3

How about running for class president?

GEORGE

Well, I'll have to think about it.

Marty can't believe what he's hearing.

Now George and Lorraine head for the school.

128 EXT. FRONT OF SCHOOL

128

George and Lorraine go up the front stairs. Marty watches from a safe distance away. Just as they're about to go in, Lorraine turns and sees Marty. She smiles. He smiles back.

Now Marty pulls out the snapshot and takes a look.

129 INSERT — SNAPSHOT

129

Marty's own image is beginning to fade.

In the background, we hear distant THUNDER.

130 MARTY 130
is shocked. He considers the situation a moment, then realizes the answer. He runs back toward the Cadillac.

131 AT THE CADILLAC 131

Marvin is wrapping a handkerchief around his cut hand while the band looks on.

Marty runs over to them.

MARTY
Hey, you guys, you've gotta get back in there and finish the dance!

MARVIN
Sorry, my friend, but we're through for tonight.

MARTY
What do you mean, you're through?

DRUMMER
Look at Marvin's hand! He can't play with it like that. And we can't play without Marvin.

MARTY
But you've gotta play! That's where they kiss for the first time — on the dance floor! If there's no music, they won't dance, they won't kiss, they won't fall in love..., and I'm a goner!

DRUMMER
Hey, man, the dance is over... unless you know somebody who can play guitar.

Marty looks at Marvin and smiles.

CUT TO:

132 INT. SCHOOL GYM 132

Marty is playing the guitar with the Midnighters, in a version of "Earth Angel."

George and Lorraine are on the floor, dancing.

Marty looks at them, then looks at the back of his guitar where, attached with chewing gum, is the snapshot. Nothing has changed. Marty watches his parents. He's getting nervous.

GEORGE AND LORRAINE are looking at each other as they dance. George seems a little unsure of himself.

LORRAINE
Aren't you going to kiss me, George?

GEORGE
(uncertain)

Well... I don't know...

Now DIXON butts in.

DIXON

Beat it, McFly, I'm cuttin' in.

He pushes George out of the way. ON STAGE, Marty reacts with horror. He looks at the snapshot.

133 INSERT — SNAPSHOT 133

Marty's image is definitely fading!

134 MARTY 134
blinks his eyes and start hitting wrong notes. He doesn't seem to be able to play the guitar anymore.

The DRUMMER notices this.

DRUMMER

Hey, man...what's wrong?

MARTY

I can't play! I don't know how to play the guitar!

ON THE DANCE FLOOR, Dixon has his hands all over Lorraine. Lorraine doesn't like it. She looks to George with pleading eyes.

MARTY is turning pale. He can barely stand up.

MARTY

I don't feel so good..

The band keeps on playing.

GEORGE sees Dixon with Lorraine. His anger rises and he strides over the them.

GEORGE
(to Dixon)

Get lost, jerk!

He yanks Dixon away from Lorraine and shoves him hard, sending him sprawling into the refreshment table — right into the punch bowl!

George takes Lorraine in his arms and kisses her!

ON STAGE, Marty immediately recovers! He jumps up, full of life, wired with energy. The color returns to his face, and he looks at the snapshot.

135 INSERT — SNAPSHOT 135

Marty's image is now sharp and clear, and his sister and brother are fading back in!

George and Lorraine are dancing very close. From the looks on their faces, there can be no doubt: they're in love.

GEORGE

You know, I'm gonna write all this up in a story and send it in for publication.

LORRAINE

I thought you only wrote science fiction.

GEORGE

It IS science fiction.

137 INSERT — SNAPSHOT

137

The photo is now as it was originally, with Marty, Linda and Dave all "back in existence."

138 ON STAGE

138

Marty is euphoric. He remembers how to play, and jumps into the opening riff of "Johnny B. Goode!"

MARTY

(to the band)

Follow me, fellas! Let's rock 'n roll!

The band joins in.

SERIES OF SHOTS — DANCE NUMBER

ON THE DANCE FLOOR, heads turn. There are reactions of astonishment from everyone — and the kids start dancing.

Marty euphorically begins cavorting around like Little Richard!

The band is really getting into it.

And the kids all go nuts, jumping and screaming.

Mr. Strickland, however, just shakes his head with disgust.

Marty whips off his sport coat and throws it into the crowd!

139 INT. BACK STAGE — PUBLIC TELEPHONE

139

MARVIN BERRY is on the phone.

MARVIN

(into phone)

Chuck? This is Marvin!

(pauses)

Marvin Berry! Your cousin! Now, listen — I think this is the sound you've been looking for...

He holds the phone toward the music.

140 INT. SCHOOL GYM

140

The pandemonium continues.

Now Marty tears open his shirt and does some Elvis pelvis moves.

Girls scream!

Marty's movements become Mick Jaggeresque, then take on a Michael Jackson style... Finally he drifts into pure HEAVY METAL, puts his guitar next to the amp, making FEEDBACK.

This goes a little too far for 1955 musical tastes — the band stops playing, and the kids stop dancing. They all watch Marty, not sure what to think.

Marty suddenly realizes he's gone too far. He smiles sheepishly and steps up to the microphone.

MARTY

Uh, sorry, you guys aren't ready for that yet. But your kids are gonna love it.

He picks up the song again with the band. They do one more chorus.

Marty wraps up the song with a final riff, and the students all go berserk with applause!

CUT TO:

141 EXT. CLOCK TOWER — NIGHT

141

It's 4 minutes before 10:00.

142 ON THE STREET

142

BROWN, wearing the trenchcoat, paces back and forth anxiously. The wind is picking up, and we hear DISTANT THUNDER. The entire "lightning rod setup" is complete, with the cable strung across the street between the two lampposts. Brown checks his wristwatch: 9:56.

BROWN

Damn! Where is that kid?

Brown pulls out a pocket watch and checks it: 9:56.

BROWN

Damn!

Brown checks a wristwatch on his other wrist. It's 9:56.

BROWN

Damn!

At last, the PACKARD pulls up across the street from the tarped DeLorean. Marty jumps out, dressed in his 1985 clothes.

BROWN

You're late! Do you have no concept of time?

Brown pulls the tarp off the DeLorean and raises the "trolley hook" on back to its full height.

MARTY

Take it easy, Doc! I had to change my clothes. Everything's cool — they're back together...and here's the proof.

Marty shows him the fully restored snapshot.

MARTY

Yeah, old George really came through. Laid out Biff with one punch — cold cocked him... and I had to miss it. I never knew he had it in him. Hell, my old man's never stood up to Biff in his life.

Brown opens the DeLorean door.

BROWN

All right, let's set your destination time. This is the exact time you left...

143 INSERT — L.E.D. READOUT

143

On a readout labeled "Last Time of Departure" is "OCTOBER 5, 1985, 1:11 A.M."

144 BROWN

144 punches the appropriate keypad.

BROWN
(continuing)

Let's send you home 10 minutes later...

144 INSERT

144

The readout labeled "Destination Time" lights up to read "OCTOBER 5, 1985, 1:21 A.M." We can see that the two readouts differ by 10 minutes.

145 EXT. ON BROWN AND MARTY

145

BROWN
(continuing)

Ten minutes isn't long enough for you to be missed. Now, I've painted a white line on the street up there — that's where you start from.

(continuing)

I've calculated the precise distance, taking into account the acceleration speed and wind resistance retroactive from the moment the lightning will strike...

He picks up a WIND-UP ALARM CLOCK.

BROWN
(continuing)

When this alarm goes off, you hit the gas.

Brown gives it a wind, then sets it on the DeLorean dashboard.

Brown looks around, then sighs.

BROWN

Well, I guess that's everything.

Marty extends his hand.

MARTY

Doc, thanks for everything.

They shake hands.

BROWN

Thank YOU. I'll see you in about 30 years.

Marty sighs, again thinking of Brown's destiny and the letter.

MARTY

I... I hope so.

BROWN

Don't worry. As long as you hit that wire with this hook, everything'll be fine.

MARTY

Right...

Brown puts his hands in his pockets and withdraws the letter Marty put there. He looks at it curiously. Marty turns away.

BROWN

What's the meaning of this?

MARTY

You'll find out in 30 years.

BROWN

It's about the future, isn't it? Information about the future?

MARTY

You'll find out in 30 years.

BROWN

I warned you about this, kid. The consequences could be disastrous.

MARTY

You've gotta take that risk, Doc. Your life depends on it.

BROWN

(shakes his head)

No. I'm not going to accept the responsibility.

Brown tears up the envelope and shoves the pieces into the Packard ashtray.

MARTY

All right, Doc, in that case, I'll just have to tell you straight out—

But before Marty can get the words out, a TREMENDOUS GUST OF WIND comes up accompanied by a loud CRACK! They turn: A TREE LIMB in the square has blown down right on top of the cable between the clock tower and the first lamp post!

The paddle-plug attached to the lightning rod on the clock tower is yanked out, and the cable drops down from the clock tower!

BROWN

Great Scott! Kid — find the end of that cable — I'll throw the rope down to you!

Brown grabs a big coil of rope and dashes into the courthouse.

Marty gulps. He takes a look at the fallen tree branch on the cable, then goes hunting for the end of it.

The wind is picking up, and the sound of THUNDER approaches.

146 INT. CLOCK TOWER STAIRS — NIGHT 146

Brown charges up the several flights of stairs like a madman!

147 EXT. COURTHOUSE SQUARE 147

Marty pulls in the cable, hunting for the end of it. At last he finds it. He looks up at the clock tower.

148 EXT. ON THE CLOCK TOWER 148

A DOOR opens up, giving access to the ledge below the clock. BROWN steps out. His hair blows wildly in the wind, and lightning flashes in the distance. He looks up.

149 BROWN'S P.O.V. OF 149
the CONNECTING SOCKET, dangling on its cable between the "1" and "2" on the huge clock face. Its other end is attached to the lightning rod on the tower above.

150 BROWN 150
looks down.

151 BROWN'S P.O.V. OF 151
MARTY, 5 stories below, waving with the paddle plug in hand.

152 BROWN 152
tosses one end of the rope down. The coil unravels.

153 EXT. THE SQUARE 153

The rope drops to the ground.

Marty runs over, grabs it, and ties it to the paddle plug. He waves back to Brown.

154 BROWN 154
nods and starts pulling the rope with the cable back up.

155	MARTY watches anxiously as the cable goes back up. He yells up at Brown.	155
	MARTY Doc! I gotta tell you about the future!
156	INTERCUT WITH BROWN who can barely hear him.	156
	BROWN What??
157	MARTY The future! On the night I travel back in time, the terrorists show up and you get—	157
158	BONG! It's exactly 10:00 — and the CLOCK BELLS STRIKE TEN! Marty can't be heard over the sound!	158
	Brown almost loses his balance with the huge bells tolling so close! He regains his footing, then pulls the rope up the rest of the way. He's got the paddle plug in hand.
	Brown yells at Marty, but he can't be heard over the bells. Brown gestures that he's got the cable and that Marty should go.
159	MARTY hesitates, but Brown gestures adamantly. At last Marty nods and runs to the DeLorean.	159
160	BROWN unties the rope from the end of the paddle plug and looks up at its socket mate dangling on the clock face. He reaches up for it, but he can't quite get it. He'll have to move across the ledge to get closer to it.	160
161	MARTY climbs into the DeLorean and closes the gull wing door.	161
162	INT. DELOREAN Marty turns the key in the ignition and revs it up. He puts the car in gear.	162

165	EXT. STREET The DeLorean passes a hand-painted white line on the street — Brown has also painted the words "START HERE" for Marty's benefit. Marty makes a U-turn and pulls up to it, like a starting line.	165

Marty has an anxious expression on his face.

MARTY

Dammit, Doc, why'd you have to tear up that letter? If only there was a little more time—

Marty glances down at the 2 readouts, "Destination Time," and "Last Time Departed."

167 INSERT — THE TWO READOUTS

The "Destination Time" is set for "1:21 A.M.," 10 minutes later than the "Last Time Departed," which is at "1:11 A.M."

has an idea.

MARTY

More time! I'll give myself some more time!

He pushes the appropriate buttons on the keypad.

The "minutes" indicator on the "Destination Time" begins counting backwards:
1:21...1:20...1:19...

170 EXT. CLOCK TOWER

170

Brown, with the cable in his left hand, moves a little further along the ledge.

Suddenly, the ledge CRACKS and CRUMBLES beneath his feet! Brown drops the cable and grabs onto the CLOCK HANDS to save himself! The cable drops onto his left foot!

Brown hangs precariously from the clock face like Harold Lloyd, wind blowing his hair, and lightning, cracking in the sky!

Brown carefully moves his right foot toward the intact section of ledge while trying to keep the cable balanced on his left foot.

His right foot moves closer... at last it finds safe footing. Brown takes a deep breath, then hops over onto the ledge.

He kicks the cable up with his left foot and catches it in his hand.

He sighs relief. Everything is all right. He reaches up with his right hand and is able to grab the dangling socket.

is delighted.

MARTY

All right!

He turns on the car radio. A contemporary ROCK TUNE comes on.

MARTY

All right!

He puts the car into forward gear. THE ENGINE DIES!

MARTY

Aw, shit!

He tries to start it again, but he can't get it to turn over.

MARTY

Come on, come on—

He looks up and sees out the windshield...

219	HIS P.O.V. The Terrorist van turns and goes after the younger Marty. Just as before, Marty dives into the DeLorean and roars off.	219
220	MARTY watches himself chased by the terrorists.	220

The DeLorean accelerates, even as it's being shot at, going faster and faster until it's enveloped in the BLINDING WHITE GLOW and vanishes!

But the terrorist van drives into the white glow; we hear cursing as the blinded driver loses control of the van. It swerves and goes out of control, hitting a parking median and flipping over on its side.

222 MARTY

now runs toward the fallen Dr. Brown, lying face down in the parking lot.

He reaches him, along with EINSTEIN the faithful dog.

Marty turns Brown over, tears in his eyes.

MARTY

Doc, no...

Suddenly, BROWN OPENS HIS EYES and SMILES!

MARTY

You're alive!

Brown stands.

BROWN

Of course, I'm alive.

MARTY

But you were shot — I saw it! I saw it twice!

Brown rips open his radiation suit revealing a BULLET PROOF VEST.

BROWN

It's the latest fashion in personal protection. It'll stop a slug from an elephant rifle at 30 yards.

MARTY

But how did you know?

Brown smiles, reaches into his pocket and pulls out the LETTER THAT MARTY WROTE — SCOTCH TAPED TOGETHER! It's yellow and brittle: 30 years old!

MARTY

(smiles, shaking his head)

After all that lecturing about screwing up future events and the space-time continuum...

BROWN

(shrugs)

Yeah, well, I figured, what the hell.

We hear APPROACHING POLICE SIRENS.

223 EXT. MARTY'S HOUSE — NIGHT

223

The DeLorean pulls up to the darkened house.

The gull wing passenger door opens and Marty gets out. Brown is driving and Einstein takes Marty's seat. Marty turns to talk to Brown.

INTERCUT WITH BROWN IN THE DELOREAN

MARTY

So how far ahead are you going?

BROWN

I figure I'll take it slow at first.. go about 30 years, just to get my feet wet; then maybe see what's shaking in the 22nd or 23rd century.

MARTY

Well... good luck. And if you get a chance, look me up. I'll be... 47 years old.

BROWN

I will. Funny... I had to wait 30 years to catch up to you. Now you've gotta wait 30 years to catch up to me. Ain't life weird.

*
*

Brown gives him a wink. Marty closes the door.

224 EXT. MARTY'S HOUSE — NIGHT

224

Marty waves Brown off and heads toward his front door.

In the background, the DeLorean zooms off, and we see light from the offscreen TIME TRAVEL GLOW. Marty is hit by the sharp blast of wind.

CUT TO:

225 INT. MARTY'S BEDROOM — DAY

225

MARTY is on top of the bed, asleep in his clothes. Morning light streams in through the bedroom window; he stirs and opens his eyes. He blinks several times, as if getting his bearings, then sits up and looks around.

*

Yes, it's his room all right, and everything seems the same, from the Z-28 posters to his audio equipment.

Marty looks at the clock: 8:30. He looks at the wall calendar: the first four days of October are X'ed off — today is the 5th. Could it have all been a dream?

He gets out of bed and looks at himself in the mirror, then pinches himself to make sure he's real. He is. On the nightstand is a framed 5 x 7 version of the snapshot with he and his siblings. It looks the same.

*

He reaches into his waste can and pulls out the SUBMISSION FORM TO THE RECORD COMPANY. He looks at it, then decisively pulls the CASSETTE TAPE out of his drawer, and puts it in the envelope with the form.

*
*
*

MARTY comes out of his room with the envelope. He goes down the hall and stops short as he enters

*
*

LINDA and DAVE are seated at the dining room table which has been beautifully set for breakfast. The 5 table settings are elegant; Dave is eating a half of grapefruit; Linda has eggs benedict. Dave is wearing an expensive tailored suit and reads the business section of the morning paper.

*

MARTY

Say, are we having company or something?

LINDA

Not that I know of.

MARTY

Dave, aren't you working today?

DAVE

Sure, I always work on Saturday.

MARTY

Then what's with the fancy suit?

DAVE

(confused, doesn't understand)

Marty, are you all right?

MARTY

Yeah. Are YOU guys all right?

DAVE

Sure, never better. Here, let me take that — I'll mail it from the office.

Dave takes Marty's envelope.

Marty nods uneasily and takes his place at the table. A bowl of fresh strawberries is waiting for him.

Now GEORGE and LORRAINE enter from outside. They're tanned and healthy in TENNIS OUTFITS with tennis rackets. George carries himself with an air of confidence, and Lorraine looks terrific — thin and svelte, radiantly healthy and positive. This is a happy marriage.

Marty can't believe how good his mother looks.

MARTY

Mom! You look — great!!

LORRAINE

Why, thank you, Marty. Say, tonight's the big night, right? Your big date with Suzy Parker? Such a nice girl, I sure like her.

*

MARTY
(can't believe it's his mother talking) Pardon me, Ma?

LORRAINE
You're going up to the lake tonight, aren't you? Haven't you been planning it for 2 weeks?

MARTY
Mom, we went through this last night. How can I go if Dad's car is wrecked?

GEORGE
Wrecked? There's nothing wrong with my car. In fact, Biff is out there waxing it right now.

228 INT./EXT. MCFLY KITCHEN — P.O.V — DAY

228

George opens the curtains, revealing BIFF waxing a new LINCOLN CONTINENTAL in the driveway. Biff is working diligently; his rough edges and arrogance are all gone.

George opens the window.

GEORGE
Hey, Biff, don't forget to wax the inside of the wheel covers. You forgot that last time.

BIFF
(friendly, eager to please)
Yes, sir, you're the boss, sir!

229 Marty is absolutely astonished.

229

GEORGE
(sitting back down)
Some employees will get away with murder if you don't stay on 'em. I've had to keep him in line ever since high school. Although if it wasn't for him, your mother and I would have never met.

LINDA
Yeah, Dad, you've told us a million times: you beat him up when he was bothering Mom and that's how the two of you fell in love.

LORRAINE
It was more than that. Your father literally came to my rescue. (sighs) It was so romantic!

LINDA
(rolls her eyes)
Cornball city.

Marty nods with complete understanding.

GEORGE
(calls into the kitchen)
Bertha, how about bringing Marty his French Toast?

A uniformed MAID ENTERS with a tray and sets a lovely plate of French Toast in front of Marty. Marty is too dumbfounded to speak.

GEORGE

Well, Bertha, you won't have to put up with that tiny kitchen much longer.

BERTHA

When will the new house be ready, sir?

GEORGE

Just as soon as they finish painting the tennis court and re-tiling the swimming pool. It'll be sad to leave this place, though. So many memories... of you kids, and of my days as a struggling writer.

BIFF ENTERS and hands George a HARDBACK BOOK.

BIFF

Oh, Mr. McFly, this just came in: It's the British edition of your current best seller. How many has it sold so far? A million?

230 INSERT — BOOK

230

It's called "A MATCH MADE IN SPACE," and the cover shows a bedroom with a space alien talking to a couple in bed — very reminiscent of Marty's "Darth Vader" visitation to George. The style indicates it's a science-fiction romance novel. The author's name, GEORGE McFLY, is in big letters.

231 BACK TO SHOT

231

GEORGE

Two million, hard cover.

BIFF

Oh, Marty — here's your keys. Your car is all waxed and ready for tonight.

Biff tosses him a set of keys.

MARTY

My car?

CUT TO:

232 EXT. McFLY HOUSE — DAY

232

Marty comes out of the house and opens the garage door, revealing A TRICKED OUT BLACK SUPRA, just like he saw in the showroom.

*

MARTY can't believe it. The personalized license plate says "MARTY I."

*

Marty approaches his new car.

VOICE (O.S.)

How about a ride, mister?

Marty turns — it's SUZY PARKER. She looks just the same: great.

MARTY

Suzy! Are you ever a sight for sore eyes! Let me look at you!

Marty looks at her, as if trying to make sure she's real. Suzy is hard-pressed to understand why Marty is making such a big deal about this.

SUZY

Marty, are you okay? You're acting like you haven't seen me in a week.

MARTY

I haven't.

He pulls her toward him... they're about to kiss... closer, closer...

And just as they kiss, their HAIR STANDS UP ON END. Marty's eyes widen with the inevitable expectation...

MARTY

Oh, no... not again...

233 We hear a SONIC BOOM, and Marty turns — the DELOREAN STREAKS UP in front of the 233 house.

234 DR. BROWN 234 jumps out, more wild-eyed and frantic than we've ever seen him. His clothes are particularly bizarre — a weird mixture of past and future: a cowboy hat, a strange variation on a Roman tunic, a cape, and striped plastic pants.

BROWN

Marty — you've gotta come with me — back to the future!

MARTY

Doc, I've got Suzy here. I was just gonna try out my new wheels.

BROWN

Well, bring her along — this concerns her, too.

*

Brown opens the passenger gull wing door for him. Marty and Suzy approach cautiously.

*

MARTY

What do you mean? What happens?

*

(sudden alarm)

Does something happen to us? Do we turn into assholes or something?

*

BROWN

No, you and Suzy both turn out fine. But your kids, Marty — something's gotta be done about your kids!

Brown gets back in the DeLorean.

235 INT. DELOREAN 235
Marty gets in, and Suzy sits on his lap. She closes the door.

*

BROWN

Okay, here we go...

MARTY

You'd better back this thing up, Doc. We haven't got enough road to get up to 88.

BROWN

Where we're going, we don't use roads.

Brown hits a new switch on the dashboard: "WESTINGHOUSE FUSION ENERGIZER."

236 EXT. STREET

236

The DeLorean speeds down the street, then BLASTS OFF INTO THE SKY LIKE A STREAK!

*

Once again, the coils glow and the DeLorean is enveloped in the familiar white glow and disappears into the future...

COLD OPENINT. BARCADE - SILICON VALLEY - NIGHT

A watering hole with a vintage video game theme-- ARCADE cabinets, neon PAC MAN art, quarter-dispensing WAITRESSES.

CLOSE ON: the baby-faced good looks of aspiring dot-com maverick BARRETT THORNHILL III, 22. We'll call him TREY. His blazer-tee outfit reads laid-back, but his manic energy and rapid speech suggest a neurotic, brilliant mind at work.

Trey stares at his LAPTOP, which contains a bunch of GRAPHS, CHARTS and DATA, when A CUTE CO-ED bumps him slightly as she jostles for a drink.

CUTE CO-ED

Oh, sorry, I didn't mean to--

TREY

No problem.

CUTE CO-ED

(to the bartender)

Oyster Stout, please.

Still staring at his computer--

TREY

Interesting.

CUTE CO-ED

Excuse me?

TREY

It's just-- I wouldn't have pegged you as a beer drinker. If I'm going strictly by appearances, that is. You don't present yourself as a prototypical-- I would've thought Appletinis down the street, not tech geek beer bar. That's all.

CUTE CO-ED

(trying hard to be nice)

Oh. I guess I just felt like a beer? Fruity cocktails don't sit well with me.

Trey looks up at her. You can almost hear his gears turning.

TREY

Did you know that girls who like the taste of beer are sixty percent more likely to have sex on the first date than girls who prefer, say, red wine. Or Appletinis.

CUTE CO-ED

What?

TREY

That's not my opinion.
(indicating screen)
I have the data right here.

CUTE CO-ED

Hold on. You don't even know me--

TREY

For guys, it's more clear cut-- a guy who can easily imagine murdering someone? Eighty-eight percent chance he'll have sex with you on the first date--

CUTE CO-ED

You're disgusting.

The Co-ed drops cash on the bar and storms off. Nearby are two ALPHA MALES who have been listening.

ALPHA

Dude, that was epic. You some kind of anti-pussy wizard?

TREY

I'm an entrepreneur. Mobile apps. Working on something big.

ALPHA

What, like how to repel hot chicks in five easy steps? Who'd buy that?

The Alphas bump fists-- "Burn!" Trey doesn't miss a beat--

TREY

I suppose you guys would.

ALPHA TWO

What's that supposed to mean?

TREY

Just that men who wear silver jewelry and put orange slices in their beers are more likely to act on homosexual impulses. It's not a hundred percent correlation of course...

Alpha Two raises up on Trey, shoves him. Trey just points to his screen, unflinching--

TREY (CONT'D)

I have the data right here.

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - DAY

A COMMUNAL OFFICE SPACE for web startups, WeWork features an OPEN FLOOR PLAN and hip furnishings. PROGRAMMERS and DESIGNERS from various companies sit in clusters. COMPANY NAMES are posted on whiteboard walls of the open "offices."

CLOSE ON: introvert tech genius, AVINASH DAGAVI, 22. Prickly. Anxious. Odd. SWEAT on his lip. HEADPHONES on. A Steely Dan tune pulses in his head as he codes away on a laptop.

But despite the tune's smooth vibe, and his hoodie-and-cargo-shorts ensemble, Nash is anything but comfortable. He can't concentrate. We get QUICK CUTS from his POV--

-A FAT ENGINEER guzzles Cheetos straight from the bag.

-Two GEEKS shoot NERF GUNS at one another, LAUGHING.

-Various hands CLACKING AWAY at KEYBOARDS, the sound GROWING LOUDER AND LOUDER until it drowns out the MUSIC.

One of the NERF WARRIORS bumps Nash's desk, knocking him from his trance. He adjusts the position of his keyboard, aligning it to an invisible grid in his mind, grabs his PHONE--

NASH

INT. TREY'S CAR - SAME TIME

Trey, face BRUISED from the night before, drives while consulting his iPhone. ON THE PHONE: A PARKING APP entitled SpaceRace reveals a MAP of the block. A BLINKING GREEN DOT indicates an OPEN METER nearby, denoted by a CAR AVATAR. A sexy British App voice announces: "Space Available."

Trey races to the spot and parallel parks, as the APP emits its signature catchphrase: "Like a glllllove!"

Trey sits for a moment, contemplating the App. He studies the PARKING SPOTS around him, the TRAFFIC driving by, the blinking AVATAR. Analyzing. Calculating. Then it hits him--

Nash? You're dropping your pronouns

We can hear Nash ranting incoherently on Trey's phone--

Put on some of your smooth rock.
Your Billy Joel or whatever.

Excuse me, Mister, you finish?

HOBBS

Finished? I'm barely half mast!

(to her son)

Como se dice, "cock-block?"

Just then-- HONK-HONK!-- a late model Civic pulls up outside. Hobbes slams his laptop shut--

OUTSIDE - IN THE CIVIC

MITCHELL, 19, sits behind the wheel sipping an energy drink. A sweet, nerdy junior coder with an innocent look and a rapid-fire, ADD-addled brain. He listens to GANGSTA RAP, vibing.

Hobbes clambers into the passenger seat, carrying a still-damp pair of Dickies, a t-shirt and some tube socks.

HOBBS

Swear to God, Mitch, this neighborhood's falling apart. Between the bums and the Illegals, I almost miss my ex.

MITCHELL

Yeah, I was gonna say, my roommate's mom does all our laundry. You ever want me to throw in a load or whatever, just say the word. G2G.

HOBBS

(not gonna happen)
Yeah, thanks. You got anymore of that Adderall lying around?

Hobbes digs inside the glove box.

MITCHELL

Just my, uh, prescription-- but I kind of need that to--

HOBBS

(finding the pills)
Perfect. Fuckin' exhausted.

He snatches Mitchell's energy drink and washes 'em down. Pockets a couple more. Mitchell chuckles nervously--

MITCHELL

Okay, bottoms up! So hey, is Trey meeting with that investor dude tomorrow?

HOBBS

That's the word from on high.

MITCHELL

So like, this could mean like serious cash, right?

HOBBS

I'd settle for grocery money. I eat any more ramen I'm gonna start sweating MSG.

(beat)

Hey, you got a picture of your roomie's mom?

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - MORNING

Trey enters the communal office and spots Nash hiding out in one of the small glass "privacy booths" used for phone and video conferences. Trey shakes his head. Not good.

CUT TO:

TREY AND NASH -- crammed into the SAME BOOTH, awkwardly close to one another. Nash can't make eye contact-- the violation of his personal space is too upsetting.

TREY

Nash. Talk to me.

Nash swallows, shifts awkwardly.

NASH

Uncomfortable.

CUT TO:

TREY AND NASH. Now standing in adjacent booths, speaking through the glass partition on their phones. Like inmates.

NASH (CONT'D)

Cancel the meeting.

TREY

You don't cancel on George Murchison. He's one of the most sought after angels in the valley. If he invests in BRB, we're all but guaranteed our Series A. No more bootstrapping. No more communal office. No more Nash freakouts.

NASH

It's not ready. I ran the beta last night and it drained my phone in twenty minutes.

TREY

Fuck the beta! Our algorithm alone is worth major seed money. Investors are buying napkin sketches from high school dropouts--

NASH

I don't make napkin sketches!

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - LOBBY - SAME

Mitchell and Hobbes clamber into an ELEVATOR packed with TECH GEEKS and HIPSTERS from other companies. All of them, texting, surfing, gaming, etc. Among them:

MIKKI, 21, an Asian-American coder whose style is a mash-up of Hello Kitty and Enid from Ghost World. And-- DANE, 24, a rail-thin graphic designer with sculpted facial hair, piercings and expensive glasses. Geek chic.

DANE
(to Mikki)
Gimme your number, I'll text you.

Mitchell stares longingly at Mikki as she and Dane BUMP PHONES, exchanging info with an app called BUMP-N-GRIND.

WEWORK OFFICES - BULLPEN - CONTINUOUS

DING! The elevator doors slide open, Hipsters and Geeks spilling out, hustling to their work areas. Mitchell continues to gaze at Mikki--

HOBBS
(rolling his eyes)
Jaysus. Quit pining and make a move already.

MITCHELL
What? I don't even know her name.

HOBBS
And Designer Dane just got her digits. He's one Björk reference away from sealing the deal.

MITCHELL
Yeah, but I can't-- I mean, Dane's like, a total badass.

They arrive at a communal table, unpacking their laptops.

HOBBS
Badasses don't manscape. And they sure as shit don't help bring apps like "Bump-n-Grind" into the world. We gotta get you this chick's number-- (notices something)
Oh, fuck me.

Mitchell follows Hobbes' gaze to:

ANGLE: THE PRIVACY BOOTHS -- where Trey and Nash continue to squabble. Trey is losing patience.

TREY

I'm trying to be sympathetic to your needs, buddy, but-- (decides to push)
You remember freshman year, our Numerical Analysis final?

Nash grunts-- not a pleasant memory.

TREY (CONT'D)

We almost flunked because you refused to turn in something that wasn't flawless. If I hadn't gone behind your back and shown it to Professor Woltjer, you'd of lost your scholarship.

NASH

That was different.

TREY

"Done is better than perfect." Look around you--

(indicating office)

Every one of those geeks think they're working on the Next Big Thing, but they're wrong. They're deluded. None of them can do what we do. BRB is our chance to change the nature of human interaction.

(lets that sink in)

I can handle George Murchison. But I need you to take care of the tech. Can you can do that for me?

Trey places his fist on the glass between them for a fist bump. But Nash refuses, storms out of the booth-- furious.

Trey exits his booth. He approaches Mitchell and Hobbes. The boys look at him expectantly--

TREY (CONT'D)

He's fine. We're fine.

HOBBS

(re: his bruise)

What happened to your face?

TREY

Data mining.

Trey heads for the elevator, Hobbes turns to Mitchell.

HOBBS

You got a Plan B, right? In case this thing goes tits up.

(he doesn't)

First rule of Startups, little man:
Always have a Plan B.

MITCHELL

I can't move back home. My mom still has DSL.

Off Mitchell's furrowed brow we END ACT ONE.

ACT TWO

INT. "BARCADE" - LATER THAT EVENING

The Betas Gang is gathered at a booth, working on their laptops, beneath a CHALKBOARD full of EQUATIONS and ILLUSTRATIONS. In giant underlined letters: The Social Matrix. Trey is having one of his insight-whirlwinds, talking a mile a minute, gesticulating with a piece of chalk--

TREY

People in Western culture think in one of three ways-- visual, auditory or kinesthetic. So I'm listening for clues as I talk to her. She tells me she felt like a beer, that cocktails don't sit well. I offended her and she told me to hold on.

He circles KINESTHETIC on the board, next to a drawing of a HEART. A COCKTAIL WAITRESS approaches, irked--

COCKTAIL WAITRESS

Hey, did you erase our beer menu?

REVEAL that the CHALKBOARD is just that. On the far right side, half-erased names: -VEIZEN, -ORTER, -LE ALE, etc.

TREY

This is important.

COCKTAIL WAITRESS

(taking the chalk)

Asshole.

Trey barely notices. Back to the gang--

TREY

If we identify our users by how they think, we reduce our match pool by two-thirds and increase our algorithm's success rate.

MITCHELL

The Social Matrix. That's like, totally-- I mean-- whoa.

HOBBS

Dude. If you're gonna red pill me, I need to be a whole lot drunker.

Nash doesn't look up from his laptop--

NASH

(his highest praise)
It's not terrible.

TREY

I know. Thank you, Nash.

Just then, a GROUP of BOISTEROUS ASIANS tumble into the bar wearing matching YELLOW POLOS. They're red-faced drunk.

MITCHELL

Hey, it's the Walk Star guys. You think they got their seed money?

TREY

For a glorified pedometer? I fucking hope not.

MITCHELL

You gotta admit, the name's catchy.

HOBBS

(dismissive)
So's the herp.
(beat)
At least our break room won't smell like kimchi anymore.

TREY

(to Nash)
That should be us, celebrating our seed round. Instead, we're getting lapped by a pack of pudgy Koreans.

Nash doesn't want to engage, but it's true. Trey digs in--

TREY (CONT'D)

Our algorithm could change the way human beings socialize forever.

(MORE)

TREY (CONT'D)

But hey, who doesn't need another fitness app?

NASH

Fine.

TREY

Fine? Fine what?

NASH

The meeting. I'll go.

Trey smiles. Nash stands abruptly, folds his laptop--

NASH (CONT'D)

Going home to work on the code.

TREY

Great. Hey, do me a favor.
Tomorrow? Wear pants.

NASH

I don't own pants.

INT. BARCADE - LATER

Trey, Hobbes and Mitchell. Hobbes and Mitchell are staring at their phones. Actually, most of the people in the bar are on their phones. Trey can't take it--

TREY

See, this, this is what I'm talking about. We're surrounded by people, all desperate to interact, and everyone's staring at screens, pretending not to notice.

MITCHELL

Dude, have you played "Fruit Ninja"? It's sick.

HOBBS

Besides, this place is a dog park.

Trey points to a buttoned-up WOMAN in a TAILORED SUIT at the end of the bar. A pair of HEELS rests on the bar stool next to her. This is LISA RUDOLPH, 24.

TREY

Really? What do you call that?

HOBBS

Out of our league.

TREY

There are no leagues. Only players.

HOBBS

(to Mitchell)

God help us. He's been reading
Fiddy's Twitter feed again.

Trey approaches, picks up Lisa's heels, sets them on the bar--

TREY

Blisters, right? My Louboutins do the same thing.

Lisa offers a pinched smile and returns the shoes to the stool, rebuffing him. Continues typing on her phone.

LISA

It's pronounced Loo-boo-ta.

TREY

I know. I was just testing you.
You'd be surprised how few women know how to say it.

(she ignores him)

Even those who do, rarely correct a stranger's pronunciation. I'm guessing you spend a lot of time evaluating people. Are you in H.R.?

LISA

No, but I am busy. No offense.

TREY

Sure. Forgive me for trying to start a conversation in a popular social venue.

That pisses Lisa off. She looks up from her phone--

LISA

Actually, I'm working. But thanks for the shot of judgment and the condescension chaser. I thought putting my shoes on the stool would be a pretty clear sign I'm not looking to get hit on by every Aspie in the joint, but that's the thing about you guys-- you're not exactly aces when it comes to reading people.

Lisa slips her heels on and departs, Trey moves back to Hobbes and Mitchell, who have a laugh at his expense--

TREY

Fuck it. She's an outlier. Who's hungry?

EXT. BARCADE - LATER

A hip-hop themed Taco Truck ("Tacos, Nah'mean!") is parked at the curb in front of the bar. Drunken TECHIES wolf burritos and smoke e-cigarettes. Trey stands by the window, talking to the thuggish PROPRIETOR of the truck, while-- Mitchell and Hobbes sit on the sidewalk, eating tacos and drinking sodas. Hobbes spots Mikki and Dane standing in line.

HOBBS

Look sharp. Your future ex is here.

MITCHELL

What're you-- Oh God. No, wait--

But Hobbes is already making his way over to Mikki and Dane. Mitchell reluctantly follows.

HOBBS

(to Dane)

What's crackin', Chin Curtains?

DANE

I was just telling Mikki that I'm spinning at The Cellar on Friday. You guys should come check out my set.

HOBBS

Yeah, I will never be drunk enough for that. Mikki. A pleasure. I'm Hobbes. And this-- is Mitchell. Boy genius and turntable prodigy.

MITCHELL

Hi, hey, hello. It's nice to uh, finally... I've been watching you across the office for like, weeks. I mean, not-- not in a creepy way.

Cringe. Mikki offers a half-smirk in response.

DANE

What kind of stuff do you spin?

MITCHELL

Oh... all... kinds of stuff.

(Dane waits, curious)

You know, mad crazy beats, like--

(MORE)

MITCHELL (CONT'D)
(beat-boxing)
And the-- (scary dubstep noises)

A bizarre performance. But before Mitchell can dig himself deeper, Hobbes "trips" and SPILLS his drink on Dane's shirt.

HOBBS
Oh, shit! Sorry, man. We better get you to a sink.

DANE
Careful! This shirt's hand-painted.

Hobbes leads Dane away, shooting Mitchell a look-- "Make your move!" Mikki stares at him, bemused. When she finally speaks, her tone is completely deadpan. This is just how she rolls.

MIKKI
Nice beat-boxing. Are you classically trained?

MITCHELL
Ha! "Classically trained." LOL.
Totally. That's-- wow.

Another awkward beat.

MIKKI
Do I make you nervous, Mitchell?

INT. BARCADE BATHROOM - A FEW MINUTES LATER

Trey enters, bumping into Dane as he leaves. As he unzips at a urinal... REVEAL Hobbes behind him, drunk.

HOBBS
Hola, jefe. Que paso?

He sidles up next to Trey, uncomfortably close.

TREY
Common men's room decorum calls for a two foot gap between users.

HOBBS
So about this meeting tomorrow.
We're good, right? You feel ready?

Trey just looks at him like, "Of course."

HOBBS (CONT'D)

'Cause I'm thirty-five years old, man. That's like, ninety-five in Valley years. I can't take another failed start-up.

TREY

We're not gonna fail.

HOBBS

'Cause I think you might be onto something here, but if BRB tanks they're gonna Old Yeller my ass. Just-- look me in the eye and tell me you got this.

Trey turns to Hobbes as he zips up, looks him in the eye--

TREY

Hobbes. I got this.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. TREY'S CAR - THE NEXT AFTERNOON

Smooth rock plays as Trey drives. In the passenger seat, Nash SCRATCHES at the woefully unfashionable JEANS he's wearing.

NASH

I feel like my legs are suffocating.

The car approaches a modern mansion, a GLORIOUS GLASS STRUCTURE perched on Wolfback Ridge Road. We see the unmistakable trappings of an exclusive PARTY in progress. VALETS help guests from FANCY CARS, BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE drink and laugh on the expansive deck.

NASH (CONT'D)

What is this? What's going on?

TREY

Looks like The Murch is having a few people over.

NASH

You told me we were going to a meeting. This is-- this is why you made me wear pants! You lied to me.

TREY

No, I managed expectations. If I told you we were going to a party, you'd be in the fetal position humming Hall and Oates right now. Now stay close and don't say anything.

NASH

What? Why?

A VALET opens Trey's door, ending the debate.

EXT. MODERN MANSION - AFTERNOON

A BORED ATTENDANT waits with an iPad, checking a GUEST LIST.

TREY

(nervous, speedy)
Hey there. Larry Page and Shamit Ramdi. We should be on the--

BORED ATTENDANT

Have a great time.

Trey smirks to himself, pushes Nash ahead of him into...

INT. THE MURCH'S MANSION - CONTINUOUS

A MASSIVE FOYER. Where POWER PLAYERS and WELL-TO-DO GUESTS network and mingle.

NASH

What was that? We weren't invited?!

TREY

"All war is based on deception."
Sun Tzu. Re-tweeted by Fifty Cent.

They continue into...

INT. MURCH'S MODERN MANSION - LIVING ROOM - CONTINUOUS

Massive. Sleek. Stylish. GUESTS mingle amidst the Far East-meets-future decor while a BAND of shaggy, middle-aged MUSICIANS rock out on a STAGE at the far end of the room.

NASH

(freaking out)
We can't-- We don't belong here.

Nash starts scratching at his legs and HUMMING. Trey grabs his shoulders--

TREY

Nash, I need you to listen to me.
It's gonna be fine. We just need to find the Murch, get five minutes alone with him, and do our thing.
Can you breathe for me? Big in through the nose...

Nash stops scratching and humming. Inhales. Exhales.

TREY (CONT'D)

Okay. Follow me.

They move through the crowd, Trey pointing out the players--

TREY (CONT'D)

(re: a well-dressed geek)
Chris McLaren. Designed the Mad Cow games. Escapist bullshit, but his company's valued at $600 million.
We'll do better.

(re: a regal 60-year-old)
Felix Abasi, big time V.C. He invested in Lunagram and about a billion others. And that-- is George Murchison.

ON STAGE WITH THE BAND-- Millionaire Angel Investor GEORGE
"THE MURCH" MURCHISON jams on the FLUTE, Jethro Tull style.
Not the slick money-man we may have imagined, but a slightly pudgy ex-hippie in linen pants and a sherwani.

TREY (CONT'D)

Don't let the flute and sandals act fool you, he's got a mind like--

NASH

--John Mayer.

TREY

What?

NASH

He's playing. With John. Mayer.

Sure enough, neo-blues pretty boy JOHN MAYER is jamming with The Murch, mid-guitar solo. As the band hits its final note--

TREY

Go time.

A smattering of APPLAUSE. Trey drags Nash toward the stage, where The Murch kisses cheeks and slaps fives.

TREY (CONT'D)

Mr. Murchison. Trey Thornhill. This is my partner, Avinash Dagavi. We met briefly at your TED talk last--

MURCH

Ah yes, Thornhill. Got your emails.
(pointed)
All twenty of them. How did you...
Did I invite you?

TREY

If we could just get five minutes of your time, we're working on something--

MURCH

Got a party to host, kid. You wanna talk shop, call my office Monday morning and set something up.

TREY

I've been calling your office for weeks, but they told me--

The Murch walks off, leaving Trey and Nash with their dicks in their hands. Nash scratches his leg--

NASH

We're fucked.

TREY

Easy, bud. We just got here.

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - AFTERNOON - SAME TIME

Hobbes and Mitchell are debugging.

HOBBS

Beta's still draining juice like a Saigon street walker. Did you try switching from GPS to the local cell network?

But Mitchell isn't listening. He's watching Mikki and Dane in the distance. Dane has his shirt lifted up, revealing a TATTOO OF HEADPHONES on his right pec.

MITCHELL

I totally blew it with Mikki.

HOBBS

Lemme tell you something about the ladies, Mitch. They're slow to warm up, but they reward persistence. Think of Mikki as a frostbitten limb. Cold and incapable of feeling, but you rub long and hard enough, you'll get to the pink.

Hobbes pulls an iPhone out of his pocket--

HOBBS (CONT'D)

To whit-- Dane's iPhone.

MITCHELL

What? How did you--

HOBBS

Let's just say it fell out of his pocket. Now, I send you Mikki's digits...

(he swipes and sends)
And then we change her number in Dane's phone...

MITCHELL

Change it to what?

HOBBS

To mine. So when I send Dane a text--

MITCHELL

(catching on)
He'll think it's coming from Mikki... But if I have her number, shouldn't I just, like, call her?

HOBBS

Are you a Jedi master of the Social Matrix? No. For guys like us, love is a fucking jungle, and the only way you get a girl like Mikki is by taking out the alpha. Dane's gotta go. And by "go," I mean suffer brutal humiliation by our hands.

Hobbes holds out Dane's phone. A nervous Mitchell takes it.

INT. THE MURCH'S MANSION - VARIOUS Trey talks shop with a fellow ENTREPRENEUR.

TREY

I don't want to take the first money that comes knocking. I need an investor with vision, someone who sees the long game. Have you seen Murchison anywhere?

ENTREPRENEUR

Nah. He usually doesn't put in much face time at these things. Unless you're, you know--

He indicates a small group of DARK-HAIRED HOTTIES nearby.

ENTREPRENEUR (CONT'D)

Then he's got plenty of face to give.

Meanwhile... NASH has retreated to his "happy place"-- earbuds in, Yacht Rock cranked. He hums along, nibbling on satay skewers, focused intensely on something OFF SCREEN.

He eyes it critically, carefully, like a scientist studying a chemical reaction. And then we see it--

A FRAMED SHUNGA WATERCOLOR of a naked Japanese woman receiving oral pleasure from an OCTOPUS.

NASH

Ridiculous. Mollusks have barbed tongues.

Reveal A WELL-DRESSED WOMAN standing next to him, nonplussed.

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - BULLPEN - LATER

Mitchell lurks near Dane's desk, in espionage mode. When Dane gets up, Mitchell slips Dane's PHONE into his messenger bag.

MIKKI (O.S.)

What are you doing?

Startled, Mitchell turns to find Mikki watching him.

MITCHELL

What? Nothing. I... was just...

MIKKI

'Cause it looked like you put a phone in Dane's bag. Which is weird, 'cause he's been looking for his phone all day.

Mitchell, freaked, confesses in a single breath--

MITCHELL

Hobbes took it to get me your number because you and Dane bumped phones earlier and then we changed your number so we could text Dane but pretend we were you and--

MIKKI

Cool. I want in.

MITCHELL

You want... what?

MIKKI

If you're messing with Dane, I want in. I'm bored. Plus, he's a tool.

MITCHELL

I thought you guys were-- why'd you give him your number?

MIKKI

He said he had a weed connect. I just moved here and I'm out.

INT. MODERN MANSION - SAME TIME

Nash reloads on skewers, arranging them OCD-style when--

VOICE (O.S.)

Avinash? OMG, is that you?

Nash turns to find MICHAEL LAU (22), the SpaceRace impresario, bounding over, arms extended for a hug.

NASH

Michael Lau.

MICHAEL LAU

It's been ages!

NASH'S POV: Lau closes in fast-- uncomfortably so-- but there's something adorable about his nebbish, bespectacled face that keeps Nash from beating a hasty retreat.

MICHAEL LAU (CONT'D)

After you guys dropped out junior year it was like-- "Poof! Ghost Protocol initiated!" I miss our old hack sessions.

We may sense some sexual tension between these two... not that they're aware of it.

NASH
(overly formal)
Congratulations on SpaceRace.

MICHAEL LAU
(nicest guy ever)
I think they overvalued it, but...
I'm just psyched to see what you're cooking up.

Nash scratches, doesn't make eye contact. Michael notices the Shunga prints--

MICHAEL LAU (CONT'D)
Wow, these are explicit, aren't they? Geez.
(chuckles)
Erotic!... You wanna get some air?

EXT. MURCH'S MANSION - DECK - SUNSET

Trey checks his watch, impatient. Looks across the DECK and sees LISA, the woman from Barcade, standing alone, taking in the sunset. He approaches. She sees him coming--

LISA
And just like that, a stunning view... ruined.

TREY
I didn't catch your name last night. Trey Thornhill.

He extends his hand, but she doesn't return the offer.

TREY (CONT'D)
I just came over to tell you that I wasn't hitting on you last night.
You're not even my type, I prefer tall women with blond hair. No freckles, dancer's build, a little extra in the trunk is fine, far less conservative fashion sense--

LISA
Are you for real? I need to get this on video.

TREY

My point is, I was conducting research when I approached you and while I can see how you'd misinterpret my intentions, I assure you they had nothing to do with sexual desire.

LISA

Well thank God for that.
(wait--)
Did you say research?

TREY

Yes. I'm developing an app that's going to revolutionize social networking. I'm here to pitch it to George Murchison.

LISA

(not impressed)
Sounds promising.

TREY

It is. Very promising. I promise.

Just then, Nash steps outside with Lau, buddy-buddy. Trey is taken aback--

TREY (CONT'D)

What the shit?

Lisa turns, sees Lau too--

LISA

Ah! There he is. Michael!
(waves Lau over)
Well, Trey, it's been strange.

TREY

You're with Michael Lau?

LISA

With, with? God no. George Murchison invested in him. And as Mr. Murchison's Senior Analyst, it's my job to make sure that investment pays off.

Panic takes hold as Trey realizes what he just stepped in. Lau smiles at Trey, goes for a high five--

LAU

Thornhill in the hay-ouse!

But Trey leaves Lau hanging, too stunned to react.

END OF ACT TWO.

ACT THREE

EXT. MURCH'S MANSION - DECK - MOMENTS LATER

Trey speed-walks away from Lau and Lisa, grabbing Nash by the elbow and dragging him with--

TREY

That's Murch's gatekeeper, and she doesn't like me. We need to find him while she's busy with Lau--

NASH

(mouth full of satay)
But he said to call next week--

TREY

We're done waiting. Time to see the wizard.

INT. MURCH'S MANSION - LIVING ROOM - NIGHT

Trey spots the Murch holding court, wielding a SAMURAI SWORD behind a SUSHI BAR made of ice.

MURCH

This bluefin was caught less than twenty hours ago off the coast of Matsusaka. Wait 'til you taste the freshness.

The Murch carefully slices into the fish, the small crowd "oohs" and "aahs."

MURCH (CONT'D)

Anyone tries to dip this in soy sauce will get my shinshinto sword up their ass.

LAUGHS from the group. Trey pushes his way to the front.

TREY

Mr. Murchison. I'm sorry, if we could just get five minutes--

MURCH

I thought I told you to fuck off.

TREY

Actually, you told me to call your office next week, but next week is too late.

MURCH

This isn't the time or the place, kid.

Trey spots Lisa CLOSING IN. Now or never--

TREY

"The only wrong place is second place." You said that, sir, in your keynote.

A beat. The Murch sheathes his sword--

MURCH

Five minutes.

INT. MODERN MANSION - MURCH'S OFFICE

Murch reclines behind a massive desk in his man cave, smoking a JOINT, surrounded by GIANT MONITORS. Lisa stands behind him, waving smoke away as she takes notes on a tablet.

Nash nervously works a laptop, which feeds ONE OF THE MONITORS -- displaying a MOCKUP for the "BRB" MOBILE APP. Trey is mid-presentation, spreading his gospel.

TREY

--the key is "novelty." Our brains are wired to seek it. Our libidos demand it. And yet, most social networking tools connect us with people we already know. BRB is different. Our app introduces you to people you should know. New people. And it tells you where these people are hanging out, in real time, so you can stop staring at screens and get out into the real world, where meaningful interactions happen.

MURCH

"Meaningful interactions"... You mean fucking?

TREY

It's bigger than that. I'm talking about a world without loneliness.

MURCH
Social's all sewn up, kid.

LISA
You can't go toe to toe with Facebook.

But Trey won't be dismissed so easily--

TREY
When Facebook launched, kids used it to enhance their social lives.
Now my grandma's on there "liking" casserole recipes and Taylor
Lautner's abs have a fan page.
We've turned life into a spectator sport, but in our real lives, we're lonelier than ever.

Murch picks up his flute and blows a few bars, unconvinced.

MURCH
I've got a second set with Mayer.
So stop tickling my nipples and show me what you're packing.

TREY
Nash? Show the man how it works.

Nash shoots Trey a worried look, then pulls up The Murch's FACEBOOK PROFILE on a monitor. With a few keystrokes, he's HACKED INTO IT.

TREY (CONT'D)
BRB will use its own proprietary interface-- the beta is already underway. But for the sake of demonstration-- this is your social life, as Facebook sees it. But when we apply our algorithm...

Nash CLACKS AWAY, applying the BRB algorithm to reveal PROFILES Murch has a high match percentage with on the site, ranked by common interests and geographical proximity.

MURCH
Whoa. What just happened?

TREY
These are people you'd like. Ranked by common interests, proximity and a thousand other factors I can't reveal just yet. Map, please.

A MAP similar to Google Maps appears, GLOWING PINS identifying USERS' locations in nearby San Francisco.

TREY (CONT'D)

There they are. All over the city, which has just become your social oyster. Now let's find you a pearl.

Nash ZOOMS in on THE MURCH'S HOUSE-- a smaller set of PINS.

TREY (CONT'D)

I'm guessing you're a brunette man.

NASH CLACKS AWAY, and most of the pins vanish, leaving four or five remaining. He MOUSES over one, finding a match ratio of 92%, and clicks, bringing up her FACEBOOK PROFILE.

TREY (CONT'D)

Debbie. Late 20s, mixing and mingling as we speak. I'm guessing she's into gold digging, medical marijuana and Aqualung. But you don't have to guess, because BRB says you've got a nine-in-ten shot at sexual chemistry. And this is only the beginning.

Nash clicks. HOUSANDS of MARKERS erupt on the MAP.

TREY (CONT'D)

As our user base grows, so does our data set. As we mine that data, our algorithm evolves, until eventually, you'll have the entire Social Matrix in your pocket, just a finger-swipe away. "The end of loneliness." That's BRB. It's what we type when we leave webspace. And now it's the reason we leave, too.

Lisa looks skeptical. But Murch is intrigued.

MURCH

(to Nash)

Yo, silent partner. How are you doing this?

Nash just smirks, Sphinx-like. This is what he does.

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - COMMUNAL KITCHEN - LATER

Hobbes sits at a table, TEXTING furiously. He sees Mikki and Mitchell approaching and panics, pretending to make a call.

MITCHELL

It's okay, I told her. She wants in. And Dane is a drug dealer.

HOBBS

Maybe I underestimated him.

MIKKI

Nah, he's just a middleman. Has Dane said anything I can use later to get off?

HOBBS

I'm six texts in. Which according to my advance computational modeling means we're only a few texts away from Dane sending us a dick pic.

MIKKI

(reads over his shoulder)
I would never say "damp." Makes my vag sound like a cellar.

Mitchell reels from the mental image.

HOBBS

No offense, but I've got a lot of experience in this field.

MIKKI

Impersonating Asians? Move over.
(she begins typing)
Bet you twenty bucks he shaves his balls.

INT. THE MURCH'S MANSION - MURCH'S OFFICE

Trey talks turkey with Murch and Lisa while Nash packs up.

TREY

It's genius, right?

LISA

It's a stalker's wet dream.

MURCH

You can't demo this around town. Zuckerberg will make your nutsack into a dreamcatcher and hang it in your jail cell.

TREY

That's why we need you. We can't go wide, not yet. But we're sitting on something huge. We just want money to finish the beta.

MURCH

And I want an escort who looks like Kate Upton and cooks eggs benedict the morning after. You've got balls, kid, but my advice? Make something practical. Something people need.

LISA

Like SpaceRace.

Trey snaps-- that's one too many victories for Michael Lau.

TREY

SpaceRace? Think! There are 320,000 parking meters in San Francisco and half a million registered vehicles. Your user base expands, it's carma-fucking-geddon. I'm offering you a product with infinite scalability-- the Human Condition. The whole world wants BRB, they just don't know it yet. And knowing it before they do, that's what makes people like you into billionaires. This is the future, and it's knocking on your door.

A long beat.

MURCH

Decent pitch, kid. But I'm high as a kite and all I've got in my head is the flute solo to "Your Body is a Wonderland."

NASH

(finally speaks)

There is no flute solo in "Your Body--"

MURCH

My answer's no.

INT. TREY'S CAR - LATER

Trey and Nash ride in silence, tension filling the car. As Trey pulls into a parking spot outside of WEWORK, the SpaceRace app purrs: "Like a glllllllove." Trey YANKS his iPhone from its cradle and HURLS it out the window, pissed.

He takes a moment to compose himself.

TREY

The Murch will come around. He's just testing us.

Nash snorts-- "Are you kidding me?"

NASH

I told you we weren't ready.

TREY

The algorithm can't be denied. Any idiot can see its value. We'll find someone else--

NASH

Listen to yourself! Or are you even capable of listening? You just push and push and you never shut up!

Nash starts pulling off the jeans Trey made him wear. He struggles to get them off.

NASH (CONT'D)

What is wrong with you?!

TREY

What's wrong with you?! At least I try. At least I put it out there for people to say "no" to. You'd rather sit alone in your--

(stops himself)

And what the fuck were you doing with Lau? You jumping ship? I thought we were partners!

Nash finally gets the jeans off. He throws open the car door, turns back for a final shot--

NASH

So did I!

--and TOSSES the jeans in Trey's face. SLAMS the door and walks away in his boxers. Trey sighs. Fuck.

INT. WEWORK OFFICES - LATER

Mitchell, Mikki and Hobbes are huddled around Hobbes' phone. ON SCREEN: the familiar "... of an impending text. Suddenly, DING! Hobbes shoots his fist skyward in triumph.

HOBBS

The eagle's junk has landed!

The three stare in giddy horror at DANE'S DICK PIC.

MITCHELL

Yuck. Why is he holding it next to the keyboard like that?

MIKKI

To show scale?

HOBBS

Base to tip is only like "V" to "back-slash." Full chub, too.

Trey enters the office, sees the gang together, laughing and high-fiving. He watches for a beat... can't bear to tell them the bad news. He turns and slinks out of the office UNSEEN.

INT. TREY'S APARTMENT - VERY LATE / VERY EARLY

A modest space, devoid of furniture except for a MATTRESS in the middle of the room. One WALL is covered with SCRIBBLINGS and DIAGRAMS. In the middle of them, a large printout tacked to the wall: "Move Fast And Break Things."

Trey sits alone, back against the opposite wall, staring at this mantra. He picks up his iPhone, screen CRACKED from the incident in the car. Calls Nash--

INT. NASH'S STUDIO - SAME TIME

IKEA decor. Well organized. Nash is engaged in an epic GUILD WARS session on his triple-wide COMPUTER MONITOR. He wears a GAMING HEADSET, from which the TINNY sounds of battle ECHO.

CLOSE ON -- Nash's PHONE ringing in its dock, displaying a PHOTO of TREY AND NASH at Stanford, arms around each other's shoulders. An instrumental version of Hall and Oates' ballad "One On One" plays, Nash's chosen ringtone for his friend.

As the call goes to voice mail, we see that Nash has another missed call as well-- this one from MICHAEL LAU.

INT. TREY'S MODERN LOFT - CONTINUOUS

Trey considers leaving a message on Nash's voicemail, but can't find the words. He clicks off, demoralized.

Trey crawls onto the mattress and pulls a pillow over his head, blocking out the world. A long beat, and then...

DING!

WE PUSH IN ON THE PHONE to find AN INCOMING TEXT: A SNAPSHOT of the GORGEOUS BRUNETTE ("Debbie") from Trey's pitch. She lies in The Murch's bed naked, post-coital.

THE TEXT below reads: "You kids give good algorithm. I'll be in touch."

DING! A second TEXT. It reads: "Lisa will run point. BTW she doesn't like u."

CUT TO BLACK.

Blair Witch Project, The (1999)

by Daniel Myrick and Eduardo Sanchez.

This Transcript was taken from the early Sundance Film Fest version of the movie.

In October of 1994, three student filmmakers disappeared in the woods near Burkittsville, Maryland while shooting a documentary called "The Blair Witch Project".

A year later their footage was found.

Man off camera: You look a little blurry. Let me zoom out okay?

Heather: Okay. Huh.

Man: Okay got you.

Heather: This is my home. Which I am leaving the comforts of, for the weekend. To explore the Blair Witch.

(Close up of pile of books)

Heather: Some essential reading. How To Stay Alive in the Woods, cause you never know what's going to happen.

(Picks up book)

Heather: And this is a very important book, because it has the article about what happened at Coffin Rock.

Man: That's pretty old.

Heather: Yeah it's totally old.

Heather: And this is my field notebook.

(Cuts to Joshes car)

Heather: Hey it's Mister Punctuality! How the hell are you this morning?

Josh: Tired. So I got the CP up.

Heather: Good. It's important, cause that's what were shooting on.

Josh: No one knows I have it, but I got it.

Heather: Alright, come on. Into the house.

(Circling each other with cameras.)

Heather: (laughing) I'm not going to bump into shit from the directors' chair. I don't want to fuck up the cameras before we leave. Hey! Nice camera man! All right I know I'm hitting the steps.

(Inside Heaters house, Josh looking tired with head down on table)

Josh: So where's Mikey at?

Heather: I have to go get him.

Josh: Okay.

Heather: Supposed to be there at 8:30.

Josh: Okay.

Heather: Which means we are already going to be behind schedule, but it's important to have juice.

Josh: That's cool.

Cut to outside Mike's house inside car.

Heather: I guess your Mike!

Josh starts to back away leaving mike on the doorstep.

Heather: (whisper) stop, stop, stop, stop.

Will we get to meet your Mamma?

Inside car.

Heather: How are you Mike? It's nice to meet you.

Mike: I'm doing good, and I'm very excited about this. Thank you for the opportunity.

Heather: Well thank you for getting the equipment together.

Cuts to grocery store.

Holding box of rice over shopping cart

Josh: Yeah we've got rice. Got mustard, fudge.

Mike holds up Powerbar

Mike: Oatmeal and raisin baby.

Heather: You like raisin? I don't like it.

Mike: I've never had a Powerbar before.

Heather zooms in on bag of Marshmallows

Heather: Oh soft

Josh off camera: Hey! You weasel!

Heather: Marrrrrshmelllowwwss.

Walking into small diner

Mike points out a Halloween decoration of a ghost

Josh and Heather: Boooooooh

Heather: Do you believe in ghosts?

Inside diner

Head shot of Waitress Girl

Heather: Have you ever heard of the Blair Witch?

Girl: I guess. That actually sounds kind of familiar. My older sister went to Blair High School.

Heather: I wanna, I wanna get a little bit into here...

Josh: I want to go set this camera up over here.

Sets camera on nearby table shooting towards the crew

Heather: We are relatively tightly scheduled. So try to keep us moving. First we are going to area five. I cannot stress enough the importance of being on time.

Josh: First is the cemetery?

Heather: First is the cemetery.

Cut to cemetery Mike fiddling with gear

Josh: You guys wanna get the uh...ceremonial first slate?

Heather fixes makeup in cars rear view mirror

Heather: Absolutely.

Heather zooms around Josh

Heather: Here he is, filling out our first slate for our first shot.

Josh: Should we all like cut our fingers open and bleed on it? A little bloodletting on the slate?

Heather: No we'll save that for later. (Laughs nervously)

Josh: Kiss the slate. It's first slate.

Heather: First slate, marked by my lipstick.

Josh carries slate over to Mike

Josh: First slate, kiss it.

Mike bites down onto clacker part of slate

Heather: Awe he licked it, god bless him. Your not supposed to eat it, we need that for the rest of the shoot.

Cut to Welcome sign outside of Burkittsville

Heather: This is Burkittsville, formerly Blair. It is a small, quiet Maryland town.

Cuts to heather in cemetery

Much like a small town anywhere. No more then twenty families laid their roots here over two hundred years ago. Many of whom remain, either on this hill or in the town below.

There are an unusually high number of children laid to rest here.

Shots of various headstones

Most of whom passed in the 1940's. Yet no one in the town seems to recall anything unusual about this time. To us anyway. Yet legend tells a different story. One whose evidence is all around us, etched in stone.

In joshes car

Heather: Yeah! Yeehaww! Well we have shot the first scene! The cemetery scene, the opening is shot!

Josh shows a handful of ruined and crumpled 16mm film to camera.

Heather: Ahh this is our salad.

Josh: This is our souvenir.

Heather: Yes this is our souvenir from our very first shot, of our very first scene on 16 millimeter. And we are proud of this salad.

Cut to man in general store

Heather: We are making a documentary, about the Blair Witch.

Man: (smiles) Oh?

Heather: Oh, have you heard of the Blair Witch?

Man: Oh yeah, that's an old, old, old story.

Outside store on B&W 16mm

Man: I remember Mister Parr was an old hermit.

Heather: Right.

Man: He lived up on the mountain, he had a place up there and had been up there for a long, long time.

Cut to woman with baby.

Heather: You've heard of the Blair Witch?

Woman: Several times.

Heather: Several times, and what was the first incidence?

Woman: Well I'd heard stories about her from people and neighbors and stuff like that. But also I saw a documentary on the Discovery Channel or something like that once, about her, about ghosts and legends in Maryland.

Cut back to man

Man: Sorta in the winter I guess that followed. In the winter of 1940. Ahh some of the young kids started disappearing. Nobody, nobody knew anything about why they were disappearing.

Cut back to woman

Woman: But the creepy

Woman is cut off by baby putting hand over woman's mouth

Heather: Uh oh that's an omen.

Woman: Haha, the creepiest story I'd heard about her, was that two men were out hunting near the uh, cabin or something that she's supposed to haunt. And they dissapeard off the face of the earth.

Baby grows more agitated

Baby: No! No! No!

Woman: It's all right Ingrid, I'm just telling a scary story, but it's not true.

Woman: (mouths) It's true.

Cut back to man

Man: Finally one day, old Mister Parr comes down into the market and said "I'm finally finished."

Heather: And what did he mean by that?

Man: Well I guess nobody knew at first but the police finely went up on the mountain and they searched his house and they found the bodies of seven kids from the area, and those were the seven kids who were missing. And then they brought them out of the woods one at a time. And it was just a terrible thing, just tore the whole community up.

Back to woman

Woman: Well their wives apparently went looking for them and they found their campsite. The fire was still burning. The deer that they had hunted that was being in the process of being gutted. It looked like someone was still working there and camping there and all that. The men were no where to be found. Their clothes were there. Everything was there.

Heather: But they never found them?

Woman: They never found them there.

Cut to girl in Diner

Girl: All my life I've believed in witches or ghosts and stuff.

Heather: But you believe there are some in this area?

Girl: Oh defiantly.

Cut to old man on street

Heather: Do you believe in witchcraft?

Old Man: Nope!

Heather: No?

Old Man: No sir.

Heather: Are you a religious man?

Old Man: Yep.

Heather: Alrighty.

Back to woman with baby -put in other parts

Woman: Pretty creepy stuff. I believe there is something happening with her.

Heather: Do you think its possible that she is still up there now?

Woman: I don't go up there.

Heather: You don't go up there?

Woman: Yeah I believe enough to not go up there. (Laughs)

Cut back to first man

Man: They say that the woods are all haunted up there and stuff like that.

Heather: What do they say? How are they haunted?

Man: Well there really isn't many people that say it's haunted, but there was this old woman by the name of Mary Brown.

Heather: Mary Brown? Hmm.

Man: Yeah and she was kinda crazy.

Heather: How was she seen by the community?

Man: Crazy.

Cut to in car driving towards trailer home

Heather: That's it, the American flag. Mary's house.

I'm gonna grab her and bring her out. Why don't you check around and see what the best light is.

Heather confronts Mary's gate comprised of twigs bound together with string Heather: This is Mary's gate. I'm not even sure how I pull this open.

Heather lifts one end and tries to open gate

Heather: Okay. Oh shit. I've made her gate fall apart.

Cuts to Mary standing on her porch holding a bible

Heather: Cause something interesting happened at one point in your life. You had an encounter with the Blair Witch?

Mary: Yes I um, that is really a kinda scary story. To kinda make ends meet my dad and I would go fishing down by Tapings creek. You know that uhhms it's in Burkittsville. I was lying down on the leaves, upon the leaves, kinda watching the pool and looking up at the sky. And all of the sudden it felt like somthin was near me. You know kinda a eerie feeling. It was like a woman! Only on her arms and on her hands it was like a hair. It was real dark almost black hair. Almost like a horse.

Heather: Like fur?

Mary: Yeah like a fur, like a horse fur. And her arms, she had like a shawl, a wool shawl over her.

Heather: And she scared you? She threatened you?

Mary: And um...she didn't say anything, but she kept staring and then she opened up her shawl. And under it there was hair on her body like a horse.

Heather: So she was hairy from head to toe?

Mary: Yeah and her legs. And you could see she was a female.

Heather: How about her face?

Mary: Just kinda like strange looking.

Cuts back to car

Josh: Thank god she's not in the film business. I mean can you imagine...

Heather: She thinks she is in the film business! She also says she's a ballerina.

Mike: Get out!

Heather: She says she's a historian writing a book on American History.

Mike: I heard that.

Heather: And she says she's a scientist who does research at the department of energy.

Cuts to later in car

Josh: I'm checking my depth of field charts to see how bad...

Heather: So you measure for meters? What? Were not in Europe!

Josh: Yeah well the fucking lens has meters on it.

Heather: It also has, it also has our system.

Josh: Nah, it has meters on it.

Heather: This is an American camera though.

Josh: All those are meters.

Heather: What about the brown ones?

Josh: The brown ones are feet.

Heather: Yeah, the brown ones are on there, eh?

Josh: Yeah, but the white ones are obvious.

Heather: I thought you used this camera before man?

Josh: I've used it like once before.

Cut to motel room

Heather: How do you feel about today guys?

Josh: I learned a lot.

Heather: You learned a lot about Mary Brown?

Josh: I learned a lot about like shooting.

Heather: Sixteen?

Josh: Just, just shooting out here.

Cuts ahead crew is drinking and feeling good

Josh: (coughs)

Heather: Are you all right?

Mike: Are you gonna die?

Josh: I ain't gonna die paw!

Heather: The witch'll kill yah out there.

They toast each other

Mike: We kicked some ass today.

Josh: Cheers.

Heather: Very good day.

Mike: Excellent day.

Heather: Very good first day.

We're going to do an equipment check, and then I'm gonna call my mom.

Mike: Okay, I've got a bag of Utz and a beer.

Mike and Josh laugh

Heather: So I guess you're covered then.

Heather: Can you just run it for a few feet for me so we can check that it's okay?

Josh: Sure.

Josh picks up 16-mm camera and starts to shoot heather shooting him with VHS camera

Heather: We just want to hear it, so the mag is loaded properly so we can shoot some stuff.

Okay that's good. That's good thank you!

Heather: Let's just be relaxed because we've got a really, really long day tomorrow. Today was cake compared to tomorrow. We're going to do a lot of hiking, were going to have a lot of weight with us.

Josh: I'm there.

Mike: That's what we're preparing for!

Heather: (laughs) All right, shut up yah smart-ass.

Heather: Poor me a shot please.

Josh motions bottle of Scotch towards Heather.

Mike: Ohhh! You can't do that.

Heather: Yes I can, at this point I fuckin have to do that all right!

Mike laughs

Heather: Do we have any weed?

Cuts to heather holding bottle of Scotch

Heather: Here I go. (Takes swig)

Josh: Drink! Drink!

Heather: (makes face) I fucking hate Scotch.

Josh laughs

Cuts to next morning Josh packing car

Heather: There's my son Josh.

Josh: Kay.

Heather: How are yah?

Josh: I'm hurtin.

Cuts to Mike still getting ready in motel room

Mike: I'm not ready for that thing yet, like, you know?

Heather: I, I know you don't like it. Okay.

Heather waves at herself in bathroom mirror

Heather: Hello. Welcome to day two.

Cuts to inside car driving along country road

Heather: The trail should be somewhere along here, we shouldn't miss it. It should be pretty obvious.

Cuts to fishermen along creek

Heather: You guys say you know something about the Blair Witch?

Fisherman 1: Oh I've heard the myth. I don't really believe much in it.

Heather: The myth?

Fisherman 1: That's all I think it is.

Fisherman 2 mumbles something

Heather: What did you say sir?

Fisherman 2: I said you damn fool kids will never learn.

Heather: You damn fool kids will never learn.

Fisherman 1: Ehh shut up.

Heather: What makes you say that? First of all can I have your permission to put your image on video for the purpose of the documentary entitled the Blair Witch Project?

Fisherman 2: Well I don't care much about that but uh.

Heather: Well you have to say yes or no sir.

Fisherman 2: Yeah sure that's all right.

Fisherman 1: Uh, well some girl back in the late 1800's, Robin Weaver I believe her name was. Supposedly, wandered off and disappeared into the woods.

Fisherman 2: Ain't no supposedly about it! She wandered off!

Fisherman 1 swats at comment and rolls eyes

Fisherman 1: Okay so she wandered off.

Fisherman 2: And she got lost!

Fisherman 1: Three days later...

Fisherman 2: (mumbles) Supposedly....

Fisherman 1: (stutters, glares over at Fisherman 2 and tries to continue story)

Three days later she just uh appears back on her grandmothers' porch. And everybody's mystified by it. She was babbling...

Fisherman 2: And she had a tale to tell too.

Fisherman 1: Yeah she was babbling something about an old woman who's feet never touched the ground.

Fisherman 2: I tell yah, I saw right up there by that tree up the creek, about a hundred yards. A white misty thing that I can't tell what it was.

Heather: Gray? Like gray vapor rising out of the trees?

Fisherman 2: Wright out of the water!

Heather: Right out of the water?

Fisherman 2: Up the side of them trees and it disappeared over them....

Fisherman 1: Oh your full of it.

Fisherman 2: Anybody worth there salt around here knows this area has been haunted by that old woman for years.

Cut to inside of car, Josh sitting on windshield filming while Mike drives and Heather videotapes his ass.

Heather: (laughs) Oh our view is just ever so amazing. (Makes goat like sound swivels camera up)

Mike: How's the speed? A little more?

Josh: (muffled) Yeah you can!

Heather: Could you slide up so we get more of your ass-crack?

Cuts to what Josh is shooting on 16mm

Mike: Some serious woods around here.

Heather: You excited?

Mike: You got it.

Heather: I hope he's not rolling off the whole shot on this. How many feet are you shooting?

Josh: Ah, about twenty so far.

Heather: Oh okay good.

Slowly pass cabin along the road

Cuts to Heather struggling to strap on her with equipment pack

Mike: I could help you, but I'd rather stand here and record.

Heather: Okay.

Cuts to Heather having camera again

Heather: Packs are on were ready to go.

Mike: We gotta go up to the shack? The shanty?

Heather: Yup.

Josh: Wow.

Heather backs away, the car shrinking in the distance.

Heather: Oh my god, scary.

Cuts to the beginning of the hike

Heather: On our way to coffin rock now, we are totally on track now. I know exactly where we are. We are a bit behind schedule and I'm a bit concerned about loosing light today.

Mike: Ready for another song? (Sings) We are down by the river!

Heather: (laughs) we are down by the river.

Cuts to large ditch with small stream running through it

Heather: So were crossing this? Yeah?

Josh: Yeah

Josh runs and jumps into ditch

Cuts to Mike having camera

Josh: You wanna toss me the video camera man?

Heather: No I don't think we want to throw the video camera.

Josh: Hey Mikey throw me the video camera man.

Heather: No ah

Heather climbs down into ditch

Mike: I want to get her going across man.

Shot of Heather's rear end

Mike: I see a dirty behind!

Cuts to coffin rock, where rocks jut out into the stream

Heather: There it is. See?

Cuts to Heather on top of coffin rock.

Heather: (clacks slate picks up "The Blair Witch Cult" book struggles to find her place and begins reading)

Heather: They went into the woods prepared to find death, what they found was a desecration to humanity. At the site which trappers have often refereed to as Coffin Rock. On top of the rock formation, the story of the torture inflicted upon these brave five men unfolded. Each was bound to the other. Each mans hands bound to the next mans feet, forming a solid structure out of the men. Blood at the edge of the hedges had indicated that this act had been committed while each was alive and able bodied enough to struggle. In the torso of each man the intestines had been torn out crudely. On each mans sun bleached face was inscribed with indecipherable writing cut into their flesh with an eerie precision. The men still entranced by the horror of what had happened, left the scene to tell the sheriff what had happened and did not sketch the writing and did not remove the bodies from the rock. Upon return vultures were seen at the rock, but upon inspection the bodies had been removed by persons unknown. The search party clamed that the stench of death was still thick. And whom ever took the bodies had done so in a matter of hours.

That happened here, at Coffin Rock.

Cuts to Heather looking at watch

Heather: I felt really rushed, cause I really want to get to camp and its 4:52. We're going to be loosing light soon.

Cuts to what Josh is shooting on 16mm

Heather: But I can always use the shots without me in it. Because I recorded sound reading the whole thing. I'm sure I can edit it together somehow.

Heather: It's starting to rain.

Cuts to Josh and Mike setting up camp

Heather: Well I don't have a tent for three people. I'm not usually traveling with two men if you know what I'm saying.

Cuts to Mike playing with stick stuck in the ground

Heather: ...video camera, what a lie! It's poring rain right now; we can't even get a fire going.

Heather: Show the kids at home what the stick is for!

Mike shifts, leans tall and rests his arm on the stick

Heather: Look at that.

Cuts to night inside tent

Josh: You get too much ass smell just...

Heather: Okay, who wouldn't let me have a cigarette in the tent but he's aloud to fart as much as he wants?

Josh: I never gave Mike any fart allowance.

(Laughs)

Cuts to morning

Heather: So you heard noises last night? See the problem is I sleep like a fucking rock.

Josh: (yawns) there were two separate noises coming from two layers of spacer over here. And one of them was like. One of them possibly could have been an owl, but the other one was like a cackling.

Heather: No way.

Josh: It was a total cackle.

Mike: If I heard a cackling I would have shit in my pants.

Cuts to crew looking at map, Josh filming

Josh: Where did we start out yesterday?

Heather: Off the map.

Josh: Off the map.

Heather: Cause I knew where we were going. Though I know there was some confusion.

Josh: Wait, wait say that again?

Heather: I said I knew where we were going.

Josh: Wait, would that be a full of shit statement?

Josh points camera at Mike

Josh: Would that be a full of shit statement?

Mike nods

Heather: No I did know where we were going!

Josh: All I'm saying is that you got us lost man.

Heather: For a very brief amount of time!

Josh: Okay.

Mike: Just don't get us lost today.

Josh: Yeah seriously.

Heather: I'm not! I know where all these points are on the map.

Josh: So what's up? Are you happy with the way the documentary is going?

Heather: Yes I am.

Josh: Yeah?

Heather: And I'm very pleasantly surprised by our little Mikey.

Mike: Your little Mikey?

Heather laughs

Heather: He's a very spirited young man.

Josh: So what's up, I mean what's your take on the Blair Witch at this point?

Heather: I don't know.

Josh: Do you think she exists?

Heather: I don't know.

Cuts to crew hiking

Mike: Heather I wish you would find the trail already.

Heather: There is a trail on top of this hill! Don't worry! It is a trail.

Heather: We like short cuts don't we?

Mike: We like level shortcuts, we don't' like mountiness short cuts.

Cuts to close up of Mike's naked chest

Heather: It's a little warmer today. This is the first time we've seen Mike's chest. All right it's really hard to pick up on video actually. Mike has really spurtatic hair patterns on his chest. It's like blank, harry, blank harry.

Mike: You should see my ass!

Josh: (points to hair patch) Look! Look! It's fucking Uruguay right there!

Heather: Wow!

Josh: There's Paraguay over here.

Heather: Look I think I see Bolivia!

Cuts to dead mouse on forest floor

Heather: What killed this dead mouse? Witchcraft?

Josh: How about god?

Cuts to heather squatting in the distance behind some trees

Josh: Is that the Blair Witch? No, I think its Heather taking piss.

Heather: I really have to go!

Josh: Well then go!

Cuts to hiking again

Heather: We are hot on the cemeteries trail. I can feel it.

Mike mumbles

Heather: What?

Mike: Says you.

Heather: Says me, of course. And we should be hitting it in about ninety minutes. You guys cool with that?

Mike: What?

Heather: 90 minutes. Can you hang...?

Josh: As long as you know where were going.

Heather: I know exactly where were going.

Cuts to Josh looking at map

Heather: I suppose its necessary to look at the map, even though I know where were going. And were going straight ahead up there.

Mike: If you know where were going we wouldn't be hiking like...

Josh: Were in the middle of the fucking woods.

Heather: Some of it is off trail hiking!

Mike: Because people told you, oh yeah there's a cemetery back there!

Mike: Were lost. Admit that first!

Heather: I know were not lost!

Mike: Oh and you knew that yesterday too, and you know that twice today!

Heather: Look! No! Bullshit! And we have not been lost at all today! Not once, I know where we were going!

Mike: Let me tell you what you told us. "It's like two hours away." Then it's like, three hours, maybe four hours away.

Heather: Did you agree to do this project?

Mike: I did! I agreed to a scouted out project! I didn't think we'd be running around in the woods...

Heather: It is scouted out!

Mike: I've got fifteen hundred dollars worth of equipment on me!

Josh: Guys! Guys! It's cool, it's cool. Please, your being a smart-ass and your being a smart-ass. Were, were just looking at the map using it the best we can. I can totally find this. This is where we were and we are going more or less this way.

Cuts to Mike holding map

Josh: Okay, what's your call. Where do you think we're going?

Mike: I'll tell you the truth. This is like; this is Greek to me. It's useless.

Heather: Right. Exactly.

Mike: So I am putting my ah trust in you that you know where it is.

Heather: Good.

Mike: Although I, I gotta tell you I don't fully trust you. And I....ah I'm not going to say it.

Heather: What?

Mike: Nothing, I don't understand why you have to have every conversation on video?

Heather: Because I'm making a documentary.

Mike: Not about us getting lost! We're making a documentary about a Witch!

Heather: I have a camera. It doesn't hurt, because I'm sure we'll look back at this and laugh heartily.

Cuts to Josh crossing stream on fallen log

Mike: Baby steps man, baby steps.

Heather: Just breathe and don't look down maybe? No you gotta look down.

Mike: You gonna have to crawl?

Josh: I'm going to crawl.

Mike: Cool.

Heather: Think about how fucking cool the cemetery is going to be when we get there. Think of the joy of being in a really good film!

Josh: Please be quiet!

Heather: Okay I'm quiet. Shit how am I going to do this?

Josh finishes crossing and stands up

Josh: Okay, Mikey?

Mike: Yeah.

Josh: There's no way your coming across. You'll have to get down on your belly.

Mike: No way man.

Josh: There's no chance. It's too fucking hard.

Heather: How are we going to get the DAT across then?

Josh: With the moss it's slippery as shit.

Heather: How will we get the DAT across?

Josh: I don't know, lemme get off here and get my pack off.

Mike: I'll just go back and forth.

Heather: You want to go back and forth? You can do it that way?

Mike: I didn't want to do this at all.

Heather: Okay, well do it back and forth.

Loud cracking

Josh: Oh god!

Heather: Oh shit! What'd you drop!

Josh: I didn't drop anything, the tree broke.

Mike: The log broke.

Heather: Phew! Oh, fuck.

Cuts to hiking near cemetery

Heather: We are very, very, very close now. You guys excited? Okay.

Heather: What's this?

Close up of tree with branches filled with rocks and dead twigs Heather: Say, guys? Do you remember something that Mary Brown said the other day? What was the story from the Bible she was telling us? Fuck I wasn't listening to her because I thought she was a lunatic.

Shots of piles of rocks, "graves" and rocks stacked high up in tree branches Heather: See I don't know if this counts. Three, four, five, six seven.

Cuts to night around camp fire

Heather: Witches in days gone by where roasted just like my Vienna sausage.

Flames are licking you like the devil their Josh.

Josh: (sings Gilligans Island theme)

Heather: Yeah, but this ship has a good captain, not a fat beer-guzzling captain.

Mike: He wasn't beer guzzling.

Josh: There was no beer on the island man, if they had beer they would've had like, big ass orgies.

(All laugh)

Heather: You're kinda like the Captain and Mikes kinda like your Gilligan. No offence, I mean that as a complement. Gilligan was a funny guy.

Josh: But the Captain was fat.

Heather: Okay, Let's call it a thin Captain.

Mike: Let's not call it the Captain anymore you illiterate TV people! It's the Skipper.

(All laugh loudly)

Cuts back to cemetery at night

Mike: Here we are back at the rock again, rock thing, cemetery deal.

Cuts to various rock piles

Sound of tumbling rocks

Heather: (gasps) You didn't just knock that over please tell me you didn't just knock that over. That's not very nice. All right, I'm going to put it back.

Heather places rocks back on pile and blows them a kiss

Heather: Can't be too careful.

Cuts ahead

Heather: What'd yah think?

Josh: It was...the same thing but darker.

Heather: Yeah pretty much. All right, bag it up put it away.

Cuts to absolute darkness

Heather: Hello!? (whispers) Shit the light.

(Sounds of sticks breaking in the distance)

(Heather breathes heavy)

Heather: We were sleeping...

Josh: Do you want this?

Heather: Just keep it by the opening of the tent!

Shhh!

Cuts to Heather crawling on hands and knees, then she motions Josh to come forward with camera

Heather: Hello!? Hello!

Cracking sounds in the distance

Heather: It's all around us. I can't see shit!

Cuts back to tent, Mike inside tent

Heather: Michael are you saying you're not coming down?

Mike: I ain't going down there!

Heather: Why not?

Mike: Because I don't hear shit!

Heather: Because you're fucking scared!

Mike: Because I don't hear anything anymore!

Heather: Because you're fucking scared! You can not deny hearing it! Get your ass out! What's the big deal!?

Cuts to next morning, Josh in rain gear.

Josh: This rain fucking blows dude.

Heather: I know and it's raining very heavily. Well...

Josh: Thank my mom for giving me rain gear for my eighteenth birthday, yah know.

Heather: (shivers) God bless her.

What do you think that was last night?

Josh: Personally.... I think it was someone fucking with your head.

Heather: But nobody knows where out here.

Josh: Yeah, but did you ever see Deliverance?

Cuts to Mike

Heather: Do you understand at all where I'm coming from? I just wanted to know that whoever it was...

Mike: You were freaking out. I don't even know....

Heather: I was freaking out. I wake up and all of the sudden shits going down, and all I can think is I gotta get it. I gotta get it all on; all I wanna get it on sound get it on sixteen. If we can see anything I want to see it on sixteen.

Mike: Well, it sounded to me like a bunch of people running around, and I'm not down with messing with locals or whatever. I dunno who the hell would come out here, but what bugs me out is that we're so damn deep in the woods and people are going to come out here and try and mess with us, then they gotta have something wrong with them. And I'm not gonna play with that.

Heather: But how do we know it was people?

Mike: Well even if it wasn't I'm not gonna play with that either!

Cuts to crew hiking back

Heather: (sighs) Fuck man, this is a really long day. Very wet, very long day. Nobody is really speaking to me at the moment now.

Mike: I don't remember a...(mumbles)

Heather: What?

Mike: I don't remember a portion of this from walking in from the car.

Heather: Well, we have to go a little differently to go back because we went around in a curve a little bit.

Cuts ahead

Heather: I'm telling you guys, two more hours max.

Josh: (stops walking) (mumbles) why were going back a different way?

Heather: Because we came a bit around. That was the most direct way to hit our two locations, now this is the most direct way back to the car.

Mike: Seriously, really?

Heather: Yeah! Seriously.

Mike: You know exactly what's going on?

Heather: Yes! Just keep going.

Josh: Yeah, well, will wait five minutes till map check.

Heather: All right.

Cuts ahead

Heather: All right we just did a map check and it seems were pretty much still on trail.

Josh: That's not what I said.

Heather: No, I think were all right.

(Both Josh then Mike look away in disgust)

Heather: We took a map reading we just fallow what the compass says. We are going straight ahead, that way. That way.

Josh: Were in the middle of nowhere!

Heather: We've been in the middle of nowhere for two days. The car is parked in the middle of nowhere, almost.

Josh: So like look at this shit man, this is nothing!

Heather: Okay, lets just keep going all right?

Cuts ahead

Heather: I think we should camp.

Mike: Get the fuck out of here! Why? Because you don't know where we're going?

Heather: No, because I think were still a ways off from the car and it's going to be getting dark real soon. Look, I'm not saying for certain.

Mike: We're not camping here! Get us home! Turn the camera off and get us home!

Heather: Maybe we're near the car. Maybe we're near the car!

Josh: Give me the fucking map! Give me the map. Turn the camera off and give me the map.

Mike: Turn the camera off and get us home!

Heather: No, I'm not turning the camera off. I wanna mark this occasion.

Josh: Give me the map.

Heather: The map is in my pocket your going to have to wait a second.

Mike: GODDAMN!

Heather: If we keep our heads together we'll be just fine.

Mike: THAT'S FUCKING BULLSHIT!

Josh: Mike, chill.

Heather: Mike...

Mike: DON'T FUCKING TELL ME TO RELAX!

Josh: Let's walk up, find a tree to sit under or some shit and check the map.

Heather: Yes, can we find a place to sit to check the map please?

Cuts to night, cuts to darkness.

Josh: Are you happy?

Heather: I'm not happy, no. But the car's not far; we're just not going to be able to find it in the dark.

Mike: Are you positively sure?

Heather: Yes. I am so sorry man. We can probably still get the DAT back tomorrow.

Josh: I hope your fucking happy.

Mike: We have too! We have too!

Heather: We will, we will. We will get the DAT back before it's due back tomorrow.

Josh: I gotta fucking work.

Heather: Everything will get back.

Josh: I'm supposed to be at work tomorrow at nine!

Heather: I know.

Josh: Let's camp...let's camp. Let's fucking camp. Okay?

Cuts ahead, darkness.

Heather: (hushes) shh...shhh... I wanna get it; I wanna get it from inside the tent. Whatever it was last night, it sounds like the same fucking thing.

(Rustling outside tent) (Tent flap being unzipped)

Heather: Where's my boots? Oh, fuck it's cold.

(Turns camera light on)

Heather: Hello!? Oh shit, it's fucking freezing. I hear it.

Mike: I don't hear shit.

(Rustling noise)

Heather: Hear that?

Shit!

Hello?

(Josh with 16mm swings back around to look at Heather standing at the tent)

(Cuts back to Heather's Hi-8)

Heather: Awe fuck. (Shivers, shaking camera)

Mike: I think it's just deer.

Heather: It could be deer I guess. I don't think it's deer though man. It sounds exactly like that shit last night. It's on all sides of us.

Mike: It sounded just like a deer.

Josh: It was a deer man.

Heather: I don't think it was a...

Mike: It wasn't like last night.

Heather: Shh! Shh...

(Bang in the distance)

Mike: Did you hear...?

Heather: (whispers) Yes! Fucking listen! Let's get it on DAT, let's get it on DAT.

Mike: Okay, it's on.

(Rustling grows louder)

Josh: Jesus Christ! What the fuck is that?! FUCK!

(Sound continues)

Heather: It's not scared by our yelling.

Heather: That sounds like footsteps.

Mike: (whispers) I know! That's a fucking person!

Heather: Mike, I'm not seeing shit on video. I'm going to leave the rest for DAT but I'm going to stay out with you here though.

Mike: You gotta fucking stay out here with me.

Heather: I am.

Mike: What time is it? Is it anytime near morning right now?
(Whispers) Please say it's fucking five o'clock or some shit.

Heather: It's three.

Mike: Fuck! This is bullshit; this is absolutely fucking crazy.

Heather: I'm sorry Mike. We should be out of here already.

Mike: I have nothing, nothing to do with this. I swear to god this is bullshit.

Cuts to next morning

Heather: We woke up this morning, just like two seconds ago, and there are piles of rocks outside of our tent. There are three actually.

Josh: Are you seriously fucking positive that those weren't here when we set up camp last night?

Heather: I am seriously fucking positive that these weren't here. How would we have just made a campsite between three piles of rocks, just by coincidence?

You don't think this is strange?

Josh: This is way fucking weird! But it really doesn't matter at this point! Because all I want to do is get to the goddamned car. Whatever it is, whatever it is man, at this point...

Heather: I know, I know. We have to get back to the car.

Josh: We are obviously not wanted here. So let's just get the hell out.

Heather: (sounding as if about to loose it) Okay. We have to get the DAT back any way.

Josh: I realize that.

Heather: Okay.

Josh: Let's get the DAT back, let's get the shit packed up and walk.

Heather: Right, we're out of here, we're out of here.

Josh: Okay, cool.

Cuts to crew packing up tent

Heather: (rambling) we have to leave, let's get our shit packed.

Josh: Heather put the fucking camera down! Let's get this shit packed up and...

Heather: Okay, hang on! (Points camera at pile of rocks)

Josh: Come on! No, I'm not fucking scared! I'm just tired, I'm hungry. I'm just fucking like done man. I'm just fucking done.

Heather: Alright.

Cuts to close up of Heather, Josh holding camera

Heather: Did you take it? (Feels inside pocket)

Josh: I didn't take the fucking map man. I'm not playing head games, if anyone's playing head games, your playing head games, but I'm not playing head games.

(Heather rubs face)

Heather: I don't have it, we have to go. I'm serious. I don't have it.

Josh: Are you fucking serious?

Heather: I'm fucking serious, I don't have the map, okay.

Josh: Heather that is so uncool man.

Heather: I know it's not cool.

Josh: That is so uncool!

Heather: I know it's not cool.

Josh: I mean that's like the least responsible thing you could have possibly done man.

Heather: I know that.

Mike: (sounding small) You really don't have it?

Heather: One of you has got to have the map.

Josh: No, I don't have the map. We gave it back to you after map check yesterday. You've always had the map.

Heather: I know, and I've always had the map in the same place and if it's not there one of you had to have taken it!

Josh: I'm not going into your fucking pants to get your god damned map man!

Heather: I just checked my pocket! It's not in my pants!

Josh: Look, would I go in and get your map? All I wanna do is get out of here!

Heather: That's all I want too man.

Josh: No! You wanna stay here, you wanna look around, you wanna shoot rocks, you wanna fucking get this, get that!

Heather: Let's go!

Josh: Which way are we fucking walking?

Heather: That way.

Josh: Dude we're in the middle of the fucking woods! We are in the middle of the goddamn woods! We can walk any way!

Mike: We're going this way! We're going this way because we've been going this way for a fucking day! We've got to come across something!

Heather: I gave you the map.

Josh: I gave you back the map Heather!

Heather: I gave you the map.

Josh: I gave you back the map!

Cuts ahead

Josh: All I'm saying is that we can move as fast as we can but if we have no fucking clue where we're going, well then it really doesn't matter. Does it?

Heather: We're following the creek and Mike seems satisfied with that.

Mike: (in the distance) Would you guys stop it!

(Marches on)

(Cuts ahead to Josh laying on his back and Heather plops down next to him holding camera)

Heather: (sighs)

Josh: We are lost, we are fucked, we are done, we are dead, we are fucked. (Begins to roll down embankment and stops when he runs into a tree)

Josh: I'm just gonna stay here. You guys find somebody; I'll be under this tree with the vine. This is really fucked up.

Heather: I know.

Mike: Yeah, we really, really need to work together.

Josh: Seriously, the area is not that fucking big.

Heather: Exactly, it's very hard to get lost in America these days, and it's even harder to stay lost. So we've got that on our side.

(Josh gets up and walks toward camera)

Mike: Well were doing a pretty god damn good job at being lost!

(Cuts ahead)

Josh: Cause at this point, when you're not home today, when I'm not home today people are going to start noticing. Like my girlfriend is defiantly going to notice that I'm not back today and that I haven't fucking called. I mean if I had called it would be one thing, but you know, if I just get back. But if I don't get back period and I don't call she's going to notice which means that if by tonight we haven't found shit, someone's going to be looking for us.

(Cuts ahead to stream, Josh finishing crossing on other side)

Heather: Oh no.

Josh: Don't come this way! Come another way! Go down there! I just got my whole shit wet!

Mike: (laughs deeply)

Heather: Oh shit. Well let's try it this way.

Josh: I don't think you want to try it this way. I think you want to try it the other way.

Heather: (sighs) If we didn't have these fucking packs it would be so much easier.

Josh: There must be a...

Mike: (jiggles with laughter)

Heather: Is that Michael laughing?

Mike: (doubles up laughing)

Josh: Shut the fuck up and cross the stream.

Heather: He's laughing!? Michael that is the first time I've heard you laugh in days!

(Cuts to shot of Heather's wet boots after crossing the stream)

(Josh and Mike laughing)

Heather: I'm really happy you find it very amusing that I'm going to be incredibly uncomfortable for the rest of the day.

Mike: (doubles up laughing)

Josh: Awww. Dude, uncomfortable is not even. (Breaks into laughter)

Heather: Can we keep going please?

Mike: (laughing) No were gonna chill out!

Heather: I thought you wanted to get to the car?

Mike: HOOOO! BOY!

Josh: Come one let's get up there.

(Mike begins to climb embankment)

Heather: You guys weren't lying to me about the map were you? It just seems you guys are having just a little too much fun for my tastes.

Mike: Were just going a little stir crazy.

Josh: Heather, Heather. If you make me yell at this point... I'm going to have to hit you.

Mike: (laughs)

Heather: Come on, seriously, do you have the map? I just want to know that you have it! That would make me happy just to know that you have it.

Josh: Heather... (Turns in disgust)

Heather: If I, If I know you have it and I can at least see it I would feel much better.

Josh: (gives Heather the finger as he walks away from her)

(Cuts ahead)

Josh: Like all were trying to do is be cool with you.

Heather: Well I find it very cool that I get laughed at because my shoes are wet for the wrest of the day! It's fucking hilarious!

(Josh and Mike bust out laughing)

Josh: Heather, dude, all our shoes are wet. We were laughing at the situation. We're fucking hungry we're fucking tired. What the hell else are we supposed to do?

Mike: (laughing) You know what? Hahaha! I kicked the fu...haha... I'm sorry it's fucked up, but...I kicked that fucking map haaa! Into the creek yesterday! Haaa! It was useless! I kicked that fucker into the creek! Hahaha!

Mike: (walks away laughing hysterically) WAAAAHHHOOOO!

Heather: I fucking hope he's kidding.

Mike: WAAAAHOOOOO! Holy Jesus!

Josh: (small) Mike? (Anger rising) Are you kidding?

Heather: I really fucking hope he's kidding.

Josh: (angrily) Mike are you fucking kidding!?

(Josh and Heather move quickly towards Mike)

Mike: I'm sorry. It was useless.

Heather: You've gotta be fucking kidding me! YOU HAVE GOT TO BE FUCKING KIDDING ME!

Josh: (shoves Mike hard) What the fuck!

Mike: Get the fuck off me man!

Heather: WHAT THE FUCK! ARE YOU OUT OF YOUR FUCKING MIND!

Mike: NO I AM NOT OUT OF MY MIND THAT MAP WASN'T DOING SHIT FOR US!

Heather: DO YOU REALIZE? NOT TO YOU, BUT I KNEW WHAT THE FUCK THAT MAP SAID!

Heather: YOU ARE A FUCKING ASSHOLE!

Mike: I'm sorry!

Heather: YOU ARE A FUCKING ASSHOLE!

Mike: That map wasn't doing shit all day!

Heather: IF WE GET HURT OR IF WE DIE OUT HERE IT'S YOUR FUCKING FAULT!

(Josh pushes Mike and they begin to grapple one another)

Mike: I'll fucking punch you out! I'll fucking punch you out!

Heather: I CAN'T BELIVE YOU ARE SUCH A FUCKING ASSHOLE! WHAT THE FUCK WERE YOU THINKING!

(Mike pushes Josh away)

Josh: (points finger in Mike's face) Your messing with my shit here!

Mike: (fends off Josh's finger with forearm) That map was useless! That map was useless!

Heather: It was useless to you! It was useless to you!

Mike: BULLSHIT!

Heather: Your ignorance has put our safety in danger! (Sobs)

(Cuts ahead)

Heather (calmer) Okay, okay.

Josh: This is not why I brought you out here man.

Mike: I'm sorry about the map, okay?

Heather: (trying to remain calm) Okay.

Mike: What can I say?

Heather: Sorry? Please just don't say sorry! That map wasn't worth shit to you but I knew exactly where we were on that map.

Mike: (points finger at Heather) I just fucking asked you where Heather: I knew exactly WHERE WE WERE ON THAT MAP!

Mike: (jabbing finger at Heather) Yesterday I asked you what fucking river we were at!

(Mike tries to hit and grab camera away from Heather)

Heather: DON'T YOU FUCKING TOUCH MY FUCKING CAMERA! YOU! GET OFF ME! IT IS YOUR FAULT NOW! IT IS YOUR FUCKING FAULT!

--Think the following is cut from the final edit--

Mike: You wanna get hit!? You wanna get hit!? Keep fucking punching me!

(Cuts ahead)

Heather: Give me the compass. You have betrayed us all beyond. Way fucking beyond. Give me the compass.

Mike: You betrayed us when you couldn't get us out of the woods last night.

Heather: Yeah. Thanks.

Josh: Can I hold the fucking compass?

Heather: No!

Josh: Can I hold the fucking compass?

Heather: No! I bought the fucking compass. If you wanted a compass you should have bought your own.

Josh: I don't give a shit if you bought the compass! You fucked us up! He fucked us up! I don't know why you can't admit that you've been screwed since the moment we got out here!

Heather: I haven't.

Josh: Heather give me the...

Heather: I've been planning this for two years!

Josh: Give me the compass. Heather, Heather.

Heather: We're walking south! Now!

Josh: Give me the compass! (Pushes Heather from behind)

Heather: You fucking asshole! Don't knock me down! Cause I will fucking knock you out! I'm am walking south! Fuck you both! Fuck you both!

Josh: Okay you fucking bitch!

Heather: Okay, okay, I'm a fucking bitch! Your friend throws the fucking map in the creek and I'm a bitch? Okay! Oh Fuckin Kay!

(Cuts ahead, Josh sitting on the ground)

Heather: Why are we stopped again? Why? (Sighs) Why are we stopped?

Josh: (points at the sky) Heather, just don't, just don't.

Heather: Does anybody have a reason why were stopped? That's all I'm asking you. What about the plan to keep going south? We were all very happy with that plan. Why is that not a...thing anymore. (Under breath) Oh Jesus Christ.

(Cuts ahead, Heather hurrying thew woods)

Heather: (panting) I can't understand you!

Mike: (in the distance) there's all sorts of stuff down here!

Heather: What kind of stuff!?

Mike: Like twigs and shit!

Heather: What?

Mike: They're all over! Look around you!

Heather: No way.

(Cuts ahead to clearing)

Mike: They're all over the place. Holy shit!

(Shot of human looking figure made from sticks and twigs bound together dangling from trees)

Heather: Come up here quick I need to use the CP!

Mike: Yo, there's all sorts of shit up here man!

Heather: (reaching up and touching a stick man) This is fucking crazy shit.

(Cuts ahead)

Heather: Please, I've got to get this on 16!

(Shots of numerous stick men, hanging from trees on 16 mm)

Josh: I've almost got shots of everything. Jesus Christ, that's fucking creepy.

Mike: Please, this is no redneck no redneck is this creative.

Heather: Can we get out of here now?

Josh: Yeah, please? (Shot of gigantic stick man) Oh Jesus Christ! Did you see this? Okay, I want to get as far away from here by dark as humanly possible.

(Cuts ahead)

Josh: Get your shit in your pack and let's go! That's enough!

Mike: Stop taping! Please stop taping!

Josh: That's enough!

Heather: Okay, okay, okay were leaving right now. (Continues to tape) Okay, were out of here, were out of here. I'm leaving.

Mike: Come on! Turn it off!

(Cuts ahead)

Mike: HELP! HELP! PLEASE HELP US! HELP US!

Heather: This is not the way to get out of here.

Mike: HELP US! FUCK!

(Cuts ahead)

Heather: I think it's safe to say at this point that were lost.
And I don't know what to do.

(Cuts ahead to tent opening at night)

Josh: I'm getting inside the tent.

Heather: Alright.

Mike: Let's not light a fire tonight.

Heather: Yeah, I think...

Mike: Cause two nights in a row we've lit a fire. We didn't light a fire the first night.

Heather: And nothing happened.

Mike: And nothing happened. We light fires, they know. I haven't heard anything follow us. We should even turn that light off too.

Heather: Alright. (Turns off camera light)

Josh: Seriously, yeah turn that off.
(Complete darkness)

Heather: Okay, let's just go to sleep.

(Cuts ahead)

(In the pitch darkness)

(Sounds of babies laughing)

Heather: (whispered) Shit.

(The sounds of people stirring terrified inside a canvas tent)

Mike: (whispered) What the fuck is that?

Heather: Okay let's get ready.

(A few seconds of silence)

(Sound of a baby crying out in pain)

Mike: (whispered) Oh Jesus Christ. (Crying to himself) It sounds like little kids, out in the woods.

Heather: I'm going to put Jeans on.

Mike: Oh Jesus, oh Jesus.

Heather: Get the video camera. No, get the DAT ready.

Mike: How are we going to record this shit?

Heather: (turns on camera light showing crew huddling in tent, looking blurry through the fogged up lens)

Heather: (whispers) What's that sound? (Shudders with fear)

(Sounds grow louder and closer)

(The tent begins to shudder and shake as if something is attacking)
(All scream in fear)

Mike: Go! Fucking go!

(They break free of the tent and bolt away)

Heather: Oh god!

Mike: Hurry up!

Heather: I'm coming! My boots aren't laced! (Looking over her shoulder back at the tent) OH MY GOD WHAT THE FUCK IS THAT! WHAT THE FUCK IS THAT! Oh shit! Oh my god! (Running and panting) Look where are we going!?

(Gathering together they crouch down in some thick weeds)

Mike: (whispers) Turn the lights off! Turn that light off! Turn it off!

(Heather looks back towards the tent, with a look of pure terror on her face)

Mike: (whispers) All lights off, all lights off, all lights off.

(Heavy panting)

Mike: (losing it & whispering) What the fuck is going on? That was more then last night, that was more then last night. I heard little babies screaming.

Josh: Shhhhh! (Trembling) There's no fucking babies out there man! There's no fucking baby out there; there's no fucking baby out there.

Heather: Shhh!

Mike: Jesus Christ. Oh my god it's cold.

Heather: Please be quiet okay?

Mike: Okay, okay.
(Cuts to dawn)

Heather: I don't hear anything anymore, I think we should go back.

Mike: How long have we been here?

Heather: I don't know, maybe a couple of hours. The suns up were okay now.

Josh: Let's just get back, let's pack shit up, let's get out.

Heather: Okay.

(Cuts back at tent, things scattered all around campsite)

Josh: What the fuck man?

Heather: Where's my pack?

Mike: Your packs right there. Where's my pack?

Josh: What the fuck man? Why are we getting fucked with like this? They opened it up. They spilled all my fucking water!

Mike: That looks like slime man.

Josh: That's just water, man. (Bends over and feels "slime") Ah that is slime. What the fuck is that? Dude.

Mike: Come on, let's get the shit packed up and let's get out of here.

Josh: Come on Heather turn that thing off and let's go. I'm not; I'm not interested in anything anymore! So turn it off!

Heather: I know. Let's relax for just a second. Have we gotten everything here?

Josh: Like I give a shit!

Heather: Who's shit was thrown around? Who specifically?

Josh: It was my shit!

Heather: Why you?

Mike: Oh shit, let's go! Let's go! Are you not scared enough?

Heather: Yes I am scared enough and I do want to go, but it's light now. We have a couple of minutes.

Mike: No we don't have a couple of minutes!

Heather: Let's just see what happened here okay! Let's just see what happened here!

Mike: We need to hike!

Josh: Put that camera down. This is not funny.

Heather: Do I look like I'm laughing at all?

Josh: No but you're going around doing your documentary thing man.

Mike: Heather.

Josh: Your doing your thing.

Mike: Heather.

(Mike attacks Heather attempting to take video camera)

Heather: Don't fucking!

(Camera flails wildly)

Mike: Turn this fucking thing off! If you bite me fucking one more time I'm gonna!

(Mike lets go and moves away)

Heather: If you touch my camera one more time I'll bite your fingers off!

Mike: Turn it off!

(Cuts ahead, Mike looking sorry)

Mike: I'm sorry.

Heather: I didn't mean it. Okay?

Mike: Are you all right?

Heather: I'm fine. I want to go home but it's important that we get what we can.

(Cuts ahead, crossing another log)

Heather: What the fuck? Is this possible? Okay, all right. I hate crossing streams on logs. If I never cross another stream on a log for the rest of my life, I will die a happy girl.

(Cuts to Josh filming with video camera)

Mike: (gives camera the finger)

Josh: I see why you like this video camera so much.

Heather: You do?

Josh: It's not quite reality.

Mike: Reality says we've gotta mooove.

Josh: No but its totally like filtered reality man. It's like you can pretend everything is not quite the way it is.

(Cuts ahead, Josh sitting alone in the distance)

Mike: (whispers) Just leave him alone.

Heather: We need to go. Mike.

Mike: Just give him like five minutes. Just leave him alone. He's lost it.

Heather: We are all on the brink of losing it.

Mike: (whisper) I know that. We've all got to take care of each other.

Heather: (whispers) I know.

Mike: (whispers) you can't really take care of him if you throw a camera in his face while he's crying.

Heather: I know.

Mike: I know you know that, and I know we're both about to lose it but let's try to get the last wits we have.

Heather: We have to go.

Mike: Understand I know we have to go. Believe me I know we have to go.

Heather: It is hard for all us to hold it together. We need to get out of here in one piece and this is not helping!

Mike: I know it's not. Just let him have his...

Josh: (In the distance) anybody have a cigarette?

Mike: No man.

Heather: No, there's none left.

Josh: We don't have any cigarettes?

Heather: We're out.

Josh: (voice cracking) Why the fuck? What the fuck was this blue jelly shit all over my shit?

Heather: Let's go. If we keep going south we will get out. Please.

(Cuts to Josh down on his knees)

Josh: (whispers something unintelligible)

Heather: Josh, none of us do.

Josh: I know.

Mike: What ever it is, is going to come back. We know that for a fact.

Heather: We don't know that for a fact.

Mike: Well it came three nights in a row. It's been getting worse every night.

Heather: I would love to hear this right now, I really would, but we...

Josh: Can we please go?

Mike: I'm just trying to say you know we have to rationally say, they might go on forever compared to our footsteps.

Heather: Not, not possible. Not possible in this country. Not possible.

Josh: Why is it not possible?

Heather: Because this is America. We've destroyed most of our natural resources.

Mike: (begins to sing) America, America. GOD SAVE YOUR GRACE ON THEE!

(Cuts to hiking)

Josh and Mike: (sing national anthem) The twilight's last gleaming.

Heather: Okay, I don't want to be a humorless pain in the ass, but this I don't fucking understand.

(Cuts ahead)

Mike: Yo that's the stream we crossed!

Josh: That's further down. That's the same one!

Mike: Oh god! You've got to be kidding me! This is a joke! THIS IS NOT FUNNY!

Heather: (begins to cry) No. Mike just please stop. Please stop.

Mike: Ohhh nooo.

Heather: It's not the same log. It's not the same log Mike!

Mike: It's the same one!

Heather: Look it's not!

Mike: It is! Open your eyes!

Heather: It's not the same log. (Begins to sob) It's not. It's not the same log.

Mike and Josh: Fuck!

Heather: (collapses crying next to log) It's the same log. It's the same.

Mike: Fuck you God!

Heather: (sobs and rocks back and forth) It's okay. It's okay.
It's okay.

(Cuts ahead)

Heather: Where do you want to go today to camp? I guess south didn't work today so tomorrow we'll go east. I don't know what to say Josh.

Josh: How the fuck did we walk south and end up at the same place?

Heather: We walked south all day! We walked south all fucking day! I don't know how we ended up here.

(Cuts ahead, Josh filming Heather with video camera)

Heather: Do you expect me to do something or say something? What do you want to do Josh? Josh?

Josh: I wanna make movies Heather. Isn't that what we're here to do? Let's make some movies.

Heather: Fuck you. Really. Fuck you. Fuck you.

Mike: Please let's not fight. Come on I can't. I can't listen to fighting. I can't fight. We're screwed and that's it. Please stop fighting. I'll do the first watch. I got first watch.

Josh: (To Heather) Come on you can do better than that.

Mike: Come on guys we have things to prepare for here.

Josh: Okay here's your motivation! You're lost, you're angry in the woods! There's no one here to help you! There's a fucking witch and she keeps leaving shit outside your door! There's no one here to help you! She left little trinkets; you fucking took one of them! She ran after us! There's no one here to help you!

Mike: Josh!

Josh: We walked for 15 hours today, we ended up in the same place! There's no one here to help you! That's your motivation!

Heather: (begins to cry) Stop, please stop.

Mike: Josh!

Josh: That's your motivation!

Heather: Please stop.

Mike: Josh, just quit it. I've had enough.

Heather: Please stop.

Mike: Come on man, you got her back. Good one.

Josh: She's still making movies here man! That's my point! This is my point here!

Heather: It's all I fucking have left! Okay? Just please stop. Please stop. Just please stop yelling at me okay? Please.

Mike: I'm fucking tired of crying all day here. We have to think like human beings we have things to prepare for, we've gotta make shifts. We've got lots to do.

Josh: Are you going to write us a happy ending Heather?

Heather: (breaks down and weeps then walks away)

Mike: Come on man, turn it off. You're getting like she was. Come on man turn it off.

(Cuts ahead, inside of tent light only by flashlights, Heather mending hole in gear)

Heather: We need the smallest comforts we can get.

Josh: Doesn't it just seem absurd though, at this point.

Mike: Yes it does.

Heather: (mumbles with flashlight in mouth)

Mike: Like sleeping pretty much where we were sleeping last night.

Josh: That's just fucking me up. Period. That's just fucked up man. (Looks directly into camera, looking lost)

Josh: I'm sorry I yelled at you. I'm sorry.

Heather: It's okay.

Mike: Who wants a Cheeseburger?

Heather: (with flashlight in mouth) I do! I do!

Mike: Well I've got a cheeseburger in my back pocket.

Heather: Do you?

(All laugh slightly)

Josh: You know what I'd fucking love?

Heather: What.

Josh: Mashed potatoes. My moms mashed potatoes. My moms mashed potatoes and a piece of ass.

(Cuts to next morning, Heather outside of tent)

Heather: Josh! Josh! Fuck, Mike we never go out of earshot!

Mike: Come on, calm down.

Heather: How can I calm down? JOSH! JOSH!

Mike: He's probably at the river or something.

Heather: If he was at the river he could hear me from here.

Mike: Josh!

Heather: Josh!

Mike: Shhh. You gotta wait for his reply. He'll come back.

Heather: JOSH!

Mike: Heather...

Heather: Do you remember what he said yesterday? About, about this shit on his back. About how... JOSH!

Mike: We didn't even, we didn't even get waken up last night. Nothing even came to the tent last night. Last night was a good night. There's no way... He, he just, he just, he's just went for a walk.

Heather: Josh if your fucking with me, I swear to God I'm gonna kill you!

Mike: Let's go, we gotta find him! Come on!

Heather: We can't even find the car! (Crying) How the fuck are we going to find Josh? No, no, no, I'm fine.

Mike: Come on. Relax, he's just. He's around he just went out of ear shot. I dunno. He just went out of earshot. That's all. All right? We'll relax, we'll break down the tent and when he's back we'll be ready to go. All right?

Heather: I'm loosing my mind Mike.

(Cuts ahead to Heather sitting alone talking to camera)

Heather: Josh hasn't come back yet.

Mike: (In the distance) Heather!

Heather: I'm over here Mike!

Mike: Okay.

Heather: I don't know if Josh ran off. I don't. All his shit's here.

(Cuts back to tent)

Heather: I've got the camera. I don't know how the fuck I'm gonna hike with that camera, but.

Mike: We should leave the camera.

Heather: We've gotta take the camera.

(Cuts ahead)

Heather: How do you feel about east?

Mike: How do you feel about east?

Heather: Well south didn't work.

Mike: Which Wicked Witch was worst, the Wicked Witch of the East or the Wicked Witch of the West?

Heather: The Wicked Witch of the West was the bad one.

Mike: Let's go east then.

(Cuts ahead)

(Sound of sticks breaking in the distance, both turn towards it)

Heather: What was that?

Mike: Josh? Josh!

(Cuts to end of day, Mike and Heather putting up tent)

Heather: We're going to put up the tent now.

(Cuts ahead)

Mike: I'm going to have a meatball.

Heather: Just one meatball?

Mike: And a long, red glass of wine.

Heather: Yeah, I would defiantly have the whole fucking bottle of Bordello.

Mike: A pack of smokes.

Heather: Smokes would be good. A long hot bath.

Mike: Pumpkin pie.

Heather: A big pumpkin pie with ice cream, warm with melty ice cream.

Mike: Yeah that sounds good. What's your favorite thing to do on a Sunday?

Heather: Um, it used to be, drive to the woods and go hiking.

Mike: (laughs)

Heather: But, um.

Mike: I think that's scratched off.

Heather: I think that might change now.

(Cuts ahead to darkness)

(Voice that sounds like Josh moans off in the distance)

Heather: Should we yell for him? Is it a trick?

Josh's voice: (cries of pain and fear in the distance)

Heather: Josh?

(Unzips tent)

Mike: Josh! (Silence) Josh!

(Silence)

Mike: Where's it coming from?

Josh's voice: (Bleating moans)

Mike: JOSH! Josh where are you? Tell me where you are!

Josh's voice: (closer and louder cry's of pain)

Heather: (muffled) Oh my god. No.

Mike: Fuck. Do you think that's them fucking with us?

Heather: Josh? Is it over here?

Mike: No it's over here.

Mike: JOSH! (Breath from the cold mists in the cameras view)

Mike: Well look for him!

Heather: (begins to cry uncontrollable)

Mike: (voice cracking) I don't know if it's really him, I don't know if it's really him.

Heather: Josh! (Sobs) I don't even know where to look.

Mike: (crying) Tell me where you are Josh!

(Cuts ahead)

Heather: Mike, please don't fall asleep.

Mike: I can't fall asleep.

Heather: Whatever it is, it knows that Josh is gone.

Mike: If that was Josh he would have said where he was.

Heather: (mumbles, not sure about this line?) Good night...
(something)

(Cuts to next morning)

Heather: I just want to show that Mike is here. He's sleeping.
(Pulls sleeping bag off of Mike's face, then steps out of tent)

(A bundle of sticks and twigs bound together by what looks to be strips of Josh's flannel shirt confronts Heather)

Heather: Oh shit. What the hell is it? Mike.

Mike: What?

Heather: There's something out here.

Mike: What is it?

(Heather gets close with camera and examines bundle)

Heather: (gasps) Okay, okay. Okay I'm just going to move it from the front of the tent. Okay? I'm taking it away; I'm taking it away from the front of the tent. I'm throwing it. (Throws it over log) Okay.

Mike: (sitting alone and rocking back and forth) We'll just keep walking. Okay?

Heather: (crying) Okay.

Mike: We'll keep walking. I found some cigarettes. I found them all the way at the bottom of my bag. We're still alive; we're still smoking.

(Heather sets camera up and walks over to comfort Mike. They share a cigarette)

(Cuts ahead, Heather goes back to where she had tossed the bundle of sticks)

(Heather examines bundle more closely and begins to untie strip of Josh's shirt)

Heather: It's all full of blood. (Gasps, screams, then begins to cry at what is bound inside the shirt, bloody clumps of hair and what appears to be gory teeth. She quickly begins to hyperventilate and lose control but continues to examine the gore with her camera) (pants) Shit. (Turns away) Oh god.

(Cuts to Heather by stream, washing her hand profusely)

Heather: Okay, okay. See? (Shows clean hands to camera)

Mike: (In the distance) Heather!

Heather: Yeah?

Mike: What are you doing?

Heather: I'm okay, I'm just washing my hands off.

Mike: What?

Heather: Just washing my hands off.

(Cuts ahead back at tent, Mike using camera)

Heather: (looking very freaked) I'm gonna put my gloves on. I'm gonna put my gloves on. I'm gonna put my gloves on my hands.

Mike: You all right?

Heather: I'm fine, I'm fine.

(Cuts ahead, Heather trying to lift her pack on)

Mike: You need help?

Heather: Nope. Nope. I don't need any help. I'm okay.

Mike: What happened?

Heather: Nothing. Nothing happened. I'm just very hungry and I'm very tired and I'm very scared and I just want to go home okay?

Mike: Okay.

Heather: But I'm fine and we're both okay. Oww, my hair's caught.

(Mike helps get her hair unsnaged from her pack)

Heather: Thank you. Okay.

(Cuts to Hiking)

(Heather stops, looks around, looks at compass then begins to hike again)

(Cuts to Mike rocking and looking exhausted)

(Cuts to hiking)

Mike: 2130 games. One more season and Cal Ripkin is king! Cal Ripkin is king! And I won't get to see it! Cause I'll be in the woods!

(Cuts to Mike sitting by stream holding a leaf)

Mike: (puts leaf in mouth, tears a chunk off and begins to chew)

Heather: Tell me your not eating a dry leaf. (Laughs)

(Cuts to night, Heather looking into camera)
(The confessional)

Heather: I just want to apologize to Mike's mom and Josh's mom and my mom and I'm sorry to everyone. I was very naive. (Looks away from camera scared) I was very naive and very stupid and I shouldn't have put other people in danger for something that was all about me and my selfish motives. I'm so sorry for everything that has happened because in spite of what Mike says now it is my fault. Because it was my project and I insisted on everything. I insisted we weren't lost. I insisted we keep going. I insisted we walk south. Everything had to be my way and this is where we've ended up. And it's all because of me we're here now hungry and cold and hunted. I love you mom and dad. I am so sorry. It was never my intention to hurt any one and I hope that's clear. (Begins to hyperventilate as mucus streams from her nostrils) I am so scared. What was that? I'm scared to close my eyes and I'm scared to open them. I'm going to die out here. Every night we just wait for them to come. (Breaks down and sobs)

(Cuts ahead to Heather and gathering gear in the darkness to confront the cries of Josh out in the woods)

Josh's Voice: Somebody!

Mike: Oh Jesus Christ.

Mike: Ready?

Josh's Voice: Somebody!

Mike: Okay. That can't be him.

(Heather carrying 16mm and Mike with Hi-8 Video camera, begin to walk towards sound)

Josh's Voice: Someone I need help please! Please help me god!

Mike: Holy shit it's a house. Watch your step.

(An ancient abandoned house looms over them)

Heather: Mike.

(Mike is eager to explore)

Heather: Josh?

(Cuts to inside of house, Mike's view through Video camera; house is in extreme state of decay, crumbling plaster no windows or doors walls knocked out)

Heather: Mike? Mike! Mike!

Mike: Come on!

Heather: Mike where are you?

Mike: Come on, I'm in the house.

Heather: Mike do not...

Josh's voice: (muffled) please help!

(Cuts to Heather's view with 16 mm)

Heather: Mike? Mike? Mike please.

Josh's Voice: (muffled cries)

Heather: Mike please. Mike where are you?

Mike: I'm right here! Where is he?

Heather: Mike don't leave me!

Heather: Is he in here?

Mike: No. (Whispers) Oh shit.

Josh's Voice: (muffled) No! God!

Mike: (whispers) Oh Jesus. (Arrives at a set of disheveled set of stairs) I hear him. (Begins to run up stairs) I hear him. I hear you! Where? I'm going up stairs! (Begins to climb second flight, there are child sized bloody hand prints and strange occultic symbols along the walls)

(Cuts to Heather's 16mm footage on same set of stairs)

Josh's Voice: (muffled) Overhmm!

Mike: Did you hear that? Did you hear that?

(Cuts to Mike camera looking back at Heather just as she confronts the hand prints)

Mike: Where is he?

Josh's Voice: (unintelligible cries and moans)

(Cuts back to Heather's footage, hyperventilating at this point)

Mike: Where are you!? Come on! Josh? I'm getting down stairs!
Come on! I HEAR HIM DOWN STAIRS! Come on!

(Begins to run down stairs)

Heather: (so scared she can hardly scream) Mmmm! Mike!

Mike: Come on! Josh!

Heather: MIKE!

(Mike arrives at the cellar steps, more occult writings along the wall)

Mike: Josh? Josh!? Josh is that you down there!?

Heather: (in the distance and at the top of her lungs) MIKE! MIKE!

(Mike descends into the basement, Heather continues to scream)

Mike: oh god. . Josh? (Grunt)

(Camera is knocked to the ground. It autofocuses on the cellar gravel)

(Cuts to Heather, just now reaching the cellar entrance)

Heather: MIKE! MIKE! MIKE! MIKE! (Screams) MIKE! IEEEE! Mike.
(Reaches bottom of the cellar steps)

(Rounds a protruding wall)

(Mike is standing facing the far corner)

Heather: MIKE! MIKE! IEEEE! IEE! HHUH!

(16 MM drops on its side and film jitters)

(No sound)

ON BLACK:

"A MAN MUST LOOK AT HIS LIFE AND THINK LUXURY."

FADE IN:

EXT. GUARJIRA, COLOMBIA - 1989 - DAY

A majestic panorama of the lush green slopes that are the Colombian highlands. A faint chopping sound IS HEARD and then another. WHOOSH. WHOOSH. The view changes and tiny dots appear on the hillside vegetation. WHOOSH.

CLOSER

We realize the dots are people. Workers swinging long steel machetes in slow methodical rhythm. WHOOSH. WHOOSH. WE SEE the South American Indian MEN clearly now. Their tar stained teeth. Their gaunt faces riddled with crow's feet. Their jaws chewing away on huge wads of coca leaves as they collect the harvest.

EXT. DIRT ROAD - COLOMBIA - DAY

Old rickety trucks carrying the huge green tractor-sized bales speed along the narrow road.

EXT. CLEARING - COLOMBIA - DAY

The bundles are undone and Colombian women separate out the leaves. Tribes of underweight workers carry armload after armload of the harvest and ritualistically dump them into a gigantic cannibal pot which sits on top of a raging bonfire. The leaves are being boiled down and a huge plume of smoke streaks the sky. Wizenod Indios brave the heat and shovel ashes into the pot to cool the solution.

INT. JUNGLE - COLOMBIA - DAY

A primitive but enormous makeshift lab contains all the equipment. The machinery. The solutions. The over-sized vats. Dark-skinned bandoleros smoke cigarettes and sport automatic weapons at all the points of entry. The coca is now a "basuco" paste and is being sent in for a wash.

INT. LABORATORY - COLOMBIA - 1989 - DAY

A conveyor belt pours out brick after brick of pure cocaine hydrochloride. The bricks are wrapped, tied up, weighed, and stamped with a "P" before being thrown into duffel bags.

EXT. JUNGLE AIRSTRIP - COLOMBIA - DAY

A small twin-engine Cessna is loaded with dozens of duffel bags and the plane takes off.

EXT. VERO BEACH AIRFIELD - NIGHT

The Cessna touches down.

EXT. WORKSITE - WEYMOUTH - 1966 - DAY

The worksite is busy. George is amongst other workers, working a summer job. As George is taking five, he looks across the sight to Fred, who is sweeping up debris. A long way from being the boss.

INT. COLLEGE ADMISSIONS OFFICE - WEYMOUTH - 1966 - DAY

George stands in line to register for college, wearing his Brooks Brothers suit, bowtie, and freshly Bryllcreamed hair. The room is crowded and the line is long. Bob Dylan's "Subterranean Homesick Blues" blares out of one of the kid's transistor radios. George looks around the room. He is uncomfortable. He catches his reflection in the shiny glass partition and stops. He doesn't like what he sees. Something is not right. He looks like everyone else. Same cookie-cutter hair, same cookie-cutter clothes, same cookie cutter faces. He's a carbon copy.

REGISTRATION WOMAN

Next.

It's George's turn but he doesn't hear it. "Twenty years of schooling and they put you on a day shift." The words hit him like a tone of bricks as he continues to stare at his own reflection.

GEORGE (V.O.)

I was standing there, and it was like the outside of me and the inside of me didn't match, you know? And then I looked around the room and it hit me. I saw my whole life. Where I was gonna live, what type of car I'd drive, who my neighbors would be. I saw it all and I didn't want it. Not that life.

EXT. CONSTRUCTION SITE - WEYMOUTH - 1966 - DAY

George sits with Fred. It's breaktime and Fred eats from a lunch box.

GEORGE

There's something out there for me, Dad. Something different. Something free form, you know? Something for me, and college just isn't it.

FRED

That's too bad. You would have been the first one in the family.

GEORGE

I know.

FRED

Alright. You want me to get your old job back? Because I could, you know, I could put in that word.

GEORGE

No, Dad. I don't want to...I mean, I just don't want...

It's obvious to Fred that his son doesn't want to be like him.

FRED

What are you going to do?

GEORGE

I'm going to California.

EXT. BELMONT SHORES APARTMENT - 1968 - DAY

SUPERIMPOSE: MANHATTAN BEACH, CALIFORNIA 1968

George and Tuna, now 21-years old, struggle with their bags. Their new place is a tackily furnished, two-story apartment with small balconies and a view of the ocean. As George and Tuna struggle with the bags, two California beauties appear on the balcony next door: BARBARA BUCKLEY, 20, and MARIA GONZALES, 21.

GIRLS

You guys need some help?

George and Tuna share a look.

TUNA

I don't know about you, but I think we're gonna like it here.

EXT. MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - DAY

SERIES OF SHOTS

Barbara and Maria introduce George and Tuna around to the Manhattan Beach regulars. They are immediately accepted despite their ill fitting shorts and Tuna's unhip black socks. The beach scene is one big party. Lots of beer, music, bikinis, and good times. By the end of the day, George and Tuna have a hundred new friends.

GEORGE (V.O.)

California was like nothing I'd ever experienced. The people were liberated and independent and full of new ideas.

GEORGE (V.O.) (CONT'D)

They used words like "right on," "groovy," and "solid." The women are all beautiful and seemed to share the same occupation.

WOMAN #1

I'm a flight attendant.

WOMAN #2

I'm a flight attendant.

WOMAN #3

I'm a flight attendant.

The weed comes out and is passed around. Pipes. Joints. Bongs. In SLOW MOTION, Barbara takes a huge hit of grass, grabs George's face, french kissing him, and giving him a huge shotgun.

INT. BELMONT SHORES APARTMENT - 1968 - DAY

George and Barbara are sleeping late. Their bodies intertwined beneath the sheets. A slam of the front door wakes them up. It's Tuna.

TUNA

Hey, wake up. Come on, you two lovebirds. Hurry, I want to show you something.

George and Barbara shake cobwebs out and stumble into the kitchen to find Tuna holding a brown paper shopping bag.

TUNA (CONT'D)

Figured it out.

GEORGE

Figured what out?

TUNA

You know how we were wondering what we were going to do for money? Being how we don't want to get jobs and whatnot? Well, check this out.

Tuna takes the paper bag and empties its contents on the kitchen table. It's a grey mound of stocky, seedy marijuana.

Barbara examines the reefer.

BARBARA

Tuna, this is crap.

TUNA

I know it's not the greatest. It's commercial.

BARBARA

It's garbage.

GEORGE

It's oregano. You got ripped off, pal. What are you gonna do with all this?

TUNA

We sell it. I got it all figured out. We make three finger lids and sell them on the beach. We move all of it. We've made ourselves a hundred bucks. Or a lot of weed for our head. What do you think? Not bad, huh? I got the baggies and everything.

BARBARA

You can't sell this to your friends.

TUNA

Man. Fuck you guys. I have this great idea and you guys have to be all skeptical.

BARBARA

Look, if you really wanna score some dope, I got the guy.

EXT. THE WHIPPING POST - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - DAY

George, Barbara and Tuna stop outside the front door.

GEORGE

Are you sure this guy is cool?

BARBARA
You'll see for yourself.

TUNA
A beauty parlor for men? Sounds pretty queer.

They walk in.

INT. THE WHIPPING POST - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - CONTINUOUS

George, Tuna and Barbara enter. The Whipping Post is California's first male hair salon. George looks around at the customer's being pampered. Haircuts, pedicures, manicures.

GEORGE
Nothing like this back home.

BARBARA
Derek!

DEREK FOREAL is a curious man. Daringly effeminate, especially for the sixties, he is always surrounded by beautiful women. As he sees Barbara, he stops his haircut and runs to embrace her.

DEREK
Barbie!

Derek's female entourage rush over as well. Kisses all around.

DEREK (CONT'D)
So, this is the new man, huh? He's cute!

George and Tuna stick out there hands.

GEORGE
George.

TUNA
Tuna.

DEREK
Tuna, oh my. Enchante, George. Barbie, he's yummy. He looks like a Ken doll. Oooh, Ken and Barbie. It's perfect. Alright, girls, give me five minutes.

Derek makes dismissing gestures and the girls scatter.

DEREK (CONT'D)
Everyone, shoo! You, too, Barbie. I want to talk to the boys alone.

After the girls leave, Derek closes the partition and his playful demeanor changes. He's all business now.

DEREK (CONT'D)
What can I do for you guys?

GEORGE
We want some grass.

DEREK
I know what you want. But, first of all, are you cops?

GEORGE

No.

DEREK

Because if you are, you have to tell me.
If not, it's entrapment.

GEORGE

We're not cops. We're from Massachusetts. I mean, does he look like a cop?

DEREK

I guess not. Okay. You know, you're very lucky you're friends of Barbie's.
If you weren't, I'd never talk to you.

Derek pulls a television-sized brick of quality marijuana out from under a sink and sets it down in front of George.

GEORGE

What the fuck is that?

DEREK

It's your grass.

TUNA

Wow. That's more than we had in mind.

DEREK

I don't nickel and dime. You want it or not?

George and Tuna look at each other.

GEORGE

We'll take it.

EXT. MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - DAY

SERIES OF SHOTS

Summer on the beach. It's one big party. George and Tuna are on the beach. They are the new kings. They smoke pot and drink brews.

George and Barbara get close as do Tuna and Maria. Slowly,
George's clothes and hair start to look better, cooler.

Derek, Tuna, Maria and different Elves.

George and Tuna sell half-ounces to BIKERS.

Derek is having a party out of a mini-van in the beach parking lot. George, Barbara, Tuna and Maria are there.

EXT. MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - SUNSET

George and Barbara sit by the water, watching the waves crash into the sand. The sky is streaked with purple and red.

GEORGE
This is it for me.

BARBARA
What is?

GEORGE
Just everything. You. California. The beach. This spot right here. I feel like I belong here, you know? It just feels right.

BARBARA
You happy, baby?

GEORGE
Yeah. I am.

EXT. WORKSITE - WEYMOUTH - 1966 - DAY

The worksite is busy. George is amongst other workers, working a summer job. As George is taking five, he looks across the sight to Fred, who is sweeping up debris. A long way from being the boss.

INT. COLLEGE ADMISSIONS OFFICE - WEYMOUTH - 1966 - DAY

George stands in line to register for college, wearing his Brooks Brothers suit, bowtie, and freshly Bryllcreamed hair. The room is crowded and the line is long. Bob Dylan's "Subterranean Homesick Blues" blares out of one of the kid's transistor radios. George looks around the room. He is uncomfortable. He catches his reflection in the shiny glass partition and stops. He doesn't like what he sees. Something is not right. He looks like everyone else. Same cookie-cutter hair, same cookie-cutter clothes, same cookie cutter faces. He's a carbon copy.

REGISTRATION WOMAN
Next.

It's George's turn but he doesn't hear it. "Twenty years of schooling and they put you on a day shift." The words hit him like a tone of bricks as he continues to stare at his own reflection.

GEORGE (V.O.)
I was standing there, and it was like the outside of me and the inside of me didn't match, you know? And then I looked around the room and it hit me. I saw my whole life. Where I was gonna live, what type of car I'd drive, who my neighbors would be. I saw it all and I didn't want it. Not that life.

EXT. CONSTRUCTION SITE - WEYMOUTH - 1966 - DAY

George sits with Fred. It's breaktime and Fred eats from a lunch box.

GEORGE
There's something out there for me, Dad.

Something different. Something free form, you know? Something for me, and college just isn't it.

FRED

That's too bad. You would have been the first one in the family.

GEORGE

I know.

FRED

Alright. You want me to get your old job back? Because I could, you know, I could put in that word.

GEORGE

No, Dad. I don't want to...I mean, I just don't want...

It's obvious to Fred that his son doesn't want to be like him.

FRED

What are you going to do?

GEORGE

I'm going to California.

EXT. BELMONT SHORES APARTMENT - 1968 - DAY

SUPERIMPOSE: MANHATTAN BEACH, CALIFORNIA 1968

George and Tuna, now 21-years old, struggle with their bags. Their new place is a tackily furnished, two-story apartment with small balconies and a view of the ocean. As George and Tuna struggle with the bags, two California beauties appear on the balcony next door: BARBARA BUCKLEY, 20, and MARIA GONZALES, 21.

GIRLS

You guys need some help?

George and Tuna share a look.

TUNA

I don't know about you, but I think we're gonna like it here.

EXT. MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - DAY

SERIES OF SHOTS

Barbara and Maria introduce George and Tuna around to the Manhattan Beach regulars. They are immediately accepted despite their ill fitting shorts and Tuna's unhip black socks. The beach scene is one big party. Lots of beer, music, bikinis, and good times. By the end of the day, George and Tuna have a hundred new friends.

GEORGE (V.O.)

California was like nothing I'd ever experienced. The people were liberated and independent and full of new ideas.

GEORGE (V.O.) (CONT'D)

They used words like "right on," "groovy," and "solid." The women are all beautiful and seemed to share the same occupation.

WOMAN #1
I'm a flight attendant.

WOMAN #2
I'm a flight attendant.

WOMAN #3
I'm a flight attendant.

The weed comes out and is passed around. Pipes. Joints. Bongs. In SLOW MOTION, Barbara takes a huge hit of grass, grabs George's face, french kissing him, and giving him a huge shotgun.

INT. BELMONT SHORES APARTMENT - 1968 - DAY

George and Barbara are sleeping late. Their bodies intertwined beneath the sheets. A slam of the front door wakes them up. It's Tuna.

TUNA
Hey, wake up. Come on, you two lovebirds. Hurry, I want to show you something.

George and Barbara shake cobwebs out and stumble into the kitchen to find Tuna holding a brown paper shopping bag.

TUNA (CONT'D)
Figured it out.

GEORGE
Figured what out?

TUNA
You know how we were wondering what we were going to do for money? Being how we don't want to get jobs and whatnot? Well, check this out.

Tuna takes the paper bag and empties its contents on the kitchen table. It's a grey mound of stocky, seedy marijuana.

Barbara examines the reefer.

BARBARA
Tuna, this is crap.

TUNA
I know it's not the greatest. It's commercial.

BARBARA
It's garbage.

GEORGE
It's oregano. You got ripped off, pal. What are you gonna do with all this?

TUNA
We sell it. I got it all figured out. We make three finger lids and sell them on the beach. We move all of it. We've made ourselves a hundred bucks. Or a lot of weed for our head. What do you think? Not bad, huh? I got the baggies and everything.

BARBARA

You can't sell this to your friends.

TUNA

Man. Fuck you guys. I have this great idea and you guys have to be all skeptical.

BARBARA

Look, if you really wanna score some dope, I got the guy.

EXT. THE WHIPPING POST - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - DAY

George, Barbara and Tuna stop outside the front door.

GEORGE

Are you sure this guy is cool?

BARBARA

You'll see for yourself.

TUNA

A beauty parlor for men? Sounds pretty queer.

They walk in.

INT. THE WHIPPING POST - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - CONTINUOUS

George, Tuna and Barbara enter. The Whipping Post is California's first male hair salon. George looks around at the customer's being pampered. Haircuts, pedicures, manicures.

GEORGE

Nothing like this back home.

BARBARA

Derek!

DEREK FOREAL is a curious man. Daringly effeminate, especially for the sixties, he is always surrounded by beautiful women. As he sees Barbara, he stops his haircut and runs to embrace her.

DEREK

Barbie!

Derek's female entourage rush over as well. Kisses all around.

DEREK (CONT'D)

So, this is the new man, huh? He's cute!

George and Tuna stick out there hands.

GEORGE

George.

TUNA

Tuna.

DEREK

Tuna, oh my. Enchante, George. Barbie, he's yummy. He looks like a Ken doll. Oooh, Ken and Barbie. It's perfect.

Alright, girls, give me five minutes.

Derek makes dismissing gestures and the girls scatter.

DEREK (CONT'D)

Everyone, shoo! You, too, Barbie. I want to talk to the boys alone.

After the girls leave, Derek closes the partition and his playful demeanor changes. He's all business now.

DEREK (CONT'D)

What can I do for you guys?

GEORGE

We want some grass.

DEREK

I know what you want. But, first of all, are you cops?

GEORGE

No.

DEREK

Because if you are, you have to tell me. If not, it's entrapment.

GEORGE

We're not cops. We're from Massachusetts. I mean, does he look like a cop?

DEREK

I guess not. Okay. You know, you're very lucky you're friends of Barbie's. If you weren't, I'd never talk to you.

Derek pulls a television-sized brick of quality marijuana out from under a sink and sets it down in front of George.

GEORGE

Yeah. I am.

INT. BELMONT SHORES APARTMENT - 1968 - DAY

George walks in to find Tuna and Maria sitting with KEVIN DULLI, an old friend from back east. He's sitting in front of a water pipe and coughing his ass off.

TUNA
Look what the cat dragged in.

GEORGE
Holy shit, Dulli. What the hell are you doing here?

KEVIN
Well, I'll tell you. I was walking down the beach, minding my business, when who did I see but this fucking guy. I didn't know you guys were living in California.

GEORGE
Yeah, but what are you doing out here?

KEVIN
I'm on vacation. On my way back to school.

GEORGE

This calls for a joint. You want to do the honors?

KEVIN

No, man. I'm too fucked up.

TUNA

Nice weed, huh?

KEVIN

Fuck yeah. I never seen nothing like it. I'm fucking wasted.

GEORGE

Right on.

KEVIN

G-d, I'm stoned. I'm stoned. I'm really...

GEORGE

Stoned?

KEVIN

I wish there was shit like this back home.

GEORGE

Yeah?

KEVIN

Shit, yeah. Do you know how much money I could make if I had this stuff back east?

TUNA

No shit, Kevin?

KEVIN

That's right.

GEORGE

Yeah?

KEVIN

When there's something to move, it's too easy not to. Do you know how many colleges are in a twenty mile radius? U. Mass, Amherst, B.U....

TUNA

Smith. Hampshire....

KEVIN

Right. And Holyoke. There are a hundred thousand rich kids with their parents' money to spend, but there's never anything available. Nothing good, anyway. I'm paying four hundred dollars for shit.

INT. THE WHIPPING POST - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - DAY

Derek, George and Barbara sit around. The blinds are drawn.

GEORGE

The way we figure it, Barbara flies to Boston twice a week. Two bags per flight. Twenty-five pounds in each bag.

DEREK
You're kidding, right? That's a hundred pounds a week.

GEORGE
Yeah, I know, it's a lot of weight.

BARBARA
We're gonna call it California sinsemilla. Sounds exotic.

GEORGE
I'm telling you, Derek, it will sell.

DEREK
I don't know...

GEORGE
Here's the best part. We can charge five-hundred a pound.

DEREK
Come on, George, no one is going to pay that.

GEORGE
It's already been negotiated. It's done. The money is there waiting.

Derek looks at Barbara. She nods.

DEREK Goodness.

GEORGE
Goodness is right. If you do the math, that's over thirty grand a week profit. I want you to be my partner on this, Derek. Fifty-fifty. That's fifteen thousand a week for you, my friend. In your pocket, free and clear.

DEREK
And I only deal with you?

GEORGE
Barbara and me. No one else.

Derek thinks about it.

BARBARA
It's gonna work, Derek.

DEREK
I don't know. East coast. Airplanes. It all sounds pretty risky.

GEORGE
She's a flight attendant. They don't check her bags.

EXT. LOS ANGELES INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT - 1968 - DAY

George drops Barbara off in her uniform curbside. They kiss and she walks away with two big, red Samsonites. She checks them with a SKYCAP and tips him.

EXT. SKY - 1968 - DAY

A huge jet goes right to left through frame.

INT. LOGAN AIRPORT - GATE - BOSTON - 1968 - DAY

Barbara is greeted by KEVIN DULLI with a hug. A baggage claim check is slipped into Kevin's hand.

BARBARA
Any message?

KEVIN
Keep it coming.

INT. LOGAN AIRPORT - BAGGAGE CLAIM - BOSTON - 1968

We see Barbara's two red Samsonites being taken off the belt by Kevin.

INT. LOGAN AIRPORT - GATE - BOSTON - 1968

Same scene repeated, except different clothes on all. Maybe Kevin is dressed a little better.

KEVIN
More.

INT. LOGAN AIRPORT - GATE - BOSTON - 1968

The same scene repeated, same things changed again; now Kevin is definitely dressed a little better.

KEVIN
I need more.

BARBARA
What do you want me to do? I can only take two bags, and I can't fly back here everyday.

KEVIN
I know, but I've got a feeding frenzy on my hands. Tell George this is small potatoes. We're missing out on some serious cash. You tell George. He'll think of something.

EXT. WINNEBAGO - 1968 - DAY

MUSIC CUE:

Tuna drives the big Winny. Maria rides shotgun. Barrelling cross-country, it's a party on wheels.

EXT. WHITE OAK LODGE - AMHERST - 1968 - NIGHT

Kevin and his girl, RADA, are the welcoming committee as the RV pulls into the parking lot. They wave, slap the sides of the Winnebago, and greet the prodigal sons with hugs and handshakes.

INT. WHITE OAK LODGE - AMHERST - 1968 - LATER

George's room is rustic and plush. A log fire burns and empty champagne bottles adorn the surroundings. The girls have taken to each other. The music is loud, and they dance while the boys do business. Kevin counts out the money.

It's stacked in piles all over the table.

KEVIN

Twenty, forty, sixty, eighty, nine.
Twenty, forty, sixty, eighty, a thousand. It's all there. Wow. A hundred and twenty-eight thousand dollars.

TUNA

Jesus Christ, I'm getting a boner just looking at it.

But George isn't paying attention. His wheels are turning.

KEVIN

What's the matter, George? Something wrong? You look like you just fucked your mother.

TUNA

Cheer up, man. Half this money is ours.
We're fucking rich.

GEORGE

It's not enough.

KEVIN

What?

TUNA

What the fuck are you talking about,
man?

GEORGE

The set-up is wrong. We're doing all the legwork, and at the end of the day, we're still paying retail. We're getting muddled.

KEVIN

So?

GEORGE

So, we need to get to the source.

TUNA

Source? What about Derek?

GEORGE

He's getting muddled, too. And Derek's our partner. What's good for us is good for him.

KEVIN

Okay. So we need a source. Where do we start?

GEORGE

Who speaks Spanish?

EXT. PUERTO VALLARTA - MEXICO - 1968 - DAY

MUSIC CUE.

SUPERIMPOSE: PUERTO VALLARTA, MEXICO

We PAN OFF the beautiful waters of Puerto Vallarta. This is a local beach on a Saturday afternoon. The girls on the beach are drinking coco-locos and swimming.

SERIES OF SHOTS - THE GANG LOOKING FOR A CONNECTION

EXT. OCEANA BAR - PUERTO VALLARTA - 1968 - DAY

TUNA

This is bullshit, George. We're never going to find anything down there.

KEVIN

You know, he's got a point. We're fucking Americans. We stick out like sore thumbs.

DEREK

I don't think so.

GEORGE

You guys are such babies. You want to go home, go. Me, I'm not going to stop until I find the fucking motherlode.

RADA

Georgie, we're gonna get busted if we keep this up.

GEORGE

We're not gonna get busted.

KEVIN

George, we'll wind up in a Mexican prison getting fucked up the ass by one of Maria's relatives.

MARIA

Hey, fuck you, Dulli. I'm not Mexican. I'm Italian.

BARBARA

You're Italian?

KEVIN

Yeah, right. Gonzales. What is that, Sicilian?

TUNA

As far as I'm concerned, we're on fucking vacation.

He grabs Maria, runs and does a huge belly-flop into the water. They all laugh.

SERIES OF SHOTS.

George and Barbara with local musicians on the beach.

George and Derek at a cab stand.

George talks with a bellboy in the lobby of a local hotel.

INT. COCOS FRIOS BAR - PUERTO VALLARTA - 1968 - DAY

George, Barbara, Tuna, Derek, Maria, Kevin, and Rada are at the bar. Ramon comes up to George, they briefly discuss and George follows him out of the bar.

EXT. STREETS - PUERTO VALLARTA - 1968 - DAY

George and Ramon climb into a beat up V.W. bug and take off.

EXT. COUNTRYSIDE - PUERTO VALLARTA - 1968 - DAY

Fields and Farms. The V.W. bug pulls up to an old ranch. They get out of the bug and are greeted by SANTIAGO and his THREE SONS.

SANTIAGO

Ramon tells me you are looking for some mota.

GEORGE

Yes, I am.

Santiago moves to a tarp and pulls it back to reveal many bales of green, seedless sinsemilla.

SANTIAGO

For instance, something like this?

GEORGE

Very nice. I'll take it.

SANTIAGO

Ha ha ha. You are funny. Really, how much will you be needing?

GEORGE

All of it. As much as you've got. A couples thousand pounds. I'll be back in a week with a plane.

SANTIAGO

Listen, Americano, it is very nice to meet you, but maybe we are going too fast. You take a little and then come back.

GEORGE

I don't need a little. I need a lot.

SANTIAGO

Marijuana is illegal in my country, and I believe in yours, as well. We must be careful.

GEORGE

What if I brought you, let's say, fifty thousand dollars? Would that eliminate some of your concerns?

SANTIAGO

Amigo, you bring me fifty-thousand dollars, and I have no more concerns.

EXT. SANTA MONICA AIRPORT - 1968 - DAY

A pair of boltcutters snaps the chain off a single-engine

Cessna.

TUNA

I can't believe we're stealing a plane.

KEVIN

Don't be such a pussy.

GEORGE

It's fine. We're not stealing it.
We're borrowing it. And try to look natural. We've got company.

A MECHANIC working on the adjacent plane is giving them the hairy eyeball.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Be cool.

The three boys nod their heads in acknowledgement and give a small wave. The mechanic smiles and waves back.

INT. CESSNA - 1968 - DAY

The engine is on and the propeller is spinning. Kevin is at the controls. Tuna is not making the trip. He pokes his head in before shutting the cockpit.

TUNA

You guys are fucking insane.

George reads from a flight manual.

GEORGE

Alright, pull back the throttle...

The engine screams.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Not that far, only halfway. You sure you know what you're doing?

KEVIN

Relax. I've flown with my old man a million times. And he always told me, the taking off part is easy, it's the landing you've got to worry about.

EXT. SANTIAGO FARM - MEXICO - 1968 - DAY

The plane tries to land. It's a clumsy one. The Cessna is tipping and touching, first one wheel, then another, almost sideways before straightening out and stopping. George and Kevin hop out of the plane. They are greeted by Santiago and the Mexican contingency.

AMIGOS

Hola, George! Bienvenido!

George hands out presents to everyone. He's like Santa Claus, giving gifts to every man, woman and child. They love him. Santiago pumps George's hand.

SANTIAGO

Good to see you, Jorge. You are a man of your word.

GEORGE

Actually, I've got some news. That fifty thousand I promised you, I couldn't get it.

George throws Santiago a duffel bag.

GEORGE (CONT'D)
So I brought you sixty.

EXT. DRY LAKE BEDS - TWENTY-NINE PALMS, CA. - 1968 - DUSK

Rada sits in the Winnebago and keeps flashing the headlights.
Barbara, Tuna, and Maria stand on top of the Winnebago waving big, white towels. The plane descends from the sky and touches down, making another extremely shaky landing.

INT. FOREAL'S HOUSE - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1968 - NIGHT

It's on the water and beautiful. The furnishings are distinctly Derek Foreal. It's a surreal scene.
The holiday decorations are up, TOPLESS WOMEN in elf outfits sip champagne, and a thousand pounds of cannabis lays on the living room floor.

GEORGE
Are you sure you want to do this in front of everyone?

DEREK
Don't be ridiculous, these are my babies.

George empties the pot all over the floor.

DEREK (CONT'D)
George, you're a genius. We're rich.
Come, children.

The girls dive on top of Derek, caressing and kissing him.

DEREK (CONT'D)
George, get my camera.

Derek poses with a load of marijuana like it's a new fur.

DEREK (CONT'D)
Take a picture of me, George. Take a picture of me with my new friends.
It'll be a fabulous Christmas card.

INT. VILLA - PUERTO VALLARATA - 1970 - DAY

A Mexican Real Estate Agent shows Barbara and George a sprawling Villa in Puerto Vallarta. It's amazing. White marble on the water. George looks at Barbara.

GEORGE
Should we buy it?

BARBARA
Are you kidding?

GEORGE
We'll take it.

EXT. VILLA - PUERTO VALLARATA - 1970 - MAGIC HOUR

The team is there. All of them. George, Barbara, Kevin, Rada, Tuna, Maria and Derek with a couple of new senorita friends. They all wear identical Mexican sombreros. A MEXICAN BOY approaches them with a camera.

MEXICAN BOY Picture?

They pose, their arms thrown around each other in camaraderie, and FLASH. The picture freezes and WE DISSOLVE.

INT. THE BUGGY WHIP - WEYMOUTH - 1972 - NIGHT

George is taking Barbara and his parents out to dinner. The Buggy Whip is Ermine's favorite.

ERMINE
I just can't get over the size of that ring. I just love it. Fred, look at it. Tell me you don't love that ring.

FRED
I'm just happy that George has found someone he cares for.

ERMINE
Yes. Of course. But, I'm talking about that ring. It's something else. Let me tell you.

BARBARA
George has exquisite taste.

ERMINE
What is that, two carats? That's got to be two carats.

BARBARA
I don't know.

ERMINE
Yes. It's at least two carats, darling. Treasure it.

FRED
Hard to imagine being able to afford a ring like that on a construction salary.

All eyes turn to George, who fumbles.

GEORGE
Well, you know. It's um...

ERMINE
Oh, shut up, Fred. Shut your big fat mouth. You don't buy it all at once. It's called layaway.

FRED
Layaway shmayaway.

ERMINE
That's right. Layaway. Something you wouldn't know anything about, you cheapskate.

FRED
Who's the cheapskate?

ERMINE
You, you big old tightwad. He still has his communion money. Tell him, George.

Tell your father about layaway.

GEORGE
Yeah, layaway.

ERMINE
The boy is happy, Fred. Don't be such a killjoy.

FRED Killjoy?

George looks to Barbara, whose nose is bleeding.

GEORGE
Honey, your nose!

BARBARA
Oh my G-d, I'm so sorry.

ERMINE
Barbara, here, take my napkin.

BARBARA
Thanks. I'll be okay.

GEORGE
You wanna split?

BARBARA
Yeah, I don't feel so well.

GEORGE
Okay, guys, we're gonna leave. Let's get the check.

EXT. THE BUGGY WHIP - WEYMOUTH - 1972 - LATER

George and Barbara exit the restaurant.

GEORGE
Are you sure you're okay? You're pale.

BARBARA
I feel like shit. Me and my frigging nosebleeds.

GEORGE
I'm taking you to the doctor when we get home, and I don't want to hear any arguments.

BARBARA
Would you be bummed out if I didn't go to Chicago with you?

GEORGE
No, not at all. Sure. You're right. You fly home and get some rest.

BARBARA
Nice first impression. A nose bleed in front of your parents.

GEORGE
Oh my G-d, how embarrassing were they? I wanted to shoot myself.

BARBARA

Oh, they weren't that bad. I mean, they were kind of cute.

GEORGE

Promise me that we'll never be like them. I don't want to wind up like that.

BARBARA

Relax, baby. We're going to wind up like us.

INT. POLICE STATION - CHICAGO - 1972 - DAY

SUPERIMPOSE

MUG SHOTS of George. Left, right, center. George sits handcuffed to a chair. Piles of marijuana bricks roll past him.

GEORGE (V.O.)

I had a little problem in Chicago. Something about trying to sell a truckload of dope to an undercover officer. So I applied the three rules of the game under if and when arrested.

INT. COOK COUNTY COURTHOUSE - CHICAGO - 1972 - DAY

George and his COURT APPOINTED ATTORNEY stand before the JUDGE at the arraignment.

GEORGE (V.O.)

Rule one: don't fight. A trial will cost you a fortune in lawyer's fees and the jury will chop off your balls and hand them to you on a platter.

JUDGE

George Jung, you have been accused of possession of six-hundred and sixty pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute. How do you plead?

GEORGE (V.O.)

Rule two: plead not guilty and get bailed out of jail.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Your honor, I'd like to say a few words to the court.

The court appointed attorney puts his head in his hands.

JUDGE

By all means.

GEORGE

In all honesty, I don't feel like what I've done is a crime and I think it's illogical and irresponsible for you to sentence me to prison. None of the real criminals of the world ever end up behind bars. I mean, when you think about it, what did I really do? Cross an imaginary line with a bunch of plants? You say that I'm an outlaw, you say that I'm a thief, but where's the Christmas dinner for the people on relief?

George stops when his attorney stamps on his foot. The court officers roll their eyes and the judge smiles.

JUDGE

Those are very interesting concepts you have, Mr. Jung. Unfortunately for you, the imaginary line you crossed is real, the plants you brought with you are illegal, and what you did constitutes a crime.

The judge slams his gavel.

JUDGE (CONT'D)

Bail is set at twenty-thousand dollars.

EXT. COOK COUNTY COURTHOUSE - CHICAGO - 1972 - NIGHT

George walks out, free on bond, to find Barbara waiting for him. She doesn't look so good.

BARBARA

Surprise.

GEORGE

Baby, you didn't have to come.

BARBARA

What, and miss all the fun? C'mon, not a chance. So, what's the verdict?

GEORGE

Lawyer says he can plead it down to five years. I'll serve two.

BARBARA

Two years. George, I can't wait that long.

GEORGE

What? You're not going to wait for me?

BARBARA

George, I went to the doctor. I don't have two years.

GEORGE (V.O.)

Which brings me to rule number three: which says, fuck rules one and two, skip bail and take off.

EXT. RENT-A-CAR - 1972 - DAY

George hits the gas and the car screams down the road.

EXT. VILLA - PUERTO VALLARTA - 1973 - GOLDEN HOUR

George and Barbara sit on the veranda drinking champagne and watching the sun go down over the Pacific. Barbara is completely bald. Rail thin, eyes sunken. But it doesn't matter. They're having a great time. They laugh and hold hands and laugh some more.

EXT. CEMETERY - PUERTO VALLARTA - 1973 - DAY

Everyone is there. All in black. Barbara's casket is lowered into the ground and George climbs to his knees to push the first dirt on the grave.

GEORGE (V.O.)

Time is such a funny thing. I look at where I am now, and in here, time inches along. So slow, it hardly seems like it moves. But back then, time went fast.

EXT. OTISVILLE F.C.I. - NEW YORK - 1999 - DAY

George pushes dirt along the edge of a flower root. Still planting those sunflowers, he presses down firmly, standing before him is Barbara, still beautiful and young with flowing locks. George raises his hand and makes a small wave. Barbara opens and closes her hand. Bye bye.

GEORGE

It went too fast.

George looks down and Barbara is gone. No Barbara.

EXT. JUNG HOUSE - BACKYARD - WEYMOUTH - 1973 - NIGHT

George hops the fence like he did when he was a boy and goes in the back door.

INT. JUNG HOUSE - KITCHEN - CONTINUOUS

Ermine looks at George blankly.

GEORGE

Hi, Mom.

Ermine just keeps looking at him.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Surprised to see me?

ERMINE

Take your boots off. You're tan.

GEORGE

Mexico.

ERMINE

Yeah. We heard all about it. I want you to know I'm deeply sorry about your girlfriend.

GEORGE

Barbara.

ERMINE

Yes, Barbara. She was very pretty.

GEORGE

Thank you. Have you been getting the money I sent you?

ERMINE

You mean the drug money? Yes, I got it.

Ermine's hands are trembling. She is emotional. She hugs George ferociously, not letting go.

ERMINE (CONT'D)

G-d, son.

GEORGE

Okay, Mom. It's okay. Where's Dad?

George turns around to see Fred's beaming face.

INT. JUNG HOUSE - KITCHEN - LATER

George and Fred sit at the table, a bottle of Scotch sits between them. The glasses are raised.

GEORGE

May the wind always be at your back and the sun always upon your face...

FRED

...and the winds of destiny carry you aloft...

BOTH

...to dance with the stars.

The glasses clink and the drinks are sucked down.

INT. JUNG HOUSE - LATER

The bottle is dwindling. George and Fred are feeling it.

FRED

You alright?

George nods.

GEORGE

Just low.

FRED

You loved her, didn't you? You really loved her.

GEORGE

Yeah, Dad. I really did. What am I gonna do?

FRED

Tough spot.

The glasses are refilled.

GEORGE

You mad at me?

FRED

Not mad.

GEORGE

Yeah, you are. I can tell by the way you look at me.

FRED

I just don't know what you're thinking.
I don't understand your choices. You know, the police are looking for you.

GEORGE

I know. I'm great at what I do, Dad. I mean, I'm really great.

FRED

Let me tell you something, son. You would have been great at anything.

Something outside catches George's eye. A light. A reflection. A movement. George is up and on the move.

FRED (CONT'D)
Where are you going?

EXT. JUNG HOUSE - NIGHT

The front door opens and FEDERAL AGENTS pour into the house.

INT. JUNG HOUSE - CONTINUOUS

George is up the stairs in a flash.

ERMINE
George!

INT. GEORGE'S BEDROOM - CONTINUOUS

George slams the door behind him, moves over to the window, and opens it. Cops everywhere. He's trapped. Out of options, he folds. He moves to the corner and sits down, turns on the train set. A KNOCK on the door is heard. FBI Agent, JAMES T. TROUT.

TROUT
George Jung, you are under arrest.

FRED
Open the door, son.

EXT. JUNG HOUSE - LATER

They lead George outside in handcuffs. Ermine and Fred watch.

ERMINE
I had no choice.

George stops and looks at his mother, for the first time realizing her betrayal.

ERMINE (CONT'D)
Don't look at me like that. What was I supposed to do? You're in our house. What, was I supposed to be an accomplice?

As George is led to the police car, Ermine follows.

ERMINE (CONT'D)
You don't think people know you're a drug dealer? Everyone knows. It's no secret. How do you think that reflects on me? Every time I go out, I'm humiliated. I see the stares. I hear the whispers. How do you think that makes me feel? Did you ever once stop and think of me?

George's head is pushed down as he is put in the squad car. He looks up at his mother.

ERMINE (CONT'D)
So you go to jail. It's for your own good. You need to straighten your life out.

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - 1974 - DAY

SUPERIMPOSE:

George is being led through a series of gated corridors.

GUARD
Prisoner in.

As he walks, he takes in the faces of the other inmates. He arrives at his cell and notices he has a ROOMMATE.

GUARD (CONT'D)
Prisoner in.

The cell door opens and George steps inside. There are books and papers spread out over both bunk beds. George watches as his cellmate quickly clears everything off the top bunk. Apparently, the papers are private. George puts his things down and the little man proffers his hand. He is dark, polite and Colombian.

DIEGO DELGADO
My name is Diego Delgado. How do you do?

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - MESS HALL - 1974 - DAY

George pushes his tray through the cafeteria line. Diego is behind him.

DIEGO
If you don't mind me asking, what is the reason you are in this place?

GEORGE
What?

DIEGO
Your offense? Why are you here?

GEORGE
I don't want to talk about it.

DIEGO
Intriguing. I see. Would you like to know my crime?

GEORGE
Not really, no.

DIEGO
No?

GEORGE
I don't like a lot of conversation, Diego.

DIEGO
Me, too. Too much blah, blah, blah, blah is no good. But we are roommates, okay? And we must talk to each other. I am arrested for stealing cars. For the grand theft auto. Okay? So, now it is your turn. Now you will tell me, okay? You will tell me why you are here?

George says nothing. He keeps eating his food.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

Oh, come on, George. If we are to be friends, we must trust each other.

GEORGE

Murder.

DIEGO

Ah, yes. The murder.

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - GEORGE'S CELL - NIGHT

George lays on his bunk, smoking. Diego is on the bottom bunk, furiously writing on a notepad. He flips through his books and rustles his papers. George peeks over the side to see what Diego is doing.

GEORGE

What do you got there, Diego?

DIEGO

Nothing. Just a little project.

GEORGE

What kind of project?

DIEGO

Never mind. Not for you to worry.

GEORGE

I thought you said we were roommates. That we should talk about everything.

DIEGO

You have your intrigues. I have mine. This is a happy day for me, George. Nine months from today, I will be in Medellin sipping champagne. In nine months, I am free. How much time do you have?

GEORGE

Twenty-six months.

DIEGO

Twenty-six months? For murder? I must be your lawyer.

GEORGE

I've got to get out of here, Diego.

DIEGO

Only two ways I know to leave here early. One is to escape.

GEORGE

What's the other one?

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - CLASSROOM - DAY

George is trying to teach basic education to the inmates. The room, mostly black and hispanic, is hostile. They don't want to learn.

GEORGE

Alright, let's open our books.

INMATE #1

Man, fuck you.

INMATE #2
We ain't opening shit.

INMATE #1
You just the warden's boy. We on to you. You just trying to knock some time off, asskissing motherfucker.

Diego watches as the room reacts with laughter. This ain't going to be easy.

GEORGE
Alright. You're right. I want to get out of this shithole as fast as I can.
And I don't want to do this any more than you do. But for me to walk early, some of you have to graduate. You, forget about it. You're hopeless, go to sleep.

The room laughs again.

INMATE #3
Damn, homeboy, you got ruined.

GEORGE
But the rest of you could get diplomas and get jobs when you're on the outside.

The room looks at him. They ain't buying it.

INMATE #1
Shit, I'm in for life.

INMATE #2
I'm a criminal. I ain't getting no motherfucking job.

GEORGE
We can learn some criminal shit, too.
Alright, I'll make you a deal. What if half the time, we learn about George Washington, and the other half, I'll teach you how to smuggle drugs?

INMATE #2
Man, you don't know dick about smuggling no drugs.

GEORGE
I was arrested in Chicago with six hundred and sixty pounds of grass. I think that qualifies me.

Diego looks up from his desk, suddenly very interested.

INMATE #1
How did you get a hold of six-hundred and sixty pounds of dope?

GEORGE
Flew it in from Mexico on a single engine Cessna. Now, do we have a deal or not?

They react. They're in.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Alright, the first thing you need to know about smuggling drugs is that it's easy. The DEA are a bunch of losers. They couldn't find their dicks in a whorehouse. They don't know what the fuck they're doing...

Diego watches George winning over the room. He listens intently to George's every word. His wheels are turning.

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - GEORGE'S CELL - NIGHT

Lights out. Diego and George lay in their cots. George is tired. Diego is not.

DIEGO

George? Hey, George? I listen to what you say to the class today about the smuggling. You are a magico, ah?

George doesn't respond.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

I never believed you were a murderer. I knew. I knew you are a magico. I have seen it in you. It's in your spirit.

GEORGE

I'm tired, Diego. Go to bed.

DIEGO

You like to make the boundaries disappear. It's not only the money, is it, George? The adventure is part of the victory. It's the thrill, ah?

GEORGE

Good night.

DIEGO

In my country, I am a magico. A man with a dream. A man on the rise. To take nothing and make it something, okay? I have failed my dream, but I will accomplish. That is why I am in your country. Yes, I lose my freedom. But they do not take my dream. Do you have a dream, George?

GEORGE

I would if I could get some sleep.

DIEGO

Yes, you have a dream. And maybe you accomplish your dream. But yet you failed. Why?

GEORGE

Because I got caught.

DIEGO

No, my brother.

GEORGE

Because they caught me?

DIEGO

You failed because you had the wrong dream.

Diego climbs off his bunk and looks George square in the eye.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

George? What do you know about cocaine?

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - MESS HALL - DAY

GEORGE

I don't know, Diego. I've got a good thing going already. Everybody smokes pot. It's easy. Cocaine is a rich man's drug. It's too expensive.

DIEGO

No, no. That is where you are wrong. For us, it is cheap. In Medellin, we buy for six-thousand dollars a kilo. IN Miami, we sell for sixty.

George's interest is piqued.

GEORGE

That's over fifty-thousand dollars profit per kilo.

DIEGO

And that's wholesale. Cut it a few times and retail, you're looking at two, three-hundred thousand.

GEORGE

Oh my G-d.

DIEGO

Yes. And a kilo of coca is smaller than a kilo of your precious marijuana. Everything is the same, George, except instead of thousands, you are making millions.

GEORGE

Jesus Christ. Jesus fucking Christ.

DIEGO

Now do you see what I am saying?

GEORGE

Getting it here is no problem. Trust me. I'll fly it in myself if I have to. What about supply? How much can we get?

DIEGO

Don't worry. We will talk of everything. We have the time. You arrive here with a Bachelor of Marijuana, but you will leave with a Doctorate of Cocaine.

INT. DANBURY F.C.I. - GEORGE'S CELL - NIGHT

Diego and George pouring over Diego's plans. Discussing, planning, plotting.

DIEGO

What type of planes do you have?

GEORGE

Four passenger, single engine Cessna.

DIEGO
How many kilos can we fit in these planes?

GEORGE
I don't know. A hundred, hundred and fifty. How many miles is it from Colombia to Miami?

DIEGO
Fifteen hundred. We'll have to stop somewhere to refuel.

GEORGE
We'll refuel in the Bahamas. I know someone there.

DIEGO
Great. I love the Bahamas.

EXT. LIQUOR STORE - WEYMOUTH - 1976

SUPERIMPOSE: JULY, 1976.

George is at a payphone. He drops in about a million quarters until he is finally connected.

GEORGE
Diego Delgado, please?

DIEGO
Allo?

GEORGE
Diego? It's George.

DIEGO
George, hallo! Today is the day, ah? Are you out?

GEORGE
Yeah, I'm out.

DIEGO
Congratulations, brother. I've been waiting for you.

GEORGE
How are we doing?

DIEGO
Perfect, George. Perfect. Everything is fine down here. Everything is all set up.

GEORGE
Do we need a plane? How does this work? When do I see you?

DIEGO
Slow down, George. Slow down.

Fred exits the liquor store carrying two bottles of Dom Perignon. As he catches George's eye, he lifts the bottles showing them off. George holds up his finger, indicating he'll be just a second.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

You need to come down here, everybody meets everybody. Ho ho ho. Ha ha ha. We do one for good faith and then we talk about airplanes.

GEORGE

I can't go anywhere, Diego. I'm on parole. I can't leave the state.

DIEGO

But you must. It's the only way.

GEORGE

I just got released five minutes ago.

DIEGO

George, are we gonna do this or not?

EXT. BASSETERRE HOTEL - ANTIGUA - POOLSIDE - 1976 - DAY

George steps outside and spots Diego. Their eyes meet. Diego looks different, relaxed. He wears a straw hat, shorts, and sports a healthy tan. The two men embrace.

GEORGE

Good to see you, Diego.

DIEGO

Yes. Look around you. The sun. The water. The women. It's better than Danbury, no? Come on. I have some friends I would like you to meet.

EXT. BASSETERRE HOTEL - ANTIGUA - POOLSIDE - 1976 - DAY

Diego and George sit with five other Colombians, most notably, a man named CESAR ROZA. The mood is not friendly.

DIEGO

Fifteen kilos. Seven and a half in each suitcase. You receive a hundred thousand dollars upon delivery.

GEORGE

Okay.

CESAR

Not so fast. I would like to go over the details.

GEORGE

What details? I put the coke in the false bottoms and take it through customs.

CESAR

Tell me about the suitcases. What is the make and the color?

DIEGO

Samsonites. Red. No tags.

Cesar thinks about it.

CESAR

Hmm. I see. Will there be clothes in the suitcase?

GEORGE
What? Yeah, sure.

CESAR
Whose cloths? Your clothes?

GEORGE
My clothes, your clothes. What does it matter?

CESAR
I would like to know the contents.
Every detail is important.

GEORGE
What are we doing here, Diego? This guy's a clown. He's talking about clothes.

CESAR
I demand to know everything. I do not trust six-hundred thousand dollars of coca to someone I don't know.

GEORGE
It's a lousy fifteen kilos. I piss fifteen kilos.

CESAR
The coca is my responsibility!

GEORGE
You're a fucking amateur!

DIEGO
Gentlemen, please. There is no need to be impolite. Cesar, this will be fine. You have my word. George, Cesar is just being thorough. That's all.

CESAR
Very well. But just remember, Mr. Jung. I will be with you the whole way. And I will be watching.

INT. LOGAN AIRPORT - CUSTOMS - 1976 - DAY

George carries the two Samsonites over to customs inspections. It's a long walk. George's heart beats hard. The sound is audible and grows with every beat. BA-BUMP. BA BUMP. Cesar lurks at the baggage carousel.

GEORGE (V.O.)
When you're carrying drugs across the border, the idea is to remain calm. The way I do it is to think of something pleasant, a fun party, a moment of triumph. A sexual encounter. I actually project myself to that place. Anything to keep your mind off the fact that you're going to jail for a very long time if they find the fifteen kilos of cocaine in your suitcases.

George stands in front of the customs agent. He tries his best to look relaxed as the agent reviews his documents.

CUSTOMS AGENT
On vacation?

GEORGE

Yes.

CUSTOMS AGENT

On vacation for only one day?

BA-BUMP. BA-BUMP. The heartbeats are very loud.

GEORGE

(weak smile)

My brother's wedding. Imagine that,
huh?

George's breathing is labored and his swallowing reflex doesn't seem to be working. Cesar passes through, eyeballing George the whole time.

CUSTOMS AGENT

Open your bags, please.

George opens the Samsonites. Super dry mouth. BA-BUMP. BA BUMP. The beats are deafening now. Cesar nervously monitors the situation from the payphones.

CUSTOMS AGENT (CONT'D)

Whose clothes are these?

GEORGE

Mine.

The customs agent holds up a woman's undergarment. Cesar throws up his hands in frustration.

CUSTOMS AGENT

And this?

GEORGE

What can I tell you? Different strokes.

George winks at the customs agent, who shakes his head before finishing the inspection.

CUSTOMS AGENT

Alright, go ahead.

EXT. LOGAN AIRPORT - PAYPHONES - CONTINUOUS

George moves to the payphones, sets down the two suitcases, and pretends to make a call. Not inconspicuously, Cesar grabs the bags and walks quickly out of the terminal.

INT. BASSETERRE HOTEL - ANTIGUA - 1976 - DAY

Diego, Cesar, George and JACK STEVENS, a silver haired executive type, lounge around the mini-suite. Cesar still has that crazy look in his eye.

DIEGO

Three-hundred kilos it is, then.

A beautiful Latin woman enters and kisses both Diego and Cesar. Her name is INEZ, and friendly she is not.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

Has everyone met Inez? This is George.
I've told you about him. And this is friend, Jack Stevens.

The men proffer their hands, but she just looks at them like ants before sitting down next to Diego.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

Try to be more respectful, darling. My apologies. But she is mistrustful of Americans. Shall we proceed? Let's hear it again, Mr. Stevens.

STEVENS

I'll fly down on a Friday, refuel in the Bahamas, and then to Medellin.

INEZ

Friday?

Inez addresses Diego and Cesar only. She speaks in Spanish. The conversation is about "Why Friday?" Inez has some problem with it. Diego explains. And Inez is reassured.

DIEGO

Please, continue.

GEORGE

We make the pick-up, refuel once more in the Bahamas, and fly back on Sunday with the mom and pop traffic.

CESAR

Why are you speaking?

GEORGE

Excuse me?

CESAR

You. Your responsibility is over. You do not fly. You are not a pilot. You are not a distributor. You introduced us to Mr. Stevens and the use of his airplane. That is all. You make a percentage. A generous one. And you're lucky to get that.

GEORGE

I see. How much?

CESAR

Padrino will pay ten-thousand per kilo. For everyone. For you, and you, and you.

He indicates George, Diego and Jack Stevens.

CESAR (CONT'D)

There is no negotiation. Three-million dollars. That is all.

STEVENS

I want two.

GEORGE

Gee, Jack, a million each had such a nice ring to it.

STEVENS

No way. I'm doing all the work. Taking all the risk, and it's my plane.

Diego and George look at each other.

STEVENS (CONT'D)

Hey, you guys don't have to do shit.
Just sit back and collect your money.

GEORGE

You good with this?

Diego nods.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Alright.

This is too much for Inez to handle. She starts screaming machine gun Spanish. Something about a "lousy two-hundred and fifty-thousand dollars," and how Diego is "such a coward" to give away all his money. Diego is embarrassed but tries to remain calm.

DIEGO

You will watch what you say. Especially around George. He is my brother and he speaks as good Spanish as you.

But Inez is wild. She starts in again, a log of "Putos (SOB's)", and "Cojones" and "Maricones (gay/sissys)." Even Cesar is uncomfortable. Diego stands.

DIEGO (CONT'D)

Okay. That's enough.

INEZ

Get your hands off me.

Inez takes a swing at Diego and catches him full across the face. Time stops in the room. Question. What will Diego do? Answer: SMACK! Diego swings back and a full scale is on. Cesar continues the conversation. It's surreal. As if Diego and Inez weren't beating the shit out of each other right in front of them.

CESAR

Do you have pictures of your kids?

STEVENS

What?

CESAR

I'll need to see them. Also need their names and the names of their schools. We are trusting you with ninety million dollars worth of coca, Mr. Stevens. Without your children, there is no deal.

Stevens thinks about it. Kids as collateral. Inez and Diego are still duking it out. But Diego finally gets the upper hand and drags her into the bedroom.

STEVENS

Fine. So if that's all, I'll be leaving now.

Cesar walks him to the door.

CESAR

Don't forget the pictures.

Diego calls from the other room.

DIEGO (O.S.)
George. George, come in here.

INT. LA BELLE MER - BEDROOM - LATER

Diego has put Inez in the bathroom and is holding the door closed. She pounds and kicks and screams in frustration, but he pays no attention.

DIEGO
What's the matter, George?

GEORGE
What's the matter? We're moving three hundred fucking kilos and we're making dogshit.

DIEGO
A million dollars for our first run is not bad, George.

GEORGE
It is bad. It's chump change. We might as well be hauling suitcases across the border. We're getting screwed.

DIEGO
I know.

GEORGE
And what happens when these guys stop paying? Sooner or later, these guys are going to cut us out. Then where are we?

DIEGO
That's my George, always thinking.

The door is yanked open to reveal Inez. She is in a rage. Diego slams it in her face.

DIEGO (CONT'D)
This is only part of the business, George. A very small part. Don't worry, there is so much more to do. Which reminds me, I need a favor from you. I must go to Colombia.

GEORGE
What is it, George? Because I have to get home. I've got a parole officer waiting for me.

DIEGO
I need you to go to Miami.

EXT. VENETIAN KING APTS. - MIAMI - 1977 - DAY

George gets out of a taxi to find SEVERAL COLOMBIAN MEN hanging around outside an apartment. He checks the address and moves over to the men.

GEORGE
I'm George. Friend of Diego's?

The Colombian men are not impressed. They grab George and pull him inside.

INT. VENETIAN KING APTS. - CONTINUOUS

George is pinned against the wall and the Colombian men all start screaming at him in Spanish. There seems to be a problem. A man, ALESSANDRO, steps forward. He is the one who speaks English.

ALESSANDRO
QUIET! Callate! Where's Diego?

GEORGE
I don't know. He sent me. I'm George.

ALESSANDRO
Oh, I see. George. Well, that explains everything. Open your mouth, George.

George's puzzled look is replaced by a gun barrel in his face. Alessandro presses it against George's front teeth.

ALESSANDRO (CONT'D)
Now, you listen to me. Are you hearing me?

George nods.

ALESSANDRO (CONT'D)
You see this?

He indicates two duffel bags stuffed with fifty kilos of cocaine.

ALESSANDRO (CONT'D)
I've been holding this shit for him for three weeks. You tell Diego I don't appreciate it. You tell him I want my money by Friday. Can you do that?

GEORGE
Um-hmm.

INT. JUNG HOUSE - GEORGE'S ROOM - DAY

George sits on his bed, reading. Two duffel bags are tucked away in the closet. Ermine pokes her head in.

ERMINE
You have a phone call.

George picks up the phone.

DIEGO (O.S.)
George.

GEORGE
Jesus Christ, Diego, where are you?
It's been eleven days and these guys want their fucking money.

DIEGO (O.S.)
Bad news, George. I'm in Colombia.

GEORGE
Well, you better get here fast. I'm sitting on...

George notices Ermine is loitering in the hallway, eavesdropping.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Hi, Mom.

George acknowledges her before shutting the door in her face.

GEORGE (CONT'D)
I'm sitting on fifty fucking keys. Get your ass up here.

INT. CARCEL DE VARONES - MEDELLIN, COLOMBIA - CONTINUOUS

It's a South American prison. Diego is on the pay phone.

DIEGO
It's a little hard to get away right now. I'm afraid you're on your own.

INT. FOREAL'S HOUSE - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1977 - NIGHT

George and Derek sit in the living room with MR. T, a hippie ish looking professor. On the table sits various paraphernalia. Scales, beakers, test tubes, and a hot box.
George and Derek watch as Mr. T scoops some of George's cocaine and sets it onto the two-inch metal plate.

MR. T
What we're doing is measuring the purity. Pure coke melts out a hundred and eighty-five, a hundred and ninety degrees. Cutting agents melt much lower. About a hundred degrees.
Quality product starts melting at a hundred and forty degrees. That's what I'm hoping for.

Mr. T turns the dial. 120. 130. 140.

MR. T (CONT'D)
Good.

150. 160.

MR. T (CONT'D)
Jesus Christ.

170. 180.

MR. T (CONT'D)
Holy fucking Mary! Jesus, fuck me running! Where did you get this shit!

At one-hundred and eighty-seven degrees, the white powder dribbles off the hotplate and melts away.

MR. T (CONT'D)
Damn! Can I do a fucking line?!

Mr. T puts his nose in the powder. George pulls Foreal aside.

GEORGE
What did I tell you?

DEREK
It's great and everything, but what am I going to do with all this?

GEORGE
Sell it?

DIEGO

Jesus Christ, George, I don't see you in two years, and you show up at my door with a hundred and ten pounds of cocaine?

GEORGE

Just sell it, Derek.

DEREK

Alright, but it's gonna take me a year.

INT. THE WHIPPING POST - MANHATTAN BEACH - 1977 - NIGHT

Money everywhere. All over the floor, the counters, the chairs, and even in the sinks. George and Derek count the money patiently, writing the dollar amount in yellow high lighter on the top of each stack, before wrapping it with a rubber band.

DIEGO

Thirty-six hours. I can't believe it. Everything is gone in thirty-six hours.

GEORGE

I think it's fair to say you underestimated the market there, Derek.

DIEGO

Touche.

GEORGE

But to the victor belong the spoils.

George divides the money. There's a hell of a lot.

GEORGE (CONT'D)

Half a million for you. Half a million for me. One-point-three five for the Colombians.

DEREK

Nice doing business with you, George.

GEORGE

Not bad for a weekend's work, huh?

INT. AIRPORT - MIAMI - DAY

Immaculate in his white turtleneck and sunglasses, George walks with two aluminum cases. He is greeted by Alessandro and his thugs.

ALESSANDRO

Greetings, Mr. George.

GEORGE

Where do you guys want to count?

ALESSANDRO

On the plane.

GEORGE

What plane? We going someplace? Where we headed? You have your money. It's all there. What the fuck is going on?

They usher him away.

EXT. OLAYA HERRERA AIRPORT - MEDELLIN - DAY

SUPERIMPOSE: MEDELLIN, COLOMBIA

The lear jet lands.

EXT. DESERTED SUGAR FACTORY - LOS RIOS, COLOMBIA - DAY

The blazer pulls into a long driveway. They approach a gate where SHIRTLESS TEENAGERS with MAC-10's stand guard. The gate opens. YOUNG SOLDIERS open the door for George and roughly usher him over to a Jeep within the confine. They frisk him top to bottom. Diego is leaning against another Jeep and waits for George to be released.

DIEGO

George, good to see you, my brother.

GEORGE

What the fuck is going on? When did you get out of jail?

DIEGO

Pablo used his influence. Now, George, watch what you say. Everybody hears everything. A lot of things get said and done that, well, let's just say this isn't America. Life is cheap here, you know? No offense, but you know what I'm saying?

GEORGE

Yeah. Keep my mouth shut and let you do the talking.

DIEGO

Right. Now who is the person in California? The connection?

GEORGE

Just a friend.

DIEGO

Who? I need to know. Ah, never mind. We'll talk about it later.

GEORGE

Yeah. You do the talking.

The sound of a young man, a MALETON, struggling can be heard in the distance. From another area, PABLO ESCOBAR emerges. He is singular in purpose. He is handed a pistol and moves quickly over to the man and quietly speaks a few words. And then, without emotion, he shoots the maleton in the head. George and Diego, who is visibly shaken, watch. Escobar is handed a towel, and he wipes the splattered blood off his hands, as he moves back.

LARGE COLOMBIAN MAN

He will see you now.

(to Diego)

Not you.

DIEGO

There must be some kind of mistake.

LARGE COLOMBIAN MAN

No mistake. Mr. Escobar will see Mr.

Jung alone. You are to wait here.

George hesitates.

DIEGO
It's alright, George. You go.

LARGE COLOMBIAN MAN
This way, please.

The large Colombian man escorts George towards the area where the maletón was just shot. George looks back at Diego as he is led away.

ESCOBAR
So, this is the man who takes fifty kilos and makes them disappear in one day?

GEORGE
Actually, it was three.

ESCOBAR
The man who gives us the airplanes. The man from America. The mafia. Chicago. Boom boom. Hollywood. You are going to open for us the gates of Hollywood, George?

GEORGE
It would be my pleasure.

ESCOBAR
Good. Very good. Welcome, my friend. Welcome to my country.

Escobar moves over to embrace George. George returns it, and their hands come together. George can't help it. He reflexively looks at his hands. Escobar understands.

ESCOBAR (CONT'D)
The man in the garden. He was full of courage.

GEORGE
Un sapo?

ESCOBAR
Un rata - no good. But he could have run, fled the country. Gone to the policia. But then his wife, his children, his parents, his friends, many people would die.

GEORGE
Yes.

ESCOBAR
But, never mind. I am thinking we can do much together. This problem with Diego, the stolen car, the jail, is very silly business. To release him from the cárcel, it causes me much inconvenience. The fifty kilos could have been a big problem. And I don't like problems.

GEORGE
With all respect, Padrino. Diego is my partner. I do not do business without him.

Escobar looks at him with a cold stare. But George doesn't flinch. His face reveals nothing. Finally, a smile breaks across Pablo's lips.

ESCOBAR

I like you, George. You are loyal. That is good. That is rare. Maybe crazy. Yes. I can tell already. You are like me. I look at you and I see myself. It's in the eyes, no, George?

GEORGE

Yes, it is.

ESCOBAR

So, you are wanting to sell the cocaine for me in your country, George?

GEORGE

Yes, sir. As much as you can give me.

ESCOBAR

As much as I can give you? Ha ha. Very good. I like that. Come, George. Let us drive. We have much to talk about.

Diego watches the two men walk outside. Escobar throws an arm around George's shoulder. Pablo hops into a Jeep and motions for George. The bodyguards come running. But Pablo waves them away.

EXT. MOUNTAINSIDE - COLOMBIA - DAY

Escobar pulls the Jeep off the road and parks it. Before them is a stunning panorama.

ESCOBAR

I like to come up here. To make the decisions. To be one with nature.

GEORGE

It's beautiful.

ESCOBAR

People tell me that I am crazy. That my business will never work in your country. What do you think, George?

Escobar looks out over the vista, allowing George the time to respond in full.

GEORGE

What do I think? I don't want my answer to be influenced by what I want, so I'm going to have to say I don't know.

ESCOBAR

Yes. I do not know, either. What do you want, George?

GEORGE

I want money.

ESCOBAR

Yes. Money. Which is what, George?

GEORGE

Freedom.

ESCOBAR
Power?

GEORGE
Yeah, maybe.

ESCOBAR
Family.

GEORGE
Sure.

ESCOBAR
Beautiful girls?

GEORGE
Keep them coming.

ESCOBAR
Keep them coming? Ah, yes. Ha ha. You are right. But money.

GEORGE
Money.

ESCOBAR
And Diego?

GEORGE
Diego is my brother.

Escobar looks at George a long time. He's inscrutable.

ESCOBAR
Good. Take care of him, George. I'm fond of him, but he is sometimes like a baby. Keep an eye on him, okay?

EXT. DESERTED SUGAR FACTORY - ENTRANCE - DAY

Diego is a little pissed off for being left for so long. He taps his foot and picks at his fingernails. Escobar and George pull up in the Jeep. Diego leaps to his feet.

DIEGO
Padrino.

Escobar wraps his arms around Diego in an embrace.

ESCOBAR
Diego, mijo. I've made a decision. We are going into business and I would like to start right away.

MONTAGE - GEORGE AND DIEGO TAKING OVER THE WORLD

The following images are overlaid with snow falling and money dropping through frame. CLOSE SHOTS of George and Diego on the phone, wheeling and dealing, hands counting cash, and lines being drawn off mirrors. The effect is surreal and dreamy.

INT. WAREHOUSE - DAY

A duffel bag is unzipped, revealing bricks and bricks of cocaine. Each marked with a "P." A knife punctures one of the bricks. A mound of white powder is brought up to a man's nose. It's George who samples, and then it is sampled by the man he is doing business with. The shot widens TO REVEAL all the participants and dozens and dozens of duffel bags. A handshake seals the deal.

Handshake after handshake after handshake.

INT. MIAMI HOUSE - NIGHT

George and Diego counting cash. It's everywhere. All over the floor, in two-foot stacks.

Various transactions completed.

INT. MIAMI HOUSE - NIGHT

George and Diego count. It's ridiculous how much money there is. The stacks are now waist high and spill into other rooms. Inez is there, pacing the floor and rapid-fire talking on the phone.
